To the Reader.

This Figure, that thou here seest put,
   It was for gentle Shakespeare cut;
Wherein the Grauer had a strife with Nature, to out-doo the life:
O, could he but haue drawne his wit
   As well in brasse, as he hath hit
His face; the Print would then surpasse
   All, that was euer vvrit in brasse.
But, since he cannot, Reader, looke
Not on his Picture, but his Booke.

LORDS.

Right Honourable,

Hilft we studie to be thankful in our particular, for the many favors we haue received from your L.L.
we are falne upon the ill fortune, to mingle
two the most diuere things that can bee, feare, and rashnesse; rashnesse in the enterprize, and feare of the successse. For, when we valew the places your H.H. sufaine, we cannot but know their dignity greater, then to descend to the reading of these trifles: and, while we name them trifles, we haue depriuid our felues of the defence of our Dedication. But since your L.L. haue beene pleas'd to thinke these trifles some-thing, beerreto-fore; and haue prosequuted both them, and their Authour living, with so much favour: we hope, that (they out-living him, and be not hauing the fate, common with some, to be exequutor to his owne writings) you will vse the like indulgence toward them, you haue done unto their parent. There is a great difference, whether any Book choose his Patrones, or finde them: This hath done both. For, so much were your L.L. likings of the severall parts, when they were acted, as before they were published, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We haue but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his Orphanes, Guardians; without ambition either of selfe-profit, or fame: onely to keepe the memory of so worthy a Friend, & Fellow alius, as was our Shakespeare, by humble offer of his playes, to your most noble patronage. Wherein, as we haue justly observed, no man to come neere your L.L. but with a kind of religious address; it hath bin the height of our care, who are the Presenters, to make the present worthy of your H.H. by the perfection. But, there we must also crave our abilities to be considerd, my Lords. We cannot go beyond our owne powers. Country hands reach forth milke, creame, fruities, or what they have: and many Nations (we have heard) that had not gummies & incense, obtained their requests with a leauened Cake. It was no fault to approch their Gods, by what means they could: And the most, though meanest, of things are made more precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we most humbly consecrate to your H.H. these remaines of your servant Shakespeare; that what delight is in them, may be ever your L.L. the reputation his, & the faults ours, if any be committed, by a payre so carefull to shew their gratitude both to the living, and the dead, as is

To the great Variety of Readers.

Rom the most able, to him that can but spell: There you are number'd. We had rather you were weigh'd. Especially, when the fate of all Bookes depends upon your capacities: and not of your heads alone, but of your purses. Well! it is now publique, & you will stand for your priulidges wee know: to read, and censure. Do so, but buy it first. That doth beft commend a Booke, the Stationer faies. Then, how odde sauer your braines be, or your wisedomes, make your licence the fame, and spare not. Judge your fixe-pen'orth, your shillings worth, your five shillings worth at a time, or higher, so you rife to the juft rates, and welcome. But, what euery you do, Buy. Censure will not drue a Trade, or make the Iacke go. And though you be a Magiftrate of wit, and fit on the Stage at Black-Friers, or the Cock-pit, to arraigne Playes dailie, know, thefe Playes haue had their triall alreadie, and flood out all Appeales; and do now come forth quitted rather by a Decree of Court, then any purchas'd Letters of commendation.

It had bene a thing, we confesse, worthie to haue bene wish'd, that the Author himfelfe haue liu'd to haue fet forth, and ouerfeen his owne writings; But since it hath bin ordain'd otherwise, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you do not envie his Friends, the office of their care, and paine, to haue collect'd & publifh'd them; and fo to haue publish'd them, as where (before) you were abus'd with diuerfe folne, and surreptitious copies, maimed, and deformed by the frauds and flealthes of iniurious impoffors, that expos'd them: euery thofe, are now offer'd to your view cur'd, and perfect of their limbes; and all the reft, absolute in their numbers, as he conceiued the. Who, as he was a happie imitator of Nature, was a moft gentle expresser of it. His mind and hand went together: And what he thought, he utter'd with that easiness, that wee haue fcarce receiued from him a blot in his papers. But it is not our prouince, who onely gather his works, and give them you, to praise him. It is yours that reade him. And there we hope, to your diuers capacities, you will finde enough, both to draw, and hold you: for his wit can no more lie hid, then it could be loft. Reade him, therefore; and againe, and againe: And if then you doe not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger, not to vnderstand him. And fo we leaue you to other of his Friends, whom if you need, can bee your guides: if you neede them not, you can leade your felues, and others. And such Readers we with him.

To the memory of my beloued,

The AUTHOR

Mr. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE:

And what he hath left us.

O draw no envy (Shakespeare) on thy name,
Am I thus ample to thy Booke, and Fame:
While I confess thy writings to be淑,
As neither Man, nor Muse, can praise too much.
'Tis true, and all men suffrage. But these ways were not the paths I meant unto thy praise:
For fleshly Ignorance on these may light,
Which, when it sounds at best, but echo's right;
Or blinde Affection, which doth we're advance
The truth, but gropes, and urgeth all by chance;
Or crafty Malice, might pretend this praise,
And think to ruining, where it seem'd to raise.
These are, as some infamous Baud, or Whore,
Should praise a Matron. What could hurt her more?
But thou art proofe against them, and indeed
Above th' ill fortune of them, or the need.
I, therefore will begin. Soul of the Age!
The applaus! delight! the wonder of our Stage!
My Shakespeare, rife; I will not lodge thee by Chaucer, or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lye
A little further, to make thee a roome:
Thou art a Monument, without a tomb,
And art alive still, while thy Booke doth live,
And we have wits to read, and praise to give.
That I not mixe thee so, my braine excusest;
I meanst with great, but disproportion'd Muses:
For, if I thought my judgement were of yeeres,
I should commit thee surely with thy peers,
And tell, how farre thou didstst our Lily outshine,
Or sporting Kid, or Marlowe mighty line.
And though thou had'st small Latine, and left Grecke,
From thence to honour thee, I would not seek
For names; but call forth thund'ring Eschilus,
Euripides, and Sophocles to vs,
Paccuuius, Accius, him of Cordoua dead,
To life again, to heare thy Bushkin tread,
And shake a Stage: Or, when thy Soakes were on,
Leave thee alone, for the comparison
Of all, that insolent Greece, or haughty Rome sent forth, or since did from their athes come.
Triumph, my Britaine, thou hast one to beawe,
To whom all Scenes of Europe homage owe.
He was not of an age, but for all time!
And all the Mules still were in their prime,
When like Apollo he came forth to warne
Our ears, or like a Mercury to charm.
Nature her self was proud of his designs,
And joy'd to wear the dressing of his lines!
Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
As since, she will vouchsafe no other Wit.
The merry Grecke, tart Ariftophanes,
Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not please;
But antiquated, and deserted by
As they were not of Natures family.
Yet must I not give Nature all: Thy Art,
My gentle Shakespeare, must enioy a part.
For though the Poets matter, Nature be,
His Art doth give the fashion. And, that be,
Who canst to write a living line, must sweat,
(Such as thine are) and stroke the second beat
Upon the Mules anuile: turne the same,
(And himselfe with it) that he thinkest to frame;
Or for the laurell, he may gaine a shorne,
For a good Poet's made, as well as borne.
And such were thou. Look how the fathers face
Lines in his issue, even so, the race
Of Shakespeare's minde, and manners brightly shines
In his well torned, and true-filed lines:
In each of which, he seemes to shake a Lance,
As brandish't at the eyes of Ignorance.
Sweet Swan of Auon! what a sight it were
To see thee in our waters yet appeare,
And make those flights upon the bankes of Thames,
That so did take Eliza, and our James!
But stay, I see thee in the Hemisphere
Aduan'd, and made a Constellation there!
Shine forth, thou Starre of Poets, and with rage,
Or influence, chide, or cheere the drooping Stage;
Which, since thy flight fro hence, hath mourn'd like night,
And despaieres day, but for thy Volumes light.

SHAKESPEARE.

Hose hands, which you so clapt, go now, and wring
You Britaines braue; for done are Shakespares dayes:
His dayes are done, that made the dainty Playes,
Which made the Globe of heau’n and earth to ring.
Dry’d is that vein, dry’d is the Thesbian Spring,
Turn’d all to teares, and Phæbus clouds his rayes:
That corp’s, that coffin now befithe those bayes,
Which crown’d him Poet firft, then Poets King.
If Tragedies might any Prologue haue,
All those he made, would scarce make one to this:
Where Fame, now that he gone is to the graue
(Deaths publique tyring-houfe) the Nuncius is.
For though his line of life went foone about,
The life yet of his lines shall neuer out.

of the deceased Author MAISTRE

W. SHAKESPEARE.

Hake-speare, at length thy pious fellows give
The world thy Workes: thy Workes, by which, out-lie
Thy Tombe, thy name must: when that stone is rent,
And Time dissolves thy Stratford Monument,
Here we alive shall view thee still. This Booke,
Where Brass and Marble fade, shall make thee looke
Fresh to all Ages: when Posteritie
Shall loath what's new, thinke all is prodigie
That is not Shake-speare's; eu'ry Line, each Verje
Here shall revive, redeeme thee from thy Herse.
Nor Fire, nor cankling Age, as Nafo said,
Of his, thy wits fraught Booke shall once inuade.
Nor shall I e're beleue, or thinke thee dead
('Though mist) untill our bankrupt Stage be sped
(Impossible) with some new firaune t'out-do
Passions of Iuliet, and her Romeo;
Or till I heare a Scene more nobly take,
Then when thy half Sword parling Romans spake.
Till these, till any of thy Volumes reft
Shall with more Fire, more feeling be exprest,
Be sure, our Shakespeare, thou canst never dye,
But crown'd with Lawrell, live eternally.

L. Digges.

To the memorie of M. W. Shake-speare.

V V E E wondred (Shake-speare) that thou went'ft so soone
From the World's Stage, to the Graves-Tyring-room.
Wee thought thee dead, but this thy printed worth,
Tells thy Spectators, that thou went'ft but forth
To enter with applause. An Actors Art,
Can dye, and live, to affe a second part.
That's but an Exit of Mortallitie;
This, a Re-entrance to a Plaudite.

THE TEMPEST.

ACTUS PRIMUS, SCENA PRIMA.

A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightening heard; Enter a Ship-master, and a Botswine.

Mast'r. On's-waine.
Bote. Heere Mast'r: What cheere?
Mast'. Good: Speake to th'Mariners: fall coo't, yarely, or we run our felues a ground, beflire, beflire.
Exit.

Bote. Heigh my hearts, cheerely, cheerely my harts: yare, yare: Take in the toppe-fale: Tend to th'Masters whistle: Blow till thou burst thy winde, if roome e'nough.

Enter Allan, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and others.

Bote. I pray now keepe below.
Ant. Where is the Master, Bostom?
Bote. Do you not heare him? you marre our labour, Keep your Cabines; you do asift the storme.
Gonz. Nay, good be patient.
Bote. When the Sea is hence, what cares these roaers for the name of King? to Cabines; silence: trouble vs not.
Gonz. Good, yet remember whom thou haft abord.
Bote. None that I more loue then my selfe. You are a Counsellor, if you can command these Elements to silence, and worke the peace of the present, wee will not hand a rope more, vse your authoritie: If you cannot, glue thanks you have liued so long, and make your selfe resell in your Cabine for the mischance of the houre, if it fo hap. Cheerely good hearts: out of our way I say.
Exit.

Gonz. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hurth no drowning marrs vpon him, his complexion is perfect Gallowes: stand fast good Face to his hanging, make the rope of his deffiny our cable, for our owne doth little advantage: If he be not borne to bee hang'd, our cafe is miserable.
Exit.

Enter Botswine.

Bote. Downe with the top-Mast: yare, lower, lower, bring her to Try with Maine-corse. A plague—A cry with him. Enter Schaffian, Antonio & Gonzalo.

vpon this howling: they are lower then the weather, or our office: yet againe? What do you heere? Shall we geare and drown, haue you a minde to finke?
Schaff. A poxe o'your throat, you bawling, blasphemous incharitabe Dog.
Bote. Worke you then.
Ant. Hang cur, hang, you whoreson insolent Noylemaker, we are leffe afraid to be drownde, then thou art.
Gonz. I'le warrant him for drowning, though the Ship were no stronger then a Nutt-shell, and as leas as an unfastned wench.
Bote. Lay her a hold; a hold, fet her two courfes off to Sea againe, lay her off.

Enter Marineres aet.

Mast'. All loft, to prayers, to prayers, all loft.
Bote. What must our mouths be cold?
Gonz. The King, and Prince, at prayers, let's affift them, for our cafe is as theirs.
Schaff. I am out of patience.
Ant. We are meerly cheated of our liues by drunkards, This wide-chopt-rascall, would thou mightst lye drowning the washing of ten Tides.
Gonz. Hee'l be hang'd yet, Though euer drop of water sware against it, And gape at widest to glut him. A confufed noise within.
Mercy on vs.
We split, we split, Farewell my wife, and children, Farewell brother: we split, we split, we split.
Ant. Let's all finke with King.
Sh. Let's take leave of him.
Exit.

Gonz. Now would I lose a thousand furlongs of Sea, for an Acre of barren ground: Long heath, Browne fires, any thing: the wills aboue be done, but I would eaine dye a dry death.
Exit.

SCENA SECUNDA.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your Art (my dearest father) you haue Put the wild waters in this Rore; salay them: The skye it seemes would powre down flaming pitch, But that the Sea, mounting to th' welkins cheeke, Dafhes the fire out. Oh! I have suffered With those that I law suferr: A braue veill

(Who
(Who had no doubt some noble creature in her)
Dost' d all to peaces: O the cry did knocke
Against my very heart: poore foules, they perfid'd.
Had I sene any God of power, I would Hawe funcke the Sea within the Earth, or ere
It should the good Ship to have swallow'd, and
The fraughting Soules within her.
Prof. Be collected,
No more amazement: Tell your pitteous heart
there's no harme done.
Mira. O woe, the day.
Prof. No harme:
I have done nothing, but in care of thee
(Of thee my deere one; thee my daughter) who Art ignorant of what thou art. naught knowing
Of whence I am: nor that I am more better
Then Proffers, Master of a full poore cell,
And thy no greater Father.
Mira. More to know
Did never medle with my thoughts.
Prof. 'Tis time
I should inform thee farther: Lend thy hand
And plucke my Magick garment from me: So,
Lye there my Art: wipe thou thine eyes, haste comfort,
The direfull Spectacle of the wracke which touch'd
The very vertue of compasion in thee:
I have with such proximation in mine Art
So safely ordered, that there is no foule
No not so much perdition as an hayre
Betz to any creature in the vessell
Which thou heardst cry, which thou saw't finke: Sit
For thou must now know farther. [downe,
Mira. You have often
Began to tell me what I am, but stopp
And left me to a bootless Inquisition,
Concluding, hys: not yet.
Prof. The howr's now come
The very minute byda thee ope thine ear,
Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came vnto this Cell?
I do not think thou canst, for then thou was't not
Out three yeeres old.
Mira. Certainly Sir, I can.
Prof. By what? by any other house, or perfon?
Of any thing the Image, tell me, that Hath kept with thy remembrance.
Mira. 'Tis farre off:
And rather like a dreame, then an affurance
That my remembrance warrants: Had I not
Fowre, or flue women once, that tended me?
Prof. Thou habittest; and more Miranda: But how is it
That this lies in thy minde? What feelt thou els
In the dark-backward and Ablime of Time?
Yf thou remembret ought ere thou cam'st here,
How thou cam'st here thou mafft.
Mira. But that I do not.
Prof. Twelve yere since (Miranda) twelve yere since,
Thy father was the Duke of Milain and
A Prince of power:
Mira. Sir, are not you my Father?
Prof. Thy Mother was a piece of vertue, and
She feld thou wast my daughter: and thy father
Was Duke of Milain, and his onely heire,
And Princepelle; no worke Iffied.
Mira. O the heavens,
What fowle play had we, that we came from thence?
Or bleseed wass't we did?
Prof. Both, both my Girl.
By,owle-play (as thou faile) were we hea'd thence,
But bleseedly holpe hither.
Mira. O my heart bleedes
To thinke oth's teene that I hawe turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance, please you, farther;
Prof. My brother and thy vnclse, call'd Antonio:
I pray thee marke me, that a brother should
Be so perfidious; he, whom next thy felie
Of all the world I loud, and to him put
The managge of my state, as at that time
Through all the feignors it was the first,
And Proffers, the prime Duke, being so reputed
In dignity; and for the liberall Artes,
Without a parallell: those being all my studie,
The Governe I call'd vpon my broderr,
And to my State grewstranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studie, thy false vnclse
(Do' you attend me?)
Mira. Sir, most heedfully,
Prof. Being once perfected how to graunt suites, how to deny them: who 's almaine, and who
To trial for outer-topping; new created
The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd 'em,
Or els new form'd 'em; hauing both the key,
Of Officer, and office, fel all hearts th' rate
To what tune pleade his care, that now he was
The lyu which had hild my princely Trunck,
And fuckt my verdue out on't: Thou attendst not?
Mira. O good Sir, I doe.
Prof. I pray thee marke me:
I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To cloyesies, and the bettering of my mind with that, which but by being fo retir'd
Orc-priz'd all popular rate:in my faile brother
Awak'd an euill nature, and my truth
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falsehood in it's contrarie, as great
As my truth was, which had indee no limit,
A confidence fans bound. He being thus Lorded,
Not onely with what my reueneu yeeded,
But what my power might els exalted. Like one
Who hauing into truth, by telling of it,
Made such a bynder of his memorie
To crede its owne lie, he did beleue
He was indeed the Duke, out o' th' Substitution
And executing th'outward face of Roalstie
With all prerogaties: hence his Ambition growing:
Do't thou heare?
Mira. Your tale, Sir, would cure dafeneffe.
Prof. To have no Schreene between this part he plaid,
And him he plaid it for, he needes will be Abolutte Milain, Me (poore man) my Librarie
Was Dukedome large enough: of temporall realties
He thinks me now incapable. Confederates
(to drie he was for Sway) with King of Naples
To give him Annuall tribute, doe him homage
Subject his Coronet, to his Crowne and bend
The Dukedom yet vnbow'd (als poore Milain)
To moth ignoble flopping.
Mira. Oh the heavens:
Prof. Markes his condition, and thereen, then tell me
If this might be a brother.
Mira. I should finne
To think but Noble of my Grand-mother,
Good wome have borne bad sons.
Pro. Now the Condition.
This King of Naples being an Enemy
To me inismetar, hearkens my Brothers fuit,
Which was, That he in lieu o'th' premisies,
Of homage, and I know not how much his Tribute,
Should prefitly exipate me and mine
Out of the Duke, and confer faire Millaine
With all the honors, on my brother: Whereon
A treacherous Arme lieved, one mid-night
Fated to th' purpose, did Anthems open.
The gates of Millaine, and th' dead of darkneffe:
The minifters for th' purpose hurried thence
Me, and they crying fellie.
Mir. Alack, for pity:
I not remembering how I cried out then
Will cry it ore again: It is a hint
That wrings mine eyes too.
Pro. Hear a little further,
And then I'll bring thee to the prefit buffene
Which now's vp's in: without the which, this Story
Were most impertinent.
Mir. Wherefore did they not
That howre destroy vs?
Pro. Well demanded, wench:
My Tale prouokes that question: Dare, they durft not,
So dare the lone my people bore me: nor yet
A marke fo bloody on the buffene; but
With colours fairer, painted their foule ends.
In few, they hurried vs a-board a Barke,
Bore vs some Leagues to Sea, where they prepared
A rotten carcasse of a Butt, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, fayle, nor maft, the very rats
Infinctuouely have quit it: There they hoyft vs
To cry to th' Sea, that road to vs; to fish
To th' winde, whole pitty fighting backe againe
Did vs but lousing wrong.
Mir. Alack, what trouble
Was I then to you?
Pro. O, a Cherubin
Thou warst that did preferue me; Thou didft smile,
Infused with a fomptuea from heaven,
When I hase deck'd the Sea with drops falt,
Vnder my hurthen groan'd, which rai'd in me
An vndergoing flamacke, to heare vp
Against what should enufe.
Mir. How came we a fhole?
Pro. By prouidence divine,
Some food, we had, and foie fresh water, that
A noble Neapolitan Gembal
Out of his Charity, (who being then apportioned Mater of this defign) did give vs, with Rich garments, linnen, flufhes, and necessaries
Which fince have freed much, fo of his gentlenesse
Knowing I lou'd my books, he furnifhed me
From mine owne Library, with volumes, that I prize above my Duke, andome.
Mir. Would I might
But ever fee that man.
Pro. Now I arife,
Sit fill, and heare the laft of our sea-forrow:
Here we in this Iland we arri'd, and here
Hase I, thy Schoolemafter, made thee more profit
Then other Princesse can, that haue more time
For vainer howses; and Turves, not fo carefull.
Pro. What hoare thefe hoars:
Mir. Haeus thanks you for't. And now I pray you Sir,
The Tempest.

To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not againe vnadoe: it was mine Art,
When I arriu'd, and heard thee, that made gape
The Pyne, and let thee out.

_Ar._ I thank thee Malfet.

_Pro._ If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an Oake
And peg-thee in his knotty entrailes, till
Thou haft how'd away twelve winters.

_Ar._ Pardon, Malfet,
I will be correspondent to command
And doe my flrying, gently.

_Pro._ Doe so: and after two daies
I will discharge thee.

_Ar._ That's my noble Malfet:
What Stall I doe? say what? what Stall I doe?

_Pro._ Goe make thy felfe like a Nymphe o'th' Sea,
Be fable, no fo fight but thine, and me: I am infufible
To every eye-ball efe: goe take this flape
And hither come in't: goe hence

With diligence. _Exit._

_Pro._ Awake, deere hart awake, thou haft flept well,
Awake.

_Mir._ The strangenes of thy fory, put Hauineffe in me.

_Pro._ Shake it off: Come on,
We'll call Caliban, my flaua, who never Yeelds vs kindle anwerc.

_Mir._ 'Tis a villain Sir, I doe not loue to looke on.

_Pro._ But as 'ds
We cannot misle him: he do's make our fire,
Fethc in our wood, and ferues in Offices
That profit vs: What hoa: flaua: Caliban:
Thou Earth, thou fpake.

_Cal._ within. There's wood enough within.

_Pro._ Come forth I fay, there's other busines for thee:
Come thou Tortoys, when? Enter Ariel like a wafer Fine appari'lon: my queint Ariel,

_Nymph._

_Hearke in thine eare.

_Ar._ My Lord, it shall be done.

_Exit._

_Pro._ Thou poyfonous flaua, got by f dozell himfelfe
Vpon thy wicked Dam; come forth. Enter Caliban.

_Cal._ As wicked dewe, as cre my mother bruff'd
With Rauens feather from vnwholefome Fen
Drop on you both: A Southwett blow on yee,
And biff your all ore.

_Pro._ For this be fure, to night thou falt haue cramps,
Side-fitches, that fhall pen thy breath vp, Vrchns
Shall for that vat of night, that they may worke
All exercife on thee: thou flalt be pinch'd
As thicke as hone-combes, each pinche more fingling
Then Bees that made 'em.

_Cal._ I must eat my dinner:
This Ifland's mine by Sycorax my mother,
Which thou tak'st from me: when thou cam't firft
Thou broke from me: & made much of me: would fave me
With water with berries in't: and teach me how
To name the bigger Light, and how the Jeffe
That burne by day, and night: and then I lou'd thee
And thou'd thee all the qualities o'th' life,
The fresh Springs, Brine pits; barren place and fertill,
Cunn'd be I that did fo: All the Charmes
Of Sycorax: Toades, Beetles, Battles light on you:
For I am all the Subiects that you haue,
Which firft was min owne King: and here you fly-me
In this hard Rocks, whiles you doo keepe from me
The reft o'th' Ifland.

_Pro._ Thou

(Which I difper'd) they all haue met againe,
And are vpon the Mediterranean Flote
Bound fadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they faw the Kings ship wrackt,
And his great perfon perih.

_Pro._ Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more worke:
What is the time o'th'day?

_Ar._ Paft the mid fea'on.

_Pro._ At least two Glasses: the time 'twixt fix & now
Muf't by ws both be fpent moft preciounce.

_Ar._ Is there more toyle? Since f doft glue me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou haft promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.

_Pro._ How now? mooide?
What is't thou canft demand?

_Ar._ My Libe'r fight no fight but thine, and me: I am infufible
To every eye-ball efe: goe take this flape
And hither come in't: goe hence

With diligence. _Exit._

_Pro._ Awake, deere hart awake, thou haft flept well,
Awake.

In this hard Rocks, whiles you doo keepe from me
The reft o'th' Ifland.

_Pro._ Thou
The Tempest.

Pro. Thou most lying flawe,
Whom stipes may move, not kindness: I have va'd thee
(Filth as thou art) with humane care, and lodg'd thee
In mine owne Cell, till thou didst feake to violate
The honor of my childe.

Cal. Oh ho, oh ho, wouldn't had bene done:
Thou didst preuent me, I had peopel'd else
This Ille with Calibans.

Mira. Abhorred Slave,
Which any print of goodnese wilt not take,
Being capable of all lye : I pitied thee,
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
One thing or other: when thou didst not (Savage)
Know thine owne meaning ; but wouldst gable, like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposse
With words that made them knowe: But thy wild race
(Tho thou didst learn) had that in 't, which good natures
Could not abide to be with; therefore waft thou
Deferuedly confin'd into this Rockes, who hated
Defer'd more then a prifon.

Cal. You taught me Language, and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curte: the red-plague rid you
For learning me your language.

Prof. Hag-feed, hence:
Fetch vs in Fewell, and be quicke thou'rt best
To anwer other businesse: shrug't thou (Malice)
If thou neglectth, or doft vowellingly
What I command, Ile racke thee with old Crampes,
Fill all thy bones with Aches, make thee roar,
That beasts shall tremble at thy dyn.

Cal. No, 'pray thee.
I must obey, his Art is of such pow'r,
It would control my Dams god Setebos,
And make a vaillie of him.

Pro. So flawe, hence.
Exit Cal.

Enter Ferdinand & Ariel, inuitive playing & singing.

Ariel Song. Come unto these yellow sands,
and then take bands:
Carted when you have, and kift
the wildes waves overfit:

Feste it trustly beare, and there, and juwete Sprights beare the burthen.
Burthen dispersedly,
Harke, harke, harke, I heare, the strains of fruiting Chantickere cry cockadiddle-dow.

Fer. Where shold this Mufick be? I th'aire, or th'earth?
It sounds no more: and sure it waies upon
Some God 'oth Land, fitting on a banke,
Weeping againe the King my Fathers wracke.
This Mufick crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury, and my passion
With 't sweet ayre: thence I haue follow'd it
(Or it hath drawne me rather) but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.

Ariel Song. Full fadom five the Father lies,
Of his bones are Corall made:
Toge are pears that were his sies,
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth juiffer a Sea-change
Into something rich, & strange:
Sea-Nymphs hourly ring his bell.
Burthen: ding dong.

Harke now I heare them, ding-dong bell.

Fer. The Ditty do's remember my droun'd father,
This is no mortal busines, nor so sound
That the earth owes: I heare it now aboue me.

Pro. Thetringed Curtaines of thine eye aduanse,
And fay what thou see'st yond.

Mira. What is't a Spirit?
Lord, how it lookes about: Beleeue me sir,
It carries a braue forme. But 'tis a spirit.

Pro. No wench, it eats, and sleeps, & hath such fenes
As we haue: such. This Gallant which thou seeft
Was in the wracke: and but hee's something than'd
With greafe (that's beauties canvas) y' might call him
A goodly perfon: he hath lost his fellowes,
And strained to finde 'em.

Mir. I might call him
A thing diuine, for nothing natural
I euer fae to Noble.
 Pro. It goes on I fee
As my foile prompts it: Spirit, fine spirit, Ile free thee
Within two dayes for this.

Fer. Most sure the Goddeffe
On whom these ayres attend : Vouchsafe my praye'r
May know if you remaine upon this land,
And that you will for good instruction ruke
How I may beare me heere: my prime requert
Which I do left pronoune is (O you wonder)
If you be Mayd, or no?

Mir. No wonder Sir,
But certainly a Mayd.

Fer. My Language? Heavenes:
I am the fift of them that fpeakke this fpeech,
Were I but where 'tis spaken.

Pro. How? the fet?
What wert ye if the King of Naples heard thee?

Fer. A finge thing, as I am now, that wonders
To heare thee fpeakke of Naples: he do's heare me,
And that he do's, I wepe: my felfe am Naples,
Who, with my mine eyes (neuer since at ebb) beheld
The King my Father wrack't.

Mir. Alacke, for mercy.

Fer. Yes faith, & all his Lordes, the Duke of Milaine
And his braue fonne, being twaine.

Pro. The Duke of Milaine
And his more brauer daughter, could control theye
If now 'twer't fit to do't: At the first fight
They have chang'd eyes: Delicate Ariel,
Ile let thee free for this. A word good Sir,
I fear you have done your felfe some wrong: A word.

Mrs. Why fpeakes my father so vangently? This Is the third man that ere I faw: the thin
That ere I figh'd for: pity move my father
To be enclin'd my way.

Fer. O, if a Virgin,
And your aflfection not gone forth, Ile make you
The Queen of Naples.

Pro. Soft sir, one word more.
They are both in eyther pow'r's: But this fivst busines
I must vence make, leaft too light winning
Make the prize light. One word more: I charge thee
That thou attend me: Thou do't heere fvturpe
The name thou ow't not, and haft put thy felfe
Upon this Island, as a fpy, to win it
From me, the Lord on't.

Fer. No, as I am a man.

Mir. There's nothing ill, can dwell in such a Temple,
If the ill-spirit have to fare a houle,
Good things will threne to dwell with't.

Pro. Follow me.
The Tempest.

Prof. Speake not you for him: he's a Traitor: come, I'll maneacle thy necke and feete together: Sea water filleth thou drinkes: thy food shall be The fresh brooke Muffels, wither'd roots, and huskes. Wherein the Acorne cream'd. Follow. Fer. No, I will refiut such entertainment, ill Mine enemy ha's more pow'rs. He drawes, and is charmed from moving. Mira. O dear Father, Make not so rash a trial of him, for Hee's gentle, and not fearfull. Prof. What I say, My foote my Tutor? Put thy sword vp Traitor, Who mak'd it swaue, but dar'nt not strike: thy conscience Is so poisfeft with guilt: Come, from thy ward, For I can here disarme thee with this sticke, And make thy weapon drop. Mira. Beleeche you Father. Prof. Hence: hang not on my garments. Mira. Sir have pley, Ile be his fearless. Prof. Silence: One word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee: What, An advocate for an Imposer? Huh: Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he, (Hauling scene but him and Caliban:) Foolish wench, To th'most of men, this is a Caliban, And they to him are Angels. Mira. My affections Are then most humble: I haue no ambition To fee a goodlier man. Prof. Come on, obey: Thy Nerues are in their infancy againe. And have no vigour in them. Fer. So they are: My spirits, as in a dreame, are all bound vp: My Fathers losse, the weaknesse which I feel, The wracke of all my friends, nor this mans threats, To whom I am fubdue, are but light to me, Might I but through my prifon once a day Behold this Mayd: all corners elie of't Earth Let liberty make vie of: space enough Have I in such a prifon. Prof. It workes: Come on. Thou haft done well, fine Ariel: follow me, Harcke what thou elie that do mee. Mira. Be of comfort, My Fathers of a better nature (Sir) Then he appeares by speech: this is vnwonted Which now came from him. Prof. Thou shalt be as free As mountaine winde: but then exactly do All points of my command. Ariel. To th'flyable. Prof. Come follow: speake not for him. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scæna Prima.

The Tempest

Gen. Me thinkes our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Africke, at the marriage of the kings faire daughter Claribel to the king of Tunis.

Seb. Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our returns.

Adr. Tumis was never graec'd before with such a Pagon to their Queene.

Gen. Not since widow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow? A pox o'that! how came that Widow in? Widow Dido?

Seb. What if he had said Widdower e'enset too?

Good Lord, how you take it?

Adr. Widdow Dido said you? You make me study of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tumis.

Gen. This Tumis Sir was Carthage.

Ant. His word is more then the miraculous Harpe.

Seb. He hath rain'd the wall, and houses too.

Ant. What impossible matter will he make easy next?

Seb. I thinkes he will carry this Island home in his pocket, and glue it his fonne for an Apple.

Adr. And fowing the kernels of it in the Sea, bring forth more Islands.

Gen. I.

Ant. Why in good time.

Gen. Sir, we were talking, that our garments feme now as fresh as when we were at Tumis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now Queene.

Ant. And the rarest that were came there.

Seb. Bate (I beseach you) widdow Dido.

Gen. Is not Sir my doubler as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean in a fort.

Ant. That fort was well fith'd for.

Gen. When I wore it at your daughters marriage.

Alon. You cram'these words into mine ears, against the romancke of my fefe: I would he neuer

Married my daughter there: For comming thence

My fonne is loth, and (in my rate) the too,

Who is so farre from Italy remoued,

I ne're againe shall fee her: O thou mine heire

Of Naples and of Millain, what strange fith

Hath made his meale on thee?

Fran. Sir he may liue,

I saw him heare the furges and his, and

And ride upon their backes; he trode the water

Whose enmity he flung aside: and breffed

The furge most flove that met him: his bold head

Bose the contentious wanes he kept, and oared

Himfelfe with his good arms in huppy stroke

To th'other; that ore his wae-worne bafs bowed

As fleeping to releue him: I do not doubt

He came alee to Land.

Alon. No, no, hee's gone.

Seb. Sir you may thank your felde for this great loffe,

That would not bleeke our Europe with your daughter,

But rather loose her to an Afrikan,

Where the at leat, is banifh'd from your eye,

Who hath caufe to wet the greffe on't.

Alon. Pre-thee peace.

Seb. You were kneel'd too, & importun't otherwise

By all of vs: and the faire fonfe her felke

Waig'd betweenist lothneffe, and obedience, at

When end o'th'beame should bow: we have loft your

I fear for euers: Millaine and Naples have (fon,

Widdowes in them of this buffielie making,

Then we bring men to comfort them:

The faults your owne.

Alon. So is the deer't oth'loffe.

Gen. My Lord Sebastian,

The truth you speake doth lacke some gentlenesse,

And time to speake it in! you rub the fore,

When you should bring the plaifer.

Seb. Very well.

Ant. And most Churugonly.

Gen. It is foule weather in vs all, good Sir,

When you are cloudy.

Seb. Fowlie weather.

Ant. Very soule.

Gen. Had I plantation of this Ile my Lord.

Ant. Hee's bow't with Nettle feu.

Seb. Or dockes, or Mallowes.

Gen. And were the King on't, what vvould I do?

Seb. Scapie being drunke, for want of Wine.

Gen. If'th Common wealth I vvoid (by contraries)

Execute all things: For, and then go't Traffie.

Would I admitt: No name of Magistrat:

Letters should not be knowne: Riches, pouerty,

And vfe of feruices, none: Contra feed, Succession,

Borne, bound of Land, Tilth, Vineyard none:

No vfe of Metalt, Corne, or Wine, or Oyle:

No occupation, all men idle, all:

And Women too, but innocent and pure:

No Souernesst.

Seb. Yet he would be King on't.

Ant. The latter end of his Common-wealth forgets the beginning.

Gen. All things in common Nature should produce

Without fweet or eneuer: Traefon, fellony,

Sword, Pike, Knife, Gun, or neede of any Engine

Would I not have: but Nature should bring forth

Of it owne kinds, all Ioyson, all abundance

To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying among his fowle'es?

Ant. None (man) all idle; Whores and knaues,

Gen. I would with fuch perfedion gouerne Sir:

T'Excell the Golden Age.

Seb. 'Sauie his Maietie.

Ant. Long liue Goanad.

Gen. And do you marke me, Sir? (me)

Alon. Pre-thee no more: thou doft talk nothing to

Gen. I do vwell beleue your Highneffe, and did it to minifier occasion to thefe Gentlemen, who are of such fedible and nimble Lungs, that they alwayes vfe to laugh at nothing.

Ant. Twas you vve laugh'd at.

Gen. Who, in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothing all.

Ant. What a blow vvas there given?

Seb. And it had not faine flat-long.

Gen. You are Gentlemen of brave mettal: you would lift the Moone out of her iphere, if she would continue in it feue weeks without changing.

Enter Arist playing lute or Mufchets.

Seb. We would fo, and then go a flat-trowling.

Ant. Nay good my Lord, be not angry.

Gen. No I warrant you, I vwill not adventure my difcretion fo weakly: Will you laugh me alleece, for I am very heawy.

Alon. Go deeper, and heare vs.

Alon. What, all so foone alleece? I wish mine eyes

Would(with themfelves) shut vp my thoughts,

I finde they are inclin'd to do fo.

Seb. Pleafte you Sir,

Do not omit the heayy offere of it:

It fllome uifhs farrow, when it doth, it is a Comforter.

Ant.
Wondrous O, where Heere flie die ftanding, to th'occafion and Jhe Then how You Whiles If Thou That Muft (Moft This And they be: a Thunder-froke: what might Worthy Sebastian? O, what might? no more: And yet, me thinks I fee it in thy face, What thou fhould't be: th'occafion speaks thee, and My strong imagination fee's a Crowne Dropping vpon thy head.

Sub. What'ar thou wakings? Ant. Do you not heare me fpeeke? Sub. I do, and surely It is a fleepy Language; and thou fpeak'st Out of thy fleep: What is it thou didn't fay? This is a ftrange reproof, to be fleepe With eyes wide open: ftaundig, fpeaking, mowing: And yet fo ftaundig. Ant. Noble Sebastian, Thou let'th thy fortune fleepe: die rather: wink'th While thou art waking. Sub. Thou do'lt fnore difftantly, There's meaning in thy fnores.

Ant. I am more ferious then my cuftome: you Muff be fo too, if heed me: which to do, Trebles thee eye's.

Ant. O! If you knew how you the purpofe cherifh Whiles thus you mocke it: how in flipping it You more inueft it: ebbing men, indeed (Moft often) do fo neere the bottome run By their owne fear, or floth. Sub. 'Pre-thy fay on, The fettling of thine eye, and cheeke proclaime A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed, Which throwes thee much to yeild. Ant. Thus Sir: Although this Lord of weake remembrances: this Who fhall be of a little memory When he is ear'd, hath here almoft perfwaded (For hee's a Spirit of perfwafion, one) Proffifes to perfwade) the King his fonne's alie, 'Tis as impoffible that hee's vn drowned, As he that fleepes heere, fwiws. Sub. I have no hope That hee's vn drowned.

Ant. O, out of that no hope, What great hope have you? No hope that way, Is another way fo high a hope, that even Ambition cannot pierce a winke beyond But doubt diffcouver there. Will you grant with me That Ferdinand is drowned.

Sub. He's gone.

Ant. Then tell me, who's the next heire of Naples? Sub. Claribell.

Ant. She that is Queen of Tune: she that dwells Ten leagues beyond mans life: the that from Naples Can have no note, vneffe the Sun were poft: The Man i'th Moone's too low, till new-born chines Be rough, and Razor-able: She that from whom We all were feea-fwallowed, though some call againe, (And by that deftiny) to performe an act Whereof, what's paft is Prologue: what to come In yours, and my difcharge.

Sub. What fluffe is this? How fay you? 'Tis true my brothers daughter's Queene of Tune, So is the heyre of Naples, twixt which Regions There is fome space.

Ant. A flace, where eu'ry cubit Seemes to cry out, how shall that Claribell Measure vs backe to Naples? keepe in Tune, And let Sebastian wake. Say, this were death That now hath felled them, who were no worse Then now they are: There be that can rule Naples As well as he that sleepe: Lords, that can prate As amply, and vnneeceffarily As this Gonzalo: I my fale could make A Chough of as deepe chat: O, that you bore The minde that I do; what a fleepe were this For your advancement? Do you vnderstand me? Sub. Me thinkes I do.

Ant. And how do you your content Tender your owne good fortune? Sub. I remember You did fupplicant your Brotheh Proflero.

Ant. True: And looke how well my Garments fit vpon me, Much fatter then before: My Brothers errants Were then my fellowes, now they are my men. Sub. But for your conffience.

Ant. I Sir: where lies that? If twere a kybe 'Twould put me to my flipper: But I feele not This Delfy in my bofome: 'Twentie conffences That fland 'twixt mee, and Millaine, candied be they, And melt ere they mollen: Heere lies your Brother, No better then the earth he lies vpon, If he were that which now hee's like (that's dead) Whom I with this obedient feele (three inches of it) Can lay to bed for ever: whiles you doing thus, To the perpaulli winke for eye might put This ancient morfcell: this Sir Prudence, who Should not vpraid our coufe: for all the reft They'll take fuggelion, as a Cat laps milke, They'll tell the clockes, to any busineffe that We lay beft to the hoore.

Sub. Thy cafe, deere Friend Shall be my predefant: As thou got't Millaine, 'Tle come by Naples: Draw thy fword, oneroke Shall fere thee from the tribute which thou paft, And I the King shall lour thee.

Ant. Draw together:

And when I reare my hand, do you the like To fall it on Gonzalo.

Sub. O, but one word.

Enter ArieLL with Musicks and Song.

ArieL. My Mafter through his Art forefettes the danger That you (his friend) are in, and sends me forth (Forcliffe his proie et dies) to keep them living.

Sings in Gonzalo's care.

While you here do furring lie,
Open-eyed Conjuror

Sub. Thus done take i't.
If of Life you keep a care,
Shake off slander and bewray.
Awake, awake.
Ant. Then let us both be wakeful.

Gen. Now, good Angel, prefer the King,

Ant. How now, has awoke? why are you drawn?
Wherefore this ghastly looking?
Gen. What’s the matter?

Seb. Whiles we flood here securing your repose,
(Even now) we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like Burls, or rather Lyons, didn’t not wake you?
It froooke mine ear most terribly.

Alo. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, twas a din to fright a Monser’s care;
To make an earthquake: fure it was the roare
Of a whole heard of Lyons.

Alo. Heard you this Genesis?
Gen. Upon mine honour, Sir, I heard a humming,
(And that a strange one too) which did awake me:
I shak’d you Sir, and cride: as mine eyes open,
I saw their weapons drawnne: there was a noyse,
That’s verily our hand we stand upon our guard:
Or that we quitt this place: let’s draw our weapons.

Alo. Lead off this ground & let’s make further search
For my poor fonne.

Gen. Heauens keepes him from their Beasts:
For he is fure Ptb Island.

Alo. Lead away. (done.)

Ariell. Preprer my Lord, shall know what I have So (King) goe safely on to seek ye Son. Exeunt.

Scene Secunda.

Enter Caliban, with a burthen of Wood (a noise of Thunder heard.)

Cal. All the inflamptions that the Sunne suckes vp
From Bogs, Fens, Flatts, on Propper fall, and make him
By ync-meale a diffeare: his Spirit heare me,
And yet I needs must curpe:But they’re not pinch.
Fright me with Vruchyn-shewes, pitch me I’t bire, mire,
Nor lead me like a fire-brand, in the darke
Out of my way, vnleffe he bid ‘em; but
For every tribe, are they let upon me,
Sometimes like Ape, that mow and chatter at me,
And after bite me: then like Hedge-hogs, which Lye tumbling in my bare-foote way, and mount:
Their pricks at my foot-fall: sometime am I
All wound with Adders, who with clowen tongues
Doe hille me into madness: Lo, now Lo,
Enter
Here comes a Spirit of his, and to torment me Trinculo.
For bringing wood in flowre: I’le fall flat
Perchance he will not minde me.

Tri. Here’s neither buft, nor scrub to bearre off any weather at all: and another Storme brewing, I heare it finge’th winde: yond fame blacke cloud, yond huge one, lookes like a foule bumberd that would shed his liquor: if it should thunber, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond fame cloud cannot choode but fall by palle-fusis. What have we here, a man, or a fish? dead or alive? a fish, hee fme’s like a fish: a very ancient and fish-like smell: a kinde of, not of the neweft poore- JOHN: a strange fish: were I in England

now (as once I was) and had but this fish painted; not a holiday-foole there but would glue a pece of fizer: there, would this Monfer, make a man: any strange beast there, makes a man: when they will not glue a doit to relieve a lame Begger, they will lay out to fee a dead Indian: Leg’d like a man; and his Fimmas like Armes: warne o’my troth: I doe now let looce my o’pinion; hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an Illander, that hath lately suffred by a Thunderbolt: Alas, the storme is come againe: my left way is to creepe vnnder his Gamberine: there is no other shelter hereabout: Milery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows: I will here throwd till the dregges of the storme be paft.

Enter Stephano singing.

Ste. I shal not no more to see, to sea, here shal I dye ashore.
This is a very curuy tune to fing at a mans
Funerall: well, here’s my comfort.

Drinks.

Sing. The Master, the Swobber, the Boate-fowaine & I; The Gunner, and his Mate.
Lou’d Mall, Meg, and O’Marrian, and Margerie,
But none of us car’d for Kate.
For she had a tongue with a tag,
Would crying to a Sailor goe hang!
She lo’d not the favour of Tar mur of Pitch.
Yet a Tailor might scratch her seare ere she did itch.
Then to Sea Boys, and let her goe hang.
This is a scoury tune too:
But here’s my comfort.

Drinke.

Cal. Doe not torment me: oh.

Ste. What’s the matter?

Haue we diuels here?
Doe you put trickes vpon’s with Salugues, and Men of Inde? ha? I haue not scap’d drowning, to be afraid now of your foure legs: for it hath bin fald: as proper a man as euer went on foure legs, cannot make him glue ground: and it shall be laid to againe, while Stephano breathes at noffrils.

Cal. The Spirit tormentes me: oh.

Ste. This is some Monfer of the life, with foure legs; who hath got (as I take it) an Auge: where the dwell should he learn our language? I will glue him some relief if it be but for that: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he’s a Prefent for any Emperor that euer trod on Neates-leather.

Cal. Doe not torment me ’prether: I’le bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He’s in his fit now; and doe’s not talk after the wild-fit; hee shall falle of my Bottle: if hee haue never drunk cince ashore, it will goe seere to remoue his Fit:
if I can recover him, and keepe him tame, I will not take too much for him; hee shall pay for him that hath him, and that foundly.

Cal. Thou doeft me yet but little hurt: thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: Now Propper works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your wayes: open your mouth: here is that which will glue language to you Cat; open your mouth; this will shakke your shaking, I can tell you, and that foundly: you cannot tell who’s your friend; open your chaps again.

Tri. I should know that voice:
It should be,
The Tempest.

But hee is round; and these are duiels; O defend me.

Ste. Fourre legges and two voyces; a most delicate Monster: his forward voyce now is to speake well of his friend; his backward voice, is to vter foule speeches, and to detract: if all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will helpe his Ague: Come: Amen, I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Tri. Stephano. I doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy!

This is a diuell, and no Monster: I will leasie him, I haue no long Spoon.

Tri. Stephano: if thou beepest Stephano, touch me, and speake to me: for I am Trinculo; be not afeard, thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo: come forth: Ile pull thee by the lefser legges; if any be Trinculo's legges, these are they: Thou art very Trinculo indeede: how cam'st thou to be the fiege of this Moone-calfe? Can he vent Trinculo's?

Tri. I tooke him to be kil'd with a thunder-brook; but art thou not dround Stephano: I hope now thou art not dround: Is the Storme ouer-blowne? I hid mee vnder the dead Moone-Califes Gaderbiding, for feare of the Storme: And art thou lying Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans cap'd?

Ste. 'Prethee doe not turne me about, my tromacks is not confant.

Cal. Thosc be fine things, and if they be not sprints: that's a braue God, and beares Celestiall liquor: I will kneele to him.

Ste. How didst thou scape?

How cam'st thou hither?

Sware by this Bottle how thou cam'st hither: I ecap'd vpon a But of Sacke, which the Sayers heaued o're-board, by this Bottle which I made of the barke of a Tree, with mine owne hands, since I was caft a-shore.

Cal. Ile sware vpon that Bottle, to be thy true subiect, for the liquor is not earthilly.

Ste. Herees: sware then how thou ecap'dst.

Tri. Swom ahoire (man) like a Ducke: I can swim like a Ducke Ile be sware.

Ste. Here, kiffe the Booke,

Though thou can't, sware like a Ducke, thou art made like a Goode.

Tri. O Stephano, ha'li't any more of this?

Ste. The whole But (man) my Cellar is in a rocke by thee'ta-side, where my Wine is hid:

How now Moone-Calfe, how do's thine Ague?

Cal. Ha'li't thou not dropt from heauen?

Ste. Out o'th Moone I doe affure thee. I was the Mon'th Moone, when time was.

Cal. I have scene thee in her: and I doe adore thee: My Mifris shew'd me thee, and thy Dog, and thy Buff.

Ste. Come, sware to that: kiffe the Booke: I will furnish it anon with new Contents: Sware.

Tri. By this good light, this is a very shalow Monser: I afeard of him: a very weake Monster: The Man is't Moone?

A most poore crouckulous Monster:

Well drawne Monser, in good foorh.

Cal. He shew thee every fertilly ynch 0'th Island: and I will kiffe thy foot: I prethee be my god.

Tri. By this light, a moost perfidious, and drunken Monser, when god's a sleepe he'll rob his Bottle,

Cal. Ile kiffe thy foot. Ile sware my felte thy Subiect.

Ste. Come on then: downe and sware.

Tri. I shall laugh my felle to death at this puppi-headed Monser: a moost scares Monser: I could finde in my heart to beate him.

Ste. Come, kiffe.

Tri. But that the poore Monser's in drinke:

An abominable Monster.

Cal. I'le shew thee the beft Springs: I'le pluckle thee Berries: I'le fill for thee; and get thee wood enough.

A plague vpon the Tyrant that I ferue; I'le beare him no more Stickes, but follow thee, thou wondrous man.

Tri. A moost ridiculous Monster, to make a wonder of a poore drunkard.

Cal. I'prethee let me bring thee where Craba grow; and I with my long nayles will digge thee pig-nuts; thoe thee a layes neft, and inruct thee how to finde the nimble Marmazet: I'le bring thee to claffing Philibers, and sometimes I'le get thee young Scamels from the Rocks: Wilt thou goe with me?

Ste. I pre'thee now lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the King, and all our company eife being dround, wee will inherit here: Here beare my Bottle: Fellow Trinculo; we'll fill him by and by a-gaine.

Caliban Sings drunkently.

Farewell Mafter; farewell, farewell.

Tri. A howling Monster: a drunken Monser.

Cal. No more damns I'le make for yous,

Nor feath in firing, at requiring,

Nor ferape trenchering, nor auijo dipp,

'Ban' ban' Cacalyban,

Has a new Mafter, get a new Man.

Freedome, high-day, high-day freedome, freedome high-day, freedome.

Ste. O braue Monser; lead the way.

Aeitus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Ferdinand (bearing a Log.)

For. There be some Sports are painfull; & their labor Delight in them fet off: Some kindes of bafeniffe Are nobly vnlergon; and moft poore matters Point to rich ends: this my means Taske Would be as heauy to me, as odious, but The Mifris which I ferue, quickens what's dead, And makes my labours, pleasures: O She is Ten times more gentle, then her Father's crabb'd; And he's compo'd of hardhelle. I must remove Some thousands of these Logs, and pile them vp, Upon a fare innuention; my sweet Mifris Wepes when the fews me worke, & failes, fuch bages Had neuer like Exeutor: I forget;

But thefe fweet thoughts, doe euen refresh my labours, Moft bufe left, when I doe it, Enter Miranda

Mr. Alas, now pray you and Pforo. Worke not fo hard: I would the lightning had Burnt vp thofe Logs that you are enioyd to pile: Pray feck it down, and ref you: when this burns Twill wipe for hauing wearied you: my Father Is hard at fudy; pray now ref your felce,
The Tempest.

He's safe for these three hours.

Fer. O moit decre Miftris,
The Sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must fiuieu to do.

Mfr. If you'll sit downe
Ilke your Logges the while: pray glue me that,
Ile carry it to the pile.

For. No precious Creature,
I had rather cracke my finewes, breake my backe,
Then you should such diilicon vndergoe,
While I fit lazy by.

Mfr. It would become me
As well as it do's you; and I should do it
With much more care: for my good will is to it,
And yours it is againit.

Pro. Poor woman thou art infected,
This visitation fleaves it.

Mfr. You lookk wearily.

For. No, noble Miftris, 'tis fresh morning with me
When you are by at night: I do befeech you
Cheerfully, that I might set it in my prayers,
What is your name?

Mfr. Miranda, O my Father,
I haue broke your heft to say fo.

For. Affirm'd Miranda,
Indeed the top of Abimation, worth
What's decreed to the world: full many a Lady
I haue ey'd with birtt regard, and many a time
Th' harmony of their tongues, hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent care: for feuerall vertues
Haue I lik'd feuerall women, wener any VWith fo full soule, but some defect in her
Did quarrill with the nobilit grace she ow'd,
And put it to the foile. But you, O you,
So perfect, and so peeifie, are created
Of euerie Creatures bint.

Mfr. I do not know
One of my fexe; no womans face remember,
Sawe from my glaffe, mine owne: Nor haue I scene
More that I may call men, then you good friend,
And my deere Father: how features are abroad
I am skilleffe of; but by my moderate
(The Jewell in my dowre) I would not with Any Companion in the world but you:
Nor can imagination forme a flape
Befides your felfe, to like of: but I prattle
Something too widly, and my Fathers precepts
I therein do forget.

Fer. I am, in my condition
A Prince (Miranda) I do thinke a King
(I would not fo) and would no more endure
This wolden fauerice, then to fuffer
The flght-flie blow my mouth: haere my soule speake.
The verie infant that I bow you, did
My heart fite to your feruice, there refides
To make me flase to it, and for your fake
Am I this patient Logge-man.

Mfr. Do you loue me?

Fer. O heauen; O earth, beare witnes to this found,
And crown what I professe with kinde euent
If I speake true: if hollowly, insert
VWhat bef is loaded me, to milckife: I,
Beyond all limit of what elfe I' th world
Do loue, prize, honor you.

Mfr. I am a foolse
To wepe at what I am glad of.

Proc. Faire encounter
Of two most rare affectiones: heuens raine grace
On that which breeds betweence'em.

Fer. Wherefore wepe you?

Mfr. At mine unworthy selfe, that dare not offer
VWhat I deire to glie; and much lefle tale
VWhat I shal die to want: But this is trifling,
And all the more it seekes to hide it felfe,
The bigger bulke it shewe. Hence balfull cunning,
And prompt me plaine and holy innocencce.
I am your wife, if you will marrie me;
If not, Ille die your maid: to be your fellow
You may denie me, but Ille be your servante
VWheather you will or no.

Fer. My Miftris (deceit)
And I thus humble euer.

Mfr. My husband then?

Fer. I, with a heart as willing
As bondage crue of freedom: heere's my hand.

Mfr. And mine, with my heart in't; and now farewel
Till halfe an houre hence.

Fer. A thousand, thound.

Proc. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
VWho are surpriz'd with all; but my relaying
At nothing can be more: Ille to my booke,
For yet ere supper time, mult I performe
Much balnest appertaining.

Exeunt.

Secena Secunda.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me, when the But is out we will drinke water, not a drop before; therefore beare vp, & board em' Servant Monfer, drinke to me.

Trin. Servant Monfer? the folly of this Hand, they say there's but flue upon this Ile; we are three of them, if th'other two be brain'd like vs, the State turrets.

Ste. Drinke servante Monfer when I bid thee, thy ies are almost set in thy head.

Trin. VVhere should they bee set else? hee were a brane Monfer indeede if they were set in his taile.

Ste. My man-Monfer hath drown'd his tongue in facke: for my part the Sea cannot drowne mee, I swam ere I could recover the shore, five and thirtie Leagues off and on, by this light thou shalt bee my Lieutenant Monfer, or my Standard.

Trin. Your Lieutenant if you lift, hee's no standard.

Ste. VVeel not run Monfieur Monfer.

Trin. Not go neither: but you' lie like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.

Ste. Moone-calfe, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good Moone-calfe.

Cal. How does thy honour? Let me licsce thy Hooce: Ile not ferue him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest most ignorant Monfer, I am in cafe to luffle a Confable: why, thou debidh'd Fith thou, was there euer man a Coward, that hath drunk fo much Sacke as I to day? wilt thou tell a monfrous lie, being but halfe a Fith, and halfe a Monfer?

Cal. Loe, how he mockes me, wilt thou let him my Lord?
The Tempest.

Trin. Lord, quoth he? that a Monster should be such a Natural?
Cal. Loos, loo againe: bide him to death I prerthe.
Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head: If you proue a maduineer, the next Tree: the poore Monter's my fubiecf, and he shall not fuffer indignity.
Cal. I thanke my noble Lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd to hearken once againe to the fulte I made to thee?
Ste. Marry will I: Kneele, and repeate it,
I will hand, and fo shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariell invisibly.
Cal. As I told thee before, I am fubiecf to a Tyrant,
A Sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me
Of the Island.
Ariell. Thou lyeft.
Cal. Thou lyeft, thou letting Monkey thou:
I would my valiant Mafter would destroy thee.
I do not lye.
Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in his,
By this hand, I will supplant fome of your teeth.
Trin. Why, I faid nothing.
Ste. Mum then, and no more: proceed.
Cal. I fay by Sorcery he got this life
From me, he got it: If thy Greatneffe will Renegge it on him, (for I know thou dar'ft!)
But this Thing dare not.
Ste. That's moft certaine.
Cal. Thou shalt be Lord of it, and Ife ferue thee.
Ste. How now fhall this be compait?
Canft thou bring me to the party?
Cal. Yes, yes my Lord, Ife yeeld him thee afleepe,
Where thou maift knoake a naile in his head.
Ariell. Thou liest, thou canst not.
Cal. What a py'de Ninnie's this? Thou fcurvy patch:
I do befeech thy Greatneffe glue him blows,
And take his bottle from him: When that's gone,
He fhall drinke nought but brine, for Ife not fhew him
Where the quicke Frothes are.
Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger:
Interrupt the Monfer one word farther, and by this hand, Ife turne my merce out o'doores, and make a Stockfifh of thee.
Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing:
Ile go farther off.
Ste. Did'st thou not fay he lyed?
Ariell. Thou lyef.
Ste. Do I fo? Take thou that,
As you like this, give me the lyne another time.
Trin. I did not glue the lie: Out o'your wittyes, and hearing too?
A pox o'your bottle, this can Sacke and drinking doo:
A murren on your Monfer, and the diuell take your fingers.
Cal. Ha, ha, ha.
Ste. Now forward with your Tale: prethee stand further off.
Trin. Beate him enough: after a little time
Ile beate him too.
Ste. Stand farther: Come proceede.
Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a cucome with him
I'fth afternoon to fleeepe: there thou maift braine him,
Having firft faied his bookees: Or with a logge
Batter his skull, or punch him with a flake,
Or cut his weazend with thy knife. Remember
Firft to poffeffe his bookees; for without them

Hee's but a Sot, as I am; nor hath not
One Spirit to command: they all do hate him
As rootedly as I. Toorne but his Bookes,
He ha's braue Vrtillis (for fo he calleth them)
Which when he ha's a house, hee'le decke withall.
And that most deeply to consider, is
The beautie of his daughter: he himselfe
Cals her a non-parell: I neuer saw a woman
But onely Sycorax my Dam, and she;
But the as tarre forgiffeth Sycorax,
As great'd do's leaft.
Ste. Is it fo braue a Laiffe?
Cal. I Lord, she will become thy bed, I warrant,
And bring thee forth braue brood.
Ste. Monfter, I will kill thine shall his daughter and I will be King and Queene, faue our Graces; and Trinc-culo and thy felfe shall be Vice-royes:
Doft thou like the plot Trinculo?
Trin. Excellent.
Ste. Give me thy hand, I am forry I beate thee:
But while thou ilu'lel keep a good tongue in thy head.
Cal. Within this halfe hour he will be afleepe,
Wilt thou defroy him then?
Ste. I on mine honour.
Ariell. This will I tell my Mafter.
Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of plefure,
Let vs be locond. Will you trouble the Catch
You taught me but whileare?
Ste. At thy requet Monfter, I will do reason,
Any reason: Come on Trinculo, let vs fing.
Sings.
Float'em, and cou'tem: and shou'tem, and float'em,
Thought is free.
Cal. That's not the tune.
Ariell plays the tune on a Tabor and Pipe.
Ste. What is this fame?
Trin. This is the tune of our Catch, plaied by the picture of No-body.
Ste. If thou beeft a man, shew thy felfe in thy likenes:
If thou beeft a diuell, take'st as thou lift.
Trin. O forgive me my flinnes.
Ste. He that dies pays all debts: I defie thee;
Mercy vpon vs.
Cal. Art thou afraid?
Ste. No Monfter, not I.
Cal. Be not afraid, the Isle is full of noyes,
Sounds, and sweet airs, that glue delight and hurt not:
Sometimes a hothead and twangling Instruments
Will hum about mine ears; and sometime voices,
That if I then had wak'd after long fleece,
Will make me fleece againe, and then in dreaming,
The clouds methought would open, and shew riches
Ready to drop vpon me, that when I wak'd
I cri'd to dreame againe.
Ste. This will prove a braue kingdome to me,
Where I shall have my Muufeke for nothing.
Cal. When Prospero is deftoy'd.
Ste. That shall be by and by:
I remember the florie.
Trin. The found is going away,
Lets follow it, and after do our worke.
Ste. Leade Monfter,
Wee'll follow: I would I could fee this Taborer,
He leues it on.
Trin. Wilt come?
Ile follow Stephano.

Exeunt,

Al. Old Lord, I cannot blame thee, Who, am my feife attach'd with weariness To th'bullying of my spirits: Sit downe, and rest: Even here I will put off my hope, and keepe it No longer for my Flatterer: he is drown'd Whom we stray to finde, and the Sea mocks Our frustrate search on land: well, let him goe. I am right glad, that he's so out of hope: Doe not for one repulse forgive the purpose That you refol'd e'reffect.

In this strange flare?

Al. O, it is monstrous; monstrous:

Me thought the billowes spoke, and told me of it,

The windes did fig it to me: and the Thunder (That deep and dreadful full Organ-Pipe) prounc'd

The name of Prayer: it did lase my Trepafe,

Therefore my Sonne I th Oxe is beird: and I

I'l fecke him deeper then ere plummet founded,

And with him there ly mudded.

Sbc. But one heed at a time,

Ile fight their Legions ore.

If I have too austerely punish'd you, Your compensation makes amend, for I Have given you here, a third of mine owne life, Or that for which I live : who, once again I tender to thy hand : All thy vexations Were but my trials of thy love, and thou Hadst strangely foold the left : here, afore heaven I ratifie this my rich gift : O Ferdinand, Doe not amuse me, that I boast her of, For thou shalt finde she will out-trip all praise And make it hate, behind her.

Fer. I doe believe it Against an Oracle.

Pro. Then, as my gueft, and thine owne acquisition Worthily purchase's, take my daughter : But If thou do'ft break her Virgin-knot, before All fanctimonious ceremonies may With full and holy right, be minifred, No sweet afperion shall the heavens let fall To make this contract grow : but barren hate, Sower-ey'd difdain, and difcord shall befrew The vision of your bed, with weede fo loathly That you shall hate it both : Therefore take heed, As Hymens Lamps shall light you.

Fer. As I hope For quiet days, faire Ittuce, and long life, With fuch love, as 'tis now the murkiefl den, The moft opportune place, the strongefl fuggeftion, Our worfer Genius can, fhall never melt Mine honor into luft, to take away The edge of that days celebration, When I fhall thinke, or Phaethus Steeds are founderd, Or Night kept chain'd below.

Ar. Prefently?

Pro. I : with a twincek.

Ar. Before you can fay come, and goe, And breathe twice ; and cry, fo, fo : Each one tripping on his Toe, Will be here with mop, and moowe.

Do you love me Master? no?

Pro. Dearely, my delicate Ariel: doe not approach Till thou do'ft hear me call.

Ar. Well: I confeffe.

Pro. Look thoe thou be true : doe not glue dailance Too much the raige : the ftrongeft othes, are fraw To th'fire ith' blood : be more abtenious, Or elfe good night your vow.

Per. I warrant you, Sir, The white cold virgin Snow, upon my heart Abates the ardour of my Lovers.

Pro. Well.

Bid thee leave thefe, & with her foueraigne grace, Iuno Here on this graffe-plot, in this very place defends. To come, and sport: here Peacocks flye amaine : Approach, rich Ceris, her to entertaine. Enter Ceris.

Ir. Halle, many-coloured Meffengers, that nere Do'ft difheve the wife of Jupiter: Who, with thy faffon wings, upon my flowers Diffuflent hon'd drops, refrehing thowres, And with each end of thy blew bowe do'ft crowne My booke acres, and my vnfrubd downe, Rich farcph to my proud earth : why hath thy Queene Summond me hither, to this short grace? Iuno? An contra of true Loue, to celebrate, And some donation freely to eftate On the bles'd Louers.

Ir. Tell me heavenly Bowe, If Venus or her Sonne, as thou do'ft know, Do now attend the Queene? since they did plot The meanes, that duske Dié, my daughter got, Her, and her blind-Boyes fcaflndal company, I have forworne.

Ir. Of her fociete Be not afraid: I met her delite Cutting thofe clouds towards Pheas: and her Son Dowc-drawn with her: here though they to haue done Some wanton charmes, vpon this Man and Malde, Whose vowes are, that no bed-right fhall be paid Till Hymen Torch be lighted : but in vain, Mars hot Minion is returnd againe, Her waphith headed fonna, has broke his arrowes, Swears he will shoote no more, but play with Sparrows, And be a Boy right out.

Ir. Hight Queene of State, Great Iuno comes, I know her by her gate.

Iu. How do's my bounteous fitter? goe with me To bleffe this twaine, that they may properous be, And honoured in their life.

They Sing.

Iu. Honest, rich, marriage, blifsful, Long continuance, and encreafing, Haurley iyes, he fill upon you.

Iuno
The Tempest.

Pro. Come with a thought; I thank thee Ariel: come.

Per. This is a most malefick vision, and Harmonious charmingly: may I be bold
To think it? Pro. A spirit, which by mine Art
I have from their confines call'd to enaft
My present fancy.

Per. Let me liue here ever, so rare a wonder Father, and a wife
May, as this fair Paraffce, and the ciepe looke,
Leave your crippe channels, and on this greene-Land
Anwere your fummons, Iuno do's command.

Enter Certaine Nymphes.

You Sun-burn'd Sicklemens of August weary,
Make hether from the furrow, and be merry,
Make holie day: your rye-traw hats put on,
And thefe fresh Nymphes encounter every one
In Country footing.

Enter certaine Reapers (properly habited) they swine with the Nymphes, in a gracefull dance, towards the end whereof, Proterpo flairs fastiwide and peasates, after which so a
Strange belowe and confus'd myth, they beautiully saunt.

Pro. I had forgot that foule conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates
Against my life: the minute of their plot
Is almost come: Well done, avoid no more.

Per. This: he strange: your fathers in some passion
That works him strangely.

Mir. Neuer till this day
Saw I him touch'd with angre, so diffenter'd.

Pro. You doe looke (my lon) in a mou'd fort,
As if you were diuaded: be cheerful Sir,
Our Reuds now are ended: Thefe our actors,
(As I foretold you) were all Spirts, and
Are melted into Ayre, into thin Ayre,
And the baseflefe fabricke of this vision
The Cloud-capt Towres, the gorgeous Pallaces,
The solennes Temples, the great Globe it selfe,
Yes, all which it inherets, shall dissolve,
And like this inferiuental Pageant faded
Leave not a racke behind: we are fuch fuffe
As dreams are made on; and our little life
Is rounded with a fleer: Sir, I am vex'd,
Beside my weekness, my old braine is troubled:
Be not distur'd with my infirmite,
If you be pleas'd, retire into my Cell,
And there repose, a turne or two, Ile walke
To fill my beating minde.

Per. Mir. We with your peace.

Exit.

Pro. Thy thoughts I cleave to, what's thy pleasure?

Pro. Spirit: We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Per. I my Commander, when I presented Ceres
I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd
Leaft I might anger thee.

Per. Say again, where didst thou leave their varlots?

Per. I told you Sir, they were red-hot with drinking,
So full of valor, that they smote the ayre
For breathing in their faces: heate the ground
For killing of their beasts; yet alwaies bending
Towards their prey: then I heate my Tabor,
At which like vnback't colts they prick't their ears
Advanc'd their eye-lids, liftet vp their notes
As they smelt musicke, so I charm'd their ears
That Calfe-like, they my lowing follow'd, through Thorp's bream, flower, &fhofts, & thorns,
Which enter'd their frail e flins: at last I left them
I' th' filthy mantled poole beyond your Cell,
There dancing vp to th'chins, that the foile Lake
Ore-fluck their feet.

Pro. This was well done (my bird)
Thy shape invisible retaine thou still:
The trumpery in my house, goe bring it hither
For flate to catch these thesees.

Per. I go, I goe. Exeunt. A Deuill, a borne-Deuill, on whole nature
Nurture can neuer fickle: on whom my paines
Humanely taken, all, all loft, quite loft,
And, as with age, his body ouglier groves,
So his minde cankers: I will plague them all,
Even to roaring: Come, hang on them this line.

Enter Artil, laden with gilffering apparel, &c. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all uer.

Cal. Pray you tread softly, that the blind Mole may not heare a foot fall: we now are nere his Cell.

Sr. Montfer, your Fairy, w you fay is a harmsles Fairy,
Has done little better then plaid the lacke with vs.

Trin. Monfer, I do smell all horfe-pilfe, at which
My nose is in great indignation.

Mir. So is mine. Do you heare Montfer: If I should Take a displeasure against you: Look me.

Trin. Thou wert but a loft Monfer.

Cal. Good my Lord, give me thy favour still,
Be patient, for the price Ile bring thee too.
Shall hau'd winke this mischance: therefore speake softly,
All's hau't as midnight yet.

Trin. I, but to loose our bottles in the Poole.

Sr. There is not onely disgrace and dihonor in that Monfer, but an infinite loffe.

Tr. That's more to me then my wetting:
Yet this is your harmsles Fairy, Monfer.

Sr. I will fetch off my bottle,
Though I be o're ears for my labour.

Cal. Pre-thee (my King) be quiet. Seeft thou here
This is the mouth o'the Cell: no noise, and enter:
Do that good mishcheese, which may make this Island
Thine owne for euer, and I thy Caliban
For aye thy foot-licker.

Sr. Give me thy hand,
I do begin to haue bloody thoughts.

Trin. O King Stephano, O Pearth: O worthy Stephano, Looke what a warderbee here is for thee.

Cal. Let it alone thou fool, it is but trafe.

Tri. Oh, ho, Monfer: wee know what belongs to a frillierry, O King Stephano.

Sr. Put
The Tempest.

Sir. Put off that gowne (Trinculo) by this hand Ie haue that gowne.

Tri. Thy grace shall have it. (meane Cal. The dropecke drowne this foole, what doe you To doate thus on Such luggage ? let's alone And doe the murther first: if he awake From toe to crowne he'll fill our skins with pinches, Make vs strange Ruffle.

Sr. Be you quiet (Monter) Mifiris line, is not this my Jerkin? now is the Jerkin under the line: now Jerkin you are to like to your haire, & prove a bald Jerkin.

Tri. Doe, doe; we steale by lynne and leuell, and like your grace.

Sr. I thank thee for that left: hear's a garments for't: Wit shall not goe vn-rewarded while I am King of this Country: Steale by line and leuell, is an excellent passe Of pate: there's another garment for't.

Tri. Monter, come put some Lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none on't: we shall loose our time, And all be turn'd to Barnacles, or to Apes With foreheads villanous low.

Sr. Monter, lay to your fingers: helpe to bearce this away, where my hoghhead of wine is, or Ie turne you out of my kingdom: goe to, carry this.

Tri. And this.

Sr. I, and this.

A noose of Hunters beard. Enter divers Spirits in shape Of Dogs and Hounds, hasting them about: Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Pro. Hey Mountains, hey.

Ari. Silver: there it goes, Silver.

Pro. Fury, Fury: there Tyrant, there: harke, harke.

Goe, charge my Goblins that they grind their loynts With dry Convolutions, vsr vp their fineses With aged Cramps, & more ginch-spotted make them, Then Pard, or Cat o'Mountains.

Ari. Harke, they rore.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly: At this hour Lies at my mercy all mine enemies:
Shortely shall all my labours end, and thou Shalt have the ayr at freedome: for a little Follow, and doe me seruice. Exeunt.

Actus quintus: Scena Prima.

Enter Prospero (in his Magicks robes) and Ariel.

Pro. Now do's my Profe& don gather to a head: My charmes cracke not: my Spirits obey, and Time Goes vpwright with his carriage: how's the day?

Ari. On the first hower, at which time, my Lord You said our worke shold cease.

Pro. I did say so, When first I rais'd the Tempe&t: say my Spirit, How fare the King, and his Followers?

Ari. Confid'd together In the same fashion, as you gaine in charge, Luf as you left them ; all prisoners Sir In the Line-groue which weather-fends your Cell, They cannot budge till your releafe: The King, His Brother, and yours, abide all three distrauched, And the remainder mourning over them, Brim full of forrow, and dilmay: but chiefly Him that you term'd Sir, the good old Lord Gonzalo, His tears run downe his beard like winters drops From easies of reeds: your charm so strongly works 'em That if you now beheld them, your affections Would become tender.

Pro. Doft thou thinke so, Spirit?

Ari. Mine would, Sir, were I humane.

Pro. And mine shall.

Haft thou (which art but aire) a touch, a feeling Of their afflications, and shall not my selfe, One of their kindes, that rcell all as sharpeily, Passion as they, be kindlier mould't then thou art? Thogh with their high wrongs I am strook to th' quick, Yet, with my nobler reason, gainst my fate Doe I take part: the rarer Action is In vertue, then in vengence: they, being penitent, The folde drift of my purpose doth extend Not a browne further: Goe, releafe them Ariel, My Charmes Ie breake, their fences Ie restore, And they shall be themselves.

Ari. Ile fetch them, Sir. Exeit.

Pro. Ye Elues of hills, brooks, finding lakes & groves, And ye, that on the sands with printlesse footes Doe chafe the ebbing-Nepuncs, and doe flie him When he comes backe: you dumpy-Puppets, that By Moore-shine doe the Greene lowre Ringleets make, Whereof the Ewe not bites: and you, whole paftime Is to make midnight-Mulhrumps, that reioyce To heare the solemne Curfewe, by whole ayde (Waske Maters though ye be) I have bedym'd The Noone-like Sun, call'd forth the moutinous winds, And twixt the green Sea, and the azur'd vault Set roaring warre: To the drede ratling Thunder Haue I giv'n fire, and ripted lovet sawt Oke With his owne Bolet: The strong baffe promontorie Haue I made shakke, and by the spurn pleckt vp The Pyne, and Cedar. Graues at my command Haue wak'd their sleepers, op'd, and let 'em forth By my fo potent Art. But this rough Magicke I heere abrue: and when I haue requir'd Some heavenly Museke (which even now I do) To worke mine end vpnon their Senses, that This Ayrie-charmes is for, I'll breake my flafe, Bury it certaine fadeoms in the earth, And dearer then did euer Plummett found Ie drowne my booke.

Solemne musike.

Here enters Ariel before: Then Alonso wolt a frantickke ge-£ures, attended by Gonzalo. Sebastian and Anthono in like manner attended by Adrian and Francisco: They all enter the circle withich Prospero had made, and there stand charm'd: which Prospero offerings, speakers.

A solemne Ayre, and the best comforter, To an unfeild fancie, Cure thy braines (Now viclefle) boile within thy skull: there stand For you are Spell-flopt.

Holy Gonzalo, Honourable man, Mine eyes ev'n fociable to the throw of thine Fall fellows drops: The charme diffolves apace, And as the morning steals upon the night (Melting the darkeneffe) do their rising fences Begin to chace the ignorant fumes that mantle Their clearer reason: O good Gonzalo My true professor, and a loyal Sir, To him thou follow: I will pay thy graces Home both in word, and deede: Most cruelly

Didst
The Tempest.

Did thou Alnos, vfe me, and my daughter: Thy brother was a furtherer in the Age, Thou art pinch'd not now Sebastian. Flehs, and bloud, You, brother mine, that entertaine ambition, Expeld rude men, and nature, whom, with Sebastian (Who's inward pinches therefore are most strong.) Would heere have kill'd thy King: I do forgive thee, Vnnatural though thou art: Their understanding Begins to swell, and the approaching tide Will shortly fill the reasonable shore That now by foule, and mudy: not one of them That yet looks on me, or would know me: Ariel, Fetch me the Hat, and Rapier in my Cell, I will difcase me, and my felle prefent As I was sometime Milammas: quickly Spirit, Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariel fings, and helps to attire him. Where the Bee jacks, there Jack I, In a Grasshps bell, I tie, There I couched when Oureles doe cri, On the Bells back I doe fly after Summer merrily. Merrily, merrily, faire I live now, Under the bliflou that hangs on the Bow.

Pro. Why that's my dainty Ariel: I shall mifle thee, but yet thou shalt have freedom: so, so, so. To the Kings ship, insuffe as thou art, There thou shalt finde the Marriners alchepe Under the Hatches: the Master and the Boat-Swaine Being awake, enforce them to this place; And prefently, I prethee. Ar. I drink the aire before me, and returne Or ere your pulle twice beate. Exit. Gen. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement Inhabits heere: some heavenly power guide vs Out of this fearefull Country.

Pro. Behold Sir King The wronged Duke of Milammas, Prospero: For more affurance that a living Prince Do's now speake to thee, I embrace thy body, And to thee, and thy Company, I bid A hearty welcome. Ar. Where thou be't he or no, Or some Inchantcd triflle to abuse me, (As late I have beene) I know not: thy Pulfe Beats as of flehs, and bloud: and since I saw thee, Thy Afflidtion of my minde amends, with which I have a madness held me: this must cruze (And if this be at all) a most strange story, Thy Dukedom I refigne, and doe entreat Thou pardon me my wrongs: but how holde Prospero Be living, and be heere? Pro. First, noble Friend, Let me embrace thine age, whose honor cannot Be mesur'd, or confin'd. Genr. Whether this be, Or be not, I'll not swear. Pro. You do yet take Some fubtelties o'th'live, that will nor let you Believe things certaine: Welcomme, my friends all, But you, my brace of Lords, were I so minded I heere could puke his Highness frowne vpon you And influte you Traitors: at this time I will tell no tales. Ar. The Divell speaks in him: Pro. No.
That this doth people in't.
Pro. 'Tis new to thee, (play?)
Alse. What is this Maud, with whom thou wast at Your el'd acquaintance cannot be three hours:
Is the the godiffe that hath feuer'd vs,
And brought us thus together?
Fer. Sir, she is mortall;
But by immortall prudence, she's mine;
I chose her when I could not ask my Father
For his advice: nor thought I had one: She
Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milaine,
Of whom, so often I have heard renowne,
But never saw before: of whom I have Receiv'd a second life; and second Father
This Lady makes him to me.
Alse. I am hers.
But O, how odly will it found, that I
Must aske my childe fortune?
Pro. I haue inly wept,
Or should have spoke ere this: looke downe you gods
And on this couple drop a blest crowne?
For it is you, that hath taught'd forth the way
Which brought vs hither.
Alse. I say Amen, Gomulato.
Gon. Was Milaine thrust from Milaine, that his Ilue
Should become Kings of Naples? O reioyce
Beyond a common joy, and let it downe
With gold on lading Pillers: In one voyage
Did Claribell her husband finde at Tunis,
And Ferdinand her brother, found a wife,
Where he himselfe was best: Prospero, his Duke'dome
In a poore Isle: and all of vs, our felicities,
When no man was his owne.
Alse. Glue me your hands:
That griefe and sorrow still embrace his heart,
That doth not with you joy.
Gon. Be it so, Amen.
Enter Ariel, with the Mafter and Beantfouine amanely following.
O looke Sir, looke Sir, here is more of vs:
I prophett'd, if a Gallowes were on Land
This fellow could not drowne: Now blasphemy,
That saith't Grace on boord, nor an oath on shore,
Haft thou no mouth by land?
What is the newes?
Bot. The best newes is, that we haue safely found
Our King, and company: The next: our Ship,
Which but three glasse fince, we gave out sipp'd,
It tyme, and yare, and bravely rigg'd, as when
We first put out to Sea.
Ase. Sir, all this feruice
Haue I done since I went.
Pro. My trickiey Spirit.
Pro. These are not natural events, they strengthen
From strange, to stranger: say, how came you hither?
Bot. If I did thinkes, Sir, I were well awake,
I'd flirle to tell you: we were dead of sleepe,
And (how we know not) all clapt vnder hatches,
Where, but even now, with strange, and fereware noyes
Of roaring, throaking, bowling, gingling chaines,
And mo diuerfitie of sounds, all horrible.
We were awak'd: straight way, at liberty;
Where we, in all our trim, freely beheld
Our royll, good, and gallant Ship: our Mafter
Capping to eyre her: on a trice, so pleae you,
Euen in a dreame, were we divided from them,
And were brought moaping hither.
Ase. Was't well done?
Pro. Bravely (my diligence) thou shall be free.
Alse. This is as strange a Maze, as ere men trod,
And there is in this buifnife, more then nature
Was euer conduct of: some Oracle
Muff reilifie our knowledge.
Pro. Sir, my Leige,
Doe not infell your minde, with beating on
The frangeneffe of this bufineffe, at pickt leisure
(Which shall be shortly finge) I thende you,
(Which to you shall feme probable) of euer
These happend accidents: till when, be chearffull
And thinke of each thing well: Come hither Spirit,
Set Caliban, and his companions free;
Vappe the Prophet: how fares my gracious Sir?
There are yet milifying of your Company
Some few odd Lades, that you remember not.
Enter Ariel, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo in their finne Apparel.
St. Every man shift for all the rest, and let
No man take care for himselfe: for all is
But fortune: Caragio Bully-Monster Caragio.
Tri. If these be true spiees which I weare in my head, here's a goodly light.
Cal. O Sthenus, thefe be braue Spirits indeecke:
How fine my Mafter is? I am afraid
He will callifie me.
Seb. Ha, ha,
What things are thefe, my Lord Antonius?
Will money buy em?
Amt. Very like: one of them
Is a plaine Filth, and no doubt marketable.
Pro. Marke but the badges of thefe men, my Lords,
Then say if they be true: This mimhsen knae;
His Mother was a Witch, and one fo strong
That could controle the Moone; make floures, and ebs,
And deals in her command, without her power:
Thefe three have robd me, and this demy-duell;
(For he's a haftard one) had plotted with them
To take my life: two of thefe Fellowes, you Must know, and owne, this Thing of darkeneffe, I Acknowlege me.
Cal. I shall be pincht to death.
Alse. Is not this Stephano, my drunken Butler?
Seb. He is drunke now;
Where had he wine?
Alse. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where should they Finde this glod Liquor, that he's glided 'em?
How can't thou in this pickle?
Tri. I haue bin in such a pickle since I faw you laft,
That I feare me will never out of my bones:
I shall not feare fly-blowing.
Seb. Why how now Stephano?
Stc. O touch me not, I am not Stephano, but a Cramp.
Pro. You'd be King o' the Isle, Sirha?
Stc. I should haue bin a fore one then.
Alse. This is a strange thing as ere I look'd on.
Pro. He is as disparroporion'd in his Manners
As in his fhape: Goe Sirha, to my Cell,
Take with you your Companions: as you looke
To haue my pardon, trim it handfomely,
Cal. I that I will: and I'lle be wife hereafter,
And seek for grace: what a thrice double Aife
Was I to take this drunkard for a god?
And worship this dull foole?

Pro. Goe to, away.

Alo. Hence, and beftow your luggage where you
Sect. Or flole it rather.

Pro. Sir, I invite your Highness, and your traine
To my poore Cell: where you shall take your ref.

For this one night, which part of it, Ile waile
With fuch difcourfe, as I not doubt, shall make it
Goe quicke away: The flory of my life,
And the particular accidents, gon by
Since I came to this Ile: And in the morne
I'le bring you to your ship, and fo to Naples,
Where I have hope to fee the nupciall
Of thefe our deere-helond, folemnized,
And thence retire me to my Millaine, where Every third thought shall be my graue,
Alo. I long
To heare the flory of your life; which muft
Take the care ftarngely.

Pro. I'le deliver all,

And promife you calme Seas, fuspicious gales,
And faile, fo expeditious, that fhall catch
Your Royall fllee farre off: My Ariel; chicke
That is thy charge: Then to the Elements
Be free, and fare thou well: pleafe you draw neere.

Exeunt omnes.

EPILOGUE,
spoken by Prospero.

Now my Charmes are all ore-thrown,
And what strength I have's mine owne.
Which is moft fain: now 'tis true
I muft be borne confinde by you,
Or fent to Naples, Let me not Since I have my Dukedom got,
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare Island, by your Spell,
But release me from my bands
With the helpe of your good hands:
Gentle breath of yours, my Sails
Muf't fill, or else my proiect failles,
Which was to pleafe: Now I want
Spirits to enforce: Art to inchant,
And my ending is defpair,
Vnleffe I be reliev'd by prayer
Which pierces so, that it affaults
Mercy it felfe, and fwee all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your Indulgence fet me free. Exit.

Valentine: Proteus, and Speed.

Valentine.

Eafe to perswade, my louing Proteus; Home-keeping-youth, have euer homely wits, Yet'st affe&ion chaimes thy tender dayes To the sweet glances of thy honour'd Loue, I rather would entreat thy company, To see the wonders of the world abroad, Then (living dully fuggard'd at home) Weare out thy youth with shapeleffe idlenesse. But since thou lou'lt; louse filile, and thrive therein, Even as I would, when I to loue begin.

Pro. Wit thou be gone? Sweet Valentine ad eum, Thinke on thy Proteus, when thou (hap'ly) feest Some rare note-worthy obie& in thy trauaille. With me partaker in thy happineffe, When thou do'tt meet good hap; and in thy danger, (If euer danger doe enuiron thee) Commend thy griefance to my holy prayers, For I will be thy heade-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a loue-booke pray for my successe?

Pro. Upon some booke I loue, I'le pray for thee.

Val. That's on some hollow Storie of deepe loue, How yong Leander croft the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deepe Storie, of a deepe loue, For he was more then ouer-chooses in loue.

Val. 'Tis true; for you are ouer-bootes in loue, And yet you neuer (wom the Hellespont.

Pro. Ouer the Bootes? may geue me not the Bootes.

Val. No, I will not; for it bootes thee not.

Pro. What?

(grones:

Val. To be in loue; where storne is bought with Coy looks, with hart-forue foiges; one fading moment With twenty watchfull, weary, tedious nightes; (mirth, If hap'ly won, perhaps a hapleffe gaine; If loft, why then a grieuous labour won; How euer: but a sollye bought with wit, Or eile a wit, by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.

Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear ye'le prove.

Pro. 'Tis Loue you caull at, I am not Love.

Val. Loue is your master, for he masters you; And he that is so yoked by a fool,

Me thinks he shou'd not be chronicled for wife.

Pro. Yet Writere say; as in the sweeteft Bud, The eating Canker dwells; so eating Loue

Inhabit in the finest wits of all.

Val. And Writere say; as the most forward Bud

Is eaten by the Canker ere it blowes, Even so by Loue, the yong, and tender wit

Is turn'd to folly, blathing in the Bud, Loosing his vertue, even in the prime,

And all the faire efta's of future honours.

But wherefore waft I time to confide thee

That art a votary to fond defire?

Once more adieu: my Father at the Road

Expects my comming, there to fee me ship'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee Valentine.

Val. Sweet Proteus, no: Now let vs take our leave:

To Millaine let me heare from thee by Letters

Of thy succeffe in loue; and what newes eile

Betideth here in abstinence of thy Friend;

And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All hapineffe bechance to thee in Millaine.

Val. As much to you at home: and fo farewell. Exit.

Pro. He after Honour hunts, I after Loue;

He leaves his friends, to dignifie them more;

I loue my felfe, my friends, and all for loue:

Thou Iula thou hast metamorphis'd me;

Made me nege& my Studies, looke my time;

Warre with good confide; fet the world at nought;

Made Wit with mufing, weake; hart fick with thought.

Sp. Sir Proteus: True you: I saw you my Mafter?

Pro. But now he parted hence to embarque for Millaine.

Sp. Twenty to one then, he is ship'd already;

And I haue plaid the Sheepe in loofing him.

Pro. Indeed a Sheepe doth very often fray,

And if the Shepheard be afile away,

Sp. You conclude that my Mafter is a Shepheard then,

And I Sheepe?

Pro. I doe.

Sp. Why then my horses are his horses, whether I wake or sleepe.

Pro. A filly anfwer, and fitting well a Sheepe.

Sp. This proves me flill a Sheepe.

Pro. True: and thy Mafter a Shepheard.

Sp. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shal goe hard but ile proce by it another.

Sp. The Shepheard fecket the Sheepe, and not the Sheepe the Shepheard; but I feoke my Mafter, and my Mafter fecket not me; therefore I am no Sheepe.

Pro. The Sheepe for fodder follow the Shepheard, the Shepheard for foode follows not the Sheepe: thou for wages followest thy Mafter, thy Mafter for wages follows not thee: therefore thou art a Sheepe.

Sp. Such another proofe will make me cry ba.

Pro. But do'th thou heare: gau'th thou my Letter to Iula?

Sp. I
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Sp. I Sir: I (a loft-Mutton) gave your Letter to her (a lac'd-Mutton) and she (a lac'd-Mutton) gave mee (a loft-Mutton) nothing for my labour.

Prov. Here's too small a Pature for such store of Muttons.

Sp. If the ground be over-charg'd, you were not al-lik her.

Prov. Nay, in that you are astray: 'twere best pound you.

Sp. Nay Sir, leefe then a pound shall serve me for carrying your Letter.

Prov. You mistake; I mean the pound, a Pinfold.

Sp. From a pound to a pin? fold it over and over.

'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your lover

Prov. But what said she?

Sp. I.

Prov. Nod-I, why that's noddy.

Sp. You mistooke Sir I say the did nod; And you ask me if she did nod, and I say I.

Prov. And that fet together is noddy.

Sp. Now you have taken the paines to get it together, take it for your pains.

Prov. No, no, you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Sp. Well, I perceive I must be faire to beare with you.

Prov. Why Sir, how do you bear with me?

Sp. Marry Sir, the letter very orderly,

Hauing nothing but the word noddy for my paines.

Prov. Behew me, but you have a quicke wit.

Sp. And yet it cannot ouer-take your flour purfe.

Prov. Come, come, open the matter in briefe; what said she.

Sp. Open your purse, that the money, and the matter may be both at once delivered.

Prov. Well Sir: here is for your paines; what said she?

Sp. Truely Sir, I think you'll hardly win her.

Prov. Why? could't thou perceive fo much from her?

Sp. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her;

No, not fo much as a docket for delivering your letter: And being fo hard to me, that brought your minde;

I feare she'll prove as hard to you in telling your minde.

Give her no token but floes, for she's as hard as fleeces.

Prov. What said she, nothing?

Sp. No, not fo much as take this for thy paines: (me; To tellifie your bounty, I thank you, you have celer'd in requital whereof, henceforthe, carry your letters your felse; And fo Sir, I'll commend you to my Master.

Prov. Go, go, be gone, to fave your Ship from wrack,

Which cannot perifh hauing thee absarde,

Being defin'd to a dier death on shore: I must goe fende some better Meffenger,

I feare my Julia would not dainge my lines,

Receiving them from fuch a worthiffle poft.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But say Lucetta (now we are alone)

Would it thou then counfale me to fall in loue?

Luc. I Madam, fo you fumble not vnheartedly.

Jul. Of all the faire refort of Gentlemen,

That every day with par'le encounter me,

In thy opinion which is worthifte loue?

Luc. Pleafe you repeat their names, Ile fhow my minde,

According to my shallow fimple skill.

Jul. What thinkft thou of the faire Sir Eglamoure?

Luc. As of a Knight, well-spoken, neat, and fine;

But were I you, he never fhou'd be mine.

Jul. What think'ft thou of the rich Mercario?

Luc. Well of his wealth; but of himfelfe, fo fo.

Jul. What think'ft thou of the gentle Proteus?

Luc. Lord, Lord: to fee what folly raignes in vs.

Jul. How now! what meanes this paflion at his name?

Luc. Pardon deere Madam, 'tis a palling flame,

That I (wanworthy body as I am)

Should cenfure thus on lonely Gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the reft?

Luc. Then thou: of many good, I thinke him beft.

Jul. Your reafon?

Luc. I have no other but a womans reafon:

I think him fo, because I thinke him fo.

Jul. And would'ft thou have me caft my loue on him?

Luc. 1: If you thought your loue not caft away.

Jul. Why he, of all the reft, hath never mou'd me.

Luc. Yet he, of all the reft, I thinke beft loues ye.

Jul. His little speaking, shews his loue but small.

Luc. Fire that's cloefet kept, burnes most of all.

Jul. They doe not loue, that doe not shew their loue.

Luc. Oh, they loue leaft, that let men know their loue.

Jul. I would I knew his minde.

Luc. Perufe this paper Madam.

Jul. To Julia: say, from whom?

Luc. That the Contents will shew.

Jul. Say, say, who gue the thee?

Luc. Sir Valentines page & lent I think from Proteus;

He would have given it you, but I being in the way,

Did in your name receive it: pardon the fault I pray.

Jul. Now (by my modesty) a goody Broker;

Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?

To whisper, and confpire againft my youth?

Now truit me, 'tis an office of great worth,

And you an officer fit for the place:

There: take the paper: see it be return'd,

Or efe return no more into my fight.

Jul. To plead for loue, deferves more fee, then hate.

Jul. Will ye be gyn?

Luc. That you may ruminate.

Jul. And yet I would I had ore-look'd the Letter;

It were a shame to call her backe againe,

And pray her to a fault, for which I chlid her.

What foolie is fie, that knowes I am a Maid,

And would not force the letter to my view?

Since Maides, in modesty, say no to that,

Which they would have the profferer continue, 1.

Fie, fie: how way-werd is this foolish loue;

That (like a telle Babe) will scratch the Nurfe,

And prefently, all humbled kiffe the Rod?

How churlifhly, I chlid Lucetta hence,

When willingly, I would have had her here?

How angrily I taught my brow to frowne,

When inward joy enfor'd my heart to smile?

My pendance is, to call Lucetta backe

And ask remifion, for my folly paft.

What hoc : Lucetta.

Jul. What would your Ladship?

Jul. Is't meer dinner time?

Jul. I would it were,

That you might kill your homacke on your meat,
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

And not upon your Maid.
Lu. What is't that you Took vp so gingerly?
Lu. Nothing.
Lu. Why didst thou floope then?
Lu. To take a paper vp, that I let fall.
Lu. And is that paper nothing?
Lu. Nothing concerning me.
Lu. Then let it lye, for tho' that it concerns.
Lu. Madam, it will not lye where it concerns.
Vaileth it have a falfe Interpreter.
Lu. Some love of yours, hath writ to you in Rime.
Lu. That I might fing it (Madam) to a tune :
Give me a Note, your Ladiship can set.
Lu. As little by fech toy's, as may be poizable :
Beft fing it to the tune of Light O, Love.
Lu. It is too heavie for fo light a tune.
Lu. Heavy! belike it hath some burden then?
Lu. I: and melodious were it, would you fing it,
Lu. And why not you?
Lu. I cannot reach fo high.
Lu. Let's fee your Song :
How now Minion?
Lu. Keppe tune there still; so you will sing it out :
And yet me thinke, you do not like this tune.
Lu. You do not ?
Lu. No (Madam) its too sharp.
Lu. You (Minion) are too faucie.
Lu. Nay, now you are too flat ;
And marre the concord, with too harsh a defcant :
There wanteth but a Meane to fill your Song.
Lu. The meane is rounde with you vnruely base.
Lu. Indeede I bid the bafe for Proteus.
Lu. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me ;
Here is a colle with protection :
Goes, get you gone: and let the papers lye :
You would be finging them, to anger me.
Lu. She makes it frige, but she would be beft plea'd
To be so angred with another Letter.
Lu. Nay, would I were so angred with the fame :
Oh hatefult hands, to teare each foule burning words ;
Influrious Wafhes, to feede on fuch sweet honey,
And kill the Bees that yeeld it, with your thongs :
Ileiffe each feuerall paper, for amends :
Looke, here is wright, kinde Iulia : vnkinde Iulia,
As in reuenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name againft the bazing-tones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy difdain.
And here is wright, Love wounded Proteus.
Poore wounded name: my bofome, as a bed,
Shall lodge thee till thou woulde be throughly heal'd ;
And thus I fearch it with a foueraigne kiffe.
But twice, or thrice, was Proteus written downe :
Be calm (good winde) blow not a word away,
Till I have found each letter, in the Letter,
Except mine own name: That, some whilsle-winde barea
Vnto a ragged, fearful, hanging Rocke,
And throw it thence into the raging Sea.
Loe, here in one line is his name twice wright:
Poore forlorn Proteus, paffionate Proteus :
To the sweet Iulia: that ile teare away:
And yet I will not, fith fo prettily
He couples it, to his complaining Names ;
Thus will I fold them, one upon another ;
Now kiffe, embrace, contend, doe what you will.
Lu. Madam: dinner is ready: and your father flates.

Lu. Well, let vs goe.
Lu. What, shall these papers lye, like Tel-tales here?
Lu. If you refpect them; let to take them vp.
Lu. Nay, I was taken vp, for laying them downe.
Yet here they shall not lye, for catching cold.
Lu. I fee you have a months minde to them.
Lu. I (Madam) you may fay what fights you fee ;
I fee things too, although you judge I winke.
Lu. Come, come, wilt pleafe you goe. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Antonio and Panthino. Proteus.
Ant. Tell me Panthino, what fad tale was that,
Wherewith my brother held you in the Clift.
Pan. 'Twas of his Nephew Proteus, your Sonne.
Ant. Why ? what of him ?
Pan. He wondred that your Lordship
Would suffer him, to spend his youth at home,
While other men of fnder reputation
Put forth their Sonnes, to feeke prefemtment out.
Some to the warres, to trye their fortune there ;
Some, to discouer Islands farre away :
Some, to the fiful Vniversity :
For any, or for all these exercises,
He faid, that Proteus, your fonne, was met ;
And did request me, to imporntune you
To let him fpend his time no more at home ;
Which would be great impeachment to his age,
In hauing knowne no trauaille in his youth.
Ant. Nor need'ft thou much imporntune me to that Whereon, this month I haue bin hammersing,
I have confider'd well, his loffe of time,
And how he cannot be a perfeft man,
Not being tried, and tutord in the world :
Experience is by induftry atchieu'd,
And perfecd by the fweet courfe of time :
Then tell me, whether were I beft to fend him ?
Pan. I thinke your Lordhip is not ignorant
How his companion, youthfull Valentin,
Attends the Emperour in his royall Court.
Ant. I know it well.
Pan. Twere good, I thinke, your Lordship fent him
There shall he praftice Titles, and Turnaments ;
Hear sweet discours, converse with Noble-men,
And be in eye of every Exercife
Worthy his youth, and noblenesse of birth.
Ant. I like thy counfelle: well haft thou adu'd:
And that thou maift perceiue how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make knowne ;
Even with the fpedieft expedition,
I will dispatch him to the Emperours Court.
Pan. To morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonfo ?
With other Gentlemen of good efteeme
Are iournyng, to saluate the Emperour,
And to commend their fervice to his will.
Ant. Good company : with them shall Proteus go :
And in good time : now will we breake with him.
Pan. Sweet Loue, sweet lines, sweet life,
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart ;
Here is her oath for loue, her honors paune ;
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

23

O that our Fathers would applaud our loyes
To seale our happinesse with their contents.

Pro. Oh heavenely Julia.

Ant. How now? What Letter are you reading there?

Pro. May't pleafe your Lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine;
Delivered by a friend, that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the Letter: Let me fee what news.

Pro. There is no newes (my Lord) but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well-belou'd,
And daily graced by the Emperor;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?

Pro. As one relying on your Lordships will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something fordc with his wish:
Mute not that I thus fondly proceed;
For what I will, I will, and there an end:
I am resolu'd, that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentine, in the Emperors Court:
What maintenence he from his friends receives,
Like exhibition thou shalt have from me,
To morrow he in readiness, to goe.
Excuse it not: for I am peremptory.

Pro. My Lord I cannot be so foone prou'd,
Please you deliberate a day or two.

Ant. Look what thou want'st ifalbe fet after thee:
No more of that: to morrow thou must goe;
Come on Panthone; you shall be impoy'd,
To haften on his Expedition.

Pro. Thau have I fhould the fire, for feare of burning,
And drench'd me in the lea, where I am drown'd.
I fear'd to thowe my Father Julius Letter,
Least he should take exceptions to my loue,
And with the vantage of mine owne excuse
Hath he excepted moft againft my loue.
Oh, how this spring of loue refemblith
The vencertain glory of an Aprill day,
Which now thewes all the beauty of the Sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.

Pan. Sir Proteus, your Fathers call's for you,
He is in halfe, therefore I pray you go.

Pro. Why this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answer's no.

Exeunt. Finis.

Actus secundus: Scene Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, Silvia.

Speed. Sir, your Glose.

Val. Not mine: my Gloses are on.

Sp. Why then this may be yours: for this is but one.

Val. Ha? Let me fee: I, give it me, 'tis mine:
Sweet Ornament, that deckes a thing diuine,
Ah Silvia, Silvia.

Speed. Madam Silvia: Madam Silvia.

Val. How now Siria?

Speed. Shee is not within hearing Sir.

Val. Why sir, who bad you call her?

Speed. Your worship sir, or else I mistake.

Val. Well; you'll still be too forward.

Speed. And yet I was left chidden for being too slow.

Val. Go to, sir, tell me: do you know Madam Silvia?

Speed. Shee that your worship loues?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in loue?

Speed. Marry by thefe speciell markes: firft, you haue learn'd (like Sir Proteus) to wrath your Armes like a Male-content: to relifh a Loue-fong, like a Robin-red break: to walke alone like one that had the paffion of figh, like a Schoole-boy that had loft his A. B. C.
to weep with a yong wench that had buried her Grandam:
to faft, like one that takes diet: to watch, like one that fears robbing: to speake puling, like a begger at Hallow-Maffe: You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cocke; when you walk'd, to walke like one of the Lions: when you faifted, it was preffently after dinner:
when you look'd fadly, it was for want of money: And now you are Metamorphis'd with a Mithris, that when I look on you, I can hardly thinke you my Mater.

Val. Are all thefe things percel'd in me?

Speed. They are all percel'd without ye.

Val. Without me? they cannot.

Speed. Without you I say, that's certaine: for without you were fo finite, none elfe would: but you are soe without thefe follies, that thefe follies are within you, and shone through you like the water in an Virnall:
that not an eye that fees you, but is a Phyfician to comment on your Malady.

Val. But tell me: do'th thou know my Lady Silvia?

Speed. Shee that you gane on fo, as the firs at supper?

Val. Haft thou obferued that? euen the I meane.

Speed. Why fir, I know her not.

Val. Do'th thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet know'th her not?

Speed. Is the not hard-fauour'd, fir?

Val. Not fo faire (boy) as well fauour'd.

Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What doft thou know?

Speed. That fehe is not fo faire, as (of you) well-fau-our'd?

Val. I meane that her beauty is exquifite,
But her faviour infinite.

Speed. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Speed. Marry fir, so painted to make her faire, that no man counts her beauty.

Val. How eleem'th thou me? I account of her beauty.

Speed. You neuer faw her since she was deform'd.

Val. How long hath the beene deform'd?

Speed. Euer fince you loo'd her.

Val. I have lou'd her ewer since I faw her,
And ftil I fee her beaufull.

Speed. If you loue her, you cannot fee her.

Val. Why?

Speed. Because Loue is blinde: O that you had mine eyes, or your owne eyes had the lights they were wont to hau'e, when you chide at Sir Proteus, for going vn-garter'd.

Val. What should I fee then?

Speed. Your owne prefent folly, and her paffing deformitie: for hee being in loue, could not fee to garter his hofe; and you, being in loue, cannot fee to put on your hofe.

(ning)

Val. Belike (boy) then you are in loue, for laft mor-you could not fee to wine your hooes.

Speed. True fir: I was in loue with my bed, I thank you, you fwing'd me for my loue, which makes mee to the bolder
Val. Why she hath not writ to me?
Speed. What need she,
When free hath made you write to your selfe?
Why, doe you not perceive the left?
Val. No, beleue me.
Speed. No beleuing you indeed sir:
But did you perceive her earneft?
Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.
Speed. Why the hath given you a Letter.
Val. That’s the Letter I write to her friend.
Speed. And ‘tis letter hath the deliu’er’d, & there an end.
Val. I would it were no worfe.
Speed. Hee warrant you, ‘tis as well:
For often have you writ to her: and she in modesty,
Or elie for want of litle time, could not againe reply,
Or fearing els some meffeger, ‘y might her mind discomfure
Her self hath taught her Loue himselfe, to write vnto her
All this I speake in print, for in print I found it. (louer.
Why mule you sir, ‘tis dinner time.
Val. I have dyn’d.
Speed. I, but heareken sir: though the Cameleon Loue can feed on the ayre, I am one that am nourish’t by my virtues;
and would faine have maste: oh bee not like your Miftrefs, be moued, be moued.
Exeunt.

Scena secunda.

Enter Probus, Iulia, Pantbion.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Iulia:
Iul. I must where is no remedy.
Pro. When possibly I can, I will returne.
Iul. If you turne not; you will return the sooner:
Keepes this remembrance for thy Iulia’s fake.
Pro. Why then wee’ll make exchange;
Here, take you this.
Iul. And feale the bargain with a holy-kiffe.
Pro. Here is my hand, for my true confiance:
And when that howre ore-flips me the day,
Wherein I figh not (Iulia) for thy fake;
The next enuing howre, some foole mifchance
Torment me for my Loues forgetfulness:
My father faires my comming: aunfvere not:
The tide is now: nay, not thy tide of teares,
That tide will day me longer then I should,
Iulia, farewell: what, gon without a word?
I, to true loue should doe: it cannot speake,
For truth hath better deeds, then words to grace it.
Pantb. Sir Probus: you are flaid for.
Pro. Goe: I come, I come:
Alas, this parting strikes pocr Louers dumbe.
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Laurens, Pantbion.

Laurence. Nay, ‘twill bee this howre ere I have done weeping: all the kinde of the Laurens, have this very fault: I have receiv’d my proportion, like the prodigious fonne,
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

25

Sonnet, and am going with Sir Prothens to the Imperial Lady Court: I thinked Crab my dog, be the fowret natured doggie that lies: My Mother weeping: my Father wayling: my Sister crying: our Maid howling: our Catte wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexitie, yet did not this cruel-lhearted Currie shodde

one teare: he is a stone, a very pible stone, and has no more pity in him then a dogge: Iew would have wept to have feene our parting: why my Grandam having no eyes, looke you, wept her selfe blinde at my parting:

nay, lie shew you the manner of it. This Doyle is my father: no, this left Doyle is my father: no, no, this left doyle is my mother: nay, that cannot bee so neyther:

yes; it is so, it is so: it hath the worfer sole: this Doyle with the hole in it, is my mother: and this my father:

a vengance on’s, there ‘tis: Now fift, this stiffe is my filter: so, looke you, she is as white as a lilly, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan our maid: I am the dogge: no, the dogge is himselfe, and I am the dogge:

oh, the dogge is me, and I am my selfe: I; fo, fo: now come I to my Father: Father, your blessing: now

shoud not the Doyle speake a word for weeping: now

shoud I kiss my Father: well, bee weepes on: Now come I to my Mother: Oh that he could speake

now, like a would-woman: well, I kisshe her: why

there ‘tis; here’s my mothers breath vp and downe:

Now come I to my fitter: make the monee the makes:

now the dogge all this while shews not a teare: nor speakes a word: but see how I lay the duft with my teares.

Panth. Lawne, away, away: a Board: thy Master is shipt’d, and thou art to putt after with oares: what’s the matter? why weep’lt thou man? away affe, you’ll looke

the Tide, if you tarry any longer.

Lawn. It’s no matter if the tide were lowt, for it is the vnkinded Tide, that euer any man tide.

Panth. What’s the vnkinded tide?

Lawn. Why, he that’s tide here, Crab my dog.

Panth. Did man: I mean thou’lt looke the flood, and in looing the flood, looke thy voyage, and in looing thy voyage, looke thy Master, and in looing thy Master, looke thy ferman, and in looing thy ferman:— why

do’t thou frop my mouth?

Lawn. For feare thou shouldest looke thy tongue.

Panth. Where should I looke my tongue?

Lawn. In thy Tale.

Panth. In thy Tale.

Lawn. Loofe the Tide, and the voyaige, and the Mater, and the Service, and the tide: why man, if the Riner were dry, I am able to fill it with my teares: if the winde were downe, I could drive the boate with my fighes.

Panth. Come: come away man, I was sent to call thee.

Lawn. Sir: call me what thou darst.

Panth. Wilt thou give?

Lawn. Well, I will goe.

Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, Speed, Dake, Prothens.

Sl. Servant.

Val. Miftris.

Spec. Master, Sir Thurio frownes on you.

Val. I Boy, it’s for love.

Spec. Not of you.

Val. Of my Mistris then.

Spec. ’Twere good you: knockt him.

Sl. Servant, you are led.

Val. Indeed, Madam, I feeme fo.

Thou. Seeme you that you are not?

Val. Ha! Hy I do.

Thou. So doe Counterfeys.

Val. So doe you.

Thou. What feeme I that I am not?

Val. Wife.

Thou. What infance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thou. And how quoe you my folly?

Val. I quoe it in your Jerkin.

Thou. My Jerkin is a doublet.

Val. Well then, Hee double your folly.

Thou. How?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio, do you change colour?

Val. Give him leave, Madam, he is a kind of Camelion.

Thou. That hath more minde to feed on your blood, then live in your aye.

Val. You have said Sir.

Thou. I Sir, and done too for this time.

Val. I know it well Sir, you alwayes end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volly of words, gentleman, & quickly shutt off.

Val. ’Tis indeed, Madam, we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that Servant?

Val. Your felfe (vexat Lady) for you gave the fire,

Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your Ladiships lookes,

And spendes what he borrowes kindly in your company.

Thou. Sir, if you fpand word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.

(words, Val. I know it well Sir: you have an Exchequer of

And Ithinkke, no other treasire to glue your followers:

For it appears by their bare Lineries

That they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more:

Here comes my father.

Dak. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard befet.

Sir Valentine, your father is in good heath,

What sayyou to a Letter from your friends

Of much good newses?

Val. My Lord, I will be thankfull,

To any happy messenger from thence.

Dak. Know ye, Sir Arthur, your Countriman?

Val. I, my good Lord, I know the Gentleman

To be of worth, and worthy eftimation,

And not without defert so well reputed.

Dak. Hath he not a Sonne?

Val. I, my good Lorri, a Son, that well deferves

The honor, and regard of such a Father.

Dak. You know him well ?

Val. I knew him as my felfe: for from our Infanctie

We have conferreth, and spent our howres together,

And though my felfe have eene an idle Trewant,

Omitting the tweek benefit of time

To cloath mine age with Angel-like perfection

Yet hath Sir Prothens (for that’s his name)

Made vfe, and faire advantage of his daies:

His yeares but young, but his experience old:

His head vn-mellowed, but his Judgement ripe

And in a word (for far behind is his worth Comes all the praifes that I now bellow.)

C He
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

He is complest in feature, and in minde,
With all good grace, to grace a Gentleman.

*Dek. Bedeframe me sir, but if he make this good
He is as worthy for an Emperors loue,
As meet to be an Emperors Councellor:
Well, Sir : this Gentleman is come to me
With Commendation from great Potentates,
And heere he meanes to spend his time a while,
I think 'thou no vn-welcome news to you.

*Vol. Should I have with'd a thing, it had beene he.

*Dek. Welcome him then according to his worth:

*Silv. I speake to you, and you Sir *Thurio,
For *Valentine, I need not cite him to it,
I will fend him hither to you presently.

*Vol. This is the Gentleman I told your Ladiship
Had come along with me, but that his Militreffe
Did hold his eyes, lockt in her Chriftall lookes.

*Sil. Be-like that now she hath enfranchis'd them

Vpon some other Pawne for fealty.

*Val. Nay faire, I thinke she holds them prifoners filil.
She hath, they say, fid your lady, and is blind.
How could he fee his way to fecke out you?

*Val. Why Lady, Loue hath twenty paire of eyes.

*Thur. They fey that Loue hath not an eye at all.

*Val. To fee such Louers, *Thurio, as your felie, Vpon a homely object, Loue can wink.

*Sil. Have done, have done : here comes your gentleman.

*Vol. Welcome, dear *Pruteus : Militref, I brefceh you Confirm his welcome, with some fpeciall favor.

*Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome bether,
If this be he you oft have wish'd to heare from.

*Vol. Militref, it is a sweet Lady, entertaine him
To be my fellow-seruant to your Ladiship.

*Sil. Too low a Militref for fo high a fervant.

*Pro. Not fo, sweet Lady, but too meane a fervant
To have a looke of such a worthy a Militrefe.

*Val. Leave off difcourfe of disability:

Sweet Lady, entertaine him for your Servant.

*Pro. My dutie will I baffle of, nothing elfe.

*Sil. And duty neuer yet did want his meed.

*Servant, you are welcome to a worthie Militrefe.

*Pro. Ile die on him that faile fo but your felie.

*Sil. That you are welcome.

*Pro. That you are worthie.

*Thur. Madam, my Lord your father wold speake with

*Sil. I wait vpon his pleafure : Come Sir *Thurio,

*Goe with me : once more, new Servant welcome ;
Iheu haue, the faire lucre that you heare.

When you have done, we looke too haere from you.

*Pro. Welle both attend upon your Ladiship.

*Vol. Now tell me : how do al from whence you came?

*Pro. Your freinds are wel, & haue the much comend.

*Sil. And how doe yours ?

*Pro. I left them all in health.

*Vol. How does your Lady ? & how thriues your loue?

*Pro. My tales of Loue were wont to weare you,
I know you joy not in a Loue-difcourfe.

*Val. I *Pruteus, but that life is alterd now,
I have done penance for contemning Loue,
Whole high emiperious thoughts haue punish'd me
With bitter fault, with penitentiel groans,
With nightly teares, and daily hart-fare fighes.
For in revenge of my contempt of loue,
Loue hath that flepe from my enthrall'd eyes,
And made them watchers of mine owne hearts sorrow.
O gentle *Pruteus, Loue's a mighty Lord,

And hath fo humbled me, as I confesse
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his Seruice, no fuch loe on earth :
Now, no diffcours, except it be of loue,
Now can I breake my faith, dine, frye, and sleepe,
Vpon the very naked name of Loue,

*Pro. Enough : I read your fortune in your eye : Was this the Idoll, that you worship fo ?

*Val. Even She ; & is she not a heavenly Saint ?

*Pro. No ; But she is an earthly Paragon.

*Val. Call her divine.

*Pro. I will not flatter her.

*Val. O flatter me : for Loue delights in praires.

*Pro. When I was fick, you gaue me bitter pills,
And I must minifter the like to you.

*Val. Then speake the truth by her ; if not divine,
Yet let her be a principallite,
Soueraigne to all the Creatures on the earth.

*Pro. Except my Militrefe.

*Val. Sweet ; except not any,
Except thou wilt except against my Loue.

*Pro. Haue I not reason to prefer mine owne ?

*Val. And I will help thee to prefer her to :

Shee fiall be dignifd with this high honour,
To beare my Ladies triane, left the bafe earth
Should from her vefure chance to fteale a kiffe,
And of fo great a favor growing proud,
Diffaine to roote the Sommer-dwellings flowre,
And make rough winter everlaftingly.

*Pro. Why *Valentine, what Bradifime is this ?

*Val. Pardon me (*Pruteus) all I can is nothing,
To her, whose worth, make other worthies nothing ;
Shee is alone.

*Pro. Then let her alone.

*Val. Not for the world : why man, she is mine owne,
And I as rich in hauing fuch a fewel
As twenty Seas, if all their fand were pearsle,
The water, Nedar, and the Rocks pure gold.
Forgue me that I doe not dreame on thee,
Because thou fceft me doate vpon my loue : My foolish Riuall that her Father flikes (Onely for his poffiffions are fo huge)
Is gone with her along, and I muft after,
For Loue (thou know'ft it is full of Jealousie.)

*Pro. But the loues you ?

*Val. But the loues you ?

(howre,

*Val. I, and we are betroth'd : nay more, our mariage
With all the cunning manner of our flight
Determined of : how I must clime her window,
The Ladder made of Cordes, and all the means
Plotted, and 'greed on for my happineffe.

Good *Pruteus goe with me to my chamber,
In thefe affairs to aid me with thy counfaile,

*Pro. Goe on before : I shall enquire you forth:
I muft vnto the Road, to dif-embarque
Some necessaries, that I needs muft vfe,
And then Ile prefently attend you.

*Val. Will you make halfe ?

(Exeunt.

*Pro. I will.

Even as one harte, another harte expels,
Or as one naile, by strength dries out another.
So the remembrance of my former Loue
Is by a newe obiect quite forgotten,
It is mine, or *Valentine praires ?
Her true perfection, or my falie transfigration?
That makes me reafonelle, to reafon thus?
Shee is faire : and fo is *Julia that I loue,

(That
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

(That I did love, for now my love is thaw’d, Which like a waxen Image ’gainst a fire Bears all the impreffion of the thing it was.)
Me thinkes my scale to Valentine is cold ; And that I love him not as I was wont: O, but I love his Lady too-too much, And that’s the reafon I love him fo little. How fhall I doe on her with more advice, That thou without advice begin to love her? ’Tis but her picture I have yet beheld, And that hath dazzl’d my refons light: But when I looke on her perfecions, There is no reafon, but I fhall be blind. If I can checke my erring love, I will, If not, to compaffe her lie vfe my skill.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce, by mine honestly welcome to Padua. Laun. Forswear not thy selfe, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this alwaies, that a man is never vndon till he be hang’d, nor never welcome to a place, till some certaine shot be paid, and the Hoitaffe fay welcome.

Speed. Come-on you mad-cap : I le to the Ale-house with you prefently ; where, for one shot of fiue pence, thou shalt have fiue thousand welcomes : But firsha, how did thy Mafter part with Madam Iulia?

Laun. Marray after they cloas’d in earneft, they parted very fairely in lefte.

Spec. But fhall the marry him?

Laun. No.

Spec. How then? fhall he marry her?

Laun. No, neither.

Spec. What, are they broken?

Laun. No ; they are both as whole as a fith.

Spec. Why then, how fhands the matter with them?

Laun. Marray thus ; when it fhands well with him, it fhands well with her.

Spec. What an affe art thou, I vnderfand thee not.

Laun. What a blocke art thou, that thou canst not?

My fatfe vnderstands me?

Spec. What thou faifit?

Laun. I, and what I do too : looke thee, lie but leane, and my faffe vnderstands me.

Spec. It fhands vnder thee indeed.

Laun. Why, fhand- vnder and vnder-fhand is all one.

Spec. But tell me true, will’t be a match?

Laun. Aske my dogge, if he fay I, it will; if hee fay no, it will: if hee fhake his taile, and fay nothing, it will.

Spec. The conclusion is then, that it will.

Laun. Thou fhalt never get such a fecret from me, but by a parable.

Spec. ’Tis well that I get it fo : but Laun. how faiit thou that my matter is become a notable Louer?

Laun. I never knew him otherwife.

Spec. Then how?

Laun. A notable Lubber : as thou reported him to bee.

Spec. I tell thee, my Mafter is become a hot Louer.

Laun. Why, I tell thee, I care not, though hee beeare himefelfe in Loue. If thou wilt goe with me to the Ale - house: if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Spec. Why?

Laun. Because thou haft not fo much charity in thee as to goe to the Ale with a Christian : Wilt thou goe?

Spec. At thy fervice.

Exeunt.

Enter Protheus fola.

Pro. To leave my Julia; fhall I be forfowrne?

To loue faire Silvia, fhall I be forfowrne?

To wrong my friend, I fhall be much forfowrne.

And ev’n that Powre which gane me firft my oath
Prouokes me to this three-fold periurie.

Loue bad mee fwear, and Loue bids mee f- weare ;
O fweet-fuggefting Loue, if thou haft fin’d,
Teach me (thy tempted fubje) to excufe it.

At firft I did adore a twinkleling Starre,
But now I worship a celefiall Sunne ;
Vn heedfull vows may heedfully be broken,
And he wants wit, that wants refolved will,
To leare his wit, f-exchange the bad for better;
Fig. fig. vnaccounting tongue, to call her bad,
Whofe fouveraignty fo oft thou haft preferr’d,
With twentie thousand foule-confirming oaths.
I cannot leafe to loue ; and yet I doe : But there I leave to loue, where I fhould loue.

Julia I loofe, and Valentine I loofe.

If I keeps them, I needs muft looke my felfe:
If I looke them, thus finde I by their loffe,
For Valentine, my felfe : for Julia, Silvia.
I to my felfe am deere then a friend,
For Loue is flill moft precious in it felfe,
And Silvia (witneffe heaven that made her faire)
Shewes Julia but a fwarthy Ethiope.
I will forger that Julia is alife,
Remembering that my Loue to her is dead.
And Valentine Ile hold an Enemie,
Ayming at Silvia as a fweeter friend.
I cannot now prove confant to my felfe,
Without some treachery vs’d to Valentine.

This night he meaneth with a Corded-ladder
To clime celefiall Silvia’s chamber window,
My felfe in counefale his competitor.

Now prefently Ile gluc her father notice
Of their difguifing and pretended flight:
Who (all inrag’d) will banish Valentines:
For Taurio he intends shall wed his daughter,
But Valentine being gon, Ile quickly croffe
By fome flic tricke, blunt Taurio’s dull proceeding.
Loue lend me wings, to make my purpose fweft
As thou haft lent me wif, to plot this drift.

Enter Iullia and Lucetta.

Jull. Courtesie, Lucetta, gentle girls assit me,
And eu'n in kinde loue, I doe conuire thee,
Who art the Table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly Charact'rd, and engraund,
To leffen me, and tell me some good meane
How with my honour I may vnde take
A journey to my louing Priscon.
Luc. Alas, the way is wearisome and long.

Iul. A true-donned Pilgrime is not weary
To meafur. Kingdomes with his fible steps,
Much leffe shall the that hath Loues wings to fie,
And when the flight is made to one to deire,
Of fuch divine perfection as Sir Priscon.

Luc. Better forbear, till Priscon may returne.

Iul. Oh, know'ft thou, not, his looks are my soules food?
Pitty the dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food fo long a time.
Didst thou but know the inly touch of Loue,
Thou wouldst as foon goe kindle fire with snow
As fecke to quench the fire of Loue with words.

Luc. I doe not fecke to quench your Loues hot fire,
But quaffle the fires extreme rage,
Left it should burne above the bounds of reafon.

Iul. The more thou damne it vp, the more it burnes:
The Current that with gentle murmure glides
(Thou know'ft) being flop'd, impatiently doth rage:
But when his faire courfe is not hindered,
He makes sweet mufticke with thinamiz'dstones,
Giving a gentle kniffe to every fide.
He over-taketh in his pilgrimage.
And fo by many winding nookes he ftraies
With willing sport to the wide Ocean.
Then let me goe, and hinder not my courfe:
Ile be as patient as a gentle fream,
And make a paftime of eache weary flop,
Till the laft flop haue brought me to my Loue,
And there Ile reft, as after much turmoile
A bleffed foule doth in Elysium.

Luc. But in what habbit will you goe along?
Iul. Not like a woman, for I would prevent
The loofe encounters of licentious men:
Gente Lucetta, fit me with fuch weedes
As may beferve fome well reputed Page.

Luc. Why then your Ladifhip muft cut out your hair.

Iul. No girlie, Ile knift it vp in filken things,
With twenteid od-conceited true-loue knots:
To be fantafique, may become a youth
Of greater time then I shall hew to be.

Luc. What fahnion (Madam) fhall I make your bree-

Iul. That fits as well, as tell me (good my Lord)
What compaffe will you weare your farthingale?

Why eu'n what fashion thou bent like felves (Lucetta.)

Luc. You muft needs have the with a cod-piece (Ma-

Iul. Out, out, (Lucetta) that wilde ill-faunour (dam)

Luc. And a broad hose (Madam) now's not worth a pin

Veafffe you have a cod-piece to fick pins on.

Iul. Lucetta, as thou loue't me let me have
What thou think'ft meet, and is moft mannerly.
But tell me (wench) how will the world repute me
For vndertaking fo vndrftond a journey?

I doe fear it will make me scandaun'd.

Luc. If you thinke fo, then hau you at home, and go not.

Iul. Nay, that I will not.

Luc. Then never dreame on Infamy, but go:
If Priscon like your journey, when you come,
No matter who's displeased, when you are gone:
I fear me he will fcare be pleas'd with all.

Iul. That is the least (Lucetta) of my feare:
A thousand oaths, an Ocean of his teares,
And infinances of infinite of Loue,
Warrant me welcome to my Priscon.

Luc. All these are feaunts to deceitfull men.

Iul. Bke men, that vfe them to fo bafe effect;
But truer farrors did gouerne Priscon birth,
His words are bonds, his oathes are oracles,
His loue fincer, his thoughts immaculate,
His teares, pure messengers, fent from his heart,
His heart, as far from fraud, as heaven from earth.

Luc. Pray heau'n he be proce to when you come to him.

Iul. Now, as thau loue't me, do him not that wrong,
To beare a hard opinion of his truth:
Onely defere my loue, by louing him,
And prefently goe with me to my chamber
To take a note of what I fand in need of,
To furnishe me vpon my longing journey:
All that is mine I leafe at thy dipofe,
My goods, my Lands, my reputation,
Onely, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence:
Come; answere not: but to it prefently,
I am impatient of my turiance.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius, Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Priscon, Valentine, Launcel, Speed.

Duke. Sir Thurio, glue vs leacue (I pray) a while,
We have some secrets to confer about.
Now tell me Priscon, what's your will with me?
Pris. My gracious Lord, that which I would difcover,
The Law of friendship bids me to conceale,
But when I call to minde your gracious favours
Done to me (vnderprefenting as I am)
My dutie pricks me on to vter that
Which eile, no worldly good shoule draw from me:
Know (worthy Prince) Sir Valentine my friend
This night intends to flye away your daughter:
My selfe am one made privy to the plot.
I know you have determin'd to befellow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates,
And should the thus be roane away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age,
Thus (for my duties fake) I rather chose
To croffe my friend in his intended drift,
Then (by concealing it) heap on your head
A pack of forrowes, which would prefume you doone
(Being vnappear'd) to your timelife grave.

Duke. Priscon, I thank thee for thin honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs, my selfe have often seen,
Haply when they have indu'd me fast asleep,
And ofteentimes have purpof'd to forbid

Sir
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Sir Valentine her company, and my Court.
But fearing left my jealous eye might err,
And so (unworthily) disgrace the man
(A rashness if I ever yet have shun'd)
I gave him gentle lookes, thereby to find
That which thy felfe haft now disclose to me.
And that thou maift perceive my faire of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggedged,
I nightly lodge her in an vpper Tower,
The key whereof, my felfe haue euer kept:
And thence the cannot be conuy'd away.

Pro. Know (noble Lord) they have deale'd a meane
How he her chamber-window will afford,
And with a Corded-ladder fetch her done:
For which, the youthful Loure now is gone,
And this way comes he with it presently.
Where (if it please you) you may intercept him.
But (good my Lord) doe it so cunningly
That my diffouery be not aimed at:
For, love of you, not hate vnto my friend,
Hath made me publifier of this prentence.

Duke. Vpon mine Honor, he shal never know
That I had any light from thee of this:
Pro. Adeu, my Lord, Sir Valentine is comiing.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whether awaie so fast?
Val. Pleafe it your Grace, there is a Messenger
That shal bee the bearer of my Letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import?

Val. The tenure of them doth but dignifie
My health, and happy being at your Court.

Duke. Nay then no matter: stay with me a while,
I am to breake with thee of some affaires
That touch me neere: wherein thou must be secret.
'Tis not unknowne to thee, that I haue sought
To match my friend Sir Thurio, to my daughter.

Val. I know it well (my Lord) and sure the Match
Were rich and honourable: besides, the gentleman
Is full of Vertue, Bounty, Worth, and Qualities
Befeeing such a Wife, as thy faire daughter:
Cannot your Grace win her to fancie him?

Duke. No, trueth me, she is pucuiful, fullen, froward,
Froud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking dutie,
Nor regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing me, as if I were her father:
And may I say thee, this pride of hers
(Vpon aduice) hath drawne my love from her,
And where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have beene cherish'd by her child-like dutie,
I now am full resolu'd to take a wife,
And turne her out, to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding dowre:
For me, and my possessions the efteemes not.

Val. What would your Grace have me to do in this?

Duke. There is a Lady in Verona here
Whom I affeet: but she is nice, and coy,
And naught efteemes my aged eloquence.
Now therefore would I have thee to my Tutor
(For long agoe I haue forgot to court,
Besides the fashion of the time is chang'd)
How, and which way I may beflow my felfe
To be regarded in her fun-brigh't eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words,
Dumbe looks often in their silent kinde
More then quicke words, doe move a womens minde.

Duke. But she did fcorne a prefent that I fent her,
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Goe base Intruder, ouer-weening Slawe,
Before thy fawning smiles on equall mates,
And thinke thy patience, (more than thy defert)
Is prizelude for thy departure hence.
Thanke me for this, more then for all the fauors
Which (all too-much) I haue befowled on thee.
But if thou linger in my Territories
Longer then twisft expedition
Will glue thee time to leave our royall Court,
By heauen, my wrath shall farre exceed the love
I euer bore my daughter, or thy felde.
Be gone, I will not heare thy value excuse,
But as thou lou'th thy life, make speed from hence.
Val. And why not death, rather then liuing torment?
To die, is to be banish'd from my felde,
And Silvia is my felde: banish'd from her
Is felde from felde. A deadly banishment:
What light, is light, if Silvia be not feene?
When boy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Vnleefe it be to thinke that she is by
And feed vpnon the shadow of perfeccion.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no muffle in the Nightingale.
Vnleefe I looke on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to looke vpnon.
Shee is my effence, and I leaue to be;
If I be not by her faire influence
Foder'd illum'in'd, cheris'h'd, kept alie.
I flie not death, to flie his deadly doome,
Tarry I heere, I but attend on death,
But flie I hence, I flie away from life.
Pre. Run (boy) run, run, and feek he him out.
Lau. So-hough, Slaue hough.
Pre. What feest thou?
Lau. Him we goe to finde,
There's not a haire on's head, but th'is a Valentine.
Pre. Valentine?
Val. No.
Pre. Who then? his Spirit?
Val. Neither,
Pre. What then?
Val. Nothing.
Lau. Can nothing speake? Matter, shall I strike?
Pre. Who wouldst thou strike?
Lau. Nothing.
Pre. Willhe, forbeare.
Pre. Sircha, I say forbeare: friend Valentine, a word.
Val. My eares are flopt, & cannot hear good newes,
So much of bad already hath poiffent them.
Pre. Then in dumbe silence will I bury mine,
For they are hard, vn-tunecable, and bad.
Val. Is Silvia dead?
Pre. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine indeed, for sacred Silvia,
Hath the forfiowme me!
Pre. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forfiowme me.
What is your newes?
Lau. Sir, there is a proclamation, you are vanished.
Pre. That thou art banish'd: oh that's the newes,
From hence, from Silvius, and from me thy friend.
Val. Oh, I have fee'd vpnon this worse already,
And now excite of it will make me hurte.
Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?
Pre. I, & the hath offer'd to the doome
(Which vn-reuerit hands in effectual force)
A Sea of melting pearles, which come call teares;
Thoue at her fathers churchfis fette the tendered,
With them upon her knees, her humble felde,
Wringer her har. Js, whole whitenes fo became them,
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held vp,
Sad fighes, deeps groanes, nor fliuer-dauing teares
Could peneitrte her vncompassionate Sire;
But Valentine, if he be tame, muft die.
Befides, her intercession char'd him fo,
When the for thy repeale was foaplant,
That to clofe prison he comanded her,
With many bitter threats of hinding there.
Val. No more: vnae the next word that thou speake'th
Hau'e some malignant power vpon my life:
If fo: I pray thee breath it in mine eare,
As ending Antheme of my endleffe color.
Pre. To wish to lament for that thou canst not helpe,
And fludy helpe for that which thou lament'ft,
Time is the Nurf, & breeder of all good;
Here, if thou flay, thou canst not fee thy loue:
Befides, thy flaying will ablidge thy life:
Hope is a losers flafe, walke hence with that
And manage it, against despairing thoughts:
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milke-white bosome of thy Loue.
The time now ferues not to expoullate,
Come, Ie conuoy thee through the City-gate.
And ere I part with thee, confer at large:
Of all that may concern me thy Loue-affaires:
As thou lou'ft Silvia (though not for thy felde)
Regard thy danger, and along with me.
Val. I pray thee Launce, and if thou seest my Boy
Bil him make haffe, and meete me at the North-gate.
Pre. Goe Sircha, finde him out: Come Valentine.
Val. Oh my deere Silvia; hapless Valentine.
Launce. I am but a foolo, looke you, and yet I have
The wit to thinke my Maftere is a Kinde of a knave: but that's all one, if he be but one knave: He liues not now that knowes me to be in loue, yet I am in loue, but a Teeme of hoffe shall not plucke that from me: nor who 'tis I loue: and yet 'tis a woman: but what woman, I will not tell my felde: and yet 'tis a Milke-maid: yet 'tis not a maid; for thee hath, had Godfips: yet 'tis a maid, for she is her Mafters maid, and ferues for wages. Shee hath more qualities then a Water-Spaniell, it is much in a bare Chriftian: Heere is the Catelog of her Condition.
Imprimis. Shee can fetch and carry: why a hoffe can doe no more: nay, a hoffe cannot fetch, but onely carry, therefore is thee better then a Iade. Item. She can milke, looke you, a sweet vertue in a maid with cleane hands.
Speed. How now Signior Launce? what newes with your Maftere?
La. With my Maftere? why, it is at Sea:
Sp. Well, your old vice fill? mistake the word: what newes then in your paper?
La. The black'lt newes that euer thou heard'lt.
Sp. Why man? how blacke?
La. Why, as blacke as Inke.
Sp. Let me read them?
La. Fie on thee Iolt-head, thou canst not read.
Sp. Thou lyest; I can.
La. I will try thee: tell me this: who begot thee?
Sp. Marry,
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Sp. Marry, the son of my Grand-father.
La. Oh illiterate loyster; it was the sonne of thy Grand-mother: this proves that thou canst not read.
Sp. Come fool, come: try me in thy paper.
La. There; and S. Nicholas be thy speed.
Sp. Inprimis she can milke.
La. I that she can.
Sp. Item, she brewes good Ale.
La. And thereof comes the proverb: (Blessing of your heart, you brew good Ale.)
Sp. Item, she can lowe.
La. That's as much as to say (Can she?)
Sp. Item she can knit.
La. What neede a man care for a flocke with a wench,
When she can knit him a flocke?
Sp. Item, she can wash and scour.
La. A speciall vertue: for then shee neede not be wash'd, and scour'd.
Sp. Item, she can spin.
La. Then may I set the world on wheeles, when she can spin for her living.
Sp. Item, she hath many namelesse vertues.
La. That's as much as to say Bighard-vertues: that indeed know not their fathers; and therefore have no names.
Sp. Here follow her vices.
La. Clofe at the heels of her vertues.
Sp. Item, shee is not to be faffing in respect of her breath.
La. Well: that fault may be mended with a break-fall: read on.
Sp. Item, she hath a sweet mouth.
La. That makes amends for her foure breath.
Sp. Item, she doth talkes in her sleepe.
La. It's no matter for that; so shee sleepe not in her talke.
Sp. Item, she is flow in words.
La. Oh villains, that set this downe among her vices;
To be flow in words, is a womans only vertue:
I pray thee out with't, and place it for her chiefe vertue.
Sp. Item, she is proud.
La. Out with that too:
It was Eues legacie, and cannot be tane from her.
Sp. Item, she hath no teeth.
La. I care not for that neither: because I love crufts.
Sp. Item, she is curst.
La. Well: the beft is, she hath no teeth to bite.
Sp. Item, she will often praife her liquor.
La. It her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not,
I will; for good things should be praifed.
Sp. Item, she is too liberal.
La. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's witt downe she is flow of: of her puree, shee shall not, for that ile keepeth sult. Now, of another thing shee may, and that cannot I help: Well, proceed.
Sp. Item, she hath more haires then wit, and more faults then haires, and more wealth then faults.
La. Stop there: Ile have her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that left Article: rehearse that once more.
Sp. Item, she hath more haires then wit.
La. More haires then wit: it may be ile prove it: The couer of the faile, hides the faile, and therefore it is more then the faile: the haire that covers the wit, is more then the wit: for the greater hides the leffe: What's next?

Sp. And more faults then haires.
La. That's monstrous: oh that that were out.
Sp. And more wealth then faults.
La. Why that word makes the faults gracious.
Well, Ile hauie her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible.
Sp. What then?
La. Why then, will I tell thee, that thy Master flanes for thee at the North gate.
Sp. For me?
La. For thee? I, who art thou? he hath fluid for a better man than thee.
Sp. And must I goe to him?
La. Thou must run to him; for thou haft fluid fo long, that going will scarce fene the turne.
Sp. Why did not tell me sooner? i'pox of your love Letters.
La. Now will he be swing'd for reading my Letter;
An unmannerly fance, that will thrust himelf into secrets: Ile after, to reioyce in the boyes correftio.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Proteus.

Du. Sir Thurio, feare not, but that she will loue you
Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.
Th. Since his exile the hath defpa'd me mott,
Forgowme my company, and rale at me,
That I am desperate of obtaining her.
Du. This weake impreff of Loue, is as a figure
Trenched in ice, which with an hours heat
Diffolues to water, and doth loofe his forme,
A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,
And worthiefe Valentine shall be forgot.
How now Sir Proteus, is your countrianman
(According to our Proclamation) gon?
Pro. Gon, my good Lord,
Du. My daughter takes his going grieuously?
Pro. A little time (my Lord) will kill that griefe.
Du. So I beleue: but Thurio thinkes not so;
Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee,
(For thou hast showne some figne of good defect)
Makes me the better to confer with thee.
Pro. Longer then I proue loyal to your Grace,
Let me not live, to looke upon your Grace.
Du. Thou know'st how willingly, I would effec-
The match betweene Sir Thurio, and my daughter ?
Pro. I doe my Lord.
Du. And alfo, I thinke, thou art not ignorant
How the oppodes her against my will?
Pro. She did my Lord, when Valentine was here.
Du. I, and peruerfly, the perfuers fo:
What might we doe to make the girle forget
The loue of Valentine, and love for Thurio?
Pro. The beft way is, to flander Valentine,
With fallhood, cowardice, and poore defnicent:
Three things, that women highly hold in hate.
Du. I, but she'll thinke, that it is spoke in hate.
Pro. I, if his enemy delier it.
Therefore it must with circumfance be spoken
By one, whom the effeemeth as his friend.
Du. Then you must undertake to flander him.

Pro.
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Pro. And that (my Lord) I shall be loath to doe:
'Tis an ill office for a Gentleman.
Especially against his very friend.

Du. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your fudder never can endanger him;
Therefore the office is indifferent,
Being intreated to it by your friend.

Pro. You have prevail'd (my Lord) if I can doe it
By ought that I can speake in his difpraise,
She shall not long continue love to him:
But say this weede her love from

It follows not that she will lose it.
Th. Therefore, as you yownde her love from him;
Leave it should ruell, and be good to none,
You must profide to bottome it on me:
Which must be done, by praifing me as much.
As you, in worth difpraze, for Du.

Therefore we know (on

You are already loues firme votary,
And cannot soone ruell, and change your minde.
Vpon this warrant, shall you have acceffe,
Where you, with

For the is lampjihd, heauy, mellowchelly,
And (for your friends fake) will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your perffuation,
To hate yong

Because we know (on

Du. I, much is the force of

Pro. Say that vpon the aear of her beauty
You incenfe your teares, your fighes, your heart:
Write till your inke be dry; and with your teares
Moll't it againe: and frame fome feeling line,
That may diffouer fuch integrity:

For the Lute, was strung with Poets faireneses,
Whole golden touch could fhorten fleale and ftones:
Make Tygers tame, and huge

Make forfake unfounded deepes, to dance on Sands.
After your dire-lamenting Elegies,
Vfit by night your Ladies chamber-window
With fome sweet Confort; To their Instrumnts
Tune a deploing dump; the nights dead filence
Will well become fuch sweet complaining grieuance:
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.

Du. This discipline, throwes thou haft bin in lone.

Th. And thy advice, this night, lie put in prafte:
That thou

And afterward determine our proceedings.

Du. Even now about it, I will pardon you.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, and certaine Out-louers.

1. Out. Fellows, start up: I fee a paflenger.

2. Out. If there be ten, drank not, but down with 'em.

3. Out. Stand fir, and throw us that you have about ye.
If not: we'll make you fit, and rifie you.

Sp. Sir we are vndone; thefe are the Villaines
That all the Trauailers doe feare so much.

Out. My friends.

1. Out. That's not fo, sir we are your enemies.

2. Out. Peace; we'll hear him.

3. Out. I by my beard will we: for he is a proper man.

Val. Then know that I have little wealth to loose;
A man I am, cred't with auduerture:
My riches, are thefe poor habiliments,
Of which, if you should here disturbe me,
You take the tum and fubfance that I have.

2. Out. Whether trauel you?

Val. To Verona.

3. Out. Whence came you?

Val. From the Villaines.

4. Out. Have you long souleextend there?

Val. Some fixeen moneths, and longer might haue
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

1. Out. What, were you banished thence?

Val. I was.

2. Out. For what offence?

Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse;
I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent,
But yet I flew him manfully, in fight,
Without fitle vantage, or base treachery.

1. Out. Why are you repeate it, if it were done fo?

But were you banish't for some small a fault?

Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doome.

2. Out. Have you the Tongues?

Val. My youthfull trannail, therein made me happy,
Or else it often had beene often miserable.

3. Out. By the bare scalpe of Robin Hood' fat Fryer,
This fellow were a King, for our wilde faction.

1. Out. We'll have him: Sirs, a word.

Sp. Matter, be one of them.

It's an honourable kinde of theevry.

Val. Peace villains.

2. Out. Tell vs this: have you any thing to take to?

Val. Nothing but my fortune.

3. Out. Know then, that some of vs are Gentlemen,
Such as the fury of vaguouer's youth
Thrust from the company of awfull men.
My selfe was from Verona banished,
For prafling to feale away a Lady,
And heire and Neece, aside vnto the Duke.

2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a Gentleman,

Who, in my moode, I flab'd vnto the heart.

1. Out. And I, for fuch like petty crimes as these.

But to the purpose: for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawlesse liues;
And partly seeing you are beautifull
With goody shape; and by your owne report,
A Linguist, and a man of fuch perfeccion,
As we doe in our quality much want.

4. Out. Indeede because you are a banish'd man,

Therefore, about the ref, we parle to you:
Are you content to be our Generall?

To make a vertue of necessitie,
And live as we doe in this wilde reffie?

3. Out. What fai'th thou wilt thou be of our confort?

Say I, and be the capitaine of vs all:
We'll doe thee hommage, and be rul'd by thee,
Louse thee, as our Commander, and our King.
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Protheus, Thurio, Julia, Hoft, Musitian, Silvia.

Pro. Already have I bin sent to Valentine,
And now I must be as sinit as to Thurio,
Vnder the colour of commending him,
I have accees my owne love to prefer.
But Silvate is too faire, too true, this holy,
To be corrupted with my worthless gifts;
When I protest true loyalty to her,
She twits me with my falsecshood to my friend;
When to her beauty I commend my vows,
She bids me thinke how I have bin forworne
In breaking faith with Julia, whom I lou’d;
And notwithstanding all her fodaline quips,
The least whereof would quell a losers hope:
Yet (Spainel-like) the more she spurnes my love,
The more it growes, and faweth on her still;
But here comes Thurio; now muft we to her window,
And glue some evening Musique to her ear.

Th. How now, sir Protheus, are you crept before vs?
Pro. I gentile Thurio, for you know that loue
Will crepe in seruice, where it cannot goe.
Th. 1, but I hope, Sir, that you loue not here.
Pro. Sir, but I doe: or else I wou’d be hence.
Th. Who, Silvate? Pro. 1, Silvate, for your fake.
Th. I thank you for your owne: Now Gentlemen
Let’s tune; and too it fully a while.
Ho. Now, my young guest; me thinks your alcholly ch;
I pray you why is it?

In. Marry (mine Hoft) because I cannot be merry.
Ho. Come, we’ll have you merry: he bring you where You shall hear Musique, and fee the Gentleman that you ask’d for.
In. But thall I hear him speake.
Ho. I that you shall.
In. That will be Musique.
Ho. Harke, harke.
In. Is he among these?
Ho. I: but peace, let’s heare’m.

Song. Who is Silvate? what is she?
That all our Swarmes commend her?
Holy, faire, and wise is she;
The heavens fuch grace did lend her,
That fhe might admired be.
Is fhe kind as fhe is faire?
For beauty lines with kindnede:
Love dotte to her eyes repaired;
To helpe him of his blindnede:

And being help’d, inhabits there.
Then to Silvate, let us sing,
That Silvate is excelling;
She excels each mortall thing
Upon the dull earth dwelling.
To her let us Garlandes bring.

Ho. How now? are you fadder then you were before?
How doe you, man? the Muskecke likes you not.
In. You mistake: the Musitian likes me not.
Ho. Why, my pretty youth?
In. He plales faife (father.)
Ho. How, out of tune on the strings.
In. Not fo: but yet
So faile that he grieues my very heart strings.
Ho. You have a quicke ear.
In. I, I would I were deaf: it makes me have a flow
Ho. I perceive you delight not in Musique.
In. Not a whil, when it iars fo.
Ho. Harke, what fine change is in the Musique.
In. I: that change is the light.
Ho. You wou’d have them always play but one thing.
In. I would alwaies have one play but one thing.
But Hoft, doth this Sir Protheus, that we talk on,
Often refer unto this Gentlewoman?
Ho. I tell you what Lance his man told me,
He lou’d her out of all nickle.

In. Where is Lance?
Ho. Gone to seek his dog, which to morrow, by his Matters command, hee muft carry for a present to his Lady.
In. Peace, stand aside, the company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, feare not you, I will fo plaide,
That you shall faye, my cunning drift excels.
Th. Where meete we?
Pro. At Saint Gregories well.
Th. Farewell.
Pro. Madam: good eu’n to your Ladifhip.
Sil. I thank you for your Musique (Gentlemen)
Who is that that speakes?
Pro. One (Lady) if you knew his pure hearts truth,
You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Protheus, as I take it.
Pro. Sir Protheus (gentile Lady) and your Seruant.
Sil. What’s your will?
Pro. That I may compass your.
Sil. You have your will: my will is euin this,
That prently you hice you home to bed:
Thou subtle, peril’d, shie, difloyall man:
Think’t thou I am fo shalow, fo concill’d:
To be feluced by thy flattery,
That has’t deceu’d fo many with thy vows?
Retume, retume and make thy love amendes:
For me (by this pale queene of night I fware)
I am fo farre from granting thy requist,
That I defpife thee, for thy wrongfull fute;
And by and by intend to chide my felfe,
Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant (sweet love) that I did loue a Lady,
But she is dead.
In. "Thou fake, if I should speake it;
For I am fure she is not buried.
Sil. Say that the be; yet Valentine thy friend
Surnuues; to whom (thy fale art witneffe)
I am betroth’d; and art thou not afham’d?
To wrong him, with thy importunacy?

Pro.
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so supposes am I: for in her grave
Affure thy selfe, my loue is buried.

Pro. Sweet Lady, let me rase it from the earth.
Sil. Go to thy Ladies grave and call her thence;
Or at the least, in hers, sepulcher thine.

Iul. He heard not that,

Pro. Madam: if your heart be fo obdurate:
Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my loue,
The picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that lie speech, to that lie fligh and weep:
For since the subdance of your perfect selfe
Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;
And to your shadow, will I make true loue.

Iul. If there were a substance you would sure deceive it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.

Sil. I am very loth to be your AIdol Sir;
But, since your faldhood shall become you well
To worship shadowes, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and ile send it:
And so, good night.

Pro. As wretched have you night
That wait for execution in the morn.

Iul. Haft, will you goe?
Ho. By my halidome, I was fat asleepe.

Iul. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?
Ho. Marry, at my house:
Truft me, I think it is almost day.

Iul. Not fo: but it hath bin the longest night
That ere I watch'd, and the moift heauief.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Eglamour, Silvia.

Eg. This is the houre that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her minde:
Ther's some great matter she'ld employ me in.
Madam, Madam.

Sil. Who cal's?

Eg. Your servant, and your friend;
One that attends your Ladiships command.

Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good morrow.

Eg. As many (worthy Lady) to your felie:
According to your Ladiships impofe,
I am thus early come, to know what feruice
It is your pleasure to command me in.

Sil. Oh Eglamour, thou art a Gentleman:
Thinke not I flatter (for I swear I do not)
Valiant, wife, remorfe-full, well accomplifh'd.
Thou art not ignorant what deere good will
I bare unto the lady's Valentine:
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vaine Tlioio (whom my very foule abhorre's.)
Thy felie haft lou'd, and I have heard thee say
No griefe did euer come fo neere thy heart,
As when thy Lady, and thy true-love dide,
Upon whose faith and honor, I repose.
Vege not my fathers anger (Eglamoure)
But think upon my griefe (a Ladies griefe)
And on the iustice of my flying hence,
To keepe me from a most vnholie match,
Which heauen and fortune stilll rewards with plagues.
I doe defire thee, even from a heart
As full of forroves, as the Sea of fands,
To beare me company, and goe with me:
If not, to hide what I have fai'd to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your griefances,
Which, since I know they vertuously are plac'd,
I gie conftent to goe along with you,
Wrecking as little what betideth me,
As much, I with all good before you.
When will you goe?

Sil. This evening comming.

Eg. Where shall I meete you?
Sil. At Frier Patricks Cell,
Where I intend holy Confession.

Eg. I will not faile your Ladiship:
Good morrow (gentle Lady.)

Sil. Good morrow, kinde Sir Eglamoure.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Laurence, Proteus, Julia, Silvia.

Lau. When a mans fercuant shall play the Curre with him (look he it) you goe hard: one that I brought vp of a puppy: one that I sau'd from drowning, when three or foure of his blinde brothers and fifters went to it: I have taught him (even as one would say precifely, thus I would teach a dog) I was fent to deliver him, as a prent to Miftirs Silvia, from my Mafter; and I came no fooner into the dyning-chamber, but he fpets me to her Trencher, and itales her Capons-leg: O 'tis a foule thing, when a Cur cannot keepe himfelfe in all compaines: I would have (as one would fay) one that takes vp on him to be a dog indeede, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not more wit then he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I thinke verily he had bin hang'd for't: sure as I live he had fouver'd for't: you shall judge: Hee thrutts him himfelfe into the company of three or foure gentleman-like-dogs, under the Dukes table: hee had not bin there (blifie the marke) a pifling while, but all the chamber finte he: out with the dog (faies one) what cur is that (faies another) whip him out (faies the third) hang him vp (faies the Duke.) I hauing bin acquaiinted with the imell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whipping the dogges friend (quoth I) you mane to whip the dog: I marry doe I (quoth he) you doe him the more wrong (quoth I) 'twas I did the thing you wolfe of: he makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber: how many Matters doo this for his Servant? nay, lie be fworne I have fat in the flockes, for puddings he hath flowne, otherwise he had bin executed: I have ftood on the Pillorie for Geefe he hath kil'd, otherwise he had fouver'd for't: thou thinke it not of this now: nay, I remember the tricke you feru'd me, when I tooke my leave of Madam Silvia: did not not I bid thee still marke me, and doe as I do; when did'st thou fee me heave vp my leg, and make water against a Gentlewoman's farthingale? did it thou ever fee me doe such a tricke?

Pro. Schaffian is thy name: I like thee well, And will imploy thee in some seruice prettily. Is. In what you please, Ile doe what I can. Pro. I hope thou wilt. How now you whor-fon peant, Where have you bin these two days loytering? La. Marry Sir, I carried Mrs Silvia th'e dogge you bad me.

Pro. And what fakes she to my little Jewell? La. No indeecke she did not: Her face I brough't him; againe, Pro. What, drift thou offer her this from me? La. I Sir, the other Squirrell was done from me. By the Hangmans boyes in the market place, And then I offer'd her mine owne, who is a dog. As big as ten of yours, & therefore the guilt the greater. Pro. Goe, get thee hencloth & finde my dog againe, Or nere returne againe into my fight. Away, I say: stayefl thou to vexe me here; A Slau, that fill an end, turnes me to shame: Schaffian, I have entertain'd thee, Partly that I have neede of such a youth, That can with some difcretion doe my businesse: For 'tis no trufting to yond foolish Lowt; But chiefly, for thy face, and thy behauiour, Which (if my Augury deccye me not) Witenesse good bringing vp, fortune, and truth: Therefore know thee, for this I entertain thee. Go prentely, and take this Ring with thee, Deliver'd to Madam Silvia; She lou'd me well, deliver'd it to me. Iad. It feemes you lou'd not her, not leave her token: She is dead belike?

Pro. Not fo: I think she liues. Iad. Alias. Pro. Why do't thou cry alas? Iad. I cannot choose but pity her. Pro. Wherefore should't thou pity her? Iad. Because, me thinkes that she lou'd you as well As you doe loue your Lady Silvia: She dreams on him, that has forgot her loue, You doste on her, that cares not for your loue. 'Tis pity Loue, should be fo contrary: And thinking on it, makes me cry alas.

Pro. Well: glue her that Ring, and therewithall This Letter: that's her chamber: Tell my Lady, I clame the promife for her heavenly Picture: Your meffage done, hye home unto my chamber, Where thou then finde me sad, and solitary.

Iad. How many women would doe such a meffage? Alsas poore Protesus, thou haft entertaine'd A Foxe, to be the Shepheard of thy Lambs; Alsas, poore foolie, why doe I pity him That with his very heart defpiteth me? Because he loseth her, he defpiteth me, Because I love him, I must pity him. This Ring I gave him, when he parted from me, To binde him to remember my good wil: And now am I (vnhappy Meffenger) To pleade for that, which I would not obtained; To carry that, which I would have refued: To praife his faith, which I would have disprais'd. I am my Masters true confirmed Loue, But cannot be true seruant to my Master, Vnlike I proue false traitor to my felle. Yet will I woe for him, but yet so coldly, As (heauen it knowes) I would not haue him speed. Gentlewoman, good day: I pray you be my meane To bring me where to speake with Madam Silvia. Sil. What would you with her, if that I be fhe? Iad. If you be fie, I doe intreat your patience To heare me speake the meffage I am fent on. Sil. From whom?

Iad. From my Master, Sir Protesus, Madam. Sil. Oh: he fends you for a Picture? Iad. I, Madam. Sil. Protesus, bring my Picture there, Goe, giue your Master this; tell him from me, One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget Would better fit his Chamber, then this Shadow. Iad. Madam, pleafe you perufe this Letter; Pardon me (Madam) I haue vnmad'sd Deliver'd you a paper that I should not; This is the Letter to your Ladiship. Sil. I praye thee let me looke on that againe. Iad. It may not be: good Madam pardon me. Sil. There, hold:

I will not looke vpon your Mafters lines: I know they are full with protestations, And full of new-found oaths, which he will break As eafily as I doe teare his paper. Iad. Madam, he fends your Ladiship this Ring. Sil. The more fame for him, that he fends it me; For I haue heard him fay a thoundred times, His Julia gave it him, at his departure: Though his falle finger have prophan'd the Ring, Mine shall not doe his Julia to much wrong. Iad. She thankes you. Sil. What can fhe thou? Iad. I thank you Madam, that you tender her: Poor Gentlewoman, my Master wrongs her much. Sil. Do'tt thou know her?

Iad. Almost as well as I doe know my felfe. To think me vpon her woes, I doe protest That I haue wept a hundred feueral times. Sil. Belike the thinks that Protesus hath forsook her? Iad. I think the doth: and that her caufe of sorrow. Sil. Is he not paffing faire? Iad. She hath bin faler (Madam) then she is, When she did thinke my Mafter lou'd her well; She, in my judgement, was as faire as you. But fince she did negleé her looking-glaufe, And threw her Sun-expelling Malique away, The ayre hath flau'd the rodes in her cheeks, And pinch'd the lilie-tincture of her face, That now she is become as blacke as I. Sil. How tall was fhe?

Iad. About my figure: for at Pentecoff, When all our Pagants of delight were plaid, Our youth got me to play the womens part, And I was trim'd in Madam Julia's gowne, Which ferued me as fit, by all mens judgements, As if the garment had bin made for me: Therefore I know she is about my height, And at that time I made her weape a good,
For I did play a lamentable part,
(Madam) 'twas Aridaus, pausing;
For Tullus perjury, and vauntful flight;
Which I so liuely acted with my teares:
That my poor Miftris mov'd therewithall,
Wept bitterly: and would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.
Sil. She is beholding to thee (gentle youth)
Alas (poore Lady) defolate, and left;
I wepe my felle to thinke upon thy words:
Here youth: there is my purfe; I give thee this (well.
For thy sweet Miftris sake, because thou lou'st her.
Farewell. And the shall thank ye for't, if ere you know
A vertuous gentlewoman, milde, and beautifull.
I hope my Matters sull be but cold,
Since she respeckts my Miftris love so much.
Alas, how loue can trifle with it felte:
Here is her Piture; let me fee, I thinke
If I had fuch a Tyre, this face of mine
Were full as lously, as is this of hers;
And yet the Painter flatter'd her a little,
Vnleffe I flatter with my felle too much.
Her haire is Ablure, mine is perfect Yellow;
If that be all the difference in his lowe,
Ile get me fuch a coulour'd Perrwyg:
Her eyes are grey as gladies, and foe are mine:
I, but her fore-head's low, and mine's as high:
What shoud it be that he respeckts in her,
But I can make respeckts in my felle?
If this fone Love, were not a blinded god.
Come shadow, come, and take this shadow vp,
For 'tis thy ruall! O thou foncelesse forme,
Thou shalt be worship'd, kil'd, lou'd, and ador'd;
And were there fence in his Idolatry,
My fubstance should be flare in thy fead.
Ile vse thee kindly, for thy Miftris fake
That vd's me fo: or else by loue, I vow,
I should have scracht'd out your vnfcying eyes,
To make my Maller out of loue with thee.
Exeunt.

Enter Eglamoure, Silvia.

Egl. The Sun begins to guild the wefterne skie,
And now it is about the very houre
That Silvia, at Fryer Patrick Cell should meet me,
She will not falle for Louers breakes not houres,
Vnleffe it be to come before their time,
So much they fpar their expedition.
See where the comes? Lady a happy evening.
Sil. Amen, Amen: goe on (good Eglamoure)
Out at the Poterne by the Abbey wall;
I feare I am attended by fome Spies.
Egl. Fear not; the Forrest is not three leagues off,
If we recover that, we are fare enough.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Thurio, Proteus, Julia, Duke.

Th. Sir Proteus, what fales Silvia to my fuit?

Pro. Oh Sir, I finde her milder then she was,
And yet she takes exceptions at your perfon.
Th. What? that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that it is too little. (der.
Th. Ie weare a Boote, to make it somewhat roun-
Pro. But loue will not be curd to what it loathes.
Th. What fakes fhe to my face?
Pro. She fakes it is a faire one.
Th. Nay then the wanton eyes: my face is blacke.
Pro. But Pearles are faire: and the old saying is,
Blanke men are Pearles, in beauitous Ladies eyes.
Th. 'Tis true, fuch Pearles as put out Ladies eyes,
For I had rather winke, then looke on them.
Th. How like fhe my difcourfe?
Pro. Ill, when you talke of war.
Th. But well, when I difcourfe of loue and peace.
Jul. But better indeed, when you hold you peace.
Th. What fakes fhe to my vallor?
Pro. Oh Sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Jul. She needes not, when fhe knows it cowardize.
Th. What fakes fhe to my birth?
Pro. That you are well deriu'd.
Jul. True: from a Gentleman, to a foole.
Th. Confiders the my Poefie?
Pro. Oh, I: and pitious them.
Th. Wherefore?
Jul. That fuch an Affe should owe them,
Pro. That they are out by Leafe.
Jul. Here comes the Duke.
Du. How now Sir Proteus; how now Thurio?
Which of you fav Eglamoure of late?
Th. Not I.
Pro. Nor I.
Du. Saw you my daughter?
Pro. Neither.
Du. Why then
She's fled vnto that pezant, Valentine;
And Eglamoure is in her Company:
'Tis true: for Fryer Laurence met them both
As he, in penance wander'd through the Forrest:
Him he know well: and guied that it was he,
But being mask'd, he was not faire of it.
Beides she did intend Confedion
At Patrick: Cell this euen, and there she was not.
Thefe likelihoods confirm his flight from hence;
Therefore I pray you find, not to difcourfe,
But mount you prefently, and meete with me
Vpon the rifing of the Mountainie foote
That leads toward Mantua, whether they are feld:
Dilpatch (fweet Gentlemen) and follow me.
Th. Why this it is, to be a penifh'd Girle,
That fles her fortune when it follows her:
Ille after; more to be reueng'd on Eglamoure,
Then for the loue of reck-leeffe Silvia.
Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia loue
Then hate of Eglamoure that goes with her.
Jul. And I will follow, more to croffe that loue
Then hate for Silvia, that is gone for loue.
Exeunt.

When women cannot lose, where they're below'd.
Sil. When Protheus cannot lose, where he's below'd:
Read over Iulia's hearts, (thy first left Lone)
For whose dearer fakes, thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths,
Defended into peril, to lose me,
Thou haft no faith left now, vnleafe thou'd two,
And that's fare worse then none: better have none
Then plural faith, which is too much by one:
Thou Counterfeit, to thy true friend.
Pro. In Lone,
Who refpeft friend?
Sil. All men but Protheus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words
Can no way change you to a milder forme;
I woe you like a Souldier, at armes end,
And lose you 'gainst the nature of Lone: force ye.
Sil. Oh heaven,
Pro. If e're force thee yield to my defire.
Val. Ruffian: let goe that rufe vniciuil touch,
Thou friend of an ill fashion.
Pro. Valentine.
Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love,
For such is a friend now: a treacherous man,
Thou haft beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye
Could have perfuaded me: now I dare not say
I haue one friend alio: thou woulft difprue me:
Who should be trusted, when ones right hand
Is perjured to the boforme? Protheus
I am forry I must neuer trut thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy fake:
The priuate wound is deeper: oh time, most accurt:
'Mongst all fees that a friend should be the work?
Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me:
Forgive me Valentine: if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient Ranfome for offence,
I tender't here: I doe as truely suffer,
As e'er I did commit.
Val. Then I am paid:
And once again, I doe receive thee honest;
Who by Repentance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd:
By Penitence the Eternalls wrath's appeas'd:
And that my love may appear plaine and free,
All that was mine, Silvia, I give thee.
Iul. Oh me vnhappy.
Pro. Looke to the Boy.
Val. Why, Boy?
Iul. O good sir, my matter charg'd me to deliver a ring to Madam Silvia: 'tis (out of my neglected) was never done.
Pro. Where is that ring? boy?
Iul. Heere 'tis: this is it.
Pro. How? let me see.
Why this is the ring I gave to Iulia.
Iul. Oh, cry you mercy sir, I haue mistooke:
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.
Pro. But how cam't thou by this ring? at my depart
I gave this vnto Iulia.
Iul. And Iulia her felke did give it me,
And Iulia her felke hath brought it hither.
Pro. How? Iulia?
Iul. Behold her, that gave ayme to all thy othes,
And entertain'd 'em deeply in her heart.
How oft haft thou with perjury cleft the roote?
Oh Protheus, let this habit make thee blueth.

Shal. The Lufe is the fresh-fit, the silt-fit, is an olde Coate.

Shal. I may quarter (Coz).

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Euan. It is marrying indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Euan. Yes per lady: if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three Skirts for your felfe, in my simple confequences; but that is all one: if Sir John Falstaff have committed difparagements unto you, I am of the Church and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make attone-ments and compromizes betweene you.

Shal. The Counsell shall heare it, it is a Riot.

Euan. It is not meet the Counsell heare a Riot: there is no feare of Got in a Riot: The Counsell (lookes you) shall defire to heare the feare of Got, and not to heare a Riot: take your viza-ments in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were yong againe, the fword should end it.

Euan. It is petter that friends is the fword, and end it: and there is alfo another deuice in my praine, which peradventure prings good difcursions with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master Thomas Page, which is pretty virginity.

Shal. What ha? Got-poffle your house heere.

Mr. Page. Who's there?

Euan. Here is go'ts pleffing and your friend, and Justice Shallow, and heere yong Master Slender: that perad-ventures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Mr. Page. I am glad to fee your Worphips well: I thank you for my Venifon Master Shallow.

M. Pa. I am glad to fee you, good Master Slender.

Shal. How do's your faltlow Greyhound, Sir, I heard fay he was out-run on Cofall.

M. Pa. It could not be judg'd, Sir.

Shal. You'll not confesse; you'll not confesse.

Shal. That he will not, 'tis your fauls, 'tis your fault: 'tis a good dogge.

Shal. Sirs: hee's a good dog, and a faire dog, can there be more fald? he is good, and faire. Is Sir Iohn Falstaffe heere?

M. Pa. Sir, he is within: and I would I could doe a good office be twenee you.

Euan. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speake.

Shal. He hath wrong'd me (Master Page.)

M. Pa. Sir, he doth in some for confesse it.
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Skal. If it be confessed, it is not reformed; is not that so (M. Page?) he hath wrong'd me, indeed he hath, at a word he hath; bellece me, Robert Shallow Esquire, faith he is wronged.

Mr. Page. Here comes Sir John.

Fal. Now, Master Shallow, you'll complaint of me to the King.

Skal. Knight, you have beaten my men, kill'd my deer, and broke open my Lodge.

Fal. But not kill'd your Keepers daughter?

Skal. Tut, a pin: this shall be answer'd.

Fal. I will answer it strait, I have done all this:

That is now answer'd.

Skal. The Council shall know this.

Fal. "Twere better for you if it were known in council: you'll be laugh'd at.

Ex. Pauca verba; (Sir John) good words.

Fal. Good words? good Calidiges; slender, I broke your head: what matter have you against me?

Skal. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you, and against your cony-catching Rafficks, "Bardolf, Nym," and Pijfoll.

Ex. You Banbury Cheefe.

Skal. I, it is no matter.

Pijf. How now, Mephostiphus?

Skal. I, it is no matter.

Nym. Slicet, I say; pauca, pauca: Slicet, that's my humor.

Skal. Where's simple my man? can you tell, Cofen?

Ex. Peace, I pray you: now let vs understand: there is three Vrmites in this matter, as I understand; that is, Master Page (fidelicet Master Page), & there is my selfe, (fidelicet my selfe) and the three party is (lastly, and finall) mine Hoft of the Garter.

Mr. Page. We three to hear it, & end it between them.

Ex. Ferry god's will, I will make a storie of it in my note-book, and we wil afterwards orke upon the cause, with as great dircetly as we can.

Fal. Pijfoll.

Pijf. He hears with ears.

Ex. The Treuill and his Tam: what phrase is this? he hears with care? why, it is affections.

Fal. Pijfoll, did you pick M. Slenor's purse?

Skal. I, by these gloues did hee, or I would might never come in mine owne great chamber againe elle, of feauen groates in mill-expences, and two Edward Shoolboords, that cost me two flouring and two pense a piece of Yeald Miller: by these gloues.

Fal. Is this true, Pijfoll?

Ex. No, it is false, if it is a piccke-purse.

Pijf. Ha, thou mountaine Forreynere: Sir John, and Master mine, I combat challenge of this Latine Bilboa: word of denail in thy labors here; word of denail; froth, and scum thou lefst.

Skal. By these gloues, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be auid's fryr, and passe good humours: I will say marry trap with you, if you ruthe the nut-hooks humor on me, that is the very note of it.

Skal. By this hat, then he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunke, yet I am not altogether an aife.

Fal. What say you Scarlets, and John?

Bar. Why sir, (for my part) I say the Gentleman had drunk himcelf out of his flue sentence.

Ex. It is his flue fences: fie, what the ignorance is.

Bar. And being fat, fryr, was (as they say) cahearsed: and to conclusions past the Car-circles.

Skal. I, you yake in Latten then to: but 'tis no matter; He nere be drunk whilst I live againe, but in honest, ciuill, godly company for this tricke: if I be drunke, He be drunke with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Ex. So got-udge me, that is a vertuets minde.

Fal. You hear all these matters denly, Gentlemen; you hear it.

Mr. Page. Nay daughter, carry the wine in, we'll dranke within.

Skal. Oh heauen: This is Miftreff Annes Page.

Mr. Page. How now Miftris Ford?

Fal. Miftris Ford, by my troth you are very wel met: by your leaue good Miftris.

Mr. Page. Wife, bid the gentlemen welcome; come, we have a hot Venillon paffy to dinner; Come gentlemen, I hope we shall drinke downe all vnkindnesse.

Skal. I had rather then forty fillings I had my booke of Songs and Sonnets here: How now Simple, where have you beene? I must wait on my selfe, mug I? you have not the booke of Riddles about you, have you?

Sim. Booke of Riddles? why did you not lend it to Anthony short-sake vpon Allhallowmas laft, a fortnight a-fore Michaelmas.

Skal. Come Cos, come Cos, we say for you: a word with you Cos; marry this, Cos; there is as 'twere a tender, a kinde of tender, made a farre-off by Sir Hugh here: do you understand me?

Skal. I Sir, you shall finde me reasonable; if it be so, I shall doe that is reason.

Skal. Nay, but vnderstand me.

Skal. So I doe Sir.

Ex. Glie eare to his motions; (M. Slenor) I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Skal. Nay, I will doe as my Cosen Shallow tells: I pray you parion me, he's a Juflice of Peace in his Coun-try, simple though I stand here.

Ex. But that is not the queftion: the queftion is concerning your marriage.

Skal. I, there's the point Sir.

Ex. Marry it is: the very point of it, to Mi. An Page.

Skal. Why if it be so; I will marry her upon any rea-sonable demands.

Ex. But can you affection the 'o-man, let vs command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips: for divers Philosophers hold, that the lips is parcel of the mouth: therefor precisely, can you carry your good will to y mad?

Se. Cofen Abraam Slenor, can you love her?

Skal. I hope sir, I will do as it shall become one that would doe reason.

Ex. Nay, got's Lords, and his Ladies, you must speake pooffitable, if you can carry-her your desires towards her.

Skal. That you must:

Will you, (upon good dowry) marry her?

Skal. I will doe a greater thing then that, vpon your requet (Cox) in any reason.

Skal. Nay conceal me, concecle mee, (sweet Cox): what I doe is to please you (Cox): can you love the maid?

Skal. I will marry her (Sir) at your requet; but if there bee no great love in the beginning, yet Heauen may decreas it vpon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another: I hope vpon familiarity will grow more content: but if you say marry-her, I will marry-her, that I am freshly disfloued, and disflouely.

The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Qui. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had bin thoroughly moused, you should have heard him so loud, and so merrily: but notwithstanding man, Ile doe yoe your Master what good I can: and the very yes, &c the no is, y French Doctor my Master, (I may call him my Master, looke you, for I keepe his hous; and I wash, ring, brew, bake, dresser meete & drinkes, make the beds, and doe all my selfs.)

Simp. 'Tis a great charge to come vnder one bodies hands.

Qui. (Are you a-uis'd o' that?) you shall finde it a great charge: and to be vp early, and downe late: but notwithstanding, (to you tell in your care, I wold have no words of it,) my Master himselfe is in love with Mistit Anne Page: but notwithstanding that I know Ann mind, that's neither here nor there.

Caius. You, Jack 'Nape: giue-'a this Letter to SirHugh, by gar it is a challenge: I will cut his troat in de Parke, and I will teach a funny Jack-a-nape Friet to meddle, or make: —you may be gon: it is not good you tarry here: by gar I will cut all his two thones: by gar, he shall not have a thone to throw at his dogge.

Qui. Alas: he speakes but for his friend.

Caius. It is no matter's ver dat: do not you tell-a me dat I shall haue Anne Page for my false? by gar, I will kill de Jack-Friet: and I have appointed mine Host of de laster to mesure our weapon: by gar, I wil my false haue Anne Page.

Qui. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall bee well: We mutt giue folkes leave to prate: what the good-ler.

Caius. Rugby, come to the Court with me: by gar, if I have not Anne Pages, I shall turne your head out of my door: follow my heele, Rugby.

Qui. You shall haue Ag-folkes head of your owne: No, I know Ann mind for that: never a woman in Wind- for knowes more of Ann minde then I doe, nor can doe more then I doe with her, I thanke heauen.

Rugby. Who's with in there, hoa?

Qui. Who's there, I trow? Come neere the house I pray you.

Pen. How now (good woman) how doft thou? Qui. The better that it pleases your good Worship to ake?

Pen. What news? how do's pretty Mistit Anne?

Qui. In truth Sir, and shee is pretty, and honest, and gentle, and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way, I praise heauen for it.

Pen. Shall I doe any good thinkit thou? shall I not haue my full?

Qui. Troth Sir, all is in his hands aboute: but notwithstanding (Master Fenton) Ile be sworne on a booke thee loves you: haue not your Worship a wart above your eye?

Pen. Yes marry haue I, what of that?

Qui. Wel, thereby hanga a tale: good faith, it is fuch another Nan: (but I detest) an honest maid as euer broke bread: wee had an howres talke of that wart: I shall never laugh but in that maid company: but (indeed) thee is giuen too much to Allichylo and mufing: but for you — well — goo.

Pen. Well: I shall see her to day: hold, there's mo- ney for thee: Let mee haue thy voice in my behalfe: if thou feeth her before me, command me.

Qui. Will I! I faith that wee will: And I will tell your Worship more of the Wars, the next time we have confidence, and of other wowers.

Pen. Well, fare-well, I am in great haste now.

Qui. Fare-well to your Worship: truly an honest Gentleman: but Anne loves him not: for I know Ann minde as well as another do's: out vpnot: what have I forgot.

Page. What, have scep'd Lone-letters in the holly-daytime of my beauty, and am I now a fabrict for them? let me see?

Ask me no reason why I love you, for though Love and Reason be not friends, but admits him not for his Company: you are not young, no more am I: you to then, there's simpaticke: you are merry, so am I: be, be, then there's more simpaticke: you love jacks, and so do I: would you desire better simpaticke? Let it suffice thee (Mistit Page) at the leaft if the Love of Souldier can suffice, that I love thee: I will not say fancy mee; 'tis not a Souldier-like phraze; but I joy, love me: By me, thine owne true Knight, by day or night: Or any kindes of light, with all his might, For thee to fight.

John Falstaff.

What a Hero of Juive is this? O wicked, wicked world: One that is well-aye worse to peeces with age To shaw himselfe a yong Gallant? What an unsvede Behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard pickt (with The Deuilis name) out of my conuerfation, that he dares In this manner affay me? why, hee hath not beene thrice in my Company: what should I say to him? I was then Frugall of my mirth: (heaven forgive mee:) why Ie Exhibit a Bill in the Parliament for the putting downe of men: how shall I be reveng'd on him? for reveng'd I will be! as sure as his guns are made of puddings. Mistit Ford. Mistit Page, truft mee, I was going to your house.

Page. And truft mee, I was comming to you: you looke very ill.

Ford. Nay, Ile nere beleee that; I haue to shew to the contrary.

Page. Faith but you doe in my minde.

Ford. Well: I doe then: yet I say, I could shew you to the contrary: O Mistit Page, giue mee some convalFalke.

Page. What's the matter, woman?

Ford. O woman: if it were not for one trifling refeect, I could come to such honour.

Page. Hang the trifles (woman) take the honour: what is it? defiance with trifles: what is it?

Ford. If I would but goe to hell, for an eternal moment, or so: I could be knight.

Page. What thou lieft? Sir Alice Ford? these Knights will hackes, and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy Gentry.

Ford. Wee burne day-light: here, read, read: perceive how I might bee knighted, I shall think the worth of fit men, as long as I haue an eye to make diffe- rence of mens liking: and yet hee would not swear: prai praise womans modesty: and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproofs to al vcomelimevffe, that I would have sware his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words: but they doe no more adhere and keep place together, then the hundred Palms to the tune of Green-fleue: What tempeft (I troo) threw this Whale, (with so many Tuns of oyle in his belly) afoore at Windsor? How shall I bee resued on him? I think the belt way were, to entertaine him with hope, till the wicked fire of luft have melted him in his owne grace: Did you e-uer heare the like?

Mf. Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differ; to thy great comfort in this mysterie of ill opinions, here's the twyn-brother of thy Letter: but let thine inherit first, for I think mine neuer Ball: I warrant he hath a thousand of these Letters, writ with blanke-space for different names (fure more): and these are of the second edition: hee will print them out of doubt: for he cares not what hee puts into the preffe, when he would put vs two: I had rather be a Giantefse, and lye vnder Mount Pelion: Well; I will find you twentie laiculous Turdes ere one chaffe man.

Mf. Ford. Why this is the very fame: the very hand: the very words: what doth he thinke of vs?

Mf. Page. Nay I know not: it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine owne honesty: I leate entertaine my felves like one that I am not acquainted withall: for fare vlaefse hee know some faire in mee, that I know not my felves, hee would neuer have boorded me in this furie.

Mf. Page. So will I: if hee come vnder my hatches, Ile neuer to Sea againe: Let's bee reueng'd on him: let's appoint him a meeting: give him a frow of comfort in his Sulf, and lead him on with a fine brilte delay, till hee hath payd his hories to mine Hoff of the Garter.

Mf. Ford. Nay, I will content to act any villany against him, that may not fully the charneffe of our honesty: oh that my husband saw this Letter: it would give eternall food to his iceloufe.

Mf. Page. Why look where he comes; and my good man too: he's as farre from iceloufe, as I am from gi-uing him caufe, and that (I hope) is an vnmeasurabe di-fance.

Mf. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mf. Page. Let's confult together against this greave Knight. Come hither.

Ford. Well: I hope, it be not fo.

Pif. Hope is a curtail-dog in some affaires: Sir lohn afficha thy wife.

Ford. Good mine Hoof o’th’Garter: a word with you.

Hoof. What faith thou, my Bully-Rooke?

Shall. Will you goe with vs to behold it? My merry Hoof hath had the mending of their weapons; and (I thinkke) hath appointed them contrary places for (beloone mee) I hearre the Parfon is no leeter: harkes, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Hoof. Haft thou no fuit against my Knight? my guest-Cañatler.

Shall. None, I protest: but Ie give you a pottle of burn’d facke, to give me recourse to him, and tell him my name is Brwoome: onely for a left.

Hoof. My hand, (Bully; I thou shalt hae ereffe and regrefse, (gad I well?) and thy name shall be Drome. It is a merry Knight; will you goe An-hires?

Shall. Haue with you mine Hoof.

Page. I haue heard the French-man had good skill in his Rapier.

Shall. Tut fir: I could have told you more: in these times you fland on distance: your Parres, Stoccao’s, and I know not what: tis the heart (Master Page) tis heere, tis heere: I haue feene the time, with my long-fword, I would haue made you fowre tall fellows skippke like Rattes.

Hoof. Heere boyes, heere, heere: shall we wag?

Page. Haue with you: I hauid rather heare them cold, then flght.

Ford. Though Page be a feacr foole, and flnds fo firmely on his wuius frailty; yet, I cannot put-off my opinion fo easily she was in his company at Pages house: and what they made there, I know not. Well, I wil looke further into’tes, and I have a difguife, to found Falaffafte; if I finde her honest, I loafe not my labor: if she be other-wife, ‘tis labour well bestowed.

Enter Falaffe, Pitbull, Robin, Quickly, Bardolfe, Ford.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Piff. Why then the world’s mine Oyster, which I, with favor will open.

Fal. Not a penny: I haue beene content (Sir,) you should lay my countenance to pawn: I haue gratted vp on my good friends for three Repreeses for you, and your Coach-fellow Nim; or else you had look’d through the grate, like a Geminy of Baboons: I am damnd in hell, for swearing to Gentlemen my Friends, you were good Soulidiers, and tall-fellows. And when Mistrefse Brigit loft the handle of her Fan, I took vp mine honoour thou hadst it not.

Piff. Di’dst not thou share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason: thinkst thou lene endanger my soules gratis? at a word, hang no more about mee, I am no gibbet for you: goe, a short knife, and a throng, to your Mannor of Picket-batch: goe, you’lt not bare a Letter for mee you rogue? you fland von your honor? why, (thou vnconfedible bellnoffe) it is as much as I can doe to keepes the termes of my honor presé: I, I, I my felie sometimes, leaving the fear of heauen on the left hand, and hiding mine honor in my necessitty, am faine to shuffe: to hedge, and to lurch, and yet, you Rogue, will en-scence your rags; your Cat-a-Mountain-lookes, your red-lattice phraies, and your hold-beating-oathes, vnder the shelter of your honor? will you not doe it? you?

Piff. I doe rellent: what would thou more of man?

Robin. Sir, here’s a woman would speake with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Quick. Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Good-morrow, good-wife.

Quick. Not so, and he pleasa your worship.

Fal. Good madam then.

Quick. He be sworne,

As my mother was the fifth houre I was borne.

Fal. I doe beleeue the sweerer: what with me?

Quick. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word, or two?

Fal. Two thousand ( faire woman) and le vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one Mistrefse Ford, (Sir) I pray come a little neerer this waies: I my felie dwell with M. Doctor Cait:

Fal. Well, on; Mistrefse Ford, you say.

Quick. Your worship faires very true: I pray your worship come a little neerer this waies.

Fal. I warrant thee, no-bodie hears: mine owne people, mine owne people.

Quick. Are they so? heauen-bledge them, and make them his servants.

Fal. Well; Mistrefse Ford, what of her?

Quick. Why, Sir; she’s a good-creature; Lord, Lord, your Worship’s a wanton: well: heauen forgive you, and all of vs, I pray.

Quick. Marry this is the short, and the long of it: you have brought her into such a Canarines, as it wonders full: the left Courtier of them all ( when the Court lay at Windsor) could never have brought her to such a Canarie: yet there has beene Knights, and Lords, and Gentlemen, with their Coaches; I warrant you Coach after Coach, letter after letter, gift after gift, smelling so sweeterly; all Muske, and so ruffling, I warrant you, in silke and golde, and in such alligant termes, and in such wine and fuger of the belt, and the fairest, that would have wonne any womans heart: and I warrant you, they could never get an eye-winkle of her: I had my felie twenty Angels given me this morning, but I defte all Angels (in any luch fort, as they say) but in the way of honesty: and I warrant you, they could never get her so much as aippe on a cup with the prowdedf of them all, and yet there has beene Earles: nay, (which is more) Pentioners, but I warrant you all is one with her.

Fal. But what fakes flee to mee? be briefe my good fiee-Mercurius.

Quick. Marry, the hath receu’d your Letter: for the which the thanks you a thousand times; and she gues you to notifie, that her husband will be absence from his house, betweene ten and cleuen.

Fal. Ten, and cleuen.

Quick. I, forfooth: and then you may come and fee the picture (the fayes) that you wot of: Master Ford her husband will be from home: alse, the sweect woman leads an ill life with him: she’s a very leazouie-man: she leads a very frampold life with him, (good hart.)

Fal. Ten, and cleuen.
Woman, commend me to her, I will not fail her.

Fal. Why, you say well: But I have another meennis-gage to your worship: Mirthref Page hath her heartie commendations to you to: and let mee tell you in your care, she's as virtuous a ciuill modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not misfe you morning or euening prayer, as any is in Windjor, who ere bee the other: and shes bade mee tell your worship, that her husband is feldome from home, but the hopes there will come a time.
I never knew a woman so doate upon a man; surely I thinke you have charmes, la: yes in truth.

Fal. Nor I, I affure thee; setting the atraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charmes.

Fal. Bluffing on your heart for't.

Fal. But I pray thee tell me this: has Fords wife, and Page's wife acquainted each other, how they lose me?

Fal. That were a lea'thend: they have not so little grace I hope, that were a tricke indeed: But Miltris Page would deire you to send her your little Page of al loves:
hers husband has a marcellous infelicity to the little Page:
and truely Master Page is an honest man: never a wife in Winderd leads a better life then she do's: doe what thee will, say what she will, take all, pay all, goe to bed when the lift, rife when the lift, all is as the will: and truly she defyrs it; for if there be a kinde woman in Windjor, she is one; you must send her your Page, no remedie.

Fal. Why, I will.

Qu. Nay, but doe so then, and looke you, hee may come and goe betwene you both: and in any cafe have a nay-word, that you may know one anothers minde, and the Boy neuer needs to vnderstand any thing; for
'tis not good that children shoulde know any wickelnes:
old folks you know, have diuerstion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Farethee-well, commend me to them both:
there's my perf, I am yet thy debtor: Boy, goe along with this woman, this newes diuerteth me.

Pst. This Puncke is one of Cupids Carriers,
Clap on more files, pursure: vp with your fights:
Guis fire: she is my prize, or Ocean whelme them all.

Fal. Shift thou so (old Lack) go thy waies: Ite make mores of thy olde body then I have done: will they yet looke after thee? wilt thou after the expence of so much money, be now a gainer? good Body, I thanke thee: let them say'tis grossely done, so it bee fairely done, no matter.

Bar. Sir John, there's one Master Broome below would faine speake with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath lent your worship a mornings draught of Sacke.

Fal. Broome is his name?

Bar. I Sir.

Fal. Call him in: such Broome's are welcome to me, that are'lloues such liquor; ah ha, Mirthref Ford and Mithref Page, haue I encompas'd you? goe to, vila.

Ford. Bleffe you Sir.

Fal. And you Sir: would you speake with me?

Ford. I make bold, to prepare, with so little preparation vpon you.

Fal. You're welcome, what's your will? guie vs leafe Drawer.

Ford. Sir, I am a Gentleman that haue spent much, my name is Broome.

Fal. Good Master Broome, I defire more acquaintance of thee.

Ford. Good Sir John, I fue for yous: not to charge you, for I must let you vnderstand, I think my selfe in better plight for a Lender, then you are: the which hath something embolded me to this vnfeas'nd intrucion:
for they say, if money goo before, all wales doe open your Porters.

Fal. Money is a good Souldier (Sir) and will on.

Ford. Truth, and I have a bag of money heere troubles me; if you will helpes to beare it (Sir Iohn) take all, or halfe, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deferue to bee your Porter.

Fal. I will tell you Sir, if you will gue mee the hearing.

Fal. Speakes (good Master Broome) I shall be glad to be your Servant.

Ford. Sir, I heare you are a Scholler: (I will be brieft with you) and you have been a man long knowne to me, thoough I had never so good means as deire, to make my selfe acquainted with you. I shall discouer a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine owne imperfections but (good Sir Iohn) as you have one eye up my foffies, as you heare them vndfoled, turne another into the Register of your owne, that I may paffe with a reprofe the eafer, fith you your felse know how easy it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well Sir, proceed.

Ford. There is a Gentlewoman in this Towne, her husbands name is Ford.

Fal. Well Sir.

Ford. I have long lou'd her, and I protest to you, belowe much on her : followed her with a dafting observance; Ingrofd'opporunities to meete her: fee'd every flight occasion that could but nigardly glue mee fight of her: not only bought many presents to give her, but haue gien largely to many, to know what thee would have gien: briefly, I haue purf'd her, as Looe haft purf'd mee, which hath beepe on the wing of all occasions: but whatsoever I have merited, either in my minde, or in my measnes, meede I am sure I haue receeved none, vnleffe Experience be a lawwell, that I haue purcha-seed at an infinite rate, and that hath taught mee to say this,

"Love like a fading flower, when yealous enmity is gone,
"Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues."

Fal. Haue you receu'd no promife of Satisfaclion at hers hands?

Ford. Neuer.

Fal. Have you importun'd her to such a purpose ?

Ford. Neuer.

Fal. Of what qualitie was your loue then?

Ford. Like a fair house, built on another mans ground, so that I haue loft my edifice, by mislakening the place, where I ered it.

Fal. To what purpose haue you vnfoold this to me ?

For. When I haue told you that, I haue told you all:
Some say, that though she appear honest to mee, yet in other places shee enlargeth her mirth so farre, that there is shrewd construction made of her.
Now (Sir Iohn) here is the heart of my purpose: you are a gentleman of excellenct breeding, admirable discourse, of great admis-
tance, authentick in your place and person, generally allow'd for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O Sir.

Ford. Believe it, for you know it: there is money, spend it, spend it, spend more; spend all I haue, only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable fleece to the honesty of this Fords wife: vfe your Art of wooing; win her to consent to you: if any man may, you may as loane as any.

Fol. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection that I should win what you would enjoy? Me-thinks you prefixe to your selfe very prettously.

Fords. O, vnderstand my drift: she dwells so securely on the excellency of her honor, that the folly of my soule dares not present it felle: thee is too bright to be look'd against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand; my defires had instande and argument to commend themselves, I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage-vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against me: what say you too? Sir John?

Fol. Master Brome, I will first make bold with your money: next, glue mee your hand: and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Fords wife.

Fords. O good! Fol. I lay you shall.

Fords. Want no money (Sir John) you shall want none.

Fol. Want no Mifrife Fords (Master Brome) you shall want none: I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her owne appointment, even as you came in to me, her affi- dant, or goe-betweene, parted from me: I lay I shall be with her betwene ten and eleuen: for at that time the leal/us-racally-knau he husband will be forth: come you to me at night, you shall know how I speed.

Fords. I am blest in your acquaintance: do you know Fords Sir?

Fol. Hang him (poore Cuckoldly knau) I know him not: yet I wrong him to call him poore: They fay the lealous wittily-knau hath maffes of money, for the which his wife fiercem to me well-fauourd: I will vfe her as the key of the Cuckoldly-rogues Coffe, & ther's my harrett-home.

Fords. I would you knew Fords, fir, that you might a-void him, if you saw him.

Fol. Hang him, mechanick-falt-butter rogue, I will scare him out of his wits: I will awe-him with my cud- gell: it shall hang like a Miter ore the Cuckolds horns: Master Brome, thou shalt know, I will predominate o- ver the peazant, and thou shalt lye with his wife. Come to me foone at night: Fords a knau, and I will aggrate his filie: thou (Master Brome) shalt know him for knau, and Cuckold. Come to me foone at night.

Fol. What a damnd Epicurián-Racall is this? my heart is ready to cracke with impatience: who faies this is imprudent lealoufie? my wife hath fent to him, the hower is fift, the match is made : would any man haue thought this? the hell of hauing a felle woman: my bed shall be abus'd, my Coffers ranfack'd, my reputa- tion gnawne at, and I shall not onely vbeleive this villainous wrong, but fland vnder the adoption of abominable termes, and by him that does mee this wrong: Termes, names: Anamihus founds well & Lucifer, weill: Barbosan, weill: yet they are Divils additions, the names of fiends: But Cuckold, Wittoill, Cuckold? the Duell himselfe hath not fuch a name. Page is an Affe, a secre Affe; hee will trufl his wife, hee will not be lealou: I will rather trufl a Flamintg with my butte, Parfon Hugo the Wilfi- man with my Cheefe, an Iryf-man with my Aqua-vite- bottle, or a Theeare to walke my ambling gelding, then my wife with her felene. Thee then plots, then thee rumi-uates, then thee deulles: and what they thinke in their hearts they may effect: they will breake their hearts but they will effect. Heauen bee praisd for my lealoufe: eleuen o clocke the hower, I will preuent this, detect my wife, bee resweng'd on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it, better three hours too loone, then a my- nute too late: fie, fie, fie: Cuckold, Cuckold, Cuckold.

Evanus. Got's-will, and his paflion of my heart: I had as lief you would tell me of a meffe of porridge.

Page. Why?

Evanus. He has no more knowledge in Hiberocrates and Galen, and hee is a knawe besides: a cowardly knawe, as you would defires to be acquatuated withall.

Page. I warrant you, hee's the man should fight with him.

Shal. O sweet Anne Page.

Shal. It appears fo by his weapons: keep them a-funder: here comes Doctor Caius.

Stat. I. dat is very good, excellant.

Hist. Peace, I pray you, beare mine Hoft of the Garter, Am I politick? Am I fubtle? Am I a Machiuel? Shall I loose my Doctor? No, hee gives me the Potions and the Motions. Shall I loose my Parfon? My Priest? my Sir Hug? No, hee gives me the Proverbs, and the No-verbs. Glue me thy hand (Celestial!) fo : Boyes of Art, I have decel! you both : I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skinnnes are whole, and let burn'd Sacke be the issue! Come, lay their swords to pawn: Follow me, Dad of peace, follow, follow.

Stat. Trust me, a mad Hoft : follow Gentlemen, low.

Slen. O sweet Anne Page.

Stat. Ha! do I perceive dat? Have you make a de-fot of vs, ha, ha?

This is well, he has made vs his vlowning-dog: I desire you that we may be friends : and let vs knog our praines together to be reuenge on this fame scall-curuy-copping-companion the Hoft of the Garter.

Stat. By gar, with all my heart: he promise to bring me where is Anne Page; by gar he decease me too.

Euan. Well, I will minute his noddles: pray you follow.

Scene Secunda.

Mift. Page. Way keepe your way (little Gallant) you wont be a to a follower, but now you are a Leader: whether you had rather lead mine eyes, or eye your matters heele.

Rob. I had rather (forsooth) go before you like a man, then follow him like a dwarfe. (Courtier.

M.P. O you are a flattering boy, now I see you'll be a Ford.Well met misfit Page, whether go you.

M.Pa. Truly Sir, to see your wife, is she at home?

Ford. I, and as idle as she may hang together for want of company: I thinkse if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

M.Pa. Be sure of that, two other husbands.

Wode. Where had you this pretty weather-cocke?

M.P. I cannot tell what (the dicken) his name is my husband had him of, what do you call your Knights name Rob.Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff. (sirrah)

Ford. Sir John Falstaff.

M.Pa. He,he,he, I can never hit on's name; there is such a league betweene my goodman, and he is your Wife at Ford. Indeed she is. (home indeed?)

M.Pa. By your leave Sir, I am sickle till I see her.

Ford.Has any Page any braines? Hath he any eyes? Hath he any thinking? Sure they sleep, he hath no wife of them: why this boy will carry a letter twenty mile as easy, as a Canon will shoot point-blanke twelue score: hee pieces out his wiles inclination: he gives her folly motion and advantage: and now she's going to my wife, & Falstaff boy with her: A man may heare this showe frang in the winde; & Falstaff: boy with her: good plots, they are laide, and our resolted wises share damnation together. Well, I will take him, then torture my wife,pluck the borrowed vaile of modestie from the fo-leeing Mift.Pags, divulge Page himselfe for a secure and wiffull Altem, and to these violent proceedings all my neighbors shall cry aime. The clocke gives me my Que, and my assurance bids me search, there I shall finde Falstaff: I shall be rather praid for this, then mock'd, for it is as poffitive, as the earth is firme, that Falstaff is there: I will go.

Ford. Trust me, a good knotte; I have good cheere at home, and I pray you all go with me.

Stat. I must excuse my selfe Mr. Ford.

Slen. And fo must I Sir. We have appointe to dine with Miftis Anne, and I would not breake with her for more mony Then Ie speake of.

Stat. We have linger'd about a match betweene An Page, and my cozenn Slander, and this day we'll have our answer.

Slen. I hope I have your good will Father Page.

Page. You have Mr. Slander, I stand wholly for you, But my wife (Mr. Doctor) is for you altogether.

Stat. I bs-gar, and de Maid is loue-a-me: my nurh-a-quickly tell me to mutf.

Page. What say you to young Mr Fenton? He capers, he dances, he has eies of youth : he writes verifes, he speakes holiday, he smels April and May, he wil carry't, he will carry't, his in buttons, he will carry't.

Page. Not by my constent I promise you. The Gentleman is of no having, hee kept companie with the wilde Prince, and Paints: he is of too high a Region, he knows too much: no, hee shall not knitt a knot in his fatunes, with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simplly: the wealth I haue waits on my constent, and my constent goes not that way.

Ford. I beleth you heartily, some of you goe home with me to dinner: besides your cheere you shall haue sport, I will shew you a monster: Mr Doctor, you shall go, shall you Mr Page, and you Sir Hugh.

Stat. Well, fare you well:

We shall have the treer waing at Mr Page. Caius. Go home John Rugby, I come anon.

Hlst. Farewell my hearts, I will to my honest Knight Falstaffe, and drinkke Canarie with him.

Ford. I thinke I shall drinkke in Pipe-wine first with him. Ile make him dance. Will you go, Gentles?

All. Have with you, to see this Monster.

Scene Tertia.

Enter Mr. Ford, M. Page, Servants, Robin, Falstaffe, Ford, Page, Caio, Euan.

M. Page. Quickly, quickly: Is the Buck-basket—

M. Page. Come, come, come.

M. Ford. Here, let it down.

M. Page. Give your men the charge, we must be briefe.

M. Ford. Marrie, as I told you before (Iohn & Robert) be ready here hard by in the Brew-house, & when I doainly call you, come forth, and (without any pause, or flattering) take this basket on your shoulders: y done, trudge with it in all haft, and carry it among the Whistlers in Doticke Mead, and there empty it in the muddle ditch, close by the Thames side.

M. Page. You will do it? (direction.

M. Ford. I ha told them ouer and ouer, they lacke no E
Be gone, and come when you are call'd.

M. Page. Here comes little Robin. (with you?)

M. Fford. How now my Eyes-Musket, what news

Rob. My M. Sir John is come in at your backe doore

(M. Fford, and requites your company.)

M. Page. You little Jack-a-lent, have you bin true to vs

Rob. I, Ile be sworne: my Master knowes not of your being here; and hath threatened to put me evera-ling libertie, if I tell you of it: for he sweares he'll turne me away.

M. Page. Thou'rt a good boy: this secrecy of thine shall be a Tailor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and hose. Ile go hide me.

M. Fford. I warrant thee, if I do not as it, hide me.

M. Fford. Go too: then: we'll vie this wawholome humidity, this groffe-watry Pampion; we'll teach him to know Turtles from Iyes.

Fal. Have I caught thee, my heavenly Jewell? Why now let me die, for I have li'd long enough: This is the period of my ambition: O this blessed house.

M. Fford. O sweet Sir Iohn.

M. Fford. I cannot cog, I cannot prate (Mift. Ford) now shall I fin in my wil; I would thy Husband were dead, Ile speake before the beft Lord, I would make thee my Lady.

M. Fford. I your Lady Sir Iohn? Alas, I should see a pitfull lady.

Fal. Let the Court of France shew me such another: I see how thine eye would emulate the Diamond: Thou haft the right arched-beauty of the brow, that becomes the Ship-tyre, the Tyre-valiant, or any Tire of Venetian admittance.

M. Fford. A plain Kerchief, Sir Iohn:

My browes become nothing else, nor that noether.

Fal. Thou art a tyrant to say fo: thou wouldst make an absolute Courtier, and the firme fixture of thy footes, would give an excellent motion to thy gate, in a semi-circled Farthingale. I see what thou were: if Fortune thy foe, were not Nature thy friend: Come, thou canst not hide it.

M. Fford. Believe me, ther's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me louse thee? Let that periwade thee. There's something extraordinary in thee: Come, I cannot cog, and say thou art this and that, like a manie of these lifesiping-hauhorne budes, that come like women in mens appariell, and smelle like Bucklers-berry in simple time: I cannot, but I love thee, none but thee; and thou defirit it.

M. Fford. Do not betray me sir, I fear you louse M. Page.

Fal. Thou mightst as well say, I love to walke by the Counter-gate, which is as hateful to me, as the reeke of a Lime-kill.

M. Fford. Well, heauen knowes how I love you,

And you shall one day finde it.

Fal. Keepen in that minde, Ile deferue it.

M. Fford. Nay, I must tell you, so you doe; Or else I could not be in that minde.

Rob. Miftirs Ford, Miftirs Ford: heere's Miftirs Page at the doore, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speake with you presently.

Fal. She shal not see me, I will enconce mee behind the Arras.

M. Fford. Pray you do so, she's a very tattling woman.

What's the matter? How now?

M. Page. O miftirs Ford what hau ye done?

You'r sham'd, y'are outwerned, y'are vndone for euver.

M. Fford. What's the matter,good miftirs Page?

M. Page. O weday, mift. Fford, hauing an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of fulpition.

M. Fford. What cause of fulpition?

M. Page. What cause of fulpition? Out vpoun you:

How am I mittooke in you?

M. Fford. Why (ala) what's the matter?

M. Page. Your husband's comming hether (Woman) with all the Officers in Windsor, to search for a Gentleman, that he layes is here now in the house; by your content to take an ill advantage of his absence: you are vndone.

M. Fford. 'Tis not so, I hope.

M. Page. Pray heauen it be not so, that you have such a man here: but 'tis most certaine your husband's com-mimg, with halfe Windsor at his heels, to fetch for such a one, I came before to tell you: If you know your selfe clerke, why I am glad of it: but if you have a friend here, conuey, conuey him out. Be not amaz'd, call all your fenes to you, defend your reputation, or bid farwell to your good life for euver.

M. Fford. What shall I do? There is a Gentleman my deere friend: and I feare not mine owne Shame so much, as his perill. I had rather then a thousand pound he were out of the house.

M. Fford. For shame, neuer stand (you had rather, and you had rather:) your husband's heare at hand, bethink me you come conuencie in the house you cannot hide him. Oh, how haue you decici'd me? Look, heere is a basket, if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creepe in heere, and throw foulie linnen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: Or it is whiting time, fend him by your two men to Datchet-Made.

M. Page. What Sir Iohn Fairfax? Are thefe your Letters, Knight?

Fal. I loue thee, helpe mee away: let me crepe in heere: Ile neuere——

M. Page. Helpe to cover your matter (Boy:) Call your men (Mift. Fford.) You dillenfing Knight.

M. Fford. What Iohn, Robert, Iohn; Go, take vp thyse cloathes heere, quickly: Wher's the Cowle-baffe? Look how you drumbledore? Carry them to the Landreff in Datchet mead: quickly, come.

Fal. 'Pray you come here: if I suspex without cause, Why then make spott at me, then let me be your left, I defeire it: How now? Whether heare you this?

Ser. To the Landreff fortooth?

M. Fford. Why, what hau ye to doe whether they beare it? You were bitt meddle with buck-washing.

Gentlemen, I have dreamd to night, Ile tell you my dreame: heere, heere, heere mee my keyes, ascend my Chambers, search, seekes, finde out: Ile warrant wee'le vankennell the Fox. Let me flot this way firft: fo now vacape.

Page. Good matter Fford, be contented:

You wrong your felpe too much.

Fird. True (mather Page) vp Gentlemen, You shall fee spott anon:
Follow me Gentlemen.

_Exeunt._ This is a very fantastic humors and jealousies.

_Caius._ By gar, 'tis no the fashion of France:
It is not jealous in France.

_Page._ Nay follow him (Gentlemen) to the yew of his church.

_Mist. Page._ Is there not a double excellency in this?

_Mist. Ford._ I know not which pleaseth me better,
That his husband is deceased, or Sir John.

_Page._ What a taking was hee in, when your husband ake as he was in the basket?

_Mist. Ford._ I am halfe afraid he will have neede of washing: so throwing him into the water, will doe him a benefit.

_Mist. Page._ Hang him dishonest rascall: I would all of the same drunke, were in the same dittresse.

_Page._ I think my husband hath some special fulmination of Falstaff being here: for I never saw him so grope in his insolence till now.

_Page._ I will lay a plot to try that, and wee will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his diffolute dittresse will teach others the like.

_Mist. Ford._ Shall we send that foolish Carion, Mist.
Quickly to him, and excuse his throwing into the water,
and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment.

_Page._ We will do it: let him be sent for to morrow eight a clocke to have amends.

_Ford._ I cannot finde him: may be the knave bragged of that he could not compasse.

_Page._ Heard you that?

_Mist. Ford._ You wish me well, M. Ford? Do you?

_Page._ I do so.

_Mist. Ford._ Heauen make you then better thoughts.

_Amen._

_Page._ You do your selfe mighty wrong (M. Ford)

_Page._ I, I must bear it.

_Exeunt._ If there be any body in the house, & in the chambers, and in the coffee, and in the preffes: heaven forgoe
my fins at the day of judgement.

_Caius._ Be gar, nor I too: there is no-body.

_Page._ Ty, ty, M. Ford, are you not afraid? What spirit, what dull wits Fords this imagination? I would not ha your disfemper in this kind, for ye wealth of Windsor castle.

_Ford._ 'Tis my fault (M. Page) I suffer for it.

_Exeunt._ You suffer for a sad confidence: your wife is as honest a o'mans, as I will define among fiew thousand, and fiew hundred too.

_Page._ By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

_Ford._ Well, I promisfe you a dinner: come, come, walk in the Parkes, I pray you pardon me: I will hereafter make knowne to you why I have done this. Come wife, come _Miss. Page_, I pray you pardon me. Pray heartily pardon me.

_Page._ Let's go in Gentlemen, but (truth me) we'll mock him: I will invite you to morrow morining to my house to breakfast: after we'll a Birding together, I have a fine Hawk up the bough. Shall it be so?

_Ford._ Any thing.

_Page._ If there is one, I shall make two in the Company or if he be one, or two, I shall make the third.

_Ford._ Pray you go, M. Page.

_Page._ I pray you now remember to morrow on the lowlie knaue, mine Hoft.

_Caius._ Dat is good by gar, withall my heart.

_Page._ A lowlie knaue, to have his gibes, and his mockeries.

_Exeunt._

Scena Quarta.

_Enter Fenton, Anne, Page, Shallow, Slender._

_Ford._ I see I cannot get thy Fathers loue,
Therefore no more turne me to him (sweet Nan.)

_Anne._ Alas, how then?

_Ford._ Why thou must be thy selfe,
He doth obied, I am too great of birth,
And that my flate being gall'd with my expence,
I feake to heal it onely by his wealth.

_Besides thefe, other barres he lays before me,
My Rints pait, my wild Societies,
And tells me 'tis a thing impossible
I should loue thee, but as a property.

_Ann._ May he be he tells you true.

_No, heaven so sped me in my time to come,
Albeit I will confesse, thy Fathers wealth
Was the firft motive that I cou'd thee (Anne)!

_Yet woon thee, I found thee of more valew
Then ftones in Gold, or fummes in fealed bagges:
And 'tis the very riches of thy felfe,
That now I syne at.

_Ann._ Gentle M. Fenton,
Yet feke my Fathers loue, till feke it fir,
If opportunity and humble fuit
Cannot attaine it, why then harke you hither.

_Shallow._ Break their tattle Miftris Quickly,

(An. No, the shall not dismay me:
I care not for that, but that I am affaid.

_Richard._ Ha! M. Slender would speake a word with you

_Anne._ I come to him. This is my Fathers choice:
O what a world of vilde ill-favour'd faults
Lookes handsome in three hundred pounds a yere?

_Qui._ And how do's good Mafter Fenton?

_Pray you a word with you,

_Shallow._ She's comming, to her Cos:
O boy, thou haft a father.

_Shallow._ I had a father (M. Anne) my vncle can tel you good my Father trow two Goofe out of a Pen, good Vncle.

_Mistris Anne_, my Coastal loues you.

_Shallow._ I that I do, as well as I love any woman in Clocypershire.

_Shallow._ He will maintaine you like a Gentlenaw.

_Slender._ I that I will, come cut and long-tailed, under the degree of a Squire.

_Shallow._ He will make you a hundred and fiftie pounds joyynure.

_Anne._ Good Mafter Shallow let him woo for himselfe.

_Slender._ Marrie I thanke you for it: I thank you for that good comfort: the cats you (Cos) I lea you.

_Anne._ Now Mafter Shallow.

_Slender._ Now good Mistris Anne.

_Anne._ What is your will?

_Slender._ My hill? Oddis hart-linghs, that's a prettie uen) I am not such a fickely creature, I give Heauen praise.

_E 2._
Ann. I mean (M. Slender) what will you with me?

Stn. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you: your father and my uncle hath made motions: if it be my lucke, so; if not, happy man bee his doile, they can tell you how things go, better then I can: you may ask your father, there he comes.

Page. Now M. Slender; Loue him daughter Anne.

Why how now? What does M. Fenton here?

You wrong me Sir, thus fill to haunt my house.

I told you Sir, my daughter is dipos'd of.

Fen. Nay Mr Page, be not impatient.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fen. Sir, will you heare me?

Page. No, good M. Fenton.

Come M. Shallow: Come yonne Slender in;

Knowing my mistake you wrong me (M. Fenton)

Qu. Speak to Miftris Page.

Fen. Good Mift. Page, for that I love your daughter

In such a righteous fashion as I do,

Perforce, against all checkes, rebukes, and manners,

I must advance the colours of my love,

And must not be carried in a good will.

An. Good mother, do not marry me to yond foole.

Mifp. Page. I mean it not, I feeke you a better husband.

Qu. That's my master, M. Doctor.

An. Alas I had rather be set quick i'th earth,

And how'd to death with Turnips.

Mifp. Page. Come, trouble not your selfe good M. Fenton,

I will not be your friend, nor enemy:

My daughter will I question how she loves you,

And as I finde her, so am I affected:

Till then, farewell Sir, she muft needs go in,

Her father will be angry.

Qu. This is my doing now: Nay, faie I, when you call away your childe on a Foole, and a Phyffian:

Looke on M. Fenton, this is my doing.

Fen. I thankbe thee: and I pray thee once to night,

Give my sweet Nan this Ring: there's for thy pains.

Qu. Now heauen fend thee good fortune, a kinde heart he hath: a woman would run through fire & water for such a kinde heart. But yet, I would my Mafler had Miftris Anne, or I would M. Slender had her: or (in loth) I would M. Fenton had her; I will do what I can for them all three, for so I have promis'd, and Ile bee as good as my word, but speciously for M. Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir Iohn Falstaffe from my two Miftrises: what a beast am I to slacke it.

Fal. Bardolph I say.

Bar. Heere Sir.

Fal. Go, fetch me a quart of Sacke, put a toft in't.

Hauve I lu'd to be carried in a Basket like a barrow of butchers Offall? and to be throwne in the Thames? Wel, if I be furn'd such another tricke, Ile haue my brains 'tane out and butter'd, and glue them to a dogge for a New-yeares gift. The rogues flighted me into the riever with as little remorfe, as they would have drown'd a

I had beene drownd'p, but that the shore was fleuy and shallow: a death that I abhorre: for the water fweles a man; and what a thing should I laue bene, when I had bene i'wel'd? I should have bene a Mountaine of Mummie.

Bar. Here's M. Quickly Sir to speake with you.

Fal. Come, let me poure in some Sacke to the Thames water: for my bellies as cold as if I had swallow'd fnow-hal's, for pilles to coole the reines. Call her in,

Bar. Come in woman.

Qu. By your leaue: I cry you mercy?

Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Take away thef Challices:

Fal. So did I mine, to build vpon a foolish Womans Qu. Well, he lauets Sir for it, that it would yern your heart to fee it; her husband goes this morning a birding; she defires you once more to come to her, between eight and nine: I must carry her word quickly, she'll make you amends I warrant you.

Oh, heere be comes.

Ford. Bleeve you Sir.

Fal. Now M. Broome, you come to know

What hath paft betweene me, and Fords wife.

Ford. That indeed (Sir John) is my busineffe,

Ford. And sped you Sir?

Fal. very ill favouredly M. Broome.

Ford. How fo fir, did the change her determination?

Qu. No (M. Broome) but the peaking Curnuto her huf- band (M. Broome) dwelling in a continual laurum of felou- sie, coms me in the infant of our encounter; after we had embrac'd, kil'd, proufected, &c (as it were) broke the prologue of our Comedy: and at his heels, a rabble of his companions, chifter prouoked and inflagited by his diltemp'r, and (forthof) to fetch his houle for his wifes Loue.

Ford. What? While you were there?

Fal. While I was there.

Qu. And did he search for you, & could not find you?

Fal. You shall heare. As good lucke would have it, comes in one Mifp. Page, glues intelligence of Fords approch: and in her invention, and Fords wiles disfuration, they couney'd me into a bucke-basket.
Ford. A Buck-basket?

Fol. Yes; a Buck-basket: ram'd mee in with foule Shirts and Smocks, Socks, foule Stockings, greatie Napkins, that (Master Bromes) there was the ranked compound of villous smell, that ever offended no-

Ford. And how long lay you there?

My Fate then is desperate: You'll undertake no more?

The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Fal. Mist. Ford. Your favour hath eaten vp my suffrance; I fee you are obsequious in your looks, and I professe requital to a haires breadth, not onely Mist. Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it: But are you sure of your husband now?

Mist. Ford. He's a birding (sweet Sir John.)

Mist. Page. How now (sweete heart) whose at home besides your felte?

Mist. Page. Indeed?

Mist. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have no body here.

Mist. Ford. Why?

Mist. Page. Why woman, your husband is in his olde lines againe: he do taketh on yonder with his husband, so railes against all married mankind: so curseth all ever daughters, of what complexion soever; and but suffeteth himselfe on the for-head: crying peere-out, peere-out, that my madneffe I ever yet beheld, seem'd but tame, calmyr, and patience to this his disemer he in now: I am glad the fat Knight is not heere.

Mist. Ford. Why, do's he talk of him?

Mist. Page. Of none but him, and sweares he was caried out the last time hee search'd for him, in a Basket: Protesteth to his husband he is now heere, & hath drawne him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his fution: But I am glad the Knight is not heere; now he shall see his owne foolerie.

Mist. Ford. How neere is he Mistris Page?

Mist. Page. Hard by, at freeet end; he will be here anon.

Mist. Ford. I am undone, the Knight is heere.

Mist. Page. Why then you are vitrally sham'd, & hee's but a dead man. What a woman are you? Away with him, away with him: Better blame, then murther.

Mist. Ford. Which way should he go? How should I behoove him? Shall I put him into the basket againe?

Fal. No, Ile come no more I' th' Basket: May I not go out ere he come?

Mist. Page. Alas: three of Mr. Forde's brothers watch the doore with Pilots, that none shall ilufe out: other-wise you might flip away ere he came: But what make you heere?

Fal. What shall I do? Ile crepe vp into the chimney.

Mist. Ford. There they alwayes vfe to discharge their Birding-peeces: crepe into the Kill-hole.

Fal. There is it?

Mist. Ford. He will seeke there on my word: Neyther Prefs, Coffer, Cheek, Trunk, Well, Vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his Note: There is no hiding you in the howle.

Fal. Ie go out then.

Mist. Ford. If you goe out in your owne feomblance, you die Sir John, vnleeve you go out digestion'd.

Mist. Ford. How might we disguife him?

Mist. Page. Alas the day I know not, there is no woman gove bigge enough for him: otherwise he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, deuise something: any extremite, rather then a muffiere.

Mist. Ford. My Mais Aunt the fat woman of Brainford, has a gowne above.

Mist. Page. On my word it will ferue him: she's as big as he is, and there's her thrum'd hat, and her muffler too: run vp Sir John.

Mist. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John: Mistris Page and I will looke some linnen for your head.

Mist. Page. Quecke, quicke, we'le come dresse you outright: put on the gowne the while.

Mist. Ford. I would my husband would meete him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brainford; he sweares she's a witch, forbade her my howse, and hath threatned to beate her.

Mist. Ford. But is my husband comming?

Mist. Page. I in good faineffe is he, and talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mist. Ford. We'le try that: for Ie appoint my men to carry the basket againe, to meete him at the doore with it, as they did lat time.

Mist. Page. Nay, but he'll be heere prefently: let's go dresse him like the witch of Brainford.

Mist. Ford. Ile first dircet direct my men, what they shall doe with the basket: Goe vp, Ile bring linnen for him fraught.

Mist. Page. Hang him dihonest Varlet, We cannot misufe enough: We'll leave a proove by that which we will doo, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too: We do not alke that often, left, and laugh; 'Ths old, but true, Still Swine eats all the draugh.

Mist. Ford. Go Sirs, take the basket againe on your shoulders: your Master is hard at doore: if hee bid you let it downe, obey him: quickly, dispatch.

1 Sir. Come, come, take it vp.

2 Sir. Pray heaven he be not full of Knight againe.

1 Sir. I hope not, I had life as beare so much lead.

Ford. I, but if it prove true (Mist. Page) have you any way then to vnfoole me againe. Set downe the basket villains: some body call my wife: Youth in a basket: Oh you Panderly Rascals, there's a knot: a gin, a packe, a conspiracie against me: Now shall the dice be shamm'd. What wife I say: Come, come forth: behold what ho-
Exeunt. By yes, and no, I think the o' man is a witch indeed: I like not when a o' man has a great beard; I tie a great beard under his muffer.

Ford. Will you follow Gentlemen, I beseech you follow: see but the issue of my jealousy; If I cry out thus upon no tralls, neuer trust me if I open again.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further: Come Gentlemen.

Mist. Page. Truest me he beate him moth pitifully.

Mist. Ford. Nay by th'Maffe that he did not: he beate him moth vnpitifully, me thought.

Mist. Page. Ile haue the coddelg hallow'd, and hung o're the Altar, it hath done meritorious seruice.

Mist. Ford. What thinke you? May we with the warrant of woman-hood, and the-wimfel of a good con- science, pursue him with any further reuenge?

M. Page. The spirit of wantonness is sure far'd out of him, if the duell haue him not in fee-fimple, with fine and recovery, he will never (I think) in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mist. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how wee haue feru'd him.

Mist. Page. Yes, by all means: if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husbands brains: if they can find in their hearts, the poore vnæstious Fat Knight shall be any further afflict'd, wee two will still bee the minif- ters.

Mist. Ford. Ile haue them, they have him publiquely sham'd, and me thinke there would be no period to the left, should he not be publiquely sham'd.

Mist. Page. Come, to the Forge with it, then shape it: I would not haue things coole.

Bar. Sir, the Germane desires to have three of your horses: the Duke himselfe will be to morrow at Court, and they are going to meet him.

Hoft. What Duke shoudl that be comes so secretely? I here not of him in the Court: let mee speake with the Gentlemen, they speake English?

Bar. I Sir? Ile call him to you.

Hoft. They shall have my horses, but Ile make them pay: Ile fuece them, they have had my horses a week at command: I haue turn'd away my other gueffes, they must come off, Ile fuece them, come.

Enter Page, Ford, Mistis Page, oMisris Ford, and Exants.

Eua. 'Tis one of the best directions of a o'man as ouser I did looke upon.

Page. And did he send you both these Letters at an instant?

Mist. Page. VWithin a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me (wife) henceforth do what y wilt: I rather will suspect the Sunne with gold, Then thee with wantonnes: Now doth thy honor stand (In
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

(In him that was of late an Herēūke) As firme as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well, no more: Be not as extreme in submision, as in offence, But let our plot go forward: Let our wisers Yet once again (to make vs publike sport) Appoint a meeting with this old fat-fellow, Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way then that they spoke of.

Page. How to send him word they'll meet him in the Parke at midnight? Fri, fie, he'll never come.

Eu. You say he has bin throwne in the Rivers: and has bin grieviously peaten, as an old o'man: me-thinks there should be terrors in him, that he should not come: Me-thinks his flesh is punished, he shall have no de-

Page. So think I too.

M. Ford. Deuise but how you'll vse him whē he comes, And let vs two deuise to bring him thether.

Mf. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the Hunter (sometyme a keeper here in Windsor Forrest) Doth all the winter time, at still midnight Walk round about an Oake, with great rag'd-hornes, And there he blafs the tree, and takes the cattle, And make milch-kine yeeld blood, and fishes a chaine In a moft hideous and dreadfull manner. You have heard of such a Spirit, and well you know The superflitious idle-headed-Elid Receiv'd, and did deliever to our age

This tale of Herne the Hunter, for a truth.

Page. Why yet there want not many that do feare In deede of night to walke by this Herne's Oake: But what of this?

Mf. Ford. Marry this is our deuise, That Falstaff at that Oake shall meete with vs.

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come, And in this flabe, when you have brought him thether, What shal be done with him? What is your plot?

Mf. Page. That like-wise hau'e we thought vp: & there: Nan Page (my daughter) and my little Jonne, And three or foure more of their growth, we'll dreffe Like Vrchns, Ouphes, and Fairies, greene and white, With round of waxen Tapers on their heads, And rattles in their hands; vp on a fadaine, As Falstaffe, she, and I, are newly meet, Let them from forth a fawt-pit roufs at once With some diffused song: Vpon their fight We two, in great amaseednefe will dye: Then let them all enquire him about, And Feaib-like to pinch the vnclene Knight; And make him know that houre of Fairy Reuel, In their for faced pathes, he dares to tread In flabe prophanne.

Ford. And till he tell the truth, Let the supped Fairies pinch him, found, And burne him with their Tapers.

Mf. Page. The truth being knowne, We'll all prefent our felues; dif-horne the spirit, And mocke him home to Windsor.

Ford. The children must Be pračted well to this, or they'll neuer doe't.

Eu. I will teach the children their behauiours: and I will be like a lacke-an-Apes alfo, to burne the Knight with my Taber.

Ford. That will be excellent, Ile go buy them wizardes.

Mf. Page. My Nan shal the Queene of all the Fairies, finely attired in a robe of white.

Page. That filke will I go buy, and in that time Shall M. Slender receaue my Nan away, And marry her at Eaton: go, fend to Falstaffe draught.

Ford. Nay, Ile to him againe in name of Brooke, Hee'll tell me all his purpose: sure hee'l come.

Mf. Page. Fear not you that: Go get vs properties And trickling for our Fairies.

Eunus. Let vs about it.

It is admirable pleasures, and merry honest knaueries.

Send quickly to Sir John, to know his minde: Ile to the Doctor, he hath my good will, And none but he to marry with Nan Page.

That Slender (though well landed) is an Idiot: And he, my husband best of all affects: The Doctor is well monied, and his friends Potent at Courte: he, none but he shall have her, Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Hoft, Simple, Falstaffe, Bardolf, Eunus, Caius, Quickly.

Simp. Marry Sir, I come to speake with Sir John Fal-staffe from M. Slender.

Hoft. There's his Chamber, his Houfe, his Cattle, his flanding-bed and trucckle-bed: 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigall, fresh and new: go, knock and call: here's speake like an Anthropophagian unto thee: Knocke I say.

Simp. There's an olde woman, a fat woman gone vp into his chamber: Ile be fo bold as fay Sir till she come downe: I come to speake with her indeed.

Ful. How now, mine Hoft?

Hoft. There's his (mine Hoft) an old-fat-woman even now with me, but she's gone.

Simp. Pray you Sir, was not the Wife-woman of Beatneford?

Ful. I marry was it (Mufel-shell) what would you with her?

Simp. My Mafter (Sir) my mafter Slender, fent to her seeing her go thorou the streets, to know (Sir) whethere one Nim (Sir) that beguil'd him of a chaine, had the chaine, or no.

Ful. I speake with the old woman about it.

Sim. And what fayes she, I pray Sir?

Ful. Marry shee fayes, that the very fame man that beguil'd Mafter Slender of his Chaine, corond him of it.

Simp. I would I could haue spoken with the Woman her her selfe, I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.
Fal. I may not conceal them. (Sir.)
Hoft. Conceale them, or thou diest.
Sim. Why sir, they were nothing but about Misfris Anne Pages, to know if it were my Mafter fortune to have her, or no.
Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.
Sim. What Sir?
Fal. To have her, or no: goe; say the woman told me so.
Sim. May I be bold to say so Sir?
Fal. I Sir: like who more bold.
Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my Mafter glad with these tydings.
Hoft. Thou are clearly: thou art clearly (Sir John) was there a wife woman with thee?
Fal. I that there was mine (Hoft) one that hath taught me more wit, then ever I learn'd before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.
Bar. Out alas (Sir) cozonage: meere cozonage.
Hoft. Where be your horse? speake well of them varietto.
Bar. Run away with the cosonars; for so soon as I came beyond Eaton, they threw me off, from behinde one of them, in a slough of myre; and set furres, and away; like three Germanus-dielus; three Doctor Faus-flags.
Hoft. They are gone but to meete the Duke (villain), doe not say they be fied: Germanes are honest men.
Euan. Where is mine Hoft?
Euan. What is the matter Sir?
Euan. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to Towne, tells mee there is three Cozen-Iermans, that has cosend all the Hofts of Readins, of Maidemhed; of Cole-broke, of horse, and money: I tell you for good will (looke you) you are wife, and full of gibes, and vlouting-focks: and 'tis not convenient you should be cosonazed. Fare you well.
Cat. Ver's mine Hoft de fortore?
Hoft. Here (Master Doctor) in perplextie, and doubtfull demeauna.
Cat. I cannot tell vat is dat: but it is tell-a-me, dat you make grand preparation for a Duke de lamanita: by my trut: der is no Duke that the Court is know, to come: I tell you for good will: addes.
Hoft. Huy and cry, (villaines) goe: ashe me Knight, I am vndone: fly, run: huy, and cry (villaines) I am vndone.
Fal. I would all the world might be cozonard, for I have bene cozonad and beaten too: if it should come to the care of the Court, how I have beene transformed; and how my transformation hath bene wathd, and cudgel, they would melt mee out of my fat drop by drop, and Equor Fishermen-boots with me: I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as creft-falne as a dride-peare: I never prosper'd, since I forswore my selfe at Primors: well, if my winde were but long enough; I would repent: Now? Whence come you?
Fal. From the two parties forfooth.
Fal. The Diuell take one partie, and his Dam the other: and so they shall be both bellowed: I have suf-fer'd more for their sakes; more then the villainous in-confacy of mans dispofition is able to beare.
Qgi. And have not they suffer'd? Yes, I warrant; spe-ically one of them; Misfris Ford (good heart) is beaten blacke and blew, that you cannot see a white spot about her.
Fal. What tell'lt thou mee of blacke, and blew? I was beaten my selfe into all the colours of the Raine-
bow: and I was like to be apprehended for the Witch of Drainford, but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman delier'd me, the knaue Conable had set me ith'Stocks, Ith' common Stocks, for a Witch.
Qgi. Sir: let me speake with you in your Chamber, you shall heare how things goe, and (I warrant) to your content: here is a Letter will say somewhat: (good-hearts) what a doe here is to bring you together? Sure, one of you do's not serue heaven well, that you are so croft'd.
Fal. Come vp into my Chamber.

A hundred pound in gold, more then your loffe.
Hoft. I will heare you (Master Fenton) and I will (at the leaf) keepe your counsell.
Fen. From time to time, I have acquainted you
With the deare louse I heare to faire Anne Pages,
Who, mutually, hath answer'd my affection,

Even to my wish; I haue a letter from her
Of such contents, as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof, so larded with my matter,
That neither (singly) can be manifested.
Without the shew of both: fat Falstaff,

Her father hath commanded her to slip
Away with Slender, and with him, at Eaton
Immediately to Marry: She hath confented: Now Sir,
Her Mother, (seen strong against that match
And firme for Doctor Caius) hath appointed
That he shall likewise thuffle her away,
While other sports are tasking of their minde,
And at the Deaury, where a Priest attends Strait marry her: to this her Mothers plot
She feeming obdient) likewise hath Made promis(e to the Doctor: Now, it thus it rests,
Her Father means she shall be all in white;
And in that habite, when Slender les his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her goe,
She shall goe with him: her Mother hath intende

For they must all be mask'd, and visarded)

The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Miff. Page. They are all couch'd in a pit hard by Hernes Oake, with obscur'd Lights; which at the very infant of Falstaffes and our meeting, they will at once display to the light.

Miff. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Miff. Page. How he be not amaze'd he will be mock'd: If he be amaze'd, he will every way be mock'd.

Miff. Ford. We'll betray him finely.

Reply. He provide you a chaine, and Ile do what I can to get you a pair of horses.

Fal. Away I say, time warres, hold vp your head & mine. How now M. Brosrne? Master Brosrne, the matter will be knowne to night, or neuer. Bee you in the Parke about midnight, at Hernes-Oakes, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday (Sir) as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her (Master Brosrne) as you see, like a poore-old-man, but I came from her (Master Brosrne) like a poore-old-woman; that fame knawe (Ford his husband) hath the finest mad dwell of leasoufe in him (Master Brosrne) that ever govern'd Frendie. I will tell you, he beate me greewously, in the shape of a woman: (for in the shape of Man (Master Brosrne) I feare not Goliah with a Weavers beam, because I know also, life is a Shuttle) I am in haft, go along with me, Ile tell you all (Master Brosrne) since I pluckt Geco, plaidie Trevant, and whipt Top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten, till lately. Scena Tertia.

Mifs. Page. Mr Doctor, my daughter is in green, when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the Deanerie, and dispatch it quickly: go before into the Parke: we two must go together.

Caius. I know vat I have to do, adieu.

Mifs. Page. Fare you well (Sir), my husband will not renounce so much at the abuse of Falstaffe, as he will chafe at the Doctors marrying my daughter: But 'tis no matter; better a little chiding, then a great deal of heart-breake.

Mifs. Ford. Where is Nan now? and her troop of Fairies, and the Welch-deuill Ferne?

Mifs. Page. They are all couch'd in a pit hard by Hernes Oake, with obscur'd Lights; which at the very infant of Falstaffes and our meeting, they will at once display to the light.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falstaffe, Miftrin Page, Miftrin Ford, Evans, Anne Page, Fairies, Pages, Ford, Quickly, Slender, Fenton, Caius, Philipp.

Fal. The Windsor-bell hath broke twelve: the Minute draws-on: Now the hot-blooded Gods affit me: Remember loue, thou was't a Bull for thy Europa, Loue set on thy horns. O powerfull Loue, that in some respects makes a Beast a Man: in som other, a Man a beast. You were also (Jupiter) a Swan, for the love of Leda: O omnipotent omnipotent Loue, how nere the God drew to the complextion of a Goofe: a fault done first in the forme of a beast, (O Loue, a beastly fault:) and then another fault, in the semblance of a Fowle, thinkes not (O Loue) a fowl-fault. When Gods have hot backes, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windsor Strege, and the farriest (I thinke) I'th' Forreft. Send me a coole rut-time (Loue) or who can blame me to pisse my Tallow? Who comes here? my Doe?

M. Ford. Sir Isob. Art thou there (my Deere?)

My male-Deere?

Fal. My Doe, with the blacke Scut? Let the sike raines Potatoes: let it thunder, to the tune of Greene-fleeues, halie-kissing Comfits, and fnow Eringoes: Let there come a tempest of provocation, I will shelter me here.

M. Ford. Misris Page is come with me (sweet hart.)

Fal. Divide me like a birt'd-Bucke, each a Haunch: I will keepe my fides to my felie, my shoulders for the fellow of this walke; and my hones I bequeath your husbands. Am I a Woodman, ha? Speake I like Herne the Hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of confidence, hence mak restituation. As I am a true spirit, welcome.

M. Page. Alas, what noize?

M. Ford. Heauen forgivwe our finnes.

Fal. What sholde this be?

Fal. I thinke the diuell will not haue me damned, Leafe the oyle that's in me shoulde set hell on fire; He would never else croffe me thus.

Enter Fairies.

Que. Fairies blake, gray, greene, and white,
You Moomine reseluer, and shades of night.
You Orphan heires of fixed definity,
Attend your office, and your quality.
Crier Hob-goblyn, make the Fairy Oyes.

Pij. Elies, lift your names: Silence you aeryt toyes.
Cricket, to Windsor-chimnies shal loue leape;
Where fires shou'd and that vnadle'd, and earths vnvept,
There pinche the Maids as blew as Bill-berry,
Our radiant Queene, hates Shut, and Sluttery.

Fal. They are Fairies, he that speakes to them shal die,
Ile winke, and coach: No man their worke must ele.

En. Wher's the Bride? Go you, and where you find a maid
That ere the floweres hath thrice her prayers fayd,
Raise vp the Organs of her fantasie,
Sleepes she as sound as carelesse infancy,
But that as sleepe, and thinke not on their fins,
Pinche them armes, legges, backes, shoulders, fides, & thin.

Que. About, about.

Search Windsor Castle (Elues) within, and out.

Strew good lucke (Ouphes) on euery faced roome,
That it may stand till the perpetuall doome,
In fate as wholemake, as in fate 'tis fit,
Worth the Owner, and the Owner it.
The feueraills Chaires of Order, looks you scourwe With lyue of Balme; and euery precious floweres,
Each faire Inflamte, Coate, and feu'ral Cryt,
With loyall Blazon, euermore be blest.
En. Nighty-meadow-Fairies, looke you fing
Like to the Garrer-Campaffe, in a ring,
Th'expreffe that it heares: Greene let it be,
Mote fertile-fresh then all the Field to see:
And, Helen Sies Que Maly-prize, write
In emerald-tuffes, Floweres purple, blew, and white,
Like Saphire-pearle, and rich embroderie,
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brains in the Sun, and dri’d is, that it wants matter to procure so groffie ore-reaching as this? Am I ridlen with a Welch Quate too? Shall I have a Coxcombe of Frieze? Tis time I were chock’d with a piece of toasted Cheefe.

En. Seefe is not good to glue putter; your belly is al putter.

Fal. Seefe, and Putter? Have I liu’d to stand at the taunt of one that makes Fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking through the Realme.

Mrs. Page. Why Sir Iohn, do you thinke though wee would have thrust virtuo out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have guen our selves without scru-ple to hell, that euer the deuill could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? A bag of flax?

Page. Old, cold, wither’d, and of intollerable en-traits?

Ford. And one that is as flanderous as Sathan?

Page. And as poore as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Eun. And guen to Fornications, and to Tauernes, and Sacke, and Wine, and Metheglins, and to drinkings and sweearings, and flarings? Pribles and prables?

Fal. Well, I am your Theme: you hau’e the heart of me, I am delected: I am not able to answer the Welsh Flannell, Ignorance it selfe is a plummet ore me, vie me as you will.

Ford. Marry Sir, weel bring you to Windsor to one Mr. Broome, that you hau’e cozon’d of money, to whom you should hau’e bin a Pander: ouer and aboue that you hau’e suffer’d, I thinke, to repay that money will be a bit ing affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful Knight: thou shalt eat a pot-fet to night at my house, wher I will deuere thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee: Tell her Mr. Slen-dre hath married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. Doctors doubt that;

If Anne Page be my daughter, she is (by this) Doctor Caius wife.

Slen. Whoa hoe, hoe, Father Page.

Page. Sonne? How now? How now Sonne, Have you dispatch’d?

Slen. Dispatch’d? Ile make the beet in Glostershire know on’t: would I were hang’d la, elie.

Slen. I come yonder at Eaton to marry Miftris Anne Page, and she’s a great lubberly boy. If it ha’d not bene I’th Church, I would haue swing’d him, or hee should haue swing’d me. If I did not thinke it ha’d bene Anne Page, would I might never firre, and ‘tis a Poft-mafters Boy.

Page. Upon my life then, you tooke the wrong.

Slen. What need ye tell me that? I think so, when I tooke a Boy for a Girle: If I had bene married to him, (for all he was in woman apparel) I would not have had him.

Page. Why this is your owne folly,
Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter,
By her garments?

Slen. I went to her in Greene, and cried Mum, and the cride budget, as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne, but a Poft-mafters boy.

Mrs. Page. Good George be not angry, I knew of your purpose: turn’d my daughter into white, and in deed she is now with the Doctor at the Deante, and there married.

Cai. Ver is Miftris Page: by gar I am conozed, I ha’ been marrie an Garfoon, a boy; oon peant, by gar, A boy, it is not An Page, by gar, I am conozed.

Mrs. Page. Why? did you take her in white?

Cai. I be gar, and ‘tis a boy: be gar, Ie raie all Windor.

Ford. This is strange? Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart mislikes me, here comes Mr. Fenton.

How now Mr. Fenton?

Anne. Pardon good father, good my mother pardon Page. Now Miftris:

How chance you went not with Mr Slen-dre?

Mrs. Page. Why went you not with Mr Doctor, maid?

Fen. You do amaze her: hear the truth of it,
You would have married her most shamefully,
Whereere there was no proportion held in loue:
The truth is, she and I (long ficce contracted)
Are now so sure that nothing can diffolue vs:
Th’offence is holy, that the hath committed,
And this deceit looses the name of craft,
Of disobedience, or vnduteous title,
Since therein the doth euent and then
A thousand irreverant curled houses
Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amaze’d, here is no remedie:
In Loue, the heauen themselfes do guide the state,
Money buys Lands, and wifes are fold by fite.

Fal. I am glad, though you have tane a special fand to strike at me, that your Arrow hath glanc’d.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heauen glue thee joy, what cannot be eichew’d, must be embrac’d.

Fal. When night-dogges run, all forts of Deere are chace’d.

Mrs. Page. Well, I will mufe no further: Mr Fenton, Heauen glue you many, many merry days:
Good husband, let vs every one go home,
And laugh this sport ore by a Countrie fire,
Sir Iohn and all.

Ford. Let it be so (Sir Iohn)
To Master Broome, you yet shall hold yourword,
For he, to night, shall lye with Miftris Ford: Exeunt.
MEASURE,
For Measure.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords.

Duke.

Escalus.

Efrc. My Lord.

Duke. Of Government, the properties to vn-
Would feeme in me t'effect speech & discouer,
Since I am put to know, that your owne Science
Exceedes (in that) the lift of all advice
My strength can give you: Then no more remains
But, that to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them worke: The nature of our People,
Our Cites Institutions, and the Termes
For Common Justice, y'are as pregnant in
As Art, and praftife, hath inriched any
That we remember: There is our Commission,
From which, we would not have you warpe; call hither,
I sry, bid come before vs Escalus:
What figure of vs thinke you, he will beare.
For you must know, we haue with speciall soule
Elected him our absence toupply;
Lent him our terror, drenq him with our loue,
And gien his Deputation all the Organs
Of our owne poewe: What thynke you of it?
Efc. If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergoe such ample grace, and honour,
It is Lord Escalus.

Enter Escalus.

Duke. Lookke where he comes.

c. Always obedient to your Graces will,
I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Escalus:

There is a kinde of Character in thy life,
That to th'otherer, doth thy historie
Fully unfold: Thy selfe, and thy belonging
Are not thinne owne so proper, as to waite
Thy selfe upon thy vertues; they on thee:
Heauen doth with vs, as we, with Torches doe,
Not light them for themelues: For if our vertues
Did not goe forth of vs, twere all aike
As if we had them not: Spirits are not finely torch'd,
But to fine iiffies: nor nature neuer lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But like a thisty goddess, she determines
Her selfe the glory of a creditour,
Both thanks, and vie; but I do bend my speech

To one that can my part in him aduertize;
Hold therefore Escalus:
In our remoue, be thou at full, our selfe:
Mortalitie and Merce in Vienna
Liue in thy tongue, and heart: Old Escalus
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy Commission.

Ang. Now good my Lord
Let there be some more teft, made of my mettle,
Before fo noble, and fo great a figure
Be stamp't upon it.

Duke. No more euasion:
We haue with a leauen'd, and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honors:
Our harte from hence is of fo quicke condition,
That it prefers it selfe, and leaves vnquestion'd
Matters of needfull value: We shall write to you
As time, and our concernings shall importune,
How it goes with vs, and doe loue to know
What doth befall you here. So fare you well:
To th' hopefull execution doe I leave you,
Of your Commissions,

Ang. Yet giue leaue (my Lord),
That we may bring you somthing on the way.

Duke. My harte may not admit it,
Nor neede you (on mine honor) have to doe
With any scruple: your scope is as mine owne,
So to informe, or quallifie the Lawes
As to your foule seemes good: Glue me your hand,
Ile priuilie away: I loue the people,
But doe not like to flage me to their eyes;
Though it doe well, I doe not relish well
Their loud applause, and Aues vehement:
Nor doe I thynke the man of safe discretion
That do's affect it. Once more fare you well.

Ang. The heauen glue safety to your purpouses.

Duke. Lead forth, and bring you backe in happy-ness.

Duke. I thank you, fare you well.

Ang. I shall defire you, Sir, to giue me leaue
To haue free speech with you; and it concernes me
To lookke into the bottome of my place:
A powre I hauie, but of what strength and nature,
I am not yet intruclouded.

Ang. 'Tis so with me: Let vs with-drawe together,
And we may loone our satisfaction have Touching that point.

Efrc. Ile wait vpon your honor.

Exit.

Scena.
Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucio, and two other Gentlemen.

Luc. If the Duke, with the other Dukes, come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why then all the Dukes fall upon the King.

1. Gent. Heauen grant vs its peace, but not the King of Hungaries.

Luc. Thou oonch'd it like the Saint Simonious Pirat, that went to sea with the ten Commandements, but scap'd one out of the Table.

2. Gent. Thou haft not Steale?

Luc. I, that he rafs.

1. Gent. Why? 'twas a commandement, to command the Captain and all the reit from their functions: they put forth to finde: There's not a Souldier of vs all, that in the thank-giving before maire, do raffish the petition well, that praises for peace.

2. Gent. I neuer heard any Souldier dislike it.

Luc. I beleue thee: for I thinkke thou neuer wast where Grace was fail'd.

2. Gent. No? a dozen times at least.

1. Gent. What? In meeter?

Luc. In any proportion: or in any language.

1. Gent. I thinkke, or in any Religion.

Luc. I, why not? Grace, is Grace, despiught of all con troversei: as for example: Thou thy felie art a wicked villaine, despight of all Grace.

1. Gent. Well: there went but a paire of sheerees betweene vs.

Luc. I grant: as there may be betweene the Lifts, and the Velvet. Thou art the Lift.

1. Gent. And thou the Velvet; thou art good velvet; thou'rt a three pild-peece I warrant thee: I had as lief be a Lyft of an English Kerfley, as be pil'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French Velvet. Do I speake feelingly now?

Luc. I thinkke thou do't: and indeed with most pain full feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine owne confession, learne to begin thry health; but, whilst I live for to drinke after thee.

1. Gent. I think I haue done my felie wrong, haue I not?

2. Gent. Yes, that thou haft; whether thou art tainted, or free. Enter Bawd.

Luc. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes. I have purchas'd as many difeases under her Roofe, As come to

2. Gent. To three thousand Dollours a yeare.

1. Gent. I, and more.

Luc. A French crowne more.

1. Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error, I am found.

Luc. Nay, not (as one would say) healthy: but so found, as things that are hollow; thy bones are hollow; Impety has made a feast of thee.

1. Gent. How now, which of your hips has the most profound Catica?

Bawd. Well, well: there's one yonder arrested, and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of you all.

2. Gent. Who's that I pray'thee?

Bawd. Marry Sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

Bawd. Nay, but I know'tis so: I saw him arrested: saw him carried away: and which is more, within these three dailes his head to be chop'd off.

Luc. But, after all this foolishing, I would not have it for Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting Madam Iulietta with child.

Luc. Beleeue me this may be: he promis'd to meete me two howres since, and he was euery preciue in promife keeping.

2. Gent. Befides you know, it draws somthing neere to the speeche we had to fetch a purpose.

1. Gent. But most of all agreeing with the proclamiations.

Luc. Away: let's goe learne the truth of it. Exit.

Bawd. Thou, what with the war; what with the sweat, what with the gallowes, and what with poverty, I am Confom-branke. How now? what's the newes with you.

Enter Cleone.

Cl. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Bawd. Well: what has he done?

Cl. A Woman.

Bawd. But what's his offence?

Cl. Gropping for Trowes, in a peculiar Rivel.

Bawd. What? is there a maid with child by him?

Cl. No: but there's a woman with maid by him: you haue not heard of the proclamation, haue you?

Bawd. What proclamation, man?

Cl. All howles in the Suburbs of Vienna must be pluck'd downe.

Bawd. And what shall become of those in the Citie?

Cl. They shall stand for seed: they had gone down to, but that a wife Burger put in for them.

Bawd. But shall all our houses of refort in the Suburbs be pald downe?

Cl. To the ground, Misfitia.

Bawd. Why heere's a change indeed in the Commonwealth: what shall become of me?

Cl. Come: feare not you: good Counsellors lacke no Clients: though you change your place, you need not change your trade: I lea be your Tapher full: courage, there will bee pitty taken on you: you that have wronged your eyes almoxt out in the serulce, you will be consider'd.

Bawd. What's to doe heere, Thomas Tapfer? let's withdrw?

Cl. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the Prooust to prifon: and there's Madam Iuliet.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Prooust, Claudio, Iuliet, Officers, Lucio 7 Gent.

Cla. Fellow, why do'th thou show me this to the world? Bear me to prifon, where I am committed.

Pro. I do it not in euille disposition, But from Lord Angels by speciall charge.

Cla. Thus can the demy-god (Authority) Make vs pay downe, for our offence, by weight The words of heauen; on whom it will, it will, On whom it will not (for) yet still 'tis luft. (fratrain)

Luc. Why how now Claudio? whence comes this revolt?

Cla. From too much liberty, (my Lucie) Liberty As furiet is the father of much five, So every Scope by the immediate vice

Turnes to refraint: Our Natures doe pursuie
Like rats that ravin downe their proper Bone,
A thirsly eull, and when we drinke, we die.

Luc. If I could speake so wilfull vnder an arrest, I would sende for certaine of my Creditors: and yet, to say the truth, I had as lief haue the foppyry of freedome, as the mortality of imprisounment: what's thy offence, Claud?

Cla. What (but to speake of) would offend againe.

Luc. What, is't murder?

Cla. No.

Luc. Levierie?

Cla. Call it so.

Pro. Away, Sir, you must goe.

Cla. One word, good friend:

Lucio, a word with you.

Luc. A hundred:

If you doe any good: is Leckby so look'd after?

Cla. Thus stands it with me: upon a true contraet
I got possession of Julieta's bed,
You know the Lady, she is faft my wife,
Sawe that we doe the denunciation lacke
Of outward Order. This we came not to,
Onely for propagation of a Duke,
Remaining in the Coffer, of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our Loue
Till Time had them made for vs. But it chances
The sleath of our most moutvall entertainment
With Charader too gristy, is writ on Julieta.

Luc. With child, perhaps?

Cla. Unhappily, even so.

And the new Deputie, now for the Duke,
Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness,
Or whether that the body publique, be
A horne whereon the Governor doth ride,
Who newly in the Sate, that it may know
He can command; let it straytle the fpar:
Whether the Tiranny be in his place,
Or in his Eminence that fills it vp
If flagger in: But this new Governor
Awakes me all the inrolled penalties
Which haue (like vn-crow'd Armor) hung by th'waill
So long, that tintenee Zodiacks haue gone round,
And none of them beene worne; and for a name
Now puts the drowzie and neglected Act
Freshly on me: 'tis surely for a name.

Luc. I warrant it is: And thy head stands fo tickle on thy shoulders, that a milke-mald, if she be in love, may flyght off: Send after the Duke, and appeale to him.

Cla. I have done fo, but hee's not to be found.

I pre'thee (Lucio) doe me this kinde service:
This day, my fifter should the Cloyfter enter,
And there receive her approbation.

Acquaint her with the danger of my fate,
Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends
To the thriest deputie, and bid her felle affay him,
I have great hope in that: for in her youth
There is a prone and feechelesse dialaet,
Such as move men: befide, the hath prosperous Art
When she will play with reason, and difcourfe,
And well the can perfwade.

Luc. I pray thee may: as well for the encouragement of the like, which else shall stand vnder greuous imposition: as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be farry shoulde bee thus foolilfly lost, at a game of tick-tacks: Ie to her.

Cla. I thank you good friend Lucio.
Scena Quinta.

Enter Isabella and Francisca a Nun.

IJa. And have you Nuns no farther priviledges?
Nun. Are not these large enough?
IJa. Yes truly ; I speake not as desiring more,
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon the Sisterhood, the Votaries of Saint Clare.
Luc. within.

Luc. Hoa? peace be in this place.
IJa. Who's that which calls?
Nun. It is a mens voice: gentle Isabella
Turne you the key, and know his buinesse of him.
You may ; I may not: you are yet vnsworne
When you have vowed, you must not speake with men,
But in the presence of the Prior[i];
Then if you speake, you must not show your face;
Or if you show your face, you must not speake.
He calls againe ; I pray you answere him.
IJa. Peace, and prosperitie; who is't that calls?
Luc. Haile Virgin, (if you be) as thofe checke-rofs
Proclame you are no leff: can you so freely me,
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A Nouice of this place, and the faire Siffer
To her unhappy brother Claudio?
IJa. Why her unhappy Brother? Let me aske,
The rather for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella, and his Siffer.
Luc. Gentle & faire : your Brother kindly greets you;
Not to be wary with you; he's in prifon.
IJa. Woe me; for what?
Luc. For that, which if my felfe might be his Judge,
He should receiue his punishment, in thankes:
He hath got his friend with child.
IJa. Sir, make me not your florid.
Luc. 'Tis true ; I would not, though 'tis my familiar sin,
With Maidens to leme the Lapwing, and to left
Tongue, far from heart ; play with all Virgin so:
I hold you as a thing en-skied, and fielded,
By your renouncement, an immortal spirit
And to be call'd with in sinceritie,
As with a Saint.
IJa. You doe blaspheme the good, in mocking me.
Luc. Doe not beleue it: feenes, and truth; 'tis thus,
Your brother, and his louter haue embrac'd;
As thofe that feed, grow full: as blossoming Time
That from the seadnes, the bare fowle brings
To teeming foyon: even so her plentious wombe
Expresseth his full Thith, and husbandry.
IJa. Some one with childe by him? my cofen Juliet?
Luc. Is she your cofen?
IJa. Adoptedly, as schoole-maides change their names
By vaine, though apt affection.
Luc. She it is.
IJa. Oh, let him marry her.
Luc. This is the point.
The Duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many gentlemens (my felfe being one)
In hand, and hope of action; but we doe learne,
By thofe that know the very Nerues of State,
His going-out, were of an infinite distance
From his true meant defigne: upon his place,

(And with full line of his authority)
Gouerns Lord Angelo: A man, whose blood
Is very know-broth : one, who neuer feele
The wanton thinges, and motions of the fence;
But doth rebate, and blunt his naturall edge
With profits of the minde: studie, and falt
He (to glee fearer to vie, and libertie,
Which haue, for long, run-by the hideous law,
As Myce, by Lyons) hath pickt out an ad,
Vnder whole heauy fence, your brothers life
Fals into forfit: he arreffe him on it,
And followes close the rigor of the Statute
To make him an example: all hope is gone,
Vnleffe you haue the grace, by your faire prizer
To soften Angelo: And that's my pith of buinesse
'Twixt you, and your poore brother.
IJa. Dooth he fo,
Seeke his life?
Luc. Has cenfur'd him already,
And as I hear, the Prouct hath a warrant
For's execution.
IJa. Alas : what poore
Abilide's in me, to doe him good.
Luc. Asflay the poore you haue.
IJa. My power 's alas, I doubt.
Luc. Our doothes are traitors
And makes vs looke the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt : Goe to Lord Angelo
And let him learne to know, when Maidens fue
Men glue like gods : but when they wepe and kneele,
All their petitions, are as fresly theirs
As they themselves would owe them.
IJa. Ile see what I can doe.
Luc. But speedily.
IJa. I will about it strait;
No longer flaying, but to glee the Mother
Notice of my affaire: I humbly thank you;
Commend me to your brothe: soone at night
Ile fend him certain word of my successe.
Luc. I take my leave of you.
IJa. Good sir, adieu.

Exeunt

Acutus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Angelo, Eufcalus, and servants,ajuice.

Ang. We must not make a fact-crow of the Law,
Setting it vp to feare the Birds of prey,
And let it keepe one shape, till cultome make it
Their search, and not their terror.
Euf. I, but yet
Let vs be keene, and rather cut a little
Then fall, and bruife to death: alas, this gentleman
Whom I would fave, had a moft noble father,
Let but your honour know
(Whom I beleue to be moft frait in vertue)
That in the working of your owne affections,
Had time coheard with Place, or place with wishing,
Or that the refolute acting of our blood
Could have attain'd effeect of your owne purpoe,
Whether you had not sometime in your life
Er'd in this point, which now you cenfur him,
And pul'd the Law vpone you.
Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted (Eufcalus)

Another
Another thing to fall: I do not deny
The fury paling on the Prisoners life
May in the Ixone twelve have a thief, or two Guiltier then him they try; what’s open made to Justice,
That Justice ceases: What knows the Lawes
That thesees do passe on theesees? ’Tis very pregnant,
The Jewell that we finde, we troope, and take’t,
Because we see it; but what we doe not see,
We tread upon, and never think of it.
You may not so extenuate his offence,
For I have had such faults; but rather tell me
When I, that cenfure him, do so offend,
Let mine owne Judgement pattern out my death,
And nothing come in partill. Sir, he must dye.

E. F. Be it as your wisdome will.
E. Ang. Where is the Provost?
P. Ang. Here if it like your honour.
E. Ang. See that Claudia
Be executed by nine to morrow morning,
Bring him his Confeffor, let him be prepar’d,
For that’s the vmoft of his pilgrimage.

E. F. Well: heaven forgive him; and forgive vs all:
Some rife by fame, and some by vertue fall:
Some run from brake of Ice, and anwere none,
And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Closeane, Officers.

E. Elb. Come, bring them away: if thefe be people
In a Common-wealth, that doe nothing but vfe their Abuses in common houses, I know no law: bring them away.

E. Ang. How now Sir, what’s your name? And what’s the matter?

E. Elb. If it pleafe your honour, I am the poore Dukes Confable, and my name is Elbow; I doe leane vpon Juficce Sir, and doe bring in here before your good honor, two notorious Benefactors.

E. Ang. Benefactors? Well: What Benefactors are they?
Are they not Malefactors?

E. Elb. If it pleaze your honour, I know not well what they are: But precle villains are they, that I am sure of, and vold of all prophanation in the world, that good Christians ought to haue.

E. Ang. This comes off well: here’s a wife Officer.

E. Ang. Goe to: What quality are they of? Elbow is your name?
Why do’t thou not speake Elbow?

E. Elb. He cannot Sir: he’s out at Elbow.

E. Ang. What are you Sir?

E. Elb. He Sir: a Tapster Sir: parcell Baud: one that Ierves a bad woman: whole house Sir was (as they say) plucked downe in the Suburbs: and now hee profesles a hot-house; which, I thinkes is a very vill housfe too.

E. Ang. How know you that?

E. Elb. My wife Sir? whom I deted before heaven, and your honour.

E. F. How? thy wife?

E. Elb. I Sir: whom I thanke heaven is an honest woman.

E. F. Do’t thou deted her therefore?

E. Elb. I say Sir, I will deted my felpe also, as well as she, that this housfe, if it be not a Bauds housfe, it is pitty of her life, for it is a naughty housfe.

E. F. How do’t thou know that, Confable?

E. Elb. Marry Sir, by my wife, who, if she had bin a woman dearly gien, might have bin accu’d in fornication, adultery, and all vncleneffe there.

E. F. By the womans meanes?

E. Elb. I sir, by Miftris Derent meanes: but as she spit in his face, fo he defte him.

E. Ang. Sir, if pleafe your honor, this is not fo.

E. Elb. Prove it before these varlets here, thou honorable man, proue it.

E. F. Doe you heare how he miplaces?

E. Elb. Sir, she came in great with childe: and longing (fuing your honors reuerence) for dewd prewys: Sir, we had but two in the housfe, which at that very distant
-time fiod, as it were in a fruit dih (a dih of some three pence: your honours haufe feene fuch dihes) they are not China-dishes, but very good dihes.

E. F. Go too: go too: no matter for the dihs Sir.

E. Elb. No indeece Sir not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point: As I say, this Miftris Elbow, being (as I say) with childe, and being great bellied, and longing (as I faid) for prewys: and hauing but two in the dih (as I faid) Master Froth here, this very man, hauing eaten the red, as I faid) & (as I fay) prouyng for them very honestly: for, as you know Master Froth, I could not give you three pence againe.

E. F. No indeece.

E. Ang. Very well: you being then (if you be remembered) tracking the fhones of the foresaid prewys.

E. F. Sir, fo I did indeece.

E. Elb. Why, very well: I telling you then (if you be remembred) that such a one, and such a one, were past care of the thing you wot of, vnllefe they kept very good diet, as I told you.

E. F. All this is true.

E. Ang. Why very well then.

E. F. Come: you are a tedious fool: to the purpuoe:
what was done to Elbowes wife, that hee hath caufe to complaine of? Come me to what was done to her.

E. Elb. Sir, your honor cannot come to that yet.

E. F. No Sir, nor I meane it not.

E. Elb. Sir, but youall come to it, by your honours leave: And I befieech you, looke into Master Froth
Sir, a mone of foure-kore pound a yeare; whose father died at Hallowmas: Was’t not at Hallowmas Master Froth?

E. F. Alholland-Bae.

E. Elb. Why very well: I hope here be truths: he Sir, fitting (as I fay) in a lower chaire, Sir, I was in the burch of Grapes, where indeede you have a delight to Sir, have you not?

E. F. I haue fo, because it is an open roome, and good for winter.

E. Elb. Why very well then: I hope here be truths.

E. F. This will last out a night in Rufsia
When nights are longest there: Ile take my leuue,
And leaue you to the hearing of the caufe;
Hoping youl finde good caufe to whip them all. Exit.

E. F. I thinke no leffe: good morrow to your Lordship. Now Sir, come on: What was done to Elbowes wife, once more?

E. Elb. Once Sir? there was nothing done to her once.

E. F. I befieech you Sir, aske him what this man did to my wife.

E. Elb. I befieech your honor, aske me.

E. F. Well Sir, what did this Gentleman to her?

E. Elb. Sir, he befieech you Sir, looke in this Gentlemen face: good Master Froth looke vpou his honor; ’tis for a good purpoe: doth your honor marke his face?

E. F. Ye.

F 3
Erf. I fir, very well.
Clo. Nay, I befeech you marke it well.
Erf. Well, I doe so.
Clo. Dost thy honor see any harme in his face?
Erf. Why not.
Clo. Ile be suppos'd vpon a booke, his face is the worst thing about him; good then: if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth doe the Con-fables wife any harme? I would know that of your honour.
Erf. He's in the right (Conftable) what say you to it?
Ell. Firft, and it like you, the house is a requited house; next, this is a requited fellow; and his Miftris is a requited woman.
Clo. By this hand Sir, his wife is a more requited per-son then any of vs all.
Ell. Varlet, thou lyest; thou lyest wicked varlet: the time is yet to come that thee was ever requited with man, woman, or childe.
Clo. Sir, she was requited with him, before he married with her.
Erf. Which is the wiser here; Injustice or Iniquity? Is this true?
Ell. O thou caytiffe: O thou varlet: O thou wicked Hannibal; I requited with her, before I was married to her? If ever I was requited with her, or she with me, let not your worship thinke mee the poore Duker Offi-cer: prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or ile haue mine action of battery on thee.
Erf. If he tooke you a box 'ochtare, you might haue your action of fliender too.
Ell. Marty I thanke your good worship for it: what is't your Worships pleasure I shall doe with this wicked Caiiffe?
Erf. Truly Officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst difcover, if thou couldst, let him continue in his courfes, till thou knowest what they are.
Ell. Marty I thanke your worship for it: Thou feest thou wicked varlet now, what's come vpon thee. Thou art to continue now thou Varlet, thou art to continue.
Erf. Where were you borne, friend?
Froth. Here in Vienna, Sir.
Erf. Are you of four-score pounds a yeare?
Froth. Yes, and 't please you Sir.
Erf. So is what trade are you of, Sir?
Clo. A Tapfer, a poore whipowes Tapfer.
Erf. Your Miftris name?
Clo. Miftris Ouer-don.
Erf. Hath she had any more then one husband?
Clo. Nine, Sir, for one-doe by the left.
Erf. Nine! come hether to me, Master Froth; Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with Tapfers; they will draw you Master Froth, and you will hang them: goe you gone, and let me have no more of you.
Fr. I thanke your worship: for mine owne part, I neuer come into any roome in a Tap-house, but I am drawne in.
Erf. Well; no more of it Master Froth: farewell: Come you hether to me, Mr. Tapfer: what's your name Mr. Tapfer?
Clo. Pompey.
Erf. What else?
Clo. Dam, Sir.
Erf. Truth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you, so that in the backfliet fence, you are Pompey the great; Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey; howfo-er you colour it in being a Tapfer, are you not? come, tell me true, it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truly Sir, I am a poore fellow that would live.
Erf. How would you like Pompey? by being a bawd? what doe you thinke of the trade Pompey? is it a lawfull trade?
Clo. If the Law would allow it, fir.
Erf. But the Law will not allow it Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.
Clo. Do's your Worship meane to geld and spay all the youth of the City?
Erf. No, Pompey.
Clo. Truly Sir, in my poore opinion they will too't then: if your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to feare the bawds.
Erf. There is pretty orders beginning I can tell you it is but heading, and hanging.
Clo. If you head, and hang all that offend that way but for ten yeares together; you'll be glad to glue out a Commissioon for more heads; if this law hold in Vienna ten yeares, ile rent the fairest house in it after three pence a Bay: if you like to see this come to passe, say Pompey told you so.
Erf. Thanke you good Pompey; and in requitall of your prophesse, harke you: I advize you let me not finde you before me againe vpon any complaint whatsoever; no, nor for dwelling where you doe: if I doe Pompey, I shal beat you to your Tent, and prowe a thred Cefar to you in plaine dealing Pompey, I shal have you whipt; so for this time, Pompey, fare you well.
Clo. I thanke your Worship for your good counsell; but I shall follow it as the fysh and fortune shall better determine. Whim me? no, no, let Carman whip his Iade, The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade. Exeunt.
Erf. Come hether to me, Master Elbow: come hither Master Conftable: how long haue you bin in this place of Conftable?
Ell. Seuen yeere, and a halfe fir.
Erf. I thought by the readiness in the office, you had continued in it some time: you say seuen yeares together.
Ell. And a halfe fir.
Erf. Alas, it hath beene great paines to you: they do you wrong to put you fo oft vpon't. Are there not men in your Ward sufficient to ferue it?
Ell. 'Faith fir, few of any wit in fhuch matters: as they are choaten, they are glad to chooie me for them; I do it for some piece of money, and goe through with all.
Erf. Lookie you bring mee in the names of fome fie or feuen, the moft sufficient of your parifh.
Ell. To your Worships house fir?
Erf. To my house: fare you well: what's a clokke, thinke you?
Ell. Eleuen, Sir.
Erf. I pray you home to dinner with me.
Ell. I humbly thanke you.
Erf. It grieues me for the death of Claudio
But there's no remedie:
Ell. Lord. Angels is feuer.
Erf. It is but needfull.
Mercy is not ifelfe, that oft looks fo,
Pardon is still the nurfe of fecond woe:
But yet, poore Claudio; there is no remedie.
Come Sir. Exeunt.

Scene
Scena Secunda.

Enter Provost, Servant.

Serv. Hee's hearing of a Cause; he will come straight, I'll tell him of you.

Prov. 'Pray you doe; Ile know His pleasure, may he be he relent; alas He hath but as offended in a dreame.

All Sefts, all Ages smack of this vice, and he To die for't?

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter Provost?

Prov. Is it your will Claudia shall die to morrow?

Ang. Did not I tell thee yea? hadst thou not order?

Why do'th thou aske again?

Prov. Left I might be too rath: Vnder your good correccion, I have feene When after execution, Judgement hath Repented on his doome.

Ang. Go to; let that be mine, Doe you your office, or glue vp your Place,

And you shall well be spar'd.

Prov. I crave your Honours pardon:

What shall be done Sir, with the groning Juliet? She's very neere herhoure.

Ang. Dispoofe of her To some more fittt place; and that with speed.

Serv. Here is the fifter of the man condemn'd, Desires acceffe to you.

Ang. Hath he a Sitter?

Prov. I my good Lord, a very vertuous maid, And to be shorttie of a Sitter-hood, If not alreadie.

Ang. Well: let her he admitted, See you the Fornekrete be remov'd,

Let her haue needfull, but not lauifh meanes, There shall be order for't.

Enter Lucio and JIabelllo.

Prov. 'Sauze your Honour. (will ?

Ang. Stay a little while: y'are welcome: what's your

JIab. I am a wofull Sutor to your Honour,

'Please but your Honor hear me.

Ang. Well: what's your fuite.

JIab. There is a vice that moff I doe abhorre,

And moff depre should meet the blow of Juflice; For which I would not plead, but that I muft,

For which I muft not plead, but that I am At warre, twixt will, and will not.

Ang. Well: the matter?

JIab. I have a brother is condemnda to die,

I doe beseech you let it be his fault,

And not my brother.

Prov. Heauen giue thee moving graces.

Ang. Condemne the fault, and not the actor of it,

Why every fault's condemn'd ere it be done: Mine were the verie Cipher of a Function To fine the faults, whose fine hands in record, And let goe by the Actor:

JIab. Oh iuft, but fevere Law: I had a brother then; heauen keep thee your honour,

Luc. Glue 't not ore fo: to him againe, entreat him, Kneel downe before him, hang yon his gowne,

You are too cold: if you should need a pin,

You could not with more tame a tongue defire it:

To him, I say.

JIab. Muft he needs die?

Ang. Maiden, no remedie.

JIab. Yes: I doe thinke that you might pardon him,

And neither heauen, nor man grieue at the mercy.

Ang. I will not doe.

JIab. But can you if you would?

Ang. Looke what I will not, that I cannot doe.

JIab. But might you doe't & do the world no wrong

If to your heart were touch'd with that remorfe,

As mine is to him?

Ang. Hee's fentence'd, tis too late.

Luc. You are too cold.

JIab. Too late? why no: I that doe speak a word

May call it againe: well, beleve this

No ceremony that to great ones longs,

Not the Kings Crowne; nor the deputed sword,

The Marshalls Truncheon, nor the Judges Robe

Become them with one halfe so good a grace

As mercie does: If he had bin as you, and you as he,

You would haue flipt like him, but he like you

Would not haue bene fo fteene.

Ang. Pray you be gone.

JIab. I would to heauen I had your potencie,

And you were JIabelllo: should it then be thus?

No: I would tell what 'were to be a Judge,

And what a prifoner.

Luc. I, touch him: there's the vaine.

Ang. Your Brother is a forfeit of the Law,

And you but waife your words.

JIab. Alas, alas:

Why all the foules that were, were forfeit once,

And he that might the vantage bell haue toke,

Found out the remedie: how would you be,

If he, which is the top of Judgement, should

But fudge you, as you are? Oh, thinke on that,

And mercie then will breathe within your lips

Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, (faire Maid)

It is the Law, not I, condemne your brother,

Were he my kinsman, brother, or my fonne,

It should be thus with him: he muft die to morrow.

JIab. To morrow? oh, that's fadaine,

Spare him, spare him:

Hee's not prepar'd for death: even for our kitchins

We kill the bowle of feafon: shall we ferue heuen

With leffe reprefet then we doe minion,

To our groffe-felues? good, good my Lord, bethink you;

Who is it that hath di'd for this offence?

There's many haue committed it.

Luc. I, well faid.

Ang. The Law hath not bin dead, though it hath flept

Those many had not di'd to doe that euill

If the firft, that did th' Edift infringe

Had anfwer'd for his deed: Now 'tis awake,

Takes note of what is done, and like a Prophet

Loukes in a glaffe that fheews what future euills

Either now, or by remiflence, new conceu'd,

And fo in progreffe to be hart'ed, and borne,

Are now to have no succedue degrees,

But here they live to end.

JIab. Yet fhew some pittie.

Ang. I fhouf it moft of all, when I shou Juflice;

For then I pittie thofe I do not know,

Which a diſlim'd offence, would after gauge

And
And doe him right, that answering one foule wrong
Lies not to aot another. Be satisfied;
Your Brother dies to morrow: be content.

Ifab. So you must be y'first that givs this sentence,
And hee, that sufferes: Oh, it is excellent
To have a Giants strength: but it is tyrannous
To vie it like a Giant.

Luc. That's well said.

Ifab. Could great men thunder
As heu himselfe do's, how would never be quiet,
For every pelting petty Officer
Would vie his heauen for thunder;
Nothing but thunder: Mercifull heauen,
Thou rather with thy sharpe and fulpherous bolt
Splits the vn-wedgable and gasrled Oke,
Then the soft Merrill: But man, proud man,
Dreeth in a little briefe authoritie,
Most ignorant of what he's most auff'd,
(If his glassie Effence) like an angry Ape
Plaies such phantastique tricks before high heauen,
As makes the Angels weep: who with our fleeces,
Wear in all themselfes laugh mortal.

Luc. Oh, to him, to him wench! he will relent,
Hee's comming: I perceiue't.

Pro. Pray heauen hee win him.

Ifab. We cannot weig he our brother with our selfe,
Great men may left with Saints; ts wit in them,
But in the leffe weig he our prophanation.

Luc. Thou't i'th right (Girlie) more o'that.

Ifab. That in the Captains's but a chollerick word,
Which in the Soullier is flat blifiehime.

Luc. Art ait's o'd that? more on't.

Ang. Why doo ye put these sayings vpon me?

Ifab. Because Authoritie, though it erre like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in it selfe
That skins the vice o'th top; goe to your bosome,
Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth know
That's like my brothers fault: if it confesse
A naturall guiltiness, such as is his,
Let it not found a thought vpon your tongue
Against my brothers life.

Ang. Shee speakes, and 'tis such fence
That my Sence breeds with it; save you well.

Ifab. Gentle my Lord, turne backe.

Ang. I will bethinke me i' come againe to morrow.

Jr. Hark, how Ile brieue you: good my Lord turn back.

Ang. How? brieue me?

If. I, with such gifts that heauen flall share with you.

Luc. You had mar' d' all else.

Ifab. Not with fond Sickles of the test'd-gold,
Or Stones, whose rate are either rich, or poore
As fancie values them: but with true prayers,
That flall be vp at heauen, and enter there
Ere Sunne rife: prayers from preferred foules,
From lisyng Maides, whose mindes are dedicate
To nothing temporall.

Ang. Well: come to me to morrow.

Luc. Goe to: 'ts well a way.

Ifab. Heauen keeps your honour safe.

Ang. Amen.

For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers croffe.

Ifab. At what hower to morrow,
Shall I attend your Lordship?

Ang. At any time 'fore-noone.

Ifab. 'Sauve your Honour.

Ang. From thee: even from thy vertue.

What's this? what's this? is this her fault, or mine?
The Tempter, or the Tempted, who sins most? ha?
Not the: nor doth the tempt: but it is I,
That, lying by the Violet in the Sunne,
Doe as the Carrion do's, not as the flower,
Corrupt with vertuous feasion: Can it be,
That Modesty may more betray our Sence
Then womans lightneffe? having waife ground enough,
Shall we defire to raze the Sanquary
And pitch our eulks there? oh fie, ba, fie:
What doth thou? or what art thou. Angles?
Doth thou defire her fwole, for those things
That make her good? oh, let her brother liue:
Theeues for their robbery have authoritie,
When Judges fleale themselfes: what, doe I love her,
That I defire to heare her speake againe?
And feast vpon her eyes? what is't I dream on?
Oh cunning enemy, that to catch a Saint,
With Saints doft bad thy hooke: moft dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad us on
To fenny, in louing vertue: never could the Strumpet
With all her double vigil, Art, and Nature
Once flir my temper: but this vertuous Maid
Subdues me quite: Euer till now
When men were fond, I fulfind, and wondred how. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke and Provost.

Duke. Halie to you, Provost, so I thinkke you are.

Pro. I am the Provost: what's your will, good Frier?

Duke. Bound by my charity, and my blest order,
I come to vifite the afficted spirits
Here in the prifon: doe me the common right
To let me fee them: and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minifter
To them accordingly.

Pro. I would do more then that, if more were needful
Enter Iuliet.

Looke here comes one: a Gentlewoman of mine,
Who falling in the flaves of her owne youth,
Hath blifferd her report: She is with childe,
And he that got it, fentenc'd: a young man,
More fit to doe another fuch offence,
Then dye for this.

Duk. When muft he dye?

Pro. As I do thinkke to morrow.
I have prouided for you, flay a while
And you shall be conducted.

'Duk. Repent you (faire one) of the fin you carry?

Iul. I doe: and beare the name moft patiently.

Duk. He teach you how you flall aigne your conficcate
And try your penitence, if it be found,
Or hollowly put on.

Iul. Ie gladly learn.

Duk. Loue you the man that wrong'd you?

Iul. Yes, as I loue the woman that wrong'd him.

Duk. So then it fencet your moft offence full aet
Was mutually committed.

Iul. Mutually.

Duk. Then was your fin of heauier kindes then his.

Iul. I doe confiffe it, and repent it (Father.)

Duk. 'Tis

Measure for Measure.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo.

Ang. When I would pray, & think, I think, and pray
To several fubsidies; heaven hath my empty words,
Whil'st my Invention, hearing not my Tongue,
Anchors on Isabella: heaven in my mouth,
As if I did but only chew his name,
And in my heart the strong and swelling euill
Of my conception: the flame whereon I studied
Is like a good thing, being often read
Growne feard, and tedious; yea, my Gravitie.
Wherein (let no man heare) I take pride,
Could I, with boote, change for an ilee plume
Which the ayrte beats for vaine: oh place, oh forme,
How often dou'th thou with thy cafe, thy habitt
Wrench awe from foolees, and yxe the wierre foolees.
To thy feale fimeing? Blood, thou art blood,
Let's write good Angell on the Deuills horn.
'Tis not the Deuils Creft: how now? who's there?

Enter Servant.

Ser. One Isabella, a Sister, desires access to you.
Ang. Teach her the way: oh, heauen.
Why doe's my blood thus mutter to my heart,
Making both it vnable for it selfe,
And dilpercing all my other parts
Of nessesary fiction?
So play the foolisht throns with one that twounds,
Come all to help him, and so stop the ayrte
By which hee should reuine; and even fo
The general fubsidet a wel-wilht King
Quire their owne part, and in obloquious fondneffe
Crowd to his presence, where their vn-taught loue
Muff needs appear offence: how now faire Maid.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. I am come to know your pleasure.
Ang. That you might know it, wold much better please
Then to demand what'tis: your Brother cannot live.
Isab. Even so: heaven keepe your Honor.
Ang. Yet may he live a while: and it may be
As long as you, or I: yet he must die.
Isab. Vnder your Sentence?
Ang. Yea. Enter Servant.

Isab. When, I beseech you: that in his Reprieue (Longer, or shorter) he may be fitted
That his foule sicken not.
Ang. Ha! fie, these filthy vices: It were as good to pardon him, that hath from nature stolne
A man already made, as to remit
Their lascive sweetenes, that do coyne heavens Image
In flamps that are forbid: 'tis all as eafe,
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in restrained means
To make a felle one.

Isab. 'Tis set downe so in heauen, but not in earth.
Ang. Say you so: then I shall poze you quickly.
Which had you rather, that the moft luift Law
Now takest your brothers life, and to redeem him
Glie vp your body to such sweet vnclennesse
As the he hath flain?

Isab. Sir, beleue this.
I had rather glue my body, then my foule.
Ang. I talke not of your foule: our compel'd fins
Stand more for number, then for accomp't.

Isab. How lay you?
Ang. Nay ile not warrant that: for I can speake
Against the thing I say: Anfwere to this,
I (now the voyce of the recorded Law)
Promounce a fentence on your Brothers life,
Might there not be a charlite in finne,
To bue this Brothers life?

Isab. Pleaе to you do't,
He take it as a peril to my soule,
It is no finne at all, but charlite.

Ang. Plea'd you to do't, at peril of your soule
Were equall paine of finne, and charlite.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be finne.
Heauen let me beare it; you granting of my fult,
If that be fin, Ile make it my Mornr-prayer,
To have it added to the fault of mine,
And nothing of your anfwere.

Ang. Nay, but heare me,
Your fentence pursuets not mine: either you are ignorant,
Or feme fo crafty; and that's not good.

Isab. Let be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. Thus wildome willes to appeare most bright,
When it doth take it felle: As thefe blacke Maques
Proclaime an en-shield beauty ten times louder
Then beauty could dispis'd: But marke me,
To be receu'd pleine, Ile speake more greffe:
Your Brother is to dye.

Isab. So.
Ang. And his offence is so, as it appears,
Accountant to the Law, upon that paine.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to save his life
(As I fuppos'd not that, nor any other,
But in the loffe of question) that you, his Sifer,
Finding your felie defir'd of such a perfon,
Whole creddit with the Judge, or owne great place,
Could fetch your Brother from the Mantacles
Of the all-building Law: and that there were
No earthly means to save him, but that either
You must lay downe the treasures of your body,
To this suppow'd, or else to let him fuffer:
What would you doe?

Isab. As much for my poore Brother, as my felie:
That is: were I vnder the tramers of death,
Th'impression of keene whips, I'd wear as Rubies,
And flit my felie to death, as to a bed,
That longing hase bin liceke for, ere I'd yeeld
My body vp to shame.

Ang. That
Measure for Measure.

Ang. Then muft your brother die.
Ija. And twer the cheaper way:
Better it were a brother dide at once
Than that a fitter, by redeeming him
Should die for euer.

Ang. Were not you then as cruel as the Sentence,
That you have flander’d fo?
Ija. Ignominie in ranfome, and free pardon
Are of two houfes: in full merchie,
Is nothing kin to fwele redemption.

Ang. You feem’d of late to make the Law a tirant,
And rather prou’d the fliding of your brother
A merriment, then a vice.
Ija. Oh pardon me my Lord, it oft fals out
To have, what we would have,
We speake not what we meane;
I fomething do excufe the thing I hate,
For his advantadge that I dearly loue.

Ang. We are all ftrife.
Ija. Elfie in my kindneffe, die,
If not a ferdie but onely be
Owe, and fucceede thy weakneffe.

Ang. Nay, women are ftrife too.
Ija. I, as the glaffes where they view themfelves,
Which are as eafe broke as they make formes:
Women? Hepe heauen; men their creation marr’d
In profiting by them: Nay, call vs ten times ftrife,
For we are fott, as our compleations are,
And credulous to falle prints.

Ang. I think it well:
And from this testimonie of your owne fex
(Since I fuppofe we are made to be no stronger
Then faults may flake our frames) let me be bold;
I do arrest your words. Be that you are,
That is a woman; if you be more, you’t none.
If you be one (as you are well exprefit
By all external warrants) then you are,
By putting on the deflin’d Lusire.
Ija. I have no tongue but one; gentle my Lord,
Let me entreate you fpeak the former language.

Ang. Plainliue conceive I love you.
Ija. My brother did love Iaffell,
And you tell me that he fhall die for’t.

Ang. He fhall not Iaffell, if you give me love.
Ija. I know your vertue hath a licence in’t,
Which femeles a little fouer then it is,
To plocke on others.

Ang. Beleue me on mine Honor,
My words exprefs my purpofe.
Ija. Ha’! little honor, to be much beleu’d,
And moft permittles purpofe: Seeing, feeming.
I will proclame thee Angela, looke for’t.
Signe me a prefent pardon for my brother,
Or with an out-drefted throate Ie tell the world aloud
What man thou art.

Ang. Who will beleue thee Iaffell?
My vnfold name, thou’reference of my life,
My vouch againft you, and my place I th’ State,
Will of your occupaction over-weigh,
That you fhall flifie in your owne report,
And smell of calumnie. I haue begun,
And now I give my fentiffial race, the reigne,
Fit thy conflent to my harpe appetitie,
Lay by all nicetie, and profligous robes
That bandeth what they fay fo: Redeeme thy brother,
By yeielding vp thy bodie to my will,
Or else he muft not onelie die the death,
But thy vnkindneffe fhall his death draw out
To lingring foifance: Anfwer me to morrow,
Or by the afficion that now guideth me muft,
Ile prove a Tirant to him. As for you,
Say what you can; my falle, ore-wェghs your true. Exit.
Ija. To whom fhould I complain? Did I tell this,
Who would beleue me? O perilous moouthes
That bear in them, one and the fame tongue,
Either of condemnation, or approfoe.
Bidding the Law make curtille to their will,
Hooing both right and wrong to th’ appetitie,
To follow as it draws. Ie to my brother,
Though he hath falne by promitue of the blood,
Yet hath he in him fuch a minde of Honor,
That had he twentie heads to tender downe
On twentie bloodie bloakes, he’d yeold them vp,
Before his fitter should her bodie fpoole
To fuch abhorrd pollution.
Then Iaffell true chaffe, and brother die;
“More then our Brother, is our Chaflifie.
Ile tell him yet of Angelo’s requell,
And fit his minde to death, for his foules ref.” Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Claudius, and Proueft.

Du. So then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?
Cla. The miserable have no other medicine
But onely hope: I haue hope to live, and am prepar’d to die.

Du. Be abfolute for death: either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life:
If I do looke thee, I do looke a thing
That none but fooles would keep: a breath thou art,
Seruile to all the skyee-influences,
That doft this habitation where thou keepest
Hourly affiuent: Meerely, thou art deaths foole,
For him thou labourft by thy flight to flue,
And yet runft toward him fliue,
Thou art not noble,
For all th’accommodations that thou bearst,
Are nurft by baseness: Thou’rt by no meannes waliant,
For thou doft fere the fott and tender fource
Of a poore worme: thy bell of reft is fleepes,
And that thou oft prouoakft, yet greffely fearch
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy felfe,
For thou exifts on manie a thousand graines
That iflate out of duft. Happie thou art no’t,
For what thou haft not, fhill thou fuf’rift to get,
And what thou haft forget’t. Thou art no’t certaine,
For thy complexion thills to drange effe&s,
After the Moone: If thou art rich, thou’t pore,
For like an Aife, which backe with Ingots bowes;
Thou bearft thy heaine riches but a fournie,
And death vlandos thee; Friend haft thou none.
For thine owne bowels which do call thee, fire
The more effauion of thy proper lonnes.
Do curfe the Cewt, Sapego, and the Rheume
For ending thee no fooner. Thou haft nor youth, nor age
But as it were an after-dinners fleepes
Dreaming on both, for all thy bleffed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth begyr the sines
Of palced-Eld: and when thou art old, and rich

Thou
Mercie

Thou haft neither hate, affection, limbe, nor beautie
To make thy riches plesant: what's yet in this
That bearres the name of life? Yet in this life
Life hid moe thousand deaths; yet death we fare
That makest these oddes, all euen.

Cl. I humbly thank you,
To sue to live, I finde I lecke to die,
And feeling death, finde life: Let it come on.

Enter Iphabella.

Ifab. What hast? Peace heere; Grace, and good companie.

Pro. Who's there? Come in, the with deferves a welcome.

Duke. Deere fir, ere long Ie visite you againe.

Cl. Most hoile Sir, I thankke you.

Ifa. My businesse is a word or two with Cludio.

Ifa. And verie welcom : lookke Signior, here's your sister.

Duke. Proudly, a word with you.

Pro. As manie as you please.

Duke. Bring them to hear me speake, where I may be conceal'd.

Cl. Now sister, what's the comfort?

Ifa. Why,
As all consorts are: most good, most good indeede,
Lord Angelo having allaires to heaven
Intends you for his swift Ambassadors,
Where you shall be an everlasting Legier;
Therefore your best appointment make with speed,
To Morrow you set on.

Clau. Is there no remedie?

I. None, but such remedie, as to saue a head
To cleanse a heart in twaine:

Cl. But is there anie?

I. Yes brother, you may live;
There is a diuellish mericke in the Judge,
If you'll implore it, that will free your life,
But fetter you till death.

Cl. Perpetuall durance?

I. I infl, perpetuall durance, a refrant
Through all the worlds vastitude you had
To a determin'd scope.

Clau. But in what nature?

I. In such a one, as you confenting too't,
Would barke your honor from that trunque you beare,
And leave you naked.

Cl. Let me know the point.

I. Oh, I do feare thee Cludio, and I quake,
Leaft thou a fearous life shouldit entertaine,
And fix or leeuw winters more respect
Then a perpetuall Honor. Dar'th thou die?
The fence of death is mixt in apprehension,
And the poore Beelte that we tread on
In corporall sufferance, finds a pang as great,
As when a Giant dies.

Cl. Why giue you me this fharne?
Thinkke you I can a refolution fetch
From flowrie tenderness? If I must dye,
I will encounter darkneffe as a bride,
And hugge it in mine armes.

I. There fpake my brother: there my fathers grace
Did vster forth a voice. Yes thou must dye:
Thou art too noble, to conferre a life
In base appliances. This outward fainted Deputie,
Whole fetted vilage, and deliberate word
Nips youth i' th head, and follies doth emmew

As Falcon doth the Fowlie, is yet a diuell:
His blit within being call'd, he would appeare
A pond, as deepes as hell.

Cl. The prenzie, Angelo?

I. Oh 'tis the cunning Lurerie of hell,
The damnefle bodie to immofl, and couer
In prenzie garing; doft thou thinke Cludio,
If I would yeld him my virginitie
Thou might't be freed?

Cl. Oh heauen, it cannot be.

I. Yes, he would giue thee from this rank offence
So to offend him still. This night's the time
That I should do what I abhorre to name,
Or els thou dieft to morrow.

Clau. Thou shalt not do't.

I. Oh, were it but my life,
I'd throw it downe for thy deliverance
As frankly as a pin,

Clau. Thankes elect Iphabella.

I. Be resdie Cludio, for your death to morrow.

Clau. Yes. Has he affections in him,
That thus can make him bite the Law by th'nofe,
When he would force it? Sure it is no time,
Or of the deadly seen it is the leaft.

I. Which is the leaft?

Cl. If it were damnable, he being so wife,
Why should he for the momentarie tricke
Be perdurable finne? Oh Iphabella.

I. What fay's my brother?

Cl. Death is a fearfull thing.

I. And shameful life, a hateful.

Cl. I, bat to die, and go we know not where,
To lie in cold obturcation, and to rot,
This fensible warme motion, to become
A kneded clode; And the delighted spirit
To bath in fierie floods, or to recide
In thrilling Region of thicke-ribbed Ice,
To be imprison'd in the viewleffe winde,
And blowne with refleffe violence round about
The pendent world: or to be worse then worse
Of those, that lawleffe and incertaine thought,
Imagine howling, 'tis too horrible.
The wearefull, and moft loathed worldly life
That Age, Ache, periury, and imprisonme
Can lay on nature, is a Paradise
To what we fear of death.

I. Alas, alas.

Cl. Sweet Sirer, let me live.

What finne you do, to fave a brothers life,
Nature dispenceth with the deede to farre,
That it becomes a vertue.

I. Oh you baf't,
Oh faithleffe Coward, oh dishonest wretch,
Wilt thou be made a man, out of my vice?
Isn't not a kind of Inceel, to take life
From thine owne fitten flame? What should I thinke, Heauen sheld my Mother plaied my Father faire:
For fuch a warped flip of wilderneffe
Nere iff'd from his blood. Take my defance,
Die, perih! But might my bending bowne
Reproue thee from thy fate, it should procede.
Ile pray a thousand praires for thy death,
No word to fave thee.

Cl. Nay heare me Iphabella.

I. Oh fie, fie, fie;
Thy finn's not accidentull, but a Trade;
Mercy to thee would prove it felle a Bawd,
'Tis best that thou diest quickly.
Got. Oh hear me Isabella.
Duke. Vouchsafe a word, young sister, but one word.
Is. What is your Will?
D. Might you dispence with your layture, I would by and by have some speech with you: the satisfaction I would require, is likewise your owne benefit.
Is. I have no superfluous layture, my flay must be flown out of other affaires: but I will attend you a while.
Duke. Son, I have ouer-heard what hath past between you & your sister. Angelo had neuer the purpose to corrupt her; onely he hath made an affer of her vertue, to pradice his judgmen with the dispofition of nature. She (having the truth of honour in her) hath made him that gracious denial, which he is most glad to receive: I am Confeffor to Angelo, and I know this to be true, therefor prepare your selfe to death: do not satisfie your re-resolution with hopes that are fallible, to morrow you must die, goe to your knees, and make ready.
Got. Let me hear this my fister's mind, I am so out of flife with life, that I will fie to be rid of it.
Duke. Hold you there: farewell: Proueit, a word with you.
Pro. What's your will (father?)
Duke. That now you are come, you will be gone: leaue me a while with the Maid, my minde promises with my habit, no loffe shall touch her by my company.
Pro. In good time.
Duke. The hand that hath made you faire, hath made you good: the goodness that is cheape in beauty, makes beauty briefe in goodness; but grace being the soule of your exclamation, shall keepe the body of it euer faire: the affault that Angelo hath made to you, Fortune hath conuayd to my vnderstanding; and but that frailty hath examples for his filling, I fhould wonder at Angelo how will you doe to content this Subtitute, and to leaue your Brother?
Isb. I am now going to refolve him: I had rather my brother die by the Law, then my fonne should be vnlawfullie borne. But (oh) how much is the good Duke deceu'd in Angelo? if euer he returnes, and I can fpeake to him, I will open my lips in vaine, or dicovery his gogerntment.
Duke. That fhall not be much amifie: yet, as the matter now flands, he will avoid your accuation: he made triall of you onelle. Therefore fiften your care on my advice, then run I have in the mouth doing good: a remede prefents it felle. I doe make me felle beleue that you may moft vprightly do a poor wronged Lady a merited benefite; redeem your brother from thengary Law; doe no flaine to your owne gracious perfon, and much pleafe the abfent Duke, if peradventure he fhall euer returne to have hearing of this buifeffe.
Isb. Let me heare you fpeak further: I have fpirit to do any thing that appeares not fowle in the truthe of my fpirit.
Duke. Vertue is bold, and goodnes neuer fearfull: Have you not heard fpeak of Mariana the fitter of Fredrick: he the great Souldier, who mifercai at Sea?
Isb. I have heard of the Lady, and good words went with her name.
Duke. Shee should this Angelo have married: was af-fanced to her oath, and the nuptiall appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the folemnitie, her brother Frederick was wrackt at Sea, hauing in that periffed vellell, the dowry of his fitter: but marke how heauily this befell to the poore Gentlewoman, there she loft a noble and renowned brother, in his houe toward her, euer moft kinde and naturall: with him the portion and finew of her fortune, her marriage dowry: with both, her combinate-husband, this well-seeming Angelo.
Isb. Can this be fo? did Angelo to leaue her?
Duke. Left her in her teares, & dryed not one of them with his comfort: swallowed his vowes whole, pretending in her, dicoueries of difhonor: in fewe, beffow'd her on her owne lamentation, which she yet wares for his fake: & he, a marble to her teares, is washed with them, but relents not.
Isb. What a merit were it in death to take this poore maid from the world? what corruption in this life, that it will let this man live? But how out of this can fhee ausile.
Duke. It is a rupture that you may easilie heal; and the cure of it not onely fakes your brother, but keepe you from delight in doing it.
Isb. Shew me how (good Father.)
Duke. This fore-named Maid hath yet in her the continuance of her fift affection: his vaunt vnkindene
(That in all reafon should have quenched her loue) hath (like an impediment in the Current) made it more vi-
Ient and viruall: Goe you to Angelo, anfwer his requiring with a plausible obedience, agree with his demands to the point: onely referre your felle to this advantage; firft, that your fay with him may not be long: that the time may have all shadow, and silence in it: and the place anfwere to conuenience: this being granted in courfe, and now follows all: we shall aduife this wronged maid to fee'd vp your appointment, goe in your place: if the encounter acknowledge it felle hereafter, it may compell him to her recompence; & here, by this is your brother faued, your honor vaunted, the poore Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt Deputy falted. The Maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt: if you thinke well to carry this as you may, the doublenes of the benefit defends the deceit from repmove. What thinkes you of it?
Isb. The image of it gues me content already, and I truall it will grow to a moft properous perfection.
Duke. It lies much in your holding vp: hacle you speec-dily to Angelo, if for this night he intentre you to his bed, glue him promife of satisfaction: I will priffently to S. Lukes, and ouer-ferue the mofter deplied Mariana; at that place call vpon me, and dispatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.
Isb. I thank you for this comfort:fare you well good father.
Exit.
Enter Elbora, Cleon, Officers.
Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and fell men and women like beasts, we shall haue all the world drink wrothe & white bafard.
Duke. Oh heaven's, what fluffe is here.
Cleon. I was never merry world fince of two vffaries the merrieft was put downe, and the worfer allow'd by order of Law; a far'd gowne to keepe him warme; and fur'd with Foxe and Lamb-skins too, to fignifie, that craft being richer then Innocency, flands for the facing.
Elb. Come your way sir: 'bless ye good Father Frier.
Duke. And you good Brother Frier; what offence hath this man made you, Sir?
Elb. Marry
Eib. Marry Sir, he hath offended the Law; and Sir, we take him to be a Theefe too Sir; for wee have found upon him Sir, a strange Pick-lock, which we have sent to the Deputie.

Duke. Fie, sirrah, a Bawd, a wicked bawd, the collt that thou cauflh to be done, This is thy meanes to live. Do thou but thinke What 'ts to cram a maw, or cloath a backe From such a filthy vice: say to thy felowe, From their abominable and basely touches I drinkke, I eate away my felowe, and live: Canst thou believe thy living is a life, So flimingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Clo. Indeed, it do's thinke in some fort, Sir: But yet Sir I would proye.

Duke. Nay, if the diuell have gien thee proofs for fin Thou wilt proye his. Take him to prifon Officer: Correction, and Infruction muft both worke Ere this rude beaff will proffit.

Eib. He must before the Deputy Sir, he ha's gien him warning: the Deputy cannot abide a Whore-maier: if he be a Whore-monger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

Duke. That we were all, as some would feeme to bee From our faults, as faults from seeming free.

Enter Lucius.

Eib. His necke will come to your waft, a Cord fir.

Clo. I fpy comfort, I cry baile: Here's a Gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Luc. How now noble Pompey? What, at the wheels of Cesar? Art thou led in triumph? What is there none of Pigmaliom Images newly made woman to bee had now, for putting the hand in the pocket, and extracing clutch'd? What reply? Ha? What faith thou to this Tune, Matter, and Method? Is't not drown'd 'tis laft raine? Ha! What faith thou Troth? Is the world as it was Man? Which is the vray? Is it fad, and few words? Or how? 'The Tricke of it?

Duke. Still thou, and thus: still vworfe?

Luc. How doth my deere Mofell, thy Miftris? Procures thee fill? Ha?

Clo. Troth fir, thee hath eaten vp all her beefe, and she is felie in the tub.

Luc. Why 'tis good: It is the right of it: it muft be fo. Enter your father Whore, and your poore-der Baud, an unman'd confequence, it muft be fo. Art going to prifon Pompey?

Clo. Yes faith fir.

Luc. Why 'ts not amiff Pompey: farewell: goe fay I fent thee thether: for debt Pompey? Or how?

Eib. For they are going a bauid.

Luc. Well, then imprifon him: If imprifonment be the due of a bauud, why 'tis his right. Baud is he doubt-leffe, and of antiquity too: Baud borne. Farwell good Pompey: Commend me to the prifon Pompey, you will turne good husband now Pompey, you will keepe the hoafe.

Clo. I hope Sir, your good Worfpil will be my baiie?

Luc. No indeed vinl I not Pompey, it is not the wear: I will pray (Pompey) to encrease your bondage if you take it not patiently: Why, your mettle is the more: Addio triful Pompey. Bleffe you Friar.

'Duke. And you.

Luc. Do's 'Bridge paint fill, Pompey? Ha?

Eib. Come your waftes fir, come.

Clo. You will not baile me then Sir?

Luc. Then Pompey, nor now: what newes abroad Friier? What newes?

Eib. Come your waies fir, come.

Luc. Go to kennell (Pompey) goe:

What newes Friier of the Duke?

Duke. I know none: can you tell me of any?

Luc. Some fay he is with the Emperor of Russif: other fome, he is in Rome: but where is he thinkes you?

Duke. I know not where: but wherefoever, I with him well.

Luc. It was a mad fantafical tricke of him to feale from the State, and vurpe the beggerie hee was new borne to: Lord Angelo Dukes it well in his abfence: he puts tranfegrefion too't.

Duke. He do's well in't.

Luc. A little more lenrible to Lecherie would doe no harne in him: Something too crabb'd that way, Friier.

Duke. It is too general a vice, and feeuerifie mutt cure it.

Luc. Yes in good futh, the vice is of a great kindred; it is vwel allied, but it is imposible to extirpe it quife, Friier, till eating and drinking be put downe. They fay this Angelo was not made by Man and Woman, after this downe-right vray of Oreation: Is it true, thinke you?

Duke. How should he be made then?

Luc. Some report, a Sea-maid fpawn'd him. Some, that he was begotten betweene two Stock-filies. But it is certaine, that when he makes water, his Vrine is congeal'd ice, that I know to bee true: and he is a motion generative, that's infallible.

Duke. You are pleafant fir, and fpake apace.

Luc. Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a Cod-peece, to take away the life of a man? Would the Duke that is absent have done this? Ere he vould have hang'd a man for the getting a hundred Bafards, he vould haue pai'd for the Nurfing a thoufand. He had some feeling of the fport, hee knew the fervice, and that infructed him to merce.

Duke. I never heard the abfent Duke much detected for Women, he was not enclin'd that vray.

Luc. Oh Sirs, you are deceu'd.

Duke. 'Tis not pooffible.

Luc. Who, not the Duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty: and his wife was, to put a ducet in her Clock-dish, the Duke had Crochets in him. Hee would be drunke too, that let me informe you.

Luc. Sir, I was an inward of his: a flie fellow was the Duke, and I beleue I know the caufe of his withdrawing.

Duke. What (I prethe) might be the caufe?

Luc. No, pardon: 'Tis a secret muft bee lockt within the teeth and the lippes: but this I can let you underftand, the greater file of the subiect held the Duke to be write.

Duke. Wife? Why no queftion but he was.

Luc. A very superficial, ignorant, vnweiging fellow Duke. Either this is Enuie in you, Polly, or miftaking: The very freame of his life, and the buifnife he hath helmed, muft upon a warrantted neede, glue him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his owne bringings forth, and hee shall appeare to the enuis, a Scholler, a Statefman, and a Soldier: therefore you speake vnknowingly: or, if your knowledge bee more, it is much darkned in your malice.

G

Luc.
Luc. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke. Love talks with better knowledge, & knowledge with dearer love.

Luc. Come Sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speake. But if ever the Duke returne (as our prais are he may) let mee defire you to make your answer before him: if it bee honnest you have spokke, you have courage to maintaine it; I am bound to call vpone you, and I pray you your name?

Luc. Sir my name is Lucio, well known to the Duke.

Duke. He shall know you better Sir, if I may liue to report you.

Luc. I feare you not.

Duke. O, you hope the Duke will returne no more: or you imagine me to vanhurtfull an opposte: but indeed I can doe you little harme: You'll for-weare this againe?

Luc. He be hang'd drft: Thou art deceiv'd in mee Friar. But no more of this: Canst thou tell if Claudius die to morrow, or no?

Duke. Why should he die Sir?

Luc. Why? For filling a bottle with a Tunne-dish: I would not the Duke we talek of were return'd against this vagnenbur'd Agent will vn-people the Province with Continence. Sparowes must not build in his house-eues, because they are lecherous The Duke yet would have darke deeds darkelie anwered, hee would never bring them to light: would hee were return'd. Marrie this Claudius is condemned for vntruthing. Farewel good Friar, I preache pray for me: The Duke (I say to thee againe) would eate Mutton on Fridays. He's now past it, yet (and I say to thee) hee would mouth with a bel-gar, though the smelt browne-bread and Garlick: say that I said so: Farewel.

Exit.

Duke. No might, nor greatness in mortality Can censure scape: Back-wounding culmene The whiteft vertue strikes. What King so strong, Can tie the gall vp in the flandersong tong? But who comes here?

Enter Efcallus, Procuft, and Berard.

Efc. Go away with her to prifon.

Berard. Good my Lord be good to mee, your Honor is accounted a mercifull man: good my Lord.

Efc. Double, and treble admonition, and fill forfelie in the fame kinde: This would make mercy sweare and play the Tirant.

Pres. A Bavd of euen yeares continuance, may it please your Honor.

Berard. My Lord, this is one Lucio's information againft me, Mithris Kate Kipe-deiuan was with childe by him in the Dukes time, he promised her marriage: his Childe is a yeere and a quarter olde come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it my selfe, and fee how she goes about to abase me.

Efc. That fellow is a fellow of much Licencie: Let him be call'd before vs. Away with her to prifon: Go eto, no more words. Procuft, my Brother Anges will not be alter'd, Claudius must die to morrow: Let him be furnish'd with Diuines, and have all charitable preparation. If my brother wrouit by my pite, it should not be so with him.

Pres. So plea\-se you, this Friar hath beene with him, and adul'd him for the enter-teniment of death.

Efc. Good-euen, good Father.

Duke. Bliffe, and goodnesse on you.

Efc. Of whence are you?

Duke. Not of this Crountrie, though my change is now To vfe it for my time: I am a brother

Of gracious Order, late come from the Sea,

In speciall businesse from his Holinesse.

Efc. What newses abroad I'th World?

Duke. None, but that there is so great a Feuor on goodsmeet, that the diffolution of it must cure it. Nocelie is onely in request, and as it is as dangerous to be aged in any kinde of course, as it is vertuous to be constant in vndertaking. There is scarce true enough alue to make Societies secure, but Securite enough to make Fellowships accord: Much vpon this riddle runs the wifedome of the world: This newses is old enough, yet it is euerie daies newes. I pray you Sir, of what dif-pofition was the Duke?

Efc. One, that aboue all other strikes, Contended especielly to know himselfe.

Duke. What pleasure was he given to?

Efc. Rather rejoicing to fee another merryn, than merrie at anie thing which profect to make him reioice.

A Gentleman of all tempemance. But leave wee him to his euents, with a praiy they may proue propperous, & let me defire to know, how you finde Claudius prepar'd?

I am made to vnderstand, that you have lent him vi-ftion.

Duke. He professe to have receuied no smither measure from his Judge, but most willingly humbles himfelfe to the determination of liucfe: yet had he framed to himselfe (by the instruction of his trauitle) manie deceyuing promises of life, which I (by my good lelfure) have discredite to him, and now is he relou'd to die.

Efc. You have paid the heavens your Function, and the prifoner the vere debt of your Calling. I haue la-bour'd for the poore Gentleman, to the extremest Shore of my modell, but my brother-liucfe haue I found so feuerue, that he hath forc'd me to tell him, hee is indeeue liucfe.

Duke. If his owne life, Anwer the straіneffe of his proceeding, It shall become him well: wherein if he chance to faile he hath fentenc'd himselfe.

Efc. I am going to visit the prifoner, Fare you well.

Duke. Peace be with you. He who the word of Heauen will beare, Should be as holy, as fuewre: Paterne in himselfe to know, Grace to band, and Vertue go: More, nor leffe to others paying, Then by felie-offences weighing. Shame to him, whose cruelly Striking, Kills for fault of his owne liking: Twice treble frame on Anges, To vweed his vice, and let his grow. Oh, what may Man within him hide, Though Angel on the outward side? How may Licenfe made in crimes, Making trauelke on the Times, To draw with yde Spiders ftrings Most ponderous and subfiantiall things? Craft against vice, I must applie. With Anges to night shall ye His old betroathed (but defi'd:) Sodifguise shall by th'disguised Pay with falhood, safce exa\-cting, And performe an olde contracting.

Exit.

Enter. Mariana, and Boy singing.

Song.
Take, oh take thy lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn,
And thy eyes: the brake of day
Lights that did mislead the Mornes;
But my kisses bring againe, bring againe,
Scales of love, but steal'd in vain, steal'd in vain.

Enter Duke.

Mar. Break ye off thy song, and haste thee quick away,
Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.
I have made you, Sir, and well could I
You had not found me here so mucchall.
Let me excuse me, and beleaue me so,
My mirth it much displeas'd but pleas'd my wo.
Duk. 'Tis good; though Mufick oft hath such a charm
To make bad, good, and good prooue to harme,
I pray you tell me, hath any body enquir'd for mee here to day; much upon this time haue I promis'd here to mee.

Mar. You have not bin enquir'd after: I haue fat here all day.

Enter Iphabell.

Duk. I doe constantly beleue you: the time is come even now. I shall crave your forbearance alittle, may be I will call upon you anoone for some advantage to your selfe.

Mar. I am always bound to you.

Duk. Very well met, and well come: What is the newest from this good Deputie?

Iph. He hath a Garden circummurd with Bricke,
Whole wherefore is with a Vineyard back't;
And to that Vineyard is a planched gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger Key: This other doth command a little doore,
Which from the Vineyard to the Garden leades,
There haue I made my promis, upon the Heavy midle of the night, to call vpon him.

Duk. But shal you on your knowledge find this way?

Iph. I haue tane a due, and wary note vpon't,
With whispering, and most guilefull diligence,
In action all of precepts, he did shew me
The way twice ove.

Duk. Are there no other tokens
Between you 'greed, concerning her obedience?

Iph. No: none but onely a reape its dark, And that I haue poffed him, my most flay
Can be but briefe: for I haue made him know,
I haue a Servant comes with me along
That flaes vpon me; whoe perfusion is,
I come about my Brother.

Duk. 'Tis well borne vp,
I haue not yet made knowne to Mariana

Enter Mariana.

A word of this: what haue, within; come forth,
I pray you be acquainted with this Maid,
She comes to doe you good.

Iph. I doe defare the like.

Duk. Do you perwade your selfe that I respect you?

Mar. Good Frier, I know you do, and haue found it.

Duk. Take then this your companion by the hand
Who hath a flotte readie for your care:
I shall attend your leisure, but make haste
The vaporous night approaches.

Mar. With pleae you walke aside.

Duk. Oh Place, and greemes: millions of false els
Are flucke vpon thee: volumes of report
Run with these falles, and most contrarious Quell
Vpon thy doings: thousand escapes of wit
Make thee the father of their idle dreams,
And racke thee in their fancies. Welcome, how agreed?

Enter Mariana and Iphabell.

Iph. She'll take the enterprise vpon her father,
If you aduise it.

Duk. It is not my consent,
But my entertay too.

Gu. Little have you to lye
When you depart from them, but soft and low,
Remember now my brother.

Mar. Fear me not.

Duk. Nor gentle daughter, feare you not at all:
He is your husband on a pre-contract:
To bring you thus together 'tis no finne,
Sith that the Iustice of your title to him
Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let vs goe,
Our Corne's to reape, for yet our Tithes to low. Exeunt.

Scene Secunda.

Enter Proueth and Clowe.

Pro. Come hither fris; can you cut off a mans head?

Clo. If the man be a Bachelor Sir, I can:
But if he be a married man, he's his wifes head,
And I can neuer cut off a womans head.

Pro. Come sir, leave me your snatches, and yeeld mee a direct auerture. To morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine: heere is in our prizon a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper, if you will take it on you to affit him, it shall redeeme you from your Gyues: if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliuereance with an unpitied whipping; for you have beene a notorious bawd.

Clo. Sir, I haue beene an unlawfull bawd, time out of minde, but yet I will bee content to be a lawfull hangman: I would bee glad to receiuie some infraction from my fellow partner.

Pro. What haue, Abhorsan: where's Abhorsan there?

Enter Abhorsan.

Abb. Doe you call Sir?

Pro. Sirha, here's a fellow who will help you to morrow in your execution: if you thinke it meet, compoud with him by the yeer, and let him abide here with you, if not, vfe him for the present, and difmisse him, hee cannot plead his elimation with you: he hath beene a Bawd.

Abb. A Bawd Sir? fie vpon him, he will difcredit our mysterie.

Pro. Doe too Sir, you waigh equallie: a feather will turne the Scale.

Exit.

Clo. Pray Sir, by your good favor: for surely sir, a good favor you haue, but that you have a hanging look: Doe you call sir, your occupation a mysterie?

G 2 Abb. 1,
Measure for Measure.

Abb. Sir, a Misterie.

Pro. Painting Sir, I have heard say, is a Misterie; and your Whores sir, being member of my occupation, vfing painting, do prose my Occupation, a Misterie: but what Misterie there should be in hangings, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine.

Pro. Sir, it is a Misterie.

Pro. Euerie true mans apparel fits your Theefe.

Pro. If it be too little for your theee, your true man thinks it bigg enough. If it bee too bigg for your

Theefe, your Theefe thinks it little enough: So euerie true mans apparel fits your Theefe.

Enter Pro.

Pro. Are you agreed?

Pro. Sir, I will serve him: For I do finde your Hangman is a more penitent Trade then your Bawd: he doth ofter ask forgiveness.

Pro. You sirth, provide your blocke and your Axe to morrow, foure a clocke.

Abb. I am on (Bawd) I will instruct thee in my Trade: follow.

Pro. I do desire to learne sir: and I hope, if you have occasion to vse me for your owne turne, you shall finde me y're: For truly sir, for your kindnese, I owe you a good turne.

Exit Pro. Call bether Barnardine and Claudio:

Th'one has my pite: not a lot the other,

Being a Murtherer, though he were my brother.

Enter Claudio.

Look, here's the Warrant Claudio, for thy death,

'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to morrow

Thou must be made immoall. Where's Barnardine?

Claudio. As faft lock'd vp in sleepe, as guittelle labour,

When it lies flarkely in the Truellers bones,

He will not wake.

Pro. Who can do good on him?

Well, go, prepare your flese. But hark, what noife?

Heauen give your spirits comfort: by, and by,

I hope it is some pardon, or reprove

For the most gentle Claudio. Welcome Father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The beft, and wholomft spirits of the night,

Insellup you, good Proosow: who call'd heere of late?

Pro. None fine the Curpewh rung.

Pro. No.

Duke. They will then er't be long.

Pro. What comfort is for Claudio?

Duke. There's some in it.

Pro. It is a bitter Deputation.

Duke. Not so, not so: his life is parallel'd

Even with the stroke and line of his great Judith:

He doth with holie abstinence fubdue

That in himselfe, which he ffures on his powre to Qualifie in others: were he mei'd with that

Which he corrects, then were he tirannous,

But this being is, he's io. Now are they come.

This is a genteel Proosow, idole when

The feeld Gaoler is the friend of men:

How now? what noife? That spirit's poifeft with hat

That wounds th'vnfiting Poetern with thse strokes.

Pro. There he must flay vntil the Officer

Arife to let him in: he is call'd vp.

Duke. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet?

But he must die to morrow?

Pro. None Sir, none.

Duke. As neere the dawning Proosow, as it is,

You shall hear more ere Morning.

Pro. Happely

You something know; yet I believe there comes

No countermand: no such example haue we:

Besides, vpon the verie siege of Iustice,

Lord Angelo hath to the publike care

Profeft the contrarie.

Enter a Messenger.

Duke. This is his Lords man.

Pro. And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Miff. My Lord hath fent you this note,

And by mee this further charge;

That you fawre not from the smalllest article of it,

Neither in time, matter, or other circumstance.

Good morrows for as I take it, it is almoft day.

Pro. I tall obey him.

Duke. This is his Pardon purchas'd by such fin,

For which the Pardoner himfelfe is in:

Hence hath offence his quicke celeritie,

When it is borne in high Authority,

When Vice makes Merce; Mercie's fe extended,

That for the faults lice, is th'offender frendied.

Now Sir, what newes?

Pro. I told you:

Lord Angelo (be-like) thinking me remifile

In mine Office, awakens mee

With this vnwent putting on, methinks strangely:

For he hath not vs'd it before.

Duke. Pray you let's hear.

The Letter.

Whatsoever you may heare to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by force of the clocke, and in the afternoon Bernar-dine: For my better satisfaction, let mee have Claudio's head sent mee by five. Let this be daily performed with a thought that more depends on it, then we mutt yet deliver.

Thus faile not to doe your Office, as you will anfwere it at your perill.

What say you to this Sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in theafternoon?

Pro. A Bohemian borne: But here run't vp & bred,

One that is a printer nine yeeres old.

Duke. How came it, that the abfent Duke had not either deliuer'd him to his libertie, or executed him I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.

Pro. His friends still wrought Reprueves for him:

And indeed his fad till now in the government of Lord

Angelo, came not to an vndoubtfull profe.

Duke. It is now apparant?

Pro. Most manifefl, and not denied by himfelfe.

Duke. Hath he borne himfelfe penitently in prison?

How faeme he to be touch'd?

Pro. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken fleepe, carefel, wreakeffe, and tarefelle of what's paff, pretent, or to come: Insensible of mortallity, and desperatly mortall.

Duke. He wants advice.

Pro. He will heare none: he hath euermore had the liberty of the prison: heume him leave to escape hence, hee would not Drunk one many times a day, if not many daies together drunke. We have verie oft awak'd him, as if to carrie him to execution, and then'd him a feoming warrant for it, it hath not moued him at all.

Duke.
Measure for Measure.

Duke. More of him anon: There is written in your brow Prossous, honesty and constance; if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me; but in the boldness of my cunning, I will lay my sale in hazard: Claudius, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the Law, then Angelo who hath contemned him. To make you understand this in a ministred effect, I crave but four daies reftit: for which, you are to do me both a present, and a dangerous courtei.

Pro. Pray Sir, in what?
Duke. In the delaying death.

Pro. Alack, how may I do it? Having the house illimit, and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my cafe as Claudio’s, to croffe this in the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine Order, I warrant you, if my instructions may be your guide.

Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, and his head borne to Angelo.

Pro. Angelo hath feene them both, and will discover the fauer.

Duke. Oh, death’s a great disquieter, and you may add to it; Shuše the head, and tie the beard, and say it was the defire of the penitent to be so bar’d before his death: you know the course is common. If any thing fail to you upon this, more then thanke and good fortune, by the Saint whom I profess, I will plead against it with my life.

Pro. Pardon me, good Father, it is against my oath.

Duke. Were you fware to the Duke, or to the Deputy?
Pro. To him, and to his Substitutes.

Duke. You will think you have made no offence, if the Duke aussuch the l ufice of your dealing?
Pro. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a reemblance, but a certainty; yet since I fee you fearefull, that neither my coate, integrity, nor perfwaion, can with eafe attempt you, I will go further then I meant, to plucks all feares out of you. Looke you Sir, heere is the hand and Seale of the Duke; you know the Charracler I doubt not, and the Signet is not strange to you?

Pro. I know them both.

Duke. The Contents of this, is the returne of the Duke; you shall anon over-reade it at your plesaure: where you falle finde within these two daies, he will be heere. This is a thing that Angelo knowes not; for hee this very day receiues letters of strange tenor, perchaunce of the Dukes death, perchaunce entering into some Mofaeftery, but by chance nothing of what is writ.Looke, this unfolding Starre calles vp the Sheepheard; put not your felle into amazement, how these things should be; all difficulties are but eafe when they are knowne. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardines head: I will give him a profert thrifie, and aduie him for a better place. Yet you are amaze’d, but this flall absolutely refolue you: Come away, it is almost cleeare dawn. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clownes.

Clo. I am as well acquainted heere, as I was in our house of profession: one would thinke it were Midas Ouer-dons owne house, for heere be manie of her olde Customers. First, here’s young Mr Ralph, hee’s in for a commoditie of browne paper, and olde Ginger, nine foore and eueneteene pounds, of which hee made fife Markes ready money: marrie then, Ginger was not much in requite, for the olde Women were all dead. Then is there heere one Mr Capell, at the fuite of Master Three-Pile the Mercer, for some foure fuites of Peach-colour’d Satten, which now peaches him a beggar. What’s the newes with you?

Abb. Truly Sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers: for looke you, the Warrants come.

Bar. You Rogue, I haue bin drinking all night, I am not fittted for’t.

Clo. Oh, the better Sirr for he that drinks all night, and is hanged betimes in the morning, may sleepe the founder all the next day.

Enter Duke.

ther: do we left now thinke you?

Duke. Sir, induced by my charitie, and hearing how haftily you are to depart, I am come to aduise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Bar. Friar, not I: I haue bin drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare mee, or they shall heare out my brains with bilens: I will not content to die this day, that’s certaine.

Duke. Oh sir, you muft: and therefore I beseech you Looke forward on the jornie you shall go.
Bar. I sware I will not die to day for anie mans perfwation.

Duke. But heare you: Bar. Not a word: if you haue anie thing to say to me, come to my Ward: for thence will not I to day.

Enter Prossous.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Varrius, Lords, Angeli, Escalus, Lucio, Citizens at several doors.

Duke. My very worthy Cofen, fairly met, Our old, and faithfull friend, we are glad to see you. Ang. &c. Happy returne be to your royall grace. Duke. Many and harty thankings to you both: We have made enquiry of you, and we heare Such goodnesse of your Lutice, that our soole Cannot but yeeld you forth to publique thankes Forerunning more requital. Ang. You make my bonds still greater. Duke. Oh your deceit speaks loud, & I should wrong it To locke it in the weary of covert boisme When it deferves with characters of brasse A forted residence gainst the tooth of time, And raze of oblivion: Glue we your hand And let the Subiect see, to make them know That outward curtseyes would faine proclaime Favours that keeps within: Come & calme, You must waile by vs, on our other hand: And good supporters are you. Enter Peter and Isabella. Peter. Now is your time Speake loud, and kneele before him. Isab. Lutice, O royall Duke, waile your regard Upon a wrong'd (I would faine have fale a Maid) Oh worthy Prince, diuonor not your eye By throwinge it on any other obiect, Till you have heard me, in my true complaint, And gueine me Lutice, Lutice, Lutice, Isab. Duke. Relate your wrongs: In what, by whom? be briefe: Here is Lord Angeli shall give you lutice, Reveale your felle to him. Isab. Oh worthy Duke, You bid me seeke redemption of the dwell, Heare me your felle: for that which I must speake Must either punche me, not being beleue'd, Or wring redresse from you: Heare me: oh heare me, heare. Ang. My Lord, her wits I feake me are not firme: She hath bin a fitor to me, for her Brother Cut off by course of lutice. Isab. By course of Lutice. Ang. And she will speake most bitterly, and strange. Isab. Moth.
Measure for Measure.

Iab. Most strange; but yet most truely wil I speake,
That Angelo's forsworne, is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murderer, is't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thief,
An hypocrite, a virgin violator,
Is it not strange? and strange?

Duke. Nay it is ten times strange?
Iab. It is not truer he is Angelo,
Then this is all as true, as it is strange;
Nay, it is ten times true, for truth is truth
To th'end of reckoning.

Duke. Away with her: poor foule
She speakes this, in th'infirmity of fence.
Iab. Oh Prince, I conjure thee, as thou beleev't
There is another comfort, then this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madneffe; make it not impossible
That which but feemes vnlike, 'tis not impossible
But one, the wickedd caitiff on the ground
May feeme as the, as graue, as luft, as absolute:
As Angelo, even so may Angelo
In all his dresseing, casings, titles, formes,
Be an arch-villaine: Beleeue it, royl Prince
If he be lefte, he's nothing, but he's more,
Had I more name for badneffe.

Duke. By mine honeffy
If he be mad, as I beleue no other,
Her madneffe hath the oddest frame of feene,
Such a dependancy of thing, on thing,
As ere I heard in madneffe.

Iab. Oh gracious Duke
Harpe not on that; nor do not banish reason
For inequality, but let your reason preserue
To make the truth appeare, where it feemes hid,
And hide the falsfe feemes true.

Duke. Many that are not mad
Have fore more lacke of reason:
What would you fay?

Iab. I am the Sister of one Claudius,
Condemned vnpon the Act of Fornication
To loofe his head, condemn'd by Angelo,
I, (in probation of a Sisterhood)
Was sent to by my Brother, one Lucio
As then the Meffenger.

Luc. That's I, and't like your Grace:
I came to her from Claudius, and defir'd her,
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo,
For her poore Brothers pardon.

Iab. That's he indeed.

Duke. You were not bid to speake.

Luc. No, my good Lord,
Nor with'd to hold my peace.

Duke. I with you now then,
Pray you take note of it: and when you have
A bullifie for your felle: pray haueven you then
Be perfect.

Luc. I warrant your honor.

Duke. The warrant's for your felle: take heed to't.

Iab. This Gentleman told somwhat of my Tale.

Luc. Right.

Duke. It may be right, but you are 't the wrong
To speake before your time: proceed.

Iab. I went
To this pernicious Califfe Deputie.

Duke. That's somwhat madly spoken.

Iab. Pardon it,

The phrase is to the matter.

Iab. In briefes, to let the needless proceepe by:
How I perwaded, how I praid, and kneel'd,
How he refiell'd me, and how I repli'd
(For this was of much length) the vild conclusion
I now begin with griefe, and shame to vter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaffe body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust
Release my brother; and after much debate,
My liftery remove, confutes mine honour,
And I did yeeld to him: But the next morne betimes,
His purpose furfetting, he sends a warrant
For my poore brothers head.

Duke. This is most likely.

Iab. Oh that it were as like as it is true. (speak't)

Duke. By heauen (fond wretch)? knoweft not what thou
Or else thou art suborn'd against his honor
In hatefull praftice: firft his Integritie
Stands without blemish: next it imports no reason,
That with such vehement he should pursue
Faults proper to himselfe: if he had fo offended
He would have weight'd thy brother by himselfe,
And not have cut him off: some one hath fet you on:
Confeffe the truth, and say by whole advice
Thou camst heere to compleaine.

Iab. And is this all?
Then oh you blessed Ministers above
Kepe me in patience, and with ripened time
Vnfold the eull, which is heere wrapt vp
In countenance: heauen thielde your Grace from wo,
As I thus wrong'd, hence vnbelieved goe.

Duke. I know you'll take be gone: An Officer: To Prison with her: Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall,
On him to necer vs? This needs must be praftice,
Who knew of your intent and comming hither?

Iab. One that I would were heere, Frier Lodowick.

Duke. A ghostly Father, belike:
Who knowes that Lodowick?

Luc. My Lord, I know him, 'tis a mealling Fryer,
I do not like the man: had he been Lay my Lord,
For certaine words he spake against your Grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him foulely.

Duke. Words against mee? this a good Fryer belike
And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our Substitute: Let this Fryer be found.

Luc. But yeerndight my Lord, she and that Fryer
May them at the prizon: a lawye Fryer,
A very scurril fellow.

Peter. Bleff'd be your Royall Grace:
I have stood by your Lord, and I have heard
Your royall ear abus'd: first hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your Substitute,
Who is as free from touch, or foyle with her
As she from one vngot.

Duke. We did beleue no leffe.

Know you that Frier Lodowick that the speakes of?

Peter. I know him for a man diane and holy,
Not fcarcey, nor a temporary medler
As he's reported by this Gentleman:
And on my trut, a man that never yet
Did (as he vouches) mis-report your Grace.

Luc. My Lord, most villanously beleue it.

Peter. Well: he in time may come to cleere himselfe;
But as this in fantast he is sick, my Lord:

Of
Measure for Measure.

Of a strange Feuor: upon his more request
Being come to knowledge, that there was complaint
Intended 'gainst Lord Angelo, come I hether
To speake as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true, and false: And what he with his oath
And all probation will make vp full clear
Whensoever he's conuerted: First for this woman,
To iustifie this worthy Noble man
So vulgarly and personally accus'd,
Her shall you hear disfroved to her eyes,
Till the selfe confesse it.

Duk. Good Friar, let's hear it:
Doe you not smifie at this, Lord Angelo?
Oh heaven, the vanity of wretched fools.
Glue vs some seates, Come cozen Angelo,
In this I'll be impartial: be you judge
Of your owne Caufe: Is this the Witnes Frier?

Enter Mariana.

First, let her shew your face, and after, speake.

Mar. Pardon my Lord, I will not shew my face
Untill my husband bid me.

Duk. What, are you married?

Mar. No my Lord.

Duk. Are you a Maid?

Mar. No my Lord.

Duk. A Widow then?

Mar. Neither, my Lord.

Duk. Why you are nothing then neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife?

Luc. My Lord, the may be a Pancke: for many of them, are neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife.

Duk. Silence that fellow: I would he had some caufe to prattle for himselfe.

Luc. Well my Lord.

Mar. My Lord, I doe confesse I never was married,
And I confesse besides, I am no Maid,
I have known my husband, yet my husband
Knowes not, that ever he knew me.

Luc. He was drunk then, my Lord; it can be no better.

Duk. For the benefit of silence, would thou wert go to.

Luc. Well, my Lord.

Duk. This is no witnesse for Lord Angelo.

Mar. Now I come to, my Lord.

Shew that accuses him of Foragination,
In fife-fame manner, doe accuse my husband,
And charges him, my Lord, with such a time,
When I'le depose I had him in mine Armes
With all this effect of Love.

Ang. Charges shee mee then me?

Mar. Not that I know.

Duk. No? she fay your husband.

Mar. Why luft, my Lord, and that is Angelo,
Who thinks he knowes, that he nere knew my body,
But knowes, he thinkes, that he knowes Isabella.

Ang. This is a strange abufr: Let's let thy face.

Mar. My husband bids me, now I will vnamake.

This is that face, thou cruell Angelo
Which once thou forswt, was worth the looking on:
This is the hand, which with a vowe contractd
Was fast belocet in thine: This is the body
That tooke away the match from Isabella,
And did supply thee at thy garden-house
In her Imagind person.

Duk. Know you this woman?

Luc. Carnallie the tares.

Duk. Sirch, no more.

Luc. Enough my Lord.

Ang. My Lord, I must confesse, I know this woman,
And fie yere since there was some speach of marriage
Betwixt my felie, and her: which was broke off,
Partly for that her promis'd proportions
Came short of Compoition: But in chiefe
For that her reputation was dis-valued
In leviete: Since which time of fie yere
I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her
Upon my faith, and honor.

Mar. Noble Prince,
As there comes light from heaven, and words firo breath,
As there is sense in truth, and truth in vertue,
I am affinced this mans wife, as strongly
As words could make vp vowe: And my good Lord,
But Twelvnight last gon, in's garden house,
He knew me as a wife. As this is true,
Let me in safety raise me from my knees,
Or else for ever be confixed here
A Marble Monument.

Ang. I did but smifie till now,
Now, good my Lord, give me the scope of Justice,
My patience here is touch'd: I doe perceiue
These poore informall women, are no more
But instrumcnts of more mightier member
That lets them on, Let me haue way, my Lord
To finde this pruflife out.

Duk. 1, with my heart,
And punish them to your height of pleasure,
Thou foolish Friar, and thou pernicious woman
Compaft with her that's gone: thinkt thou, thy oaths,
Though they would sweare downe each particular Saint,
Were testimomies against his worth, and credit
That's seald in approbation? you, Lord Epscadus
Sit with my Cozen, lend him your kinde paines
To finde out this abufe, whence 'tis deriu'd.
There is another Friar that let them on,
Let him be sent for.

Peter. Would he were here, my Lord, for he indeed
Hath let the women on to this Complaint:
Your Prouost knowes the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

Duk. Go, doe it instantly:

And you, my noble and well-warranted Cofen
Whom it concerns to heare this matter forth,
Doe with your inuiures as seemes you beft
In any chafflement: I for a while
Will leave you; but let not you till you haue
Well determin'd vpon these Slanderers.

Exit.

Efc. My Lord, we'll doe it throughly: Signior Lucio, did not you say you knew that Friar Ladowrick to be a dishonest perfon?

Luc. Cauumini non facit Monachum, honest in nothing but in hios Clothes, and one that hath spoke most villaneous speeches of the Duke.

Efc. We shall intreat you to abide heere till he come,
And informe you against him: we shall finde this Friar a notable fellow.

Luc. As any in Vienna, on my word.

Efc. Call that same Isabella here once again, I would speake with her: pray you, my Lord, glue mee leave to question, you shall see how Ie handle her.

Luc. Not better then he, by her owne report.

Efc. Say you?

Luc. Marry sir, I thinke, if you handled her privately
Measure for Measure.

She would sooner confesse, perchance publicly she'll be ahamd.'

Enter Duke, Proserp. Isabella.

Etc. I will goe darkely to worke with her.

Luc. That's the way: for women are light at mid-nignt.

Etc. Come on Mitrid, here's a Gentlewman,

Denies all that you have said.

Luc. My Lord, here comes the raclaf I spoke of,

Here, with the Proserp.

Etc. In very good time: speake not to you him, till we call vpon you.

Luc. Mum.

Etc. Come Sir, did you see these women on to flander Lord Angelo? they have confed'd you did.

Duch. "Iis fide. Etc. How? Know you where you are?

Duch. Respeft to your great place; and let the diuell

Be sometime honoure'd, for his burning throne.

Where is the Duke? 'tis he should heare me speake.

Etc. The Duke's in vs: and we will heare you speake,

Looke you speake truly.

Duch. Boldly, at least. But oh poor foules,

Come you to feele the Lamb here of the Fox;

Good night to your redreffe: Is the Duke gone?

Then is your cause gone too: The Duke's vniuift,

Thus to retort your maiftif Apoalle,

And put your triall in the villains mouth,

Which here you come to accuse.

Luc. This is the raclaf: this is he I spoke of.

Etc. Why thou vnairerend, and vnshadowed Fryer:

Is't not enough thou hast fabor'd these women,

To accuse this worthy man? but in foule mouth,

And in the witneffe of his proper eare,

To call him villain: and then to glance from him,

To th'Duke himfelfe, to taxe him with Injuittice:

Take him hence to th' racke with him: we'll towre you

Jout by joutns, but we will know his purpole:

What? vniuift?

Duch. Be not fo hot: the Duke dare

No more fretch this finger of mine, then he

Dare racke his owne: his Subiect am I not.

Nor here Provinciall: My buiffice in this State

Made me a looker on here in Venna,

Where I haue fene corruption boyle and bubble,

Till it ore-run the Stew: Lawes, for all fault,

But faults fo countenanc'd, that the ftrong Statutes

Stand like the forretes in a Barbers shop,

As much in mocke, as marke.

Etc. Slander to th' State:

Away with him to prifon.

Ang. What can you vouch againft him Signior Lucio?

Is this the man that you did tell vs of?

Duch. This is my Lord: come hither goodman baldpate, doe you know me?

Duch. I remember you Sir, by the found of your voice,

I met you at the Prifon, in the abence of the Duke.

Luc. Oh, did you so? and do you remember what you fald of the Duke?

Duch. Moft notably Sir.

Luc. Do you fo Sir: And was the Duke a flockemen, a foole, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duch. You muft (Sir) change perfon with me, ere you make that my report: you indeede spoke fo of him, and much more, much worfe.

Luc. Oh thou damnable fellow: did not I plucke thee by the nofe, for thy speeches?

Duch. I profeff, I love the Duke, as I love my felfe.

Ang. Harke how the villaine would close now, after his treftable abuses.

Etc. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withall: Away with him to prifon: Where is the Proserp? away with him to prifon: lay bolts enough vpon him: let him speake no more: away with thofe Giglets too, and with the other confedifhe companions.

Duch. Stay Sir, play a while.

Ang. What, refaits he? helpe him Lucio.

Luc. Come Sir, come Sir, come Sir: fo fhir, why you bald-pated lying raclaf you must be hooded muft you?

Shou your knaues village with a poxe to you: shou your thereby fittine fice, and be hang'd an hour: will't not of?

Duch. Thou art the firft knaue, that ere mad't a Duke.

First Proserp, let me byfhe thefe gentle three:

Sneake not away Sir, for the Fryer, and you,

Muft have a word anon: lay hold on him.

Luc. This may prove worfe then hanging.

Duch. What you have spoke, I pardon: fit you downe,

We'll borrow place of him: Sir, by your leave:

Ha'ft thou word: or, wit, or impudence,

That yet can doe thee office? If thou ha't

Rely vpon it, till my tale be heard,

And hold no longer out.

Ang. Oh, my dread Lord,

I shoul be guiltier then my guiltineffe,

To thinke I can be vnfoleerneable,

When I perceiue your grace, like powre diuine,

Hath look'd vpon my paffa. Then good Prince,

No longer Seflion hold vpon my fhamne,

But let my Triall, be mine owne Confeffion:

Immediate fentence then, and fquent death,

Is all the grace I beg.

Duch. Come hither Mariana,

Say: was't thow ere contracled to this woman?

Ang. I was my Lord.

'Duch. Goe take her hence, and marry her infantly.

Do you the office (Fryer) which confummate,

Etc. My Lord, I am more amaz'd at his difhone,

Then at the strangeneffe of it.

Duch. Come hither Isabella,

Your Fryer is now your Prince: As I was then

Aduerfifying, and foly to your buiffife,

(Not changing heart with habit) I am still,

Attourned at your fervice.

Iob. Oh give me pardon

That I, your vaiffalle, have imploide, and pain'd

Your vikrnoune Soueraigntie.

'Ang. You are pardon'd Isabella:

And now, deere Malice, be you as free to vs.

Your Brothers death I know fts at your heart:

And you may maurbile, why I obfcur'd my felfe,

Labouring to faue his life: and would not rather

Make rath renountrance of my hidden powre,

Then let him fo be loft: oh most knide Maid,

It was the twift celerite of his death,

Which I did thinke, with flower foot came on,

That brain'd my purpole: but peace be with him,

That life is better life palt fearing death,

Then that which blies to feare: make it your comfort,
Measure for Measure.

So happy is your Brother.

Enter Angell, Maria, Peter, Provost.

Isab. I doe my Lord.

Duk. For this new-married man, approaching here,
Whole fair imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well defended honor; you must pardon
For Marianne's fake: But as he adiug'd your Brother,
Being criminal, in double violation
Of sacred Cauthitie, and of promisse-breath;
Thereon dependant for your Brothers life,
The very mercy of the Law cries out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue.

An Angell for Claudius, death for death:
Hate fill gaites hate, and leasure, answers leasure;
Like doth quit like, and Measure fill for Measure:
Then Angell, thy fault's thus manifest'd;
Which though thou woul'dt deny, denies thee vantage.
We doe condemne thee to the very Blockes
Where Claudio flipp'd to death, and with like hate.
Away with him.

Mar. Oh my most gracious Lord,
I hope you will not mocke me with a husband?

Duk. It is your husband mock't you with a husband,
Contesting to the fafe-guard of your honor.
I thought your marriage fit: else Imputation,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life,
And chuse your good to come: For his Poffessions,
Although by confutation they are ours;
We doe en-flame, and widow you with all,
To buy you a better husband.

Mar. Oh my deere Lord,
I craue no other, nor no better man.

Duk. Neuer craue him, we are defitive.

Mar: Gentle my Liege.

Duk. You doe but looee your labour.
Away with him to death: Now Sir, to you.

Mar. Oh my good Lord, sweet Isabell, take my part,
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come,
I'll lend you all my life to doe you service.

Duke. Against all fence you doe importune her,
Should the kneele downe, in merie of this fact,
Her Brothers ghost, his paused bed would breake,
And take her hence in horror.

Mar: Isabell:
Sweet Isabell, doe yet but kneele by me,
He or vp your hands, say nothing I'll speake all.
They say beft men are moulded out of faults,
And for the moft, become much more the better
For being a little bad: So may my husband.
Oh Isabell: will you not lend a kneee?

Duk. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isab. Moft bounteous Sir,
Looke if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my Brother liu'd: I partly thinkes,
A due fincerite gouern'd his deedes,
Till he did looke on me: Since it is so,
Let him not die: my Brother had but justice,
In that he did the thing for which he died.
For Angell, his Act did not ore-take his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That penall'd by the way: thoughts are no subleets
Intents, but merely thoughts.

Mar. Merely my Lord.

Duk. Your suit's vnprofitable: stand vp I say:
I have bethought me of another fault.

Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an vnufuall howre?

Pron. It was commanded fo.

Duk. Had you a speciall warrant for the deed?

Pron. No my good Lord: it was by priuate message.

Duk. For which I doe difcharge you of your office,
Give vp your keyes.

Pron. Pardon me, noble Lord,
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not,
Yet did repent me after more advice,
For testimonie whereof, one in the prifon
That should by priuate order elle have dide,
I have refer'd alias.

Duk. What's he?

Pron. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou hast done fo by Claudio:
Goe fetch him hither, let me looke vpou him.

Efe. I am forry, one fo learned, and for wife
As you, Lord Angell, have still appear'd,
Should flip fo grolifie, but in the heat of blood
And lacke of temper'd judgement afterward.

Ang. I am forrie, that such forrow I procure,
And fo deeply ficks it in my penitent heart,
That I craue death more willingly then mercy,
To my deferving, and I doe entreat it.

Enter Barnardine and Provost, Claudius, Julietta.

Duke. This is that Barnardine?

Duk. This my Lord.

Duk. There was a Friar told me of this man.

Siros, thou art fald to have a flubborne foule
That apprehends no further than this world,
And squar'th thy life according: Thou'rt condemn'd,
But for those earthly faults, I quit them all,
And pray thee take this mericie to prouide
For better times to come: Frier aduise him,
I leave him to your hand. What muffeld fellow's this?

Pron. This is another prisoner that I saide,
Who shoulde haue dide when Claudio loft his head,
As like almoft to Claudio, as himfelfe.

Duke. If he be like your brother, for his fake
Is he pardoned, and for your louelie fake
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that:
By this Lord Angell perceives he's fale.
Methinks I fee a quickning in his eye:
Well Angell, your eulli quits you well.
Looke that you loue your wife: her worth, worth yours
I finde an apt remission in my felle:
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon,
You forbe, that knew me for a foole, a Coward,
One all of Luxurie, an affe, a mad man:
Wherein have I fo defuer'd of you
That you extoll me thus?

Luc. Faith my Lord, I spoke it but according to the trick: if you will hang me for it you may: but I had rather it would plesse you, I might be whipt.

Duk. Whipt first, fit, and hang'd after.
Proclame it Provost round about the Citie,
If any woman wrong'd by this lewd fellow
(As I have heard him swear he himfelfe there's one whom he begot with childe) let her appeare,
And he shall marry her: the nuptiall finis,
Let him be whipt and hang'd.

Luc. I befeech your Highneffe doe not marry me to a Whore: your Highneffe said even now I made you a Duke, good my Lord do not recompence me, in making me a Cuckold.

Duk. Upon

FINIS.
The Comedie of Errors.

Aestus primus, Scena prima.

Enter the Duke of Epheseus, with the Merchant of Sirazafa, Loylas, and other attendants.

Marchant.

Roceed Solimus to procure my fall, And by the doome of death end woes and all. Duk. Merchant of Sirazu, farewell no more, I am not partial to infringe our Laws; The emnity and discord which of late Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your Duke, To our Merchants well-dealing Counrmen, Who wanting gliders to redeem their lives, Have feeld their rigorous statutes with their blouds, Excludes all pitty from our threatening lookes: For since the mortall and intifine iarres Twist thy sedulous Counrmen and vs, It hath in solenme Synodes beene decreed, Both by the Sirazufans and our selves, To admit no traffick to our aduerfe townes: Nay more, if any borne at Epheseus Be seene at any Sirazufan Marts and Fayres: Againe, if any Sirazufan borne Come to the Bay at Epheseus, he dies: His goods confecrate to the Dukes dispofe, Vnleeffe a thousand markes be leued To quit the penalty, and to ransome him: Thy sublance, valued at the highest rate, Cannot amount unto a hundred Markes, Therefore by Law thou art condemn'd to die. Mer. Yet this my comfort, when your words are done, My woes end likewise with the evening Sonne. Duk. Well Sirazu, I say in briefe the cause Why thou departest from thy native home? And for what cause thou cam'st to Epheseus. Mer. A heauier taze could not have beene impos'd, Then I to speake my griefes vnpeaceable Yet that the world may witnesse that my end Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence, Hee vter what my sorrow glues me leaue. In Sirazu I was borne, and wedde Vnto a woman, happy but for me, And by me : had not our hap beene bad With her 1 liu'd in joy, our wealth increas By prosperus voyages I often made To Epheseus, till my factors death, And he great care of goods at randome left, Drew me from kinde embracements of my spouse; From whom my abstinence was not xix moneths olde, Before her felle (almost at hainting vnder

The pleasing punishment that women beare ) Had made provision for her following me, And foon, and late, arrived where I was. There had she not beene long, but she became A joyfull mother of two goddy fones: And, which was strange, the one so like the other, As could not be dillinguishing but by names. That very howre, and in the felle-name Ine, A meane woman was delivered Of fuch a barren Male, twins both alike: Thofe, for their parents were exceeding poor, I bought, and brought vp to attend my fones. My wife, not meaneely proud of two fuch boys, Made daily motions for our home returns: Unwillig I agreed, alas, too foon were came about. A league from Epidamium we faid Before the alwayes winde-obeying deep As any Tragick Inffiance of our harme: But longer did we not retaine much hope: For what obscured light the heavens did grant, Did but conuay vnto our fearfull minds A doubfull warrant of immediate death, Which though my felle would gladly have imbrac'd, Yet the incontinent weepings of my wife, Weeping before for what the law must come, And pittores playnings of the prettie babes That mourn'd for foulation, ignorant what to fear, For riot we seeked delays for them and me, And this it was (for other meanes was none) The Sailors fought for fafety by our boate, And left the ship then sinking ripe to vs. My wife, more careful for the latter borne, Had fadned him vnto a small spare Maske, Such as fear-firing men proude for thirmes: To him one of the other twins was bound, Whil'st I had beene like headfull of the other. The children thus dispof'd, my wife and I, Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fixt, Fadned our selves at eyther end the maff, And floating straight, obedient to the dreame, Was caried towards Corinth, as we thought. At length the fonne gazing vpwn the earth, Did ferifie those vapours that offended vs, And by the beneft of his wiished light The faes waxt calm, and we discovered Two Tripes from farr, making amaine to vs: Of Corinth that, of Epidamus this, But ere they came, oh let me fay no more, Gather the sequell by that went before. Duk. Nay forward old man, doe not break off so,
For we may pity, though not pardon thee.

Merc. Oh had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthy term'd them mercifull to vs:
For ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encountered by a mighty rocke,
Which being violently borne vp,
Our helpefull ship was spilt in the midst;
So that in this vniust diuorce of vs,
Fortune had left to both of vs alike,
What to delight in, what to forrow for,
Her part, those foules, seeming as hardened
With leffer weight, but not with leffer woe,
Was carried with more speed before the winde,
And in our fight they three were taken vp
By Fisheermen of Corinthis, as we thought.
At length another ship had feeld on vs,
And knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave healthfull welcome to their ship-wrackt guests,
And would have reft the Fishers of their prey,
Had not their backe beene very flow of saile;
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.
Thou haue heard me feuer'd from my bliffe,
To those by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell sad stories of my owne mishares.

Duke. And for the sake of them thou forrowest for,
Doe me the favoure to dilate at full,
What haue befalne of them and they till now.

Merc. My youngest boy, and yet my sideft care,
At eightene yeares became incontinent
After his brother; and importun'd me
That his attendante, to his cafe was like,
Reft of his brother, but rest'st him name,
Might bear him company in the queft of him:
Whom whilst I laboured of a love to fee,
I hazarded the loffe of whom I lou'd.
Fiee Sommers haue I spent in farthest Greece,
Roming cleane through the bounds of Asia,
And coafting homeward, came to Ephesos:
Hopeless to finde, yet loth to leave unfought
Or that, or any place that harbours men:
But heare must end the story of my life,
And happy were I in my timelie death,
Could all my travells warrant me they live.

Duke. Hapless Egeon whom the fates have markt
To bear the extremity of dire mishap:
Now trust me, wee it not against our Lawes,
Against my Crowne, my oath, my dignity,
Which Princes would they may not difanull,
My soule should fue as advocate for thee:
But though thou art aduidged to the death,
And paffed sentence may not be recould,
But to our honours great dispacement:
Yet will I favoure thee in what I can;
Therefore Marchant, Ite limte thee this day
To fecke thy helpe by beneficall helpe,
Try all the friends thou haft in Ephesos,
Be thou, or borrow, to make vp the fumme,
And live: if no, then thou art doom'd to die:
Taylor, take him to thy cabodie.

Taylor. I will my Lord.

Merc. Hapless and helpefull doth Egeon wende,
But to procrasinate his luceffe end.

Exeunt.

Enter Antipholis Eros, a Marchant, and Dromio.

Mer. Therefore glue out you are of Epidamium,
Left that your goods too fome be confinate:
This very day a Syracusian Marchant
Is apprehended for a ruall here,
And not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the townne,
Dies ere the worse famine fet in the Welt:
There is your monie that I had to keep:

Ant. Goe beare it to the Cenature, where we hofl,
And dale there Dromio, till I come to thee;
Within this houre it will be dinner time,
Till that Ile view the manners of the townne,
Perufe the traders, gare vpone the buildings,
And then returne and slope within mine lane,
For with long travaile I am fittie and weary.
Get thee away.

Dro. Many a man would take you at your word,
And goe indeede, hauing fo good a meane.

Ant. A truflle villainie first, that very of
When I am dull with care and melancholly,
Lightens my humour with his merry lefts:
What will you walke with me about the townne,
And then goe to my Inne and dine with me?
E.March. I am bound for to certaine Marchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit:
I crave your pordon, fome at fieue a clocke,
Plsfe you, we meete with you vpont the Mart,
And afterwards comfort you till bed time:
My preuent buynffe calls me from you now.

Ant. Farewell till then: I will goe looke my selfe,
And wander vp and downe to view the Citle.
E.March. Sir, I commend you to your owne content.

Exit.

Ant. He that commendes me to mine owne content,
Commends me to the thing I cannot get:
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the Ocean seekes another drop,
Who falling there to finde his fellow forth,
(Visone, incontinent) confounds himselfe.
So I, to finde a Mother and a Brother,
In queft of them (vnhappie) loose my felfe.

Enter Dromio of Ephesos.

Here comes the almanacke of my true date:

What now? / How chance thou art returned so soon.

E.Dro. Return'd do fome, rather approacht to late:
The Capon burns, the Pig fitts from the fip:
The clocke hath strucken twelve vpden the bell:
My Miftifes made it one vpden my cheeke:
She is so hot because the maffe is cold:
The maffe is cold, because you come not home:
You come not home, because you have no fomacke:
You have no fomacke, hauing broke your fift:
But we that know what 'tis to falt and pray,
Are penitent for your default to day.

Ant. Stop in your winde sir, tell me this I pray?
Where have you left the mony that I gave you.

E.Dro. Oh fay pence that I had a wenfday laft,
To pay the Sadler for my Miftifes crupper:
The Sadler had it Sir, I kept it not.

Ant. I am not in a sportive humour now:
Tell me, and dally not, where is the monie:
We being Strangers here, how darft thou trust
So great a charge from thine owne cabodie.

E.Dro. I pray you left Sir as you sat at dinner:
I from my Miftris came to you in poft:
If I returne I shall be poft indeede.
Exit.

They'll sure be glad to have you home. The Phoenix, sir, to dinner;
My Miftres and her sister stay for you.

Now as I am a Christian answer me,
In what safe place you have betow'd my monie;
Or I shall break that merrie fonge of yours
That stands on tricks, when I am vaadip'd:
Where is the thousand Marks thout hast of me?

I have some markes of yours upon my pate:
Some of my Miftres markes upon my shoulders:
But not a thousand markes betweene you both,
If I should pay your worship those againe,
Perchance you will not beare them patiently.

Thy Miftres markes what Miftres flafe haft thou?
Your worship's wife, my Miftres at the Phoenix;
She that doth fit till you come home to dinner:
And prates that you will live you home to dinner.

What wilt thou flout me thus vnto my face
Being forbid? There take you that sir knave.

What means you sir, for God fake hold your Nay, and you will not sir, He take my heales.

Vpon my life by some deuile or other,
The villain is o're-worsh of all my monie.
They say this towne is full of cozenage:
As nimble luglen that deceat the cie:
Soule-killing Witches, that deform the bodie:
Difguised Cheaters, prating Mountebanks:
And manie fuch like liberties of fame:
If it proue so, I will be gone the fooner:
Ile to the Centaur to goe fecke this flafe,
I greatly feare my monie is not safe.

Enter Adriana, wife to Antipholus Serpentus, with Luciana his Sifter.

Neither my husband nor the flafe return'd,
That in fuch haste I fent to fecke his Mafter?
Sure Luciana it is two a clocke.

Perhaps some Merchant hath invited him,
And from the Mart he's somewhere gone to dinner:
Good Sifter let vs dine, and neuer fret;
A man is Mafter of his libertie:
Time is their Mafter, and when they fee time,
They'll goe or come; if fo, be patient Sifter.

Why should their libertie then ours be more?
Because their buffonf still lies out fadore.
Looke when I ferue him fo, he takes it thus.
Oh, know he is the bridle of your will.
There's none but affes will be bridled fo,

Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is laft with woe:
There's nothing firat undr heaven's ey:
But hath his bound in earth, in fea, in skie.
The beasts, the fihes, and the winged bowles
Are their males subject, and at their controules:
Man more divine, the Mafter of all thefe,
Lord of the wide world, and wilder watry feas,
Induced with intelleluall fence and bowles,
Of more preeminence then fih and bowles,
Are masters to their females, and their Lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.

This feruitude makes you to keepe vnved.
Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage bed.

But were you wedded, you would bear some sway
Luc. Ere I learn love, Ile pradife to obey.

How if your husband flart fome other where?
Till he come home againe, I would forebeare.

Patience vnmoou'd, no marvel though fie paufe,
They can be meele, thefe have no apparell:
A wretched foule bruide with aduerfitie,
We bid be quiet when we hear it cry.

But were we burdens with like weight of paine,
As much, or more, we should our felues compaine:
So thou that haft no violence mate the groove thee,
With vrging helpelefe patience would relieve me;
But if thou looe to fee like right bereft,
This foulc-beg'd patience in thee will be left.

Well, I will marry one day but to trie:
Here comes your man, now is your husband nie.

Enter Dromio Eph.

Say, is your tardic matter now at hand?
E. Dro. Nay, he's at too hands with mee, and that my two eares can witneffe.

Say, didst thou speake with him? knowft thou his minde?

I, I, he told his minde vpon mine eare,
Behfaw his hand, I fcarce could vnderfand it.

Spake hee fo doubtfully, thou couldst not fee his meaning.

Nay, fee froke fo plainly, I could too well feele his bowles; and withall fo doubtfully, that I could fcarce vnderfand them.

But fay, I prethee, is he coming home?
It leemes he hath great care to pleafe his wife.

Why Midtreffe, fure my Mafter is borne mad.
Horne mad, thou villain?

I meane not Cuckold mad,
But fure he is flanke mad:
When I defir'd him to come home to dinner,
He ask'd me for a hundred markes in gold:
'Tis dinner time quoth I t' my gold, quoth he:
Your meat doth barren, quoth I: my gold quoth he:
Will you come, quoth I: my gold, quoth he;
Where is the thoufand markes I gaue thee villain?
The Pigge quoth I, is burre'd: my gold, quoth he:
My midtreffe, sir, quoth I: hang up thy midtreffe:
I know not thy midtreffe, out on thy midtreffe.

Quoth who?

Quoth my Mafter, I know quoth he, no houfe, no wife, no midtreffe: fo that my arrant due vnto my yong, I thake him, I bare home vpon my shoulders:
for in conclusion, he did best me there.

Go back againe, thou flawe, & fetch him home.
Goe backe againe, and be new beaten home?
For Gods fake fend some other meffenger.
The Comedie of Errors.

Adir. Backe flauke, or I will breake thy pate a-croffe.

Dro. And he will blaffe y croffe with other beating:
Betweene you, I shall have a holy head.

Adir. Hence prating peans, fetch thy Master home.

Dro. Am I fo round with you, as you with me,
That like a foot-ball you doe fprune me thus:
You fprune me hence, and he will fprune me hither,
If I laft in this feruice, you muft cafe me in leather.

Luc. Fie how impatience lowreth in your face.

Adir. His company must do his minions grace,
Whilst I at home flauce for a merry lookke:
Hath homelie age th'alluring beauty tooke
From my poore cheekes? then he hath wafted it.
Are my discourses dull? Barren my wit,
If voluble and sharpe discourse be mar'd,
Vankindneffe blunts it more then marble hard.
Doe their gay veritjns his affections baite?
That's not my fault, hee's master of my flate.
What ruines are in me that can be found,
By him not ruind? Then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed faire,
A fannie lookke of his, would foone repairre.
But, too vanuly Deere, he breaks the pale,
And feedes from home; poore I am but his flate.

Luc. Selle-harming leflounie; fie beat it hence.

Ad. Vnfeeding fools can with fuch wrongs difpence:
I know his eye doth hommage other-where,
Or else, what lets it but he would be here?
Sifter, you know he promis'd me a chaine,
Would that alone, a loue he would detaine,
So he would keepe faire quarter with his bed:
I fee the Jewell bell enamelled
Will looke his beautie; yet the gold bides fiff;
That others touch, and often touching will,
Where gold and no man that hath a name,
By falshood and corruption doth it thame;
Since that my beautie cannot pleafe his eie,
He wepe (what's left away) and weeping die.

Luc. How manie fond fooles ftere mad Leloufie?

Exit.

Enter Antipholus Er-ratis.

Ant. The gold I gaue to Dromio is laid vp Safe at the Centaur, and the heedfull flauce
Is wandred forth in care to fceke me out
By computation and mine hofts report.
I could not fpeakke with Dromio, fince at firft
I fent him from the Mart? fie here he comes.

Enter Dromio Saracentia.

How now fir, is your merrie humor alter'd?
As you looe froolkes, fo left with me againe:
You know no Centaur? you receiued no gold?
Your Mistrefse feit to have me home to dinner?
My house was at the Phwnix? Wait thou mad,
That thus fo madlie thou didst anfver me?

S.Dro. What anfwer fir? when fanke I fuch a word?

E. Ant. Even now, even here, nor hale an howre fince.

S.Dro. I did not fee you since you fent me hence
Home to the Centaur with the gold you gaue me.

Ant. Villaine, thou didst denie the golds receiue,
And told me of a Mistrefse, and a dinner,
For which I hope thou felft I was difplease.'d.

S.Dro. I am glad to fee you in this merrie vaine,
What meanes this left, I pray you Master tell me?

Ant. Yea, doth thou leere & flrow me in the teeth?
Think it? I left; hold, take thou that, & that.

Beats Dro.

Vpon what bargain do you give it me?

Antipb. Because that I famillia tie sometimnes
Doe vie you for my foole, and chat with you,
Your fawleneffe will left vpon my loue,
And make a Common of my lercous howres,
When the funne shines, let foolish grazes make sport,
But creep in crannies, when he hides his beames:
If you will left with me, know my appearce,
And fufhion your demeanor to my lookes,
Or I will beat this method in your fonce.

S.Dro. Sconce call you it? So you would leave battering,
I had rather hauie it a head, and you vfe these blows long,
I must get a fonce for my head, and Infonce it to,
or else I shall fek my wit in my shoulders, but I pray fir, why am I beaten?

Ant. Doft thou not know?

S.Dro. Nothing fir, but that I am beaten.

Ant. Shall I tell you why?

S.Dro. I fir, and wherefore; for they fay, every why hath a wherefore.

Ant. Why firft for flowing me, and then wherefore,
For vrging it the fecond time to me.

S.Dro. Was there euer anie man thus beaten out of feacon, when in the why and the wherefore, is neither rime nor reafon. Well fir, I thanke you.

Ant. Thanke me fir, for what?

S.Dro. Marry fir, for this something that you gaue me for nothing.

Ant. Ile make you amendz next, to give you nothing for something. But fay fir, is it dinner time?

S.Dro. No fir, I thinke the meat wants that I haue.

Ant. In good time fir: what's that?

S.Dro. Baffing.

Ant. Well fir, then 'twill be drie.

S.Dro. If it be fir, I pray you eat none of it.

Ant. Your reafon?

S.Dro. Left it make you chollerick, and purchase me another drie hauing.

Ant. Well fir, leerne to left in good time, there's a time for all things.

S.Dro. I durft have denied that before you were fo chollerick.

Ant. By what rule fir?

S.Dro. Marry fir, by a rule as plaine as the plaine bald pate of Father time himfelf.

Ant. Let's heare it.

S.Dro. There's no time for a man to recouer his hairre that grows balde by nature.

Ant. May he not doe it by fine and recouerlie?

S.Dro. Yes, to pay a fine for a perewig, and recouer the loft hairre of another man.

Ant. Why, is Time fuch a naggard of hairre, being (as it is) fo plentiffull an excrement?

S.Dro. Because it is a bleffing that hee befoones on beaws, and what he hath flantted them in laire, hee hath guien them in wit.

Ant. Why, but thers manie a man hath more hairre then wit.

S.Dro. Not a man of those but he hath the wit to lose his hairre.

Ant. Why thou didst conclude hauie men plain dealers without wit.

S.Dro. The plainer dealer, the sooner loft; yet he looth it in a kinde of lolitie.

Ant. For what reafon.

S.Dro. For two, and found ones to.

An.Nay
The Comedie of Errors.

Act. Nay not found I pray you.
S.Dres. Sire one.
Act. Nay, not in a thing falling.
S.Dres. Certaine one.
Act. Name them.
S.Dres. The one to save the money that he spends in trying: the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porriage.
Act. You would all this time have prou'd, there is no time for all things.
S.Dres. Marry and did sir, namely, in no time to recover halfe lost by Nature.
Act. But your reason was not substanially, why there is no time to recover.
S.Dres. Thus I mend it: Time himselfe is bald, and to the worlds end, will have bald followers.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adri. I, L. antipholus, looke strange and browne,
Some other Mistreffe hath thy sweet aspect:
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.
The time was once, when thou vn-vrg'd wouldst vow,
That never words were mulliter to thine eare,
That never object pleasing in thine eye,
That never touch well come to thy hand,
That never meat sweet-fauour'd in thy taste,
Vnleffe I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or care'd to thee.
How comes it now, my Husband, oh how comes it,
That thou art then effranged from thy felie?
Thy felie I call it, being strange to me:
That vundaulcar Incorporated
Am better then thy deere felies better part.
Ah doe not teare away thy felie from me;
For know my loue: as easie maist thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking guile,
And take vnmingled thence that drop againe
Without addition or diminishing,
As take from me thy felie, and not me too.
How dreerly would it touch thee to the quicke,
Shouldst thou but hear we were licencious?
And that this body confecrate to thee,
By Ruffian Luft should be contaminate?
Wouldst thou not spet at me, and spurne at me,
And hurle the name of husband in my face,
And teare the plain'd skin of my Harlot brow,
And from my fleshe hand cut the wedding ring,
And breake it with a deep-seowing vow?
I know thou canst, and therefore fee thou doe it.
I am poefte with an adulate blott,
My bloud is mingled with the crime of luft:
For if we two be one, and thou play false,
I doe digest the poison of thy felie,
Being surprumed by thy contageion:
Keppe then false league and truce with thy true bed,
I live diffain'd, thou vnFlohonoured.

Antip. Plead you to me faire dame? I know you not:
In Ephesus I am but two hours old,
As strange vnto your towne, as to your talke,
Who every word by all my wit being fcar'd,
Wants wit in all, one word to vnderstand.
Luci. He brother, how the world is chang'd with you:
When were you wont to vfe my filter thus?
She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Act. By Dromio?

Drom. By me.

Adr. By thee, and this thou didst returne from him.
That he did bufet thee, and in his blows,
Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Drom. Didst thou conferre with this gentlewoman:
What is the course and drift of your compatri?
I ftr flat I never faw her till this time.

Ant. Villain thou liest, for eu'n her verie words,
Didst thou deliuer to me on the Mart.

Ant. I never spake with her in all my life.

Ant. How can she the then call vs by our names?
Vnleffe it be by inspiration.
Adri. How ill agrees it with your grauitie,
To counterfeit thus grossely with thy fkaue,
Abetting him to thwart me in my moode;
Be it my wrong, you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wouldst with more contempt.
Come I will often on this fcheese of thine:
Thou art an Elme my husband, I a Vine:
Who's weakneffe married to thy stranger fmate,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If I ought poiffe thee then, it is drie,
Vaurting Jule, Brier, orIdle Maffe,
Who all for want of pruining, with intruion,
Infeft thy fap, and live on thy confusion.

Ant. To mee fpeeakes, thee mouses mee for her themes;
What, was I married to her in my dreame?
Or fleee now, and thinke I heare all this?
What error driues our cies and cares amife?
Vntill I know this fure vncertainty,
Ie entertaine the free'd fallacie.

Lucr. Dromio, goe bid the freuants sprede for dinner.

S.Dres. Oh for my head, I croufe me for a finner.
This is the Fairie land, oh spight of fspirits,
We talk with Goblins, Owles and Sprights;
If we obey them not, this will infue:
They'll flocke our breath, or pinch vs blacke and blew.

Luc. Why pratt's thou to thy felie, and answerst not?

Dromio, thou Dromio, thou finale, thou flug, thou fot.

S.Dres. I am transformed Master, am I not?

Ant. I thinke thou art in minde, and I am L.

S.Dres. Nay Master, both in minde, and in my shape.

Ant. Thou haft thinne owne forme.

S.Dres. No, I am an Ape.

Luc. If thou art chang'd to ought, 'tis to an Affe.

S.Dres. 'Tis true the ride me, and I long for graffe.
'Tis so, I am an Affe, eile it could never be,
But I should know her as well as the knowes me.

Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a foolere,
To put the finger in the cle and weep;
Whilf't man and Master laughes my woes to fcorne:
Come fir to dinner, Dromio keepe the gate:
Husband Ie dine abow with you to day,
And thriue you of a thousand ftaile fprances:
Sirs, if any ask ye for your Master,
Say he dines forth, and let no creature enter:
Come firter, Dromio play the Porter well.

Ant. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
Sleeping or waking, mad or well aduerte:
Knowne vnto thefe, and to my felie diuguidle:
Ie fay as they fay, and peruerfe fo:
And in this mift at all adventures go.

S.Dres. Master, shall I be Porter at the gate?

Adr. I, and let none enter, lef I breake your pate.

Lucr. Come, come, antipholus, we dine to late.

H 3

Atiu
Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, his man Dromio, Angelo the Goldsmith, and Bartholomew the Merchant.

E. Ant. Good signior Angelo you must excuse vs all,
My wife is firewhel when I keep not howres;
Say that I lingered with you at your shop
To see the making of her Carkanet,
And that I did deny my wife and houfe.
But here's a villains that would face me downe
He met me on the Mart, and that I best him,
And charg'd him with a thousand markes in gold,
And that I did deny my wife and houfe.
Thou drudg'ard thou, what didst thou meane by this?
E. Dro. Say what you will fir, but I know what I know,
That you beat me at the Mart I have your hand to show;
If your skin were parchement, & your blows you gaue were ink,
Your owne hand-writing would tell you what I thinke.
E. Ant. I thinke thou art an affe.
E. Dro. Marry fo it doth appeare
By the wrongs I suffer, and the blows I bear,
I should kicke being kickt, and being at that paffe,
You would keepe from my heele, and beware of an affe.
E. Ant. 'Y are bad signior Balthazar, pray God our cheer
May answer my good will, and your good welcom here.
Bal. I hold your dainties cheap fir, & your welcom deer.
E. Ant. Oh Signior Balthazar, either at feft or fish,
A table full of welcom, makes fearce one dainty deer.
Bal. Good meat fir is cûmon that every chearly affords.
Ant. And welcome more common, for thats nothing but words.
Bal. Small cheere and great welcom, makes a merrie feaft.
E. Ant. I, to a niggardly Hof, and more spering guest:
But though my cates be meanes, take them in good part,
Better cheere may you have, but not with better hart.
But for my doore is lockt; goe bid them let vs in.
E. Dro. Mrud, Briget, Marian, Cifley, Gillian, Ginn,
S. Dro. Moms, Malthorfe, Capon, Cooxemer, Idi- eg, Patch,
Either get thee from the doore, or fit downe at the hachat:
Doft thou coniure for wenches, that y call for fuch flore,
When one is one too many, goe get thee from the doore.
E. Dro. What patch is made our Porter? my Maffter stayes in the street.
S. Dro. Let him walke from whence he came, left hee catch cold on's feet.
E. Ant. Who talks within there? hoa, open the doore.
S. Dro. Right fir, Ile tell you when , and you'll tell me wherefore.
Ant. Wherefore? for my dinner: I have not din'd to day.
S. Dro. Nor to day here you must not come againe when you may.
Ant. What art thou that keep't mee out from the house I owe!
S. Dro. The Porter for this time Sir, and my name is Dromio.
E. Dro. O villains, thou haft fhone both mine office and my name,
The one nere got me credit, the other mickle blame:
If thou hadst beene Dromio to day in my place,
Thou wouldst haue chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an affe.

Enter Lucce.
Lucce. What a coile is there Dromio? who are these at the gate?
E. Dro. Let my Mafter in Lucce.
Lucce. Faith no, he comes too late, and fo tell your Mafter.
E. Dro. O Lord I muft laugh, haue at you with a Pro uerbe,
Shall I let in my ftrafe.
Lucce. Have at you with another, that's when? can you tell?
S. Dro. If thy name be called Lucce, Lucce thou haft an fwer'd him well.
Ant. Doe you heare you minion, you'll let vs in I hope.
Lucce. I thought to haue askt you.
S. Dro. And you faid no.
E. Dro. So come helpe, well ftroke, there was blow for blow.
Ant. Thou baggage let me in.
Lucce. Can you tell for whole fake?
E. Dro. Mafter, knocke the doore hard.
Lucce. Let him knocke till it ake.
Ant. You'll cere for this minion, if I beat the doore downe.
Lucce. What needs all that, and a pair of flocks in the towne?

Enter Adriana.

Adri. Who is that at the door y keeps all this noife?
S. Dro. By my troth your towne is troubled with vn ruely boles.
Ant. Are you there Wife? you might haue come before.
Adri. Your wife is knau, go get you from the doore.
S. Dro. If you went in paine Mafter, this knau void gore face.

Angelo. Here is nother cheere fir, nor welcome, we would faine Mafter weither.
Balfo. In debating which was left, wee shall part with neither.
E. Dro. They fland at the doore, Mafter, bid them welcome lither.
Ant. There is something in the winde, that we can not get in.
E. Dro. You would fay o Mafter, if your garments were thin.
Your cake here is warme within; you stand here in the cold.
It would make a man mad as a Bucke to be fo bought and fold.

Ant. Go fetch me something, I'll break ope the gate.
S. Dro. Breake any breaking here, and Ile breake your knaues pate.
E. Dro. A man may breake a word with your fir, and words are but winde:
I and breake it in your face, fe he break it not behind.
S. Dro. It foemes thou want'it breaking, out upon thee hindes.
E. Dro. Here's too much out vpon thee, I pray thee let me in.
S. Dro. I, when lowles haue no feathers, and filh, haue no fin.
Ant. Well, Ile breake ingo borrow me a crow.
E. Dro. A crow without feather, Mafter meanes you for
For
The Comedie of Errors.

For a fish without a finne, ther's a foule without afeather,
If a crow help vs in frra, we'll plucke a crow together.

Ant. Go, get thee gon, fetch me an iron Crow.
Balth. Haue patience sir, oh let it not be fo,
Herein you warre against your reputation,
And draw within the compass of suspexit:
Th'vnviolated honor of your wife.
Once this your long experience of your wifedome,
Her sober vertue, yeares, and modestie,
Plead on your part some caufe to you vnowne;
And doubt not sir, but thee will well excuse.
Why at this time the zores are made against you.
Be rul'd by me, depart in patience,
And let vs to the Tyger all to dinner,
And about euening come your felfe alone,
To know the reason of this strange restraint:
If by frong hand you offer to breake in
Now in the flattering pageage of the day,
A vulgar comment will be made of it;
And that suppos'd by the common rowt
Against your yet vnger
That may with foule intrusion enter in,
And dwell upon your graue when you are dead;
For slander lies upon suceffion.
For ever hews'd, where it gets poifeon.

Ant. You have presu'd, I will depart in quiet,
Hath oftentimes vpbraided me withall:
To her will we to dinner, get you home
And fetch the chaine, by this I know 'tis made,
Bring it I pray you to the Porteente,
For there's the house: That chaine will I beftow
(But it for nothing but to fight my wife)
Vpon mine hofteffe therre, good sir make hate:
Since mine owne doores refuse to entertaine me,
Ile make you els-where, to see if they'll discharge me.
Ang. Ile meet you at that place some hooure hence.

Ant. Do fo, thus left shull cot me some expense.

Enter Iuliana, with Antipholus of Stracusa.
Julia. And may it be that you have quite forgot
A husbands office? shall Antipholus.
Even in the spring of Love, thy Love-springs rot?
Shall love in buildings grow so stalemane?
If you did wed my fitter for her wealth,
Then for her wealthes-fake vfe her with more kindnesse
Or if you like else-where doe it by stealth
Muffle your false love with some shew of blindnesse;
Let not my fitter read it in your eye:
Be not thy tongue thy owne shame Orator:
Looke sweet, speake faire, become diffolyalitie.
Apparel vice like vertues harbinger:
Beare a faire presence, though your heart be tainted,
Teach finne the carriage of a holy Saint,
Be secret fiddle; what need the be acquainted?
What simple thiefes brags of his owne attaine?
'Tis double wrong to truant with your bed,
And let her read it in thy lookes at boord:
Shame hath a bafbarf fame, well managed,
Ill deeds is doubled with an eull wound.
Als poor women, make vs not beleuee
(Being compact of credit) that you love vs,
Though others have the arme, shew vs the fleece:
We in your motion turne, and you may moue vs.
Then gentle brother get you in againe;
Comfort my fitter, cheere her, call her wife;
'Tis holy sport to be a little vaine,
When the sweet breath of flatterie conquers frie.

S. Ant. Sweete Miltris, what your name is else I know not;
Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine:
Lelle in your knowledge, and your grace you shou not,
Then our earths wonder, more then earth divine.
Teach me deere creature how to thinke and speake:
Lay open to my earthie groffe conceit:
Smothered in errors, feele, shallow,weake,
The fouled meaning of your words deceit:
Against my foules pure truth, why labour you,
To make it wander in an unknowne field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transforme me then, and to your powre Ile yeeld.
But if that I am, then well I know,
Your weeping fitter is no wife of mine,
Nor to her bed no homage doe I owe:
Farre more, farre more, to you doe I decline:
Oh traine me not sweet Mermaid with thy note;
To drowne me in thy fitter foud of teares:
Sing Siren for thy felde, and I will dote;
Spread oro the fiffer waves thy golden haires;
And as a bud Ile take thes, and there Ile:
And in that glorious supposition thinke,
He gains by death, that hath such meanes to die:
Let Love, being light, be drowned if the finke.

Luc. What are you mad, that you doe reason so?
Ant. Not mad, but mated, how I doe not know.
Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your eie.

Ant. For gazing on your beames faire fun being by.
Luc. gaze when you shoule, and that will cleere your fght.

Ant. As good to winke sweet loue, as looke on night.
Luc. Why call you me louse? Call my fitter fo.

Ant. Thy fitters.
Luc. That's my fitter.

Ant. No: it is thy felle, mine owne felles better part:
Mine els cleere eie, my deere heare deere heart;
My foode, my fortune, and my sweet hopes aume;
My folke earths heauen, and my heauens claime.

Luc. All this my fitter is, or else shoule be.

Ant. Call thy feller fitter sweet, for I am thee:
There will I loue, and with thee lend my life;
Thou haue no husband yet, nor I no wife:
Glue me thy hand.

Luc. Oh foit fir, hold you fill:
Ile fetch my fitter to get her good will.

Exit.

Enter Dromio, Stracusa.

Ant. Why how now Dromio, where run't thou so fast?

S. Dromio. Do you know me sir? Am I Dromio? Am I your man? Am I my felle?

Ant. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thy felle.

Dromio. I am an affe, I am a woman man, and befides my felle.

Ant. What women man? and how befides thy felle?

Dro. Marrow fir, befides my felle, I am due to a woman:
One that claime me, one that haunts me, one that will haue me.

Ant. What
The Comedie of Errors.

Ant. What claime lies she to thee?

Dro. Marry fir, such claime as you would lay to your horfe, and she would have me as a beault, not that I beeing a beaux she would have me, but that she being a verie beauly creature lays claime to me.

Ant. What is the?

Dro. A very reuerent body: I such a one, as a man may not speake of, without he say fir reverence, I have but leane lucke in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

Ant. How doft thou meane a fat marriage?

Dro. Marry fir, she's the Kitchin wench, & al greafe, and I know not what we to put her too, but to make a Lampe of her, and run from her by her owne light. I warrant, her ragges and the Tallow in them, will burne a Poland WINTER: If the liues till doomesday, she'll burne a weeke longer then the whole World.

Ant. Which is complexion is the of?

Dro. Swart like my fhou, but her face nothing like so cleane kept: for why? she sweats a man may goe ouer-shoes in the grime of it.

Ant. That's a fault that water will mend.

Dro. No fir, 'tis in graine, Moths flood could not do it.

Ant. What's her name?

Dro. Nell Sir: but her name is three quarters, that's an Eel and three quarters will not meaure her from hip to hip.

Ant. Then the bears some breath?

Dro. No longer from head to foot, then from hippe to hippe: she is spherically, like a globe: I could find out Countries in her.

Ant. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dro. Marry fir in her buttockes, I found it out by the boggen.

Ant. Where Scotland?

Dro. I found it by the barrenesse, hard in the pelme of the hand.

Ant. Where France?

Dro. In her forhead, arm'd and woret, making ware against her heire.

Ant. Where England?

Dro. I look'd for the chalklie Cliffs, but I could find no whitenesse in them. But I gueffe, it flood in her chin by the falt rheume that ranne betweene Francis, and it.

Ant. Where Spaine?

Dro. Faith I law it not, but I felt it hot in her broth.

Ant. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. Oh fir, vpon her nofe, all ore embellished with Rubies, Carbuncles, Saphires, declining their rich Ap- peal, I saw the hot breath of Spaine, who sent whole Armadores of Carretts to be ballaft at her nofe.

Ant. Where flood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. Oh fir, I did not looke so low. To conclude, this drudge or Diuiner layd claime to mee, call'd mee Drogo, I heard, I was affur'd to her, told me what privile grade I had about mee, as the marke of my shoulder, the Mole in my necke, the great Wart on my left arme, that I amaz'd ranne from her as a witch. And I think, if my bretf had not beene made of faith, and my heart of fleete, she had transform'd me to a Cartull doge, made me turne 12 wheele.

Ant. Go lie thee prefently, poft to the rode,
And if the wind blow any way from thore,
I will not harbour in this Towne to night.
If any Barke put forth, come to the Mart,

Where I will walke till thou returne to me:
If euerie one knowes vs, and we know none,
'Tis time I thinke to trudge, packe, and be gone.

Dro. As from a Bear a man would run for life,
So flie I from her that would be my wife.

Ant. There's none but Witches do inhabithe here,
And therefore 'tis his time that I were hence:
She that doth call me husband, even my foole
Doth for a wife aborre.
But her faire fitter
Posfeft with such a gentle fouterane grace,
Of such inhabiting preence and difcourfe,
Hath almost made me Traitor to my felle:
But leant my felle be guilty to felle wrong,
Ile flie mine cares against the Mermaids fong.

Enter Antipholus with the Chains.

Ang. Mr Antipholus,

Gold, Enter that's my name.

Ang. I know it well fir, loe here's the chaine,
I thought to haue tane you at the Po-pentines,
The chaine vnsfign'd me flay thus long.

Ant. What is your will that I shal do with this?

Ang. What pleafe your felle fir: I haue made it for you.

Ant. Made it for me fir, I bepoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twentie times you haue:
Go home with it, and pleafe your Wife withall,
And fome at fupper time lie vlt you,
And then receiue my money for the chaine.

Ant. I pray you fir receiue the money now,
For feare you ne're see chainge, nor mony more.

Ang. You are a merry man fir, fare you well.

Ant. What I should think of this, I cannot tell:
But this I thinke, there's no man is fo vaine,
That would refufe to fare an offer'd Chainge.
I fee a man heere needs not luye by fhifts,
When in the streets he meetes fuch Golden gifts:
Ile to the Mart, and there for Drogo fly,
If any fhip put out, then fraught away.

Achus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Merchant, Goldsmith, and an Officer.

Mar. You know since Pentecoff the sum is dute,
And since I know not much importance, you,
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Perfoa, and want Gilders for my voyage:
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or Ile attach you by this Officer.

Gold. Even let the sum that I do owe to you,
Is growing to me by Antipholus,
And in the infant that I met with you,

Enter Antipholus Ephef. Drogo from the Courtyama.

Among my wife, and their confederates,
For locking me out of my doores by day:
But sof I fee the Goldsmith; get thee gone,
Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

Dro. I buy a thousand pound a yeare, I buy a rope.

Exit Droaso

Eph. Ant. A man is well holpe vp that trufts to you,
I promised your presence, and the Chaine,
But neither Chaine nor Goldsmith came to me:
Belie you thought our loue would last too long
If they were chaine together; and therefore came not.

Gold. Suing your merrie humor: here's the note
How much your Chaine weigs to the vmtost charect,
The finemess of the Gold, and chargeful fashion,
Which doth amount to three oddie Duckers more
Then I fland debted to this Gentleman,
I pray you fee him prentely digitsg'd,
For he is bound to Sea, and stays but for it.

Ant. I am not furnisht with the præsent monie:
Besides I have no monie for some,
Good Signor take the stranger to his hous,
And with you take the Chaine, and bid my wife
Disburfe the summe, on the receit thereof,
Perchance I will be there as fleeone as you.

Gold. Then you will bring the Chaine to her your selfe.

Ant. No beare it with you, leaf I come not time e-ough.

Gold. Well fir, I will? Have you the Chaine about you?

Ant. And if I have not fir, I hope you have:
Or ellse you may returne without your money.

Gold. Nay come I pray you fir, give me the Chaine:
Both winde and tide stays for this Gentleman,
And I too blame have held him heere too long.

Ant. Good Lord, you vie this dailiass to euaue
Your breach of promisse to the Perpetning
I should have chid you for not bringing it,
But like a threw you first begin to brawle.

Mar. The houre stales on, I pray you fir dispatch.

Gold. You hear how he importunes me, the Chaine.

Ant. Wh'y glue it to my wife, and fetch your money.

Gold. Come come, you know I gave it you even now.
Either send the Chaine, or send me by some token.

Ant. flee, now you run this humor out of breath,
Come where's the Chaine, I pray you let me fee it.

Mar. My butler can not know this dialiass,
Good fir fay, whe'r you' anfwer me, or no:
If not, Ile leaue him to the Officer.

Ant. I anfwer you? What should I anfwer you.

Gold. The monie that you owe me for the Chaine.

Ant. I owre you none, till I recieve the Chaine.

Gold. You know I gave it you halfe an hour fhnce.

Ant. You gave me none, you wrong mee much to fay fo.

Gold. You wrong me more fir in denying it.
Consider how it stands upon my credit.

Mar. Well Officer, arrefet him at my fute.

Off. I do, and charge you in the Dukes name to o-bey me.

Gold. This touches me in reputation.
Either content to pay this sum for me, or
Or let me to you by this Officer.

Ant. Content to pay thee that I never had:
Arreft me foolifh fellow if thou dar't.

Gold. Here is thy fee, arreft him Officer.
I would not spare my brother in this cafe,
If he shouldforme me fo apparently.

Offic. I do arreft you fir, you hear the suite.

Ant. I do obey thee, till I give thee baile.

But firrah, you shall buy this sport as deere,
As all the mettall in your fhop will anfwer.

Gold. Sir, fir, I shall have Law in Ephesius,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Droaso Siras from the Bay.

Dro. Matter, there's a Barke of Epidamium,
That flails but till her Owner comes aboard,
And then fir the beares away.
Our fragoftch fir, I have come'd aboard, and I have bought
The Oyle, the Balsamum, and Aquavit.
The flip is in her trim, the merrie windes
Blowses faire from land: they flay for nought at all,
But for their Owner, Matter, and your felles.

Ant. How now a Madman! Why thou peecilh steep
What ship of Epidamium, I haue behoile for some.

S. Dro. A ship you fent me too, to hiler waflage.

Ant. Thou drunken flau, I fent thee for a rope,
And told thee to what purpofe, and what end.

S. Dro. You fent me for a ropes end as loone,
You fent me to the Bay fir, for a Barke.

Ant. I will debate this matter at more leiuere
And teach your cares to lift me with more heede:
To Adriana Villaine hee thee ftraight:
Glue heer this key, and tell her in the Deske
That's causer'd o're with Turkish Tapflerie,
There is a purfe of Duckers, let her fend it:
Tell her, I am arrefted in the streete,
And that thall baile me: hee thee flaues be gone,
On Officer to prifon, till it come.

S. Droaso. To Adriana, that is where we din'd,
Where Dowfablel did claime me for her husband,
She is too bigge I hope for me to compafs,
Thither I mutt, although againft my will:
For fervants muft their Masters minds fulfill.

Exit

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ah Luciana, did he tempt thee fo?
Might'ft thou perceiue aherely in his eie,
That he did plead in earneft, yea or no:
Look'd he or red or pale, or sad or merry?
What obervation mad'ft thou in this cafe?
Oh, his hearts Meteors tilting in his face.

Luc. Firft he denie you had in him no right.

Adr. He meant he did me none: the more my fighnt
Luc. Then I faw he that he was a stranguer heree.

Adr. And true he fware, though yet forworne hee were.

Luc. Then pleaded I for you.

Adr. And what faid he?

Luc. That loue I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.

Adr. With what perfuafion did he tempt thy loue?

Luc. With words, that in an honett fuit might mone.

Firft, he did praffe my beautye, then my speech.

Adr. Did it praffe him faire?

Luc. Have patience I befeech.

Adr. I cannot, nor I will not hold me still,
My tongues, though not my heare, flall have his will.
He is deformed, crooked old, an ill-faied,
Ill-faied, worse bodied, shameleffe every where:
Vicious, vengent, foolifh, blant, vnkinde,

Stigma-
The Comedie of Errors.

Stigmatical in making worfe in minde.

Luc. Who would hee jealous then of such a one?
No cuilf loth is wall'd, when it is gone.

Adr. Ah but I thinke him better then I say:
And yet would herein others eies were worfe:
Tarry from her neft the Lapwing cries away;
My heart prays for him, though my tongue doe curse.

Enter S. Dromio.

Dro. Here goe : the deske, the purfe, sweet now make haste.

Luc. How haft thou loth thy breath?

S. Dro. By running faile.

Adr. Where is thy Master Dromio? Is he well?
S. Dro. No, he's in Tartar Limbo, worfe then hell:
A diuell in an everlasting garment hath him;
On whose hard heart is button'd vp with fleete:
A Feind, a Fairie, pittileffe and ruffle:
A Wolf, they worfe, a fellow all in buffe:
A back friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermarks:
The passages of allies, creekes, and narrow lands:
A hound that runs Counter, and yet draws driuot well,
One that before the Judges carrie poore foales to hel.

Adr. Why man, what is the matter?
S. Dro. I doe not know the matter, hee is refted on the cafe.

Adr. What is he arrested tell me at whole face?
S. Dro. I know not at whole face he is arrested well;
but is in a suite of buffe which rested him, that can I tell,
will you send him Midris redemption, the monie in his deske.

Adr. Go fetch it Sifter : this I wonder at.

Exit Luciana.

Thus he unknowne to me should be in debt:
Tell me, was he arrested on a band?
S. Dro. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing:
A chaine a chaine, doe you not here it ring.

Adr. What, the chaine?
S. Dro. No, no, the bell, 'ts time that I were gone:
It was two ere I left him, and now the clocke strikes one.

Adr. The hours come backe, that did I never here.

S. Dro. Oh yes, if any hour meeete a Seriante, a turnes backe for verie faire.

Adr. As if time were in debt: how fondly do't thou reason?

S. Dro. Time is a verie barrenout, and owes more then he's worth to feasone.

Nay, he's a theefe too : haue you not heard men say,
That time come dealong on by night and day?
If he be in debt and thefe, and a Seriante in the way,
Hath he not reason to turne backe an hour in a day?

Enter Luciana.

Adr. Go Dromio, there's the monie, heare it straight,
As you would your Master home immediately.
Come fitter, I am pref to downe with conceit:
Conceit, my comfort and my injure.

Exit.

Enter Antipholus Syracuse.

There's not a man I meete but doth olute me
As if I were their well acquainted friend,
And euerie one doth call me by my name:
Some tender monie to me, some frowne at me;
Some other give me thanks for kindneffes;
Some offer me Commodities to buy,
Euen now a tailor call me in his shop,

And show'd me Silkes that he had bought for me,
And therewithall tooke meafeure of my body.
Sure there be but imaginarie wiles,
And Iapland Sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter Dromio Sirs.

S. Dro. Master, here's the gold you sent me for: what have you got the picture of old Adam new apparel'd?
Ant. What gold is this? What Adam do'th thou meane?
S. Dro. Not that Adam that kept the Paraffe: but that Adam that keeps the prisone: hee that goes in the calves-skin, that was kil'd for the Prodigall: hee that came behinde you fir, like an euill angel, and bid you for-fake your libertie.

Ant. I understand thee not.
S. Dro. No? why 'tis a plaine cafe: he that went like a Bafe-Viole in a cafe of leather: the man fir, that when gentlemen are tired glues them a bob, and reft them:
he fir, that takes pittie on decaled men, and glues them futes of durance: he that sets vp his reft to doe more exploits with his Mace, then a Morris Pike.

Ant. What thou meanef't an officer?
S. Dro. I fir, the Seriante of the Band: he that brings any man to anfwer it that breaks his Band: one that thinks a man alwaies going to bed, and fakes God give you good reft.

Ant. Well fir, there reft in your foulerie:
Is there any thips puts forth to night? may we be gone?
S. Dro. Why fir, I brought you word an hour since, that the Barkes Expedition put forth to night, and then were you hindered by the Seriante to tarry for the Hey Delay: Here are the angels that you fent for to deliver you.

Ant. The fellow is drafhed, and fo am I,
And here we wander in illusions:
Some bleffed power deliver vs from hence.

Enter a Currison.

Cur. Well met, well met, Master Antipholus:
I fee fir you have found the Gold-smith now:
Is that the chaine you promis'd me to day.

Ant. Satan advis'd, I charge thee tempt me not.
S. Dro. Master, is this Midris Satan?
Ant. It is the diuell.
S. Dro. Nay, he is worfe, he is the diuels dam:
And here she comes in the habit of a light wench, and thereof comes, that the wenches say God dam me, That's as much to say, God make me a light wench: It is written, they appear to men like angels of light, light is an effeét of fire, and fire will burne: ergs, light wenches will burne, come not neere her.

Cur. Your man and you are marauillous merrie fir.
Will you goe with me, we'll mend our dinner here?
S. Dro. Master, if do expel bypass-ment, or befpeake a long fponne.

Ant. Why Dromio?
S. Dro. Marrie he muft have a long fponne that muft eate with the diuell.

Ant. Avoide then fiened, what tell's thou me of sup.
Thou art, as you are all a fortereffe: (ping ? I conjure thee to leaue me, and be gon.

Cur. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or for my Diamond the Chaine you promis'd,
And lie be gone fir, and not trouble you.
S. Dro. Some diuels sake but the parings of one naile,
The Comedie of Errors.

a rush, a haire, a drop of blood, a pin, a nut, a cherrie-stone: but the more coccus, wold have a chaine: Mater be wife, and if you give it her, the diuell will shake her Chaine, and fright vs with it.

Car. I pray you fir my Ring, or else the Chaine,
I hope you do not mean to cheat me so?

Ant. Auant thou witch: Come Dromio let vs go.

S.Dro. Flie pride fakes the Pea-cocke, Misfris that you know.

Car. Now out of doubt Antipbolus is mad,
Elfe would he neuer so demean himselfe,
A Ring he hath of mine worth fortie Ducquets,
And for the fame he promis'd me a Chaine,
Both one and other he denies me now:
The reason that I gather he is mad,
Besides this pretent infrance of his rage,
is a rude tale he told to day at dinner,
Of his owne doores being shut against his entrance.
Belike his wife acquainted with his fits,
On purpose that the doores against his way:
My way is now to his home to his house,
An looke his wife, that being Lusitickes,
He rush'd into my house, and tooke perforce
My Ring away. This courte I fitte choofe,
For fortie Ducquets is too much to lofe.

Enter Antipbolus Epsof. with a Lailor.

An. Feare me not man, I will not breake away,
Ile give thee ere I leave thee so much money,
Warrant thee as I am raffled for,
My wife is in a wayward mood to day,
And will not lightly truft the Meatfinger,
That I should be attach'd in Epsofus,
I tell you 'twill found harfthy in her ears.

Enter Dromio Epsof. with a ropes end.

Here comes my Man, I thinke he brings the monie,
How now sir? Have you that I fent you for?

E.Dro. Here's that I warrant you will pay them all.

Ant. But where's the Money?

E. Dro. Why sir, I gaue the Monie for the Rope.

Ant. Five hundred Ducquets villaine for a rope?

E. Dro. Ille ferue you fowre hundred at the rate.

Ant. To what end did I bid thee tie thee home?

E. Dro. To a ropes end fir, and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. And to that end fir, will I welcome you.

Offi. Good fir be patient.

E. Dro. Nay 'tis for me to be patient, I am in adversifie.

Offi. Good now hold thy tongue.

E. Dro. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.

Ant. Thou whoreson feneffelle Villaine.

E. Dro. I would I were feneffelle fir, that I might not feel ye blows.

Ant. Thou art fenfible in nothing but blows, and so is an Aflie.

E. Dro. I am an Aflie indeede, you may prooue it by my long ears. I have earnd him from the houre of my Nacitulle to this instant, and hauing nothing at his hands for my seruice but blowes. When I am cold, he heastes me with beating: when I am warme, he cooles me with beating: I am wak'd with it when I sleepe, rain'd with it when I fit, driven out of doores with it when I goe from home, welcom'd home with it when I returne, my
I bare it on my shoulders, as a begger woont her brat:
and I thinke when he hath lam'd me, I shall begge with it from doore to doore.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courteane, and a Schoolemaffer, call'd Pinch.

Ant. Come goe along, my wife is comming yonder.

E. Dro. Misfris reffice fynaen, respect your end, or rather the prophetic like the Parrat, beware the ropes end.

Ant. Wilt thou still talkes?

Blasts Dro. Cour. How say you now? Is not your husband mad?

Adri. His inciuliury confirmes no lefe:

Good Doctor Pinch, you are a Conjuror,

Etablith him in his true fense again,

And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas how firy, and how sharp he lookes.
Cur. Marke, how he trembles in his extaffe.

Pinch. Give you me your hand, and let mee feel your puile.

Ant. There is my hand, and let it feel your ears.

Pinch. I charge thee Sathan, how'd within this man,
To yeld poffeflion to my holie praiers,

And to thy flate of darkneffe his thee ftrait,
That I conure thee by all the Saints in heaven.

Ant. Peace dotting wizard, peace: I am not mad.

Adri. Oh that thou wert not, poore diftrefled soule.

Ant. You Minion you, are th'ee your Cuftomers?

Did this Companion with the faffron face
Rewell and fealit at my houfe to day,

Whill it vsen upon the gallite doores were shut,

And I denied to enter in my houfe.

Adr-O husband, God doth know you did'st at home
Where would you had remain'd vntill this time,

Free from these flanders, and this open flame.

Ant. Dind at home? Thou Villaine, what sayest
thou?

Dro. Sir footh to say, you did not dine at home.

Ant. Were not my doores lockt vp, and I shut out?

Dro. Perdie, your doores were lockt, and you shut out.

Ant. And not the her felle reale me there?

Dro. Sans Fable, she her felle reulid you there.

Ant. Did not her Kitchen maine raile, taunt, and scorne me?

Dro. Certif the did, the kittoon verfall form'd you.

Ant. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. In veritie you did, my bones beares witneffe,
That fince hauie felt the vigor of his rage.

Adr. Is't good to footh him in thefe contraries?

Pinch. It is no Shame, the fellow finds his vaine,
And yeelding to him, humors well his frensie.

Ant. Thou haft subborn'd the Goldsmith to arret mee.

Adr. Alas, I fent you Monie to redeeme you,

By Dromio heere, who came in Haft for it.

Dro. Monie by me? Heart and good will you might,

But surely Mafter not a ragge of Monie.

Ant. Wentith not thou to her for a purfe of Ducquets.

Adr. He came to me, and I dellaer'd it.

Luc. And I am witneffe with her that the did

Dro. God and the Rope-maker beare me witneffe,

That I was fent for nothing but a rope.

Pinch. Misfris, both Man and Mafter is poofett,

They

I know it by their pale and deadly lookes,
The Comedie of Errors.

They must be bound and laide in some darke roomes.
Adr. Say wherefore didst thou loose me forth to day,
And why doft thou deny the bagge of gold?
Adr. I did not gentle husband locke thee forth.
Dro. And gentle Sir I receiv'd no gold:
But I confesse sir, that we were lockt out.

Adr. Dissembling Villain, thou perfick'd in both
And dissembling harlot, thou art false in all,
And art confederate with a dammed packe,
To make a louthome abecct forme of me:
But with these nailes, Ile plucke out these falle eyes,
That would behold in me this shamefull sport.

Enter three or four, and offer to binde him.
His freinds.

Adr. Oh binde him, binde him, let him not come neere me.

Pinche. More company, the fiend is strong within him
Luc. Aye me poor man, how pale and wan he looks.
Adr. What will you murther me, thou Tailor thou? I am thy prifoner, wilt thou suffer them to make a rescue?
Off. Masters let him go: he is my prifoner, and you shall not have him.

Pinche. Go binde this man, for he is franckie too.
Adr. What wilt thou do, thou punchiff Officer?
Hath thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displaife to himselfe?
Off. He is my prifoner, if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.
Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee,
Bear me forthwith unto his Creditor,
And knowing how the debt grows I will pay it.
Good Master Doctor fees him faire consey'd
Home to my house, oh most vnhappy day.

Adr. Oh most vnhappy trumpet.
Dro. Master, I am here entred in bond for you.

Adr. Out on thee Villaine, wherefore dost thou mad mee?
Dro. Will you be bound for nothing, be mad good
Mater, cry the duell.
Luc. God helpe poor foules, how idly doe they talk.
Adr. Go bear him hence, sider go with me you Say now, whose suiter is he arrest'd at?
Exeunt, Manet Offic. Adr. Luc. Courtezan

Off. One Angelo a Goldsmith, do you know him?
Adr. I know the man: what is the femme he owes?
Off. Two hundred Ducats.
Adr. Say, how grows it due.
Off. Due for a Chaine your husband had of him.
Adr. He did bespeak a Chaine for me, but had it not.
Car. When as your husband all in rage to day
Came to my house, and woke away my Ring,
The Ring I saw upon his finge now,
Straight after did I meete him with a Chaine.
Adr. It may be so, but I did never fee it.
Come Tailor, bring me where the Goldsmith is,
I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter Antipholus Stratiotus with his Rapier drawne, and Dromio Strato.

Luc. God for thy mercy, they are loose againe.

Adr. And come with naked fouls,
Let's call more helpe to have them bound againe.

Runne all out.

Off. Away: they'll kill vs.

Exeunt omnes, at fea as may be, frighted.

S. Adr. I see thee Witches are afraid of swords.
S. Dro. She that would be your wife, now ran from you.

Adr. Come to the Centaur, fetch our fluffe from thence:
I long that we were safe and found abroad.
Dro. Faith stay heree this night, they will surely do vs no harme: you saw they speake vs faire, glue vs gold: me thinkes they are such a gentle Nation, that but for the Mountaine of mad feth that claims marriage of me, I could finde in my heart to stay heree still, and turne Witch.
Adr. I will not stay to night for all the Towne,
Therefore away, to get our fluffe abroad.

Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Merchant and the Goldsmith.

Gold. I am forry Sir that I have hinderde you,
But I protest he had the Chaine of me,
Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.
Mar. How is the man eftem'd here in the Citie?
Gold. Of very reuerent reputation sir,
Of credit infinite, highly below'd,
Second to none that lines here in the Citie:
His word might bear my wealth at any time.

Mar. Speakes folly, yonder as I thinke he walkes.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio again.
Gold. 'Tis fo: and that false chaine about his neckes,
Which he forswore most moneftrously to have.

Ant. Speake now to mee: I doe speake to him:
Signior Antipholus, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble,
And not without some scandall to your selfe,
With circumspection and oaths, to doe denie
This Chaine, which now you wearre so openly.

Before the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You have done wrong to this my honest friend,
Who but for staying on our Controversie,
Had hoiffeed faile, and put to sea to day:
This Chaine you had of me, can you deny it?

Ant. I thinke I had, I never did deny it.
Mar. Yes that you did sir, and forswore it too.

Ant. Who heard me to doe it or forswere it?

Mar. These cares of mine thou knowst did hear thee:
Fie on thee wretch, 'tis pritty that thou liest.
To walke where any honest men reforme.

Ant. Thou art a Villaine to impeach me thus,
Ile prove mine honor, and mine honestie
Against thee presently, if thou darst stand:
Mar. I dare and do desie thee for a villaine.

They drawe. Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtezan, & others.

Adr. Hold, hurt him not for God sake, he is mad,
Some get within him, take his sword away:
Binde Dromio too, and bearne them to my house.

S. Dro. Runne master run, for Gods sake take a house,
This is some Prioritie, in, or we are spoild.

Exeunt to the Prioritie.
Enter Lady Abbesse.

Ab. Be quiet people, wherefore throng you hither?

Adr. To fetch my poore distrafted husband hence, Let vs come in, that we may binde him fast, And bear him home for his recoouer.

Gold. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.

Mar. I am forry now that I did draw on him.

Ab. How long hath this persecution held the man.

Adr. This weeke he hath bene heausie, lower fad, And much different from the man he was:

But till this afternoone his paffion

Ne're brake into extremity of rage.

Ab. Hath he not loft much wealth by wrack of sea, Buried some deere friend, hath not esie his eye

Stray'd his affection in unlawfull love, A fman poulauing much in youth; therefore, Who give their eies the liberty of gazing.

Of which that forrowes is he subiect too?

Adr. To none of thefe, except it be the laft,

Namely, some loue that drew him oft from home.

Ab. Thou shouldst, in such case, have reprehended him.

Adr. Why so I did.

Ab. I but not rought enough.

Adr. As roughly as my modellie would let me.

Ab. Happily in private.

Adr. And in affemblies too.

Ab. I, but not enough.

Adr. It was the copie of our Conference.

In bed he slept not for my vrging it,

At board he fed not for my vrging it:

Alone, it was the subiect of my Theme:

In company I often glanced it:

Still did I tell him, it was vtilde and bad,

Ab. And thereof came it, that the man was mad.

The venome clamors of a leauall woman,

Pollen more deadly then a mad dogges tooth,

It seems his feepers were hindered by thy railing, And thereof comes it that his head is light.

Thou faist his meate was faw'd with thy vprailding,

Vnquiet meales make ill digeftions,

Thereof the raging fire of feauier bred,

And what's a Feauer, but a fit of madness?

Thou fayft his fports were hindered by thy bralles.

Sweet recreation bar'd, what doth enfeeze

But moockie and dull melancholy,

Kinfman to grim and comfortleffe despair,

And at her heeles a huge infecteous troope

Of pale diftemperatures, and foes to life?

In food, in fport, and life-preferuing reft

To be dibur'd, would mad or man, or beafi:

The conquence is then, thy leauale fits

Hath feared thy husband from the vfe of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,

When he demean'd himfelfe, rough, rude, and wildy,

Why beare you thefe rebukes, and anfwer not?

Adrj. She did betray me to my owne reproofs,

Good people enter, and lay hold on him.

Ab. No, not a creature enters in my houfe.

Adr. Then let your fervants bring my husband forth

Ab. Neither; he tooke this place for fanchuary,

And it fhall priludige you from your hands,

Till I haue brough't him to his wits againe,

Or loofe my labour in affayling it.

Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurfe,

Diet his fickneffe, for it is in my Office,

And will haue no attorney but my felfe,

And therefore let me have him home with me.

Ab. Be patient, for I will not let him firre,

Till I haue vs'd the approv'd means I haue,

With wholesome frrups, drugs, and holy prayers

To make of him a formal man againe:

It is a branch and parcell of mine oath,

A charitable dutie of my order,

Therefore depart, and leave him heere with me.

Adr. I will not hence, and leave my husband heere:

And ill it doth befome your hollineffe

To separate the husband and the wife.

Ab. Be quiet and depart, thou shalt not have him.

Luc. Complain unto the Duke of this indignity.

Adr. Come go, I will fall prostrate at his feete,

And never rise vntil my teares and prayers

Hau'e won his grace to concurr in affection hither,

And take perfore my husband from the Abbesse.

Mar. By this I thinke the Diall points at fue:

Anon I'ne fure the Duke himfelf in perfom

Comes this way to the melancholly vale;

The place of death, and forrie execution,

Behind the ditches of the Abbey heere.

Gold. Upon what caufe?

Mar. To fee a reverent Straconian Merchant,

Who put vnluckily into this Bay

Against the Laws and Statutes of this Towne,

Reheaded publiquely for his offence.

Gold. See where they come, we wil behold his death

Luc. Kneele to the Duke before he paffe the Abbey.

Enter the Duke of Ephesius, and the Merchant of Stracon.

bare head, with the Headman, & other Officers.

Duke. Yet once againe proclame it publiquely,

If any friend will pay the fumme for him,

He shall not die, so much we tender him.

Adr. Justice most sacred Duke against the Abbesse.

Duke. She is a vertuous and a reverent Lady,

It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.

Adr. May it please your Grace, Antipholus my husband,

Who I made Lord of me, and all I had,

At your important Letters this ill day,

A most outrageous fit of madness tooke him:

That desparately he hurried through the frecete,

With him his bondman, all as mad as he,

Doing difpleasure to the Citizens,

By running in their houfes : bearing thence

Kings, Jewels, any thing his rage did like.

Once did I get him bound, and fent him home,

Whil'lt to take order for the wrongs I went,

That heere and there his firfe had committed,

Anon I wot not, by what ftrong efficace

He broke from those that had the guard of him,

And with his mad attendand and himfelfe,

Each one with irrefufable fentiments, with drakne swords

Met vs againe, and madly bent on vs

Chace'd vs away ; till railing of more side:

We came againe to binde them ; then they fled

Into this Abbey, whether we purf'd them,

And heere the Abbesse shuts the gates on vs,

And will notuffer vs to fetch him out,

Nor fend him forth, that we may bear him hence.

Therefore
Therefore most gracious Duke with thy command, Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for helpe. Duke. Long since thy husband for'd me in my wars And I to thee ingag'd a Princes word, When thou didst make him Master of thy bed, To do him all the grace and good I could. Go some of you, knocke at the Abbey gate, And bid the Lady Abbeye come to me: I will determine this before I retire.

Enter a Messinger.

Oh Milifirs, Milifirs, shi't and loose your selies, My Master and his man are both broke loose, Bosten the Maids a-row, and bound the Doctor, Whose heard they have fign'd off with bands of fire, And euuer as it blaz'd, they threw on him Great pales of pullede myre to quench the haires; My Mr preaches patience to him, and the while His man with Cizers nickes him like a fool: And sere (vnlfie you send some preuent helpe) Betwixt them he will kill the Conqueror.

Adr. Peace foolo, thy Master and his man are here, And that is false thou doit report to vs. Mejt. Milifirs, vpon my life I tel you true, I have not breath'd almoyst since I did see it. He cries for you, and wines if he can take you, To search your face, and to disfigure you: Crying within.

Adr. Ay me, it is my husband: witneffe you, That he is borne aboute and unlawful, Even now we hou'd him in the Abbey heere. And now he's there, paft thought of humane reason.

Enter Antipholus, and E. Dromio of Ephesus.

E. Ant. Iustice most gracious Duke,oh grant me ju- Euen for the seruice that long since I did thee, When I befrid thee in the warres, and tooke Deepes fcares to faue thy life; euuen for the blood That then I loft for thee, now grant me induce. E. Mar. Fat. Vnlfie the fear of death doth make me dote, I fee my fonne Antipholus and Dromio. E. Ant. Iustice (sweet Prince) againft 'o Woman there: She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife; That hath abused and dishonored me. Even in the strength and height of injurie: Beyond imagination is the wrong That the this day hath shameflee throwne on me. Duke. Difcouer how, and thou shalt finde me juft. E. Rhet. This day (great Duke) he fhot the doores vpon me, While the he with Harlots feafl'd in my house. Duke. A greeuous fault: say woman, didst thou fo? E. Adr. No my good Lord. My felle, he, and my fitter, To day did dine togethe'r: fo belial my fole, As this is felle he burthen me withall. Lucr. Nere may I looke on day, nor slepe on night, But the tels to your Highnffe simple truth. Gold. O perier'd woman! They are both forrowne, In this the Madman luftly chargeth them. E. Ant. My Liege, I am abased what I say, Neither disturbed with the effeft of Wine, Nor headle-fad prowak'd with raging ire, Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.

This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner; That Goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her, Could witneffe it: for he was with me then, Who parted with me to go fetch a Chaine, Promising to bring it to the Porpentine, Where Bulbous and I did dine together. Our dinner done, and he not commun thither, I went to feke him. In the street I met him, And in his companie that Gentleman, There did this perier'd Goldsmith sweare me downe, That I this day of him receiv'd the Chaine, Which God he knowes, I lie not. For the which, He did arret me with an Officer. I did obey, and sent my Pfent home For certaine Duckets: he with none return'd. Then freily I besoke the Officer To go in perfon with me to my houfe. By'th'way, we met my wife, her filter, and a rabble more Of vile Confedrates: Along with them They brought one Pinch, a hungry leane-fac'd Villaine; A meere Anatomie, a Mountebanke, A thred-bare Jugler, and a Fortune-teller; A needy-hollow-ey'd-flare-looking-wretch; A living dead man. This pernicious flae, Forfooth tooke on him as a Conqueror: And gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulfe, And with no-face (as 'twere) out-facing me, Cries out, I was posseff. Then altogether They fell vpon me, bound me, bore me thence, And in a darke and danklieth vault at houfe. There left me and my man, both bound together, Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds in funder, I gain'd my freecome; and immediately Ran hereth to your Grace, whom I befeech To give me ample satisfaction For these deepes fames, and great indignities. Gold. My Lord, in truth, thus far I witnesse with him: That he din'd not at home, but was lock't out. Duke. But had he such a Chaine of thee, or no? Gold. He had my Lord, and when he ran in here, These people saw the Chaine about his necke. Mar. Beside, I will be (worne these eares of mine, Heard you confesse you had the Chaine of him, After you first forswore it on the Mart, And thereupon I drew my sword on you: And then you fled into this Abbey heere, From whence I think you are comped by Miracle. E. Ant. I never came within thence Abbey walls, Nor euer didst thou draw thy sword on me: I neuer saw the Chaine, fo helpe me heauen: And this is false you burthen me withall. Duke. Why what an intricate impecch is this? I think you all have drunke of Circs cup; If heere you housed him, heere he would haue bin. If he were mad, he would not please so coldly; You say he din'd at home, the Goldsmith heere Denies that saying. Sirra, what say you? E. Dre. Sir he din'de with her there, at the Porpentine. Cur. He did, and from my finger snacht that Ring. E. Antii. Tis true (my Liege) this Ring I had of her. Duke. Saw't thou him enter at the Abbey heere? Cur. As for (my Liege) as I do see your Grace. Duke. Why this is strange: Go call the Abbese hither. I think you are all mated, or farke mad.
Enter one to theAbbess.

Fa. Moft mighty Duke, vouchsafe me speak a word: Hayly I fee a friend will faue my life, And pay the fum that may deliver me.
Faith. Is not thy name Sir call'd Antipholus?

E. D. Within this howre I was his bondman Sir, But hee thenke he could in two my cords, Now am I Dromio, and his man, vnbound.
Faith. I am sure you both of you remember me.
Dro. Our felues we do remember Sir by you:
For lately we were bound as you are now.

You are not Pinches patient, are you Sir?
Father. Why looke you strange on me? you know me well.

E. Ant. I never faw you in my life till now.
Fa. Oh! grieveth haue chang'd me since you faw me laft, And carefull howres with times deformed hand, Have written strange defeatures in my face:
But deale you yet, doth thou not know my voice?

E. Ant. Neither.

Fat. Dromio, nor thou Sir?
Dro. No truth me Sir, nor I.

E. Dromio. I Sir, but I am sure I do not, and whatfoever a man denies, you are now bound to belive him.
Faith. Not know my voice, oh times e trenty
Haft thou so crack'd and splitted my poore tongue
In feuen short yeares, that heere my onely fonne
Knownes not my feeble key of natun'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In fap-consuming Winters drazled snow,
And all the Conduits of my blood froze vp:
Yet hath my night of life fome memorie:
My waiting lampes fome fading glimmer left.
My dull deafe eares a little vie to heare:
All these old witnesfies, I cannot erre.
Tell me, thou art my fonne Antipholus.
Ant. I never faw my Father in my life.
Fa. But feuen yeares fince, in Siracufa boy
Thou know'st we parted, but perhaps my fonne,
Thou damnd to acknowledge me in mistere.
Ant. The Duke, and all that know me in the City,
Can witnesfie with me that it is not fo.
I ne'er faw Siracufa in my life.
Duke. I tell thee Siracufian, twenty yeares
Have I bin Patron to Antipholus,
During which time, he ne'er faw Siracufa:
I fee thy age and dangers make thee dothe.

Enter the Abbess with Antipholus Siracufa, and Dromio Sir.

Abbess. Moft mighty Duke, behold a man much wound'd.
All gather to see them.

Adr. I fee two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.
Duke. One of these men is genius to the other:
And fo of thefe, which is the natuall man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?
S. Drom. I Sir am Dromio, command him away.
E. Dro. I Sir am Dromio, pray let me stay.
S. Ant. Egeon art thou not? or else his ghost.
S. Drom. Oh my olde Master, who hath bound him here?
Abb. Who ever bound him, I will loose his bonds, And gaine a husband by his libertie:
Speake olde Egeon, if thou be'ft the man That had a wife once call'd E Emilia, That borne thee at a burthen two faine fonnes? Oh if thou be'ft the fame Egeon, speake:
And speake vnto the fame E Emilia.
Duke. Why here begins his Morning florie right:
These two Antipholus, thefe two fo like, And these two Dromio's, one in semblance:
Before her viging of her wrakke at fea,
These are the parents to thefe children, Which accidentally are met together.
Fa. If I dreame not, thou art E Emilia,
If thou art thee, tell me, where is that fonne
That floated with thee in the fatall rafe.
Abb. By men of Epidamium, he, and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken vp:
But by and by, rude Fishermen of Corinbe
By force tooke Dromio, and my fonne from them,
And me they left with thefe of Epidamium.

What then became of them, I cannot tell:
I to this fortune that you fee me in.

Duke. Antipholus thou cam'st from Corinbe first.
S. Ant. No Sir, nor I, I came from Siracufa.
Duke. Stay, fand apart, I know not which is which.
E. Ant. I came from Corinbe my mort grucious Lord.
E. Dro. And with me Sir.

E. Ant. Brought to this Town by that moft famous Worriour,
Duke Menaphon, your moft renowned Vnckle.
Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to day?
S. Ant. I, gentle Milistros.
Adr. And are not you my husband?
E. Ant. No, I fay nay to that.
S. Ant. And fo do I, yet did the call me so:
And this faire Gentlewoman her fuber heere
Did call me brother. What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leifure to make good,
If this be not a dreame I fee and heare.

Goldsmith. That is the Chaine Sir, which you had of me.
S. Ant. I thinke it be Sir, I deny it not.
E. Ant. And you Sir for this Chaine arrested me.
Gold. I thinke I did Sir, I deny it not.
Adr. I fent you monie Sir to be your baile
By Dromio, but I thinke he brought it not.
S. Dro. No, none by me.
S. Ant. This purfe of Duckets I receiv'd from you,
And Dromio my man did bring them me:
I fee we fill did meete each others man,
And I was tane for him, and he for me,
And thereupon thefe errors are arose.
S. Ant. These Duckets I pawned for my father heere.
Duke. It shall not neede, thy father hath his life.
Car. Sir I must have that Diamond from you.
E. Ant. There take it, and much thanks for my good cheere.
Adr. Renowned Duke, vouchsafe to take the paines
To go with vs into the Abbey heere,
And heare at large discoursed all our fortunes,
And all that are assembled in this place:
That by this sympathized one daies error
Hau'e suffier'd wrong. Go, keep vs company,

And
The Comedie of Errors.

And we shall make full satisfaction.
Thirtie three yeares have I but gone in traualle
Of you my sones, and till this present houre
My heauie burthen are delivered:
The Duke my husband, and my children both,
And you the Kalenders of their Nativity,
Go to a Goffip's feaft, and go with mee,
After so long greete such Nativity.
Duke. With all my heart, He Goffip at this feaft.

Exeunt omnes. Manet the two Dromio's and two Brothers.
S.Dro. Master, shall I fetch your stuffe from shippord?
E. An. Dromio, what stuffe of mine haft thou imbarkt?
S.Dro. Your goods that lay at hoft fir in the Centaur.
S.Ant. He spakes to me, I am your master Dromio.

Come go with vs, wee'l looke to that anon,
Embrace thy brother there, rejoyce with him. Exit
S.Dro. There is a fat friend at your masters house,
That kitchin'd me for you to day at dinner:
She now shall be my sifer, not my wife,
E.D.Me thinks you are my glasse, & not my brother:
I fee by you, I am a sweet-fac'd youth,
Will you walke in to fee their gollipping?
S. Dro. Not I sir, you are my elder.
E.Dro. That's a question, how shal we trie it.
S.Dro. Wee'l draw Cuts for the Signior, till then, lead thou first.
E.Dro. Nay then thus:
We came into the world like brother and brother:
And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another.

Exeunt.

FINIS.
Much ado about Nothing.

Aëlius primus, Scena prima.

Enter Leonato Gouernour of Messina, Ianneta his wife, Hero his daughters, and Beatrice his Neice, with a messinger.

Leonato.

Learn in this Letter, that Don Peter of Arragon, comes this night to Messina.

Leon. How many Gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A viſtore it twice it selfe, when the schrieuer brings home full numbers: I finde heretof, that Don Peter hath bestowed much honor on a young Florentine, called Claudius.

Mess. Much defer'd on his part, and equally remembred by Don Pedro, he hath borne himselfe beyond the promis of his age, doing in the figure of a Lambe, the feats of a Lion, he hath indeed indeed bettred expectation, then you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leo. He hath an Vnckle here in Messina, will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have already delivered him letters, and there appears much joy in him, even so much, that joy could not stiew it selfe modest enough, without a bag of bitterneffe.

Leo. Did he breake out into tears?

Mess. In great measure.

Leo. A kinde overflown of kindneffe, there are no faces truer, then those that are so wash'd, how much better is it to weep at joy, then to joy at weeping?

Beat. I pray you, is Signior Mountanto return'd from the wares, or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, Lady, there was none such in the armie of any sort.

Leon. What is he that you ask for Nece?

Hero. My cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O he's return'd, and as pleasant as euer he was.

Beat. He set vp his billes here in Messina, & challeng'd Cupid at the Flight: and my Vnckles foule reading the Challenge, subscribe'd for Cupid, and challeng'd him at the Burbolt. I pray you, how many hath he kil'd, and eaten in these wares? But how many hath he kil'd? for indeed, I promis'd to eat all of his killing.

Leon. Faith Nece, you taxe Signior Benedick too much, but hee shall meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good seruice Lady in these wars. Beat. You had manfully, and he hath holpe to ease it: he's a very valiant Trencher-man, hee hath an excellent romache.
Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly: I think this is your daughter.

Leonato. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Bened. Were you in doubt that you ask her?

Leonato. Signior Benedick, no, for then were you a child.

Pedro. You have it full Benedick, we may guess by this, what you are, being a man, truly the Lady fathers her sense: be happy Lady, for you are like an honorable father.

Bened. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for al Meffina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, signior Benedicke, no body markes you.

Bened. What my deere Ladie Diodaine! are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible Diodaine should die, while she hath such meate foode to feede it, as Signior Benedick? Curtefe it feele must convert to Diodaine, if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is curtefe a turne-coate, but it is certaine I am loved of all Ladies, onely you excepted: and I would I could finde in my heart that I had not a hard heart, for truly I loue none.

Bened. A deere happinelle to women, they would else have beene troubled with a pernicious Sater, I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that, I had rather heare my Dog barke at a Crow, than a man sweare he loves me.

Bene. God keepe your Ladiship still in that minde, so some Gentleman or other shall scape a predefinate refcrach feare.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worfe, and 'twere such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare Parrat teacher.

Bened. A bird of my tongue, is better than a beast of your.

Bene. I would my horse had the feed of your tongue, and so go a continuator, but keepe your way a Gods name, I have done.

Bened. You alwaies end with a Ladies tricke, I know you of old.

Pedro. This is the fumme of all: Leonato, signior Claudio, and signior Benedicke; my deere friend Leonato, hath inuited you all, I tell him we shall lay here, at the leaft a moneth, and he heartily prays some occasion may deale our love. I dare sweare hee is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you sweare, my Lord, you shall not be forsworne, let mee bid you welcome, my Lord, being reconciled to the Prince your brother: I owe you all dutie.

John. I thanke you, I am not of many words, but I thanke you.

Leon. Plesse it your grace leade on?

Pedro. Your hand Leonato, we will goe together.

Exeunt. Leonato Benedicke and Claudio.

Claud. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not, but I looke on her.

Claud. Is she not a modest yong Ladie?

Bene. Doe you question me as an honest man shoud doe, for my simple true judgement? or would you have me speake after my cursume, as being a professed tyrant to their feaze?

Claud. No, I pray thee speake in sober judgement.

Bened. Why yeffith me thinks shee's too low for a heile praire, too browne for a faire praire, and too little for a great praire, onely this commendation I can afford her, that were none other then the is, she were unhandome, and being no other, but as she is, I doe not like her.

Claud. Thou think'st I am in sport, I pray thee tell me truely how thou likk't her.

Bened. Would you bieue her, that you enquier after her?

Claud. Can the world bieue such a Jewell?

Bened. Yes, and a cafe to put it into, but speake you this with a fift brow? Or doe you play the flowing lache, to tell vs Cupid is a good Hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare Carpenter? Come, in what key shall aman take you to goe in the fong?

Claud. In mine eie, she is the sweetest Ladie that euer I lookt on.

Bened. I can fie yet without speectacles, and I see no fuch matter: there's her cofin, and the were not pofted with a firit, she exceeds her as much in beautie, as the firt of Male doth the lift of December: but I hope you have no intent to turne husband, haue you?

Claud. I would scarce truft my felle, though I had fwnore the contrarie, if Hero would be my wife.

Bened. If it come to this? in faith hath not the world one man but he will weare his cap with fufpition? shall I neuer fee a batcheller of three score againe? goe to yeffith, and thou wilt needes thruft thy necke into a yoke, weare the print of it, and figh away fundales: looke, don Pedro is returned to lecke you.

Enter den Pedro. Iohn the baflard.

Pedro. What fecret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonatos?

Bened. I would your Grace would contraine mee to tell.

Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

Bened. You hear, Count Claudio, I can be fecret as a dumbe man, I would you think of (but on my allegiance, marke you this, on my allegiance) hee is in loue, With who now that is your Graces part: marke how short his anfwer is, with Hero Leonatos short daughter.

Claud. If this were ffo, so were it vttred.

Bened. Like the old tale, my Lord, it is not fo, nor 'twas not fo: but indeede, God forbid it should be fo.

Claud. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

Pedro. Amen, if you loue her, for the Ladie is very well worthie.

Claud. You speake this to fetch me in, my Lord.

Pedro. By my troth I speake my thought.

Claud. And in faith, my Lord, I spoke mine.

Bened. And by my two faiths and troths, my Lord, I speake mine.

Claud. That I love her, I feele.

Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Bened. That I neither feele how shee shoud be loaed, nor know how shee shoud be worthie, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me, I will die in it at the flake.

Pedro. Thou wart euer an obitinate heretique in the defight of Beautie.

Claud. I never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.

Bened. That
Ben. That a woman conceived me, I thank her: that she brought me vp, I likewise give her most humble thankes: but that I will have a rechae winded in my forehead, or hang my bagle in an insulable baldricke, all women shall pardon me: because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will doe my felfe the right to truft none: and the finall, (for which I may goe the finner) I will line a Batchelor.

Pedro. I shall fee thee ere I die, looke pale with loue.

Bene. With anger, with fickneffe, or with hungre, my Lord, not with loue: prove that ever I looke more blood with loue, then I will get againe with drinking, picke out mine eyes with a Bullet-makers penne, and hang me vp at the doore of a brothel-house for the figne of blinde Cupid.

Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I doe, hang me in a bottle like a Cat, & shoot me at, and he that hit's me, let him be clapt on the shoulder, and call'd Adam.

Pedro. Well, as time shall trie: In time the faueful Bull doth bear the yoke.

Bene. The faueful bull may, but if ever the feffible Beneidcik heare it, plucke off the bulles hornes, and fet them in my forehead, and let me be vildely painted, and in fuch great Letters as they write, here is good horfe to hire: let them signifie vnder my figne, here you may fee Beneidcik the married man.

Clau. If this fould ever happen, thou wouldst bee horne mad.

Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his Quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I looke for an earthquake too then.

Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the houres, in the mean time, good Signior Beneidcik, repaire to Leonato, commend me to him, and tell him I will not faile him at supper, for indeede he hath made great prepraation.

Bene. I have almoft matter enough in me for such an Embaffage, and do I commit you.

Clau. To the tuition of God. From my houfe, if I had it.

Pedro. The fext of July. Your loving friend, Beneidcik.

Bene. Nay mocke not, mocke not: the body of your discourse is sometyme guarded with fragments, and the guards are but lightly bafted on neither, ere you flout old ends any further, examine your confcience, and do I leave you.

Exit. Clau. My Liege, your Highneffe now may doe mee some.

Pedro. My loue is thine to teach, teach it but how, and thou shalt fee how apt it is to learne

Any hard Leffen that may do thee good.

Clau. Hath Leonato any fome my Lord?

Bene. Nay mocke not, mocke not: he's his onely heire.

Doft thou affeft her Claudia?

Clau. O my Lord,

When you went onward on this ended action, I look'd upon her with a fouldiers eye,

That like'd, but had a rougher taske in hand,

Than to dove liking to the name of loue: But now I am return'd, and that warre-thoughts have left their places vacant: in their roome, Come thronging foft and delicate defires,

All prompting mee how faire yong Hero is,

Saying I like'd her ere I went to warres.

Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover prettily, And tire the hearer with a booke of words:

If thou doft loue faire Hero, cherish it,

And I will brakke with her: wait not to this end,

That thou beganft to twitt fo fine a torty?

Clau. How sweety doe you minifter to loue,

That know loues griefe by his complexion!

But left my liking might too sodaine feeme,

I would have fau'd it with a longer trestife.

Ped. What need ye bridge much broder then the flood?

The fairest granti is the necessitie:

Looke what will ferue, it fit : tis once, thou loueft,

And I will fit thee with the remedie,

I know we shall haue resuelling to night,

I will alsume thy part in some difguife,

And tell faire Hero I am Claudio,

And in her bonume Ie vnclafpe my heart,

And take her hearing prisoner with the force

And strong encounter of my amorous tale:

Then after, to her father will I brake,

And the conclusion is, face shall be thine,

In prudifile let vs put it presently.

Enter Leonato and an old man, brother to Leonato. LEO. How now brother, where is my cofen your fon: hath he prou'd this musicke?

Old. He is very buie about it, but brother, I can tell you newes that you yet dreamt not of.

LEO. Are they good?

Old. As the events stampes them, but they have a good couer: they shew well outward, the Prince and Count Claudio walking in a thick pleached alley in my orchard, were thus ouer-heard by a man of mine: the Prince difcovered to Claudio that hee loued my niece your daugther, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance, and if hee found her accordant, hee meant to take the preuent time by the top, and instantly breake with you of it.

Leo. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Old. A good sharp fellow, I will send for him, and question him your felle.

Leo. No, no; wee will hold it as a dreame, till it appeare it selfe: but I will acquaint my daughter withall, that she may be the better prepared for an anfwer, if peradventure this bee true: I goe you and tell her of it: couine, you know what you have to doe, O I crie you mercie friend, goe you with mee and I will vfe your skill, good cofin have a care this buie time.

Exit. Enter Sir John the Baftrard, and Comrade his companion.

Con. What the good yeere my Lord, why are you thus out of measure (ad?)

Iob. There is no measure in the occaion that breeds, therefore the fadneffe is without limit.

Con. You should heare reafon.

John. And when I have heard it, what blessing bringeth it?

Con. If not a prefent remedy, yet a patient sufferrance.

Iob. I wonder that thou (being as thou falt thou art, borne vnder Saturne) goest about to apply a morall medicine, to a mortifying michiefe: I cannot hide what I am: I must bee lid when I have caufe, and smile at no mans left, eat when I have homacke, and wait for no mans leuire: sleepe when I am crowne, and tend on no mans bufineffe, laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humor.

Con. Yes, but you must not make the ful show of this, till you may doe it without controllment, you have of late late flood out against your brother, and hee hath taken you newly into his grace, where it is impossible you should take root, but by the faire weather that you make your selfe, it is needful that you frame the seacon for your owne harvest.

John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, then a rose in his grace, and it better fits my bloud to be disdain'd of all, then to fashion a carriage to rob loue from any in this (though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man) it must not be denied but I am a plaine dealing villaine, I am trusted with a muflel, and entrenchide with a clog, therefore I have decreed, not to fing in my cage if I had my mouth, I would bite: if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the mean time, let me be that I am, and feele not to alter me.

Can. Can you make no vse of your discontent?

John. I will make all vse of it, for I vse it only. Who comes here? what news Borachio?

Enter Borachio.

Bor. I came yonder from a great supper, the Prince your brother is royally entertained by Leonato, and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

John. Will it cere for any Modell to build mischief on? What is heere for a foule that betrothes himselfe to vnquiteme? Bor. Mary it is your brothers right hand.

John. Who, the most exquisite Claudio?

Bor. Even he.

John. A proper squier, and who, and who, which way looks he?

Bor. Mary on Hero, the daughter and Heire of Leonato.

John. A very forward March-chickie, how came you to this?

Bor. Being entertain'd for a perfumer, as I was snaaking a mufly roomes, comes me the Prince and Claudio, hand in hand in sad conference: I whipt behind the Ar- ras, and there heard it agreed upon, that the Prince should wooe Hero for himselfe, and hauing obtained her, gave her to Count Claudio.

John. Come, come, let vs thither, this may prove food to my displeaseure, that young start vp hath all the glory of my overthrow: if I can euffe him any way, I bleffe my felic every way, you are both sure, and will affit mee?

Corr. To the death my Lord.

John. Let vs to the great supper, theris cheer is the greater that I am subdude, would the Cooke were of my minde: shall we goe prove whates to be done?

Bor. We'll wait upon your Lordship.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Leonato, his brother, his wife, Hero his daughter, and Beatrice his niece, and a kinman.

Leonato. Was not Count John here at supper?

Brother. I saw him not.

Beatrice. How tardily that Gentleman lookest, I never can fee him, but I am heart-burn'd an hourse after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beatrice. Heere were an excellent man that were made juft in the mid-way betwene him and Benedicks, the one is too like an image and fables nothing, and the other too like my Ladys eldest fonne, euermore tattling.

Leon. This halfe signifie Benedicks tongue in Count Johns mouth, and halfe Count Johns melancholy in Signior Benedicts face.

Beat. With a good legge, and a good foot vnuckle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would winne any woman in the world, if he could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth Niece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, it shoule be so shrewed of thy tongue.

Beat. Infaith thee's too curft.

Beat. Too curft is more then curft, I shall leffen Gods fending that way: for it is fald, God sends a curft Cow short horns, but to a Cow too curft he fends none.

Leon. So, by being too curft, God will fend you no horns.

Beat. If he fed me no husband, for the which bleffings, I am at him vpon my knees every morning and euening: Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face, I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leonato. You may light vpon a husband that hath no beard.

Beatrice. What shoule I doe with him? dreffe him in my apparell, and make him my walking gentlewoman the that hath a beard, is more then a youth: and he that hath no beard, is leffe then a man: and hee that is more then a youth, is not for mee: and he that is leffe then a man, I am not for him: therefore I will even take fixepence in earneft of the Berrod, and leade his Ape into hell.

Leon. Well then, goe you into hell.

Beat. No, but to the gate, and there will the Deuill meete mee like an old Cuckold with horns on his head, and fay, get you to heauen Beatrice, get you to heauen, here's no place for you maids, so deliure I vp my Ape, and away to S. Peter's for the heauens, hee shewes mee where the Batchellers fit, and there live wee as merry as the day is long.

Brother. Well ncee, I truft you will rul'd by your father.

Beatrice. Yes faith, it is my cofens duty to make curt, and fay, as it pleafe you: but yet for all that, cofen, let him be a handfome fellow, or else make an other curt, and fay, father, as it pleafe me.

Leonato. Well ncee, I hope to fee you one day fitten with a husband.

Beatrice. Not till God make men of some other meta- tall then earth, would it not giue a woman to be over-madred with a piece of valiant duft? to make account of her life to a clof of waiward marble? no vnckle, lie none: Adams fones are my brethren, and truly I hold it a finne to match in my kinred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you, if the Prince doe follicet you in that kinde, you know your an- fwer.

Beatrice. The fault will be in the muffiecke cofin, if you be not wood in good time: if the Prince bee too impor- tant, tell him there is measure in every thing, & fo dance out the anfwer, for heere me Hero, wooing, wedding, & repenting, is as a Scotch jigge, a measure, and a cinquepace: the first fuite is hot and haftly like a Scotch jigge (and full as fantafically) the wedding manerly mollid, (as a measure) full of fife & aunchentry, and then comes repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinquepace tamer and tamer, till he linkes into his grace.

Leonato.
Much ado about Nothing.

Leonato. coffin you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beatrice. I have a good eye vnto, I can see a Church by daylight.

Leon. The rushers are entreating brother, make good room.

Enter Prince, Pedro, Claudio, and Benedick, and Balthasar, or duns Jem, Masters with a drum.

Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Hero. So you walke softly, and looke sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walk, and specially when I walke away.

Pedro. With me in your company.

Hero. I may say so when I please.

Pedro. And when pleae you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour, for God defend the Duke should be like the cafe.

Leon. My visor is Philemon to of, within the house is Loue.

Hero. Why then your visor should be thatcatch.

Pedro. Speake low if you speake Loue.

Ben. Well, I would you did like me.

Mar. So would not I for your own sake, for I have made ill qualities.

Ben. Which is one?

Mar. I say my prayers allowed.

Ben. I louse you the better, the hearsers may cry Amen.

Mar. God match me with a good dauncer.

Balt. Amen.

Mar. And God keepe him out of my fight when the daunce is done: anfwer Clarke.

Balt. No more words, the Clarke is anfwered.

Virg. I know you well enough, you are Signior Antonio.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Virg. I know you by the wagling of your head.

Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit you.

Virg. You could never doe him so ill well, you were the very man: here's his dry hand vp & down, you are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word I am not.

Virg. Come, come, doe you thinke I do not know you by your excellent wit? can vertue hide it felfe? goe to, mumme, you are he, graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Ben. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who are you?

Bened. Not now.

Beat. That I was disfainfull, and that I had my good wit out of the hundred merry tales: well, this was Signior Benedick that said so.

Ben. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Ben. Not I, beleue me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Ben. I pray you what is he?

Beat. Why he is the Princes leafer, a very dull foole, onely his gift is, in deuiling impoffible flanders, none but Libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his witre, but in his villanie, for hee both pleaseth men and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him: I am sure he is in the Fleet, I would he had boored him.

Ben. When I know the Gentleman, Ile tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do, he'll but brooke a comparision or two on me, which peraduenture (not market, or not laugh'd at) strikes him into melancholy, and then there's a Partridge wing faued, for the foole will eate no supper that night. We must follow the Leaders.

Ben. In every good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they leade to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

Exeunt.

Mufick for the dance.

John. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to breake with him about in the Ladies follow her, and but one visor remaines.

Borachio. And that is Claudio, I know him by his bearing.

John. Are not you Signior Benedick?

Claud. You know me well, I am hee.

John. Signior, you are verie neere my Brother in his love, he is enamoz'd to her, I pray you difuide him from her, she is no euill for his birth: you may do th part of an honest man in it.

Claudio. How know you he loves her?

John. I heard him feare his affliction.

Beat. So did I too, and he swore he would marry her to night.

John. Come, let vs to the banquet.

Exeunt Clau.

Claud. Thus anfwere I in name of Benedick, but here thefe ill newes with the eares of Claudio:

'Tis certaine fo, the Prince woes for himselfe: Friendship is constant in all other things, saue in the Office and affaires of loue: Therefore all hearts in loue vfe their owne tongues. Let euerie eye negotiate for it felfe, and truft no Agent: for beaute is a witch, againft whole charmes, faith melteth into blood: This is an accident of hourly proofe, which I mistrusted not. Farewell therefore Hero.

Enter Benedick.

Ben. Count Claudio.

Claud. Yes, the fame.

Ben. Come, will you go with me?

Claud. Whither?

Ben. Even to the next Willow, about your owne businesse, Count. What fashion will you ware the Garland off? About your necke, like an Vfiers chaine? Or vnder your arme, like a Lieutenants Scarfe? You must wear it one way, for the Prince hath got your Hero.

Claud. I wish him ioey of her.

Ben. Why that's spoken like an honest Drouler, fo they fel Bullockes: but did you thinke the Prince would have ferued you thus?

Claud. I pray you leue me.

Ben. Ho now you strike like the blindman, 'twas the boy that stole your meate, and you beat the poft.

Claud. If it will not be, Ile leave you.

Exeunt.

Ben. Aha poor hart fowle, now will he creepe into folges: But that my Ladie Beatrice should know me, & not know me t' the Princes foole! Hah! It may be I goe vnder that title, because I am merrie: yea but so I am apt to do my felle wrong: I am not fo reputed, it is the bafe (though bitter) defpifion of Beatrixe, that putt's the world into her perfon, and fo gues me out well, I he be revenged as I may.

Enter the Prince.

Pedro. Now Signior, where's the Count, did you see him?

Ben.
Bene. Troth my Lord, I have played the part of Lady
Fame, I found him here as melancholy as a Lodge in a Warren, I told him, and I think, told him true, that your grace had got the will of this young Lady, and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forfaken, or to bind him a rod, as being worthy to be whipt.
Pedro. To be whipt, what's his fault?
Bene. The flat transgression of a Schoole-boy, who being over-joyed with finding a birds nest, bawes it his companion, and he fleas it.
Pedro. Witt thou make a truth, a transgression? the transgression is in the dealer.
Bene. Yet it had not beene amisse the rod had beene made, and the garland too, for the garland he might have worne himselfe, and the rod hee might have bawed on you, who (as I take it) have finde his birds nest.
Pedro. I will but teach them to fing, and refrome them to the owner.
Bene. If their finging answer your saying, by my faith you say honorably.
Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you, the Gentleman that daunff with her, told her thee is much wrong'd by you.
Bene. O you mistake me past the insurance of a block:
an oak but with one greene leafe on it, would have answered her: my very vifor began to affume life, and scold with her: shee told mee, not thinking I had beene my felle, that I was the Prince Ieffter, and that I was duller then a great thaw, hudling left vpon left, with such impossible comuince vpon me, that I flound like a man at a marke, with a whole army shooting at me: shee speakes powynards, and every word ebbes: if her breath were as terrible as terminations, there were no living neere her, she would infect to the north flame: I would not marry her, though she were indowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgrefled, she would have made Hereules have turnd fป, yea, and haue cleft his club to make the fire too: come, talke not of her, you shall finde her the infernall Ate in good apparell. I would to God some scholler would coniure her, for certainly while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell, as in a fancury, and people finde vpon purpose, because they would go thither, so indeed all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follows her.

Enter Claudia and Beatrices, Leonato, Hero.
Pedro. Look here where she comes.
Bene. Will your Grace command mee any feruice to the worlds end? I will goe on the lightest arrand now unto the Antypodes that you can deuile to sende me on:
I will fetch you a tooth-picke nother from the furthest inch of Afa: bring you the length of Wyfter Islands footfeth:
you a huyre off the great Oceans beard: doe you any empassage to the Pignemies, rather then hould three words conference, with this Harpy: you have no employment for me?
Pedro. None, but to declare your good company.
Bene. O God it is, heere a dith I love not, I cannot in-dure this Lady tongue. Exit.
Pedro. Come Lady, come, you have loft the heart of Signior Benedick.
Beat. Indeed my Lord, hee lent me it a while, and I give him v/e for it, a double heart for a single one, marry once before he wonne it of mee, with dille dice, therefore your Grace may well say I have lovt it.

Pedro. You have put him downe Lady,you have put him downe.
Beat. So I would not he should do me, my Lord, let
I should prooue the mother of foes: I have brought Count Claudia, whom you lent mee to feake.
Pedro. Why how now Count, wherefore are you sad?
Claud. Not fad my Lord.
Pedro. How then? fiecke f
Claud. Neither, my Lord.
Beat. The Count is neither fad, nor fiecke, nor merry, nor well: but culll Count, culll as an Orange, and something of a fealous complexion.
Claud. Ifinthe Lady, I thinkke your blazon to be true, though Ile be worme, if hee be fo, his conicet is falle:
here Claudia, I have wound in thy name, and faire Here is wom, I haue broke with her father, and his good will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God giue thee joy.
Leon. Count, take of me thy daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, & all grace say, Amen to it.
Beat. Speaketh Count, tis your Qu.
Claud. Silence is the perfece Herault of joy, I were but little happy if I could fay, how much? Lady, as you are mine, I am yours, I giue away my felle for you, and donat vpon the exchange.
Beat. Speaketh cousin, or (if you cannot) fhop his mouth with a kniffe, and let not him speake neither.
Claud. Infath Lady you have a merry heart.
Beat. Yea my Lord I thankit it, porefoo it kepees upon the windy side of Care, my coofin tells him in his care that he is in my heart.
Claud. And so the doth cousin.
Beat. Good Lord for alliance: thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am fun-burn'd, I may flitin a cor-nery, and cry, heigh ho for a husband.
Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.
Beat. I would rather haue one of your fathers gettings:
hath your Grace ne're a brother like you? your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.
Prince. Will you haue mee? Lady.
Beat. No, my Lord, vistifie I might have another for working-dates, your Grace is too coldly to wear euerie day: but I beleeech your Grace pardon mee, I was borne to speake all mirth, and no matter.
Prince. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry, bett becomes you, for out of question, you were born in a merry heart.
Beat. No fure my Lord, my Mother cried, but then there was a flare daunff, and vnder that was I borne: co-fin God giue you joy.
Leonato. Neceee, will you looke to those rhings I told you of?
Beat. I cry you mercy Vucle, by your Gracees pardon.
Exit Beatrice.
Prince. By my troth a pleanfent spirited Lady.
Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her my Lord, she is never fad, but when she speakes, and not ever fad; then ffor I have heard my daughter fay, the hath often dreamt of vnhappyffes, and waket her felfe with laughing.
Pedro. Shee cannot indure to heare tell a of husband.
Leonato. O, by no meane, shee mocks all her wooers out of fale.
Prince. The were an excellent wife for Benedick.
Leonato. O Lord, my Lord, if they were but a weeke married,
married, they would talk themselves made.

Prince. Counte Claudio, when meanes you goe to Church?

Claud. To morrow my Lord, time goes on crutches, till Loue have all his rites.

Leonato. Not till today, my deare fonne, which is hence a luft feuernight, and a time too briefe, too have all things anerfinde.

Prince. Come, you flake the head at so long a breathing, but I warrant thee Claudio, the time shall not goe dully by vs, I will in the interim, undertake one of Her- cules labors, which is, to bring Signior Benedick and the Lady Beatrice into a mountaine of affection, thone with th’other, I would faine haue it a match, and I doubt not but to fusilion, if you thee will minifter such affi-

 Pawe as I shall glue you direction.

Leonato. My Lord, I am for you, though it cost mee ten nights watchings.

Claud. And I my Lord.

Prim. And you to gentle Hero?

Her. I will doe any modest office,my Lord, to helpe my cofin to a good husband.

Prim. And Benedick is not the vnhopefulllest husband that I know: thus farre can I praise him, hee is of a noble saine, of approved valour, and confirmd honesty, I will teach you how to humour your cofin, that shee shall fall in loue with Benedick, and I, with your two helpers, will so profifle on Benedick, that in defpite of his quicke wit, and his queanie stomacke, shee shall fall in loue with Beatrice: if wee can doe this, Cupid is no longer an Archer, his glory shall be ours, for wee are the onely loue-gods, goe in with me, and I will tell you my drift. Exit.

Enter Claudio and Beatrice.

Isb. It is so, the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bona. Yea my Lord, but I can crosse it.

Isb. Any barre, any crofe, any impediment, will be medicinable to me, I am sick in dilettuere to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges euenly with mine, how canst thou crosse this marriage?

Bona. Not honestly my Lord, but so courtely, that no difhonesty shall appear in me.

Isb. Shew me bredefly how.

Bona. I thinke I told your Lordship a yeere hence, how much I am in the fauour of Margaret, the waiting gentlewoman to Hero.

Isb. I remember.

Bona. I can at any vnseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her Ladies chamber window.

Isb. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bona. The poyson of that lies in you to temper, goe you to the Prince your brother, parte not to tell him, that hee hath wronged his Honor in marrying the renowned Claudio, whose affimation do you mightily hold vp, to a contaminated flafe, such a one as Hero.

Isb. What proofe shall I make of that?

Bona. Proofe enough, to mislike the Prince, to vnde Claudio, to vnlove Hero, and kill Leonato, looke you for another illuse.

Isb. Oneyly to defpight them, I will endeavour any thing.

Bona. Goe then, finde me a meete howre, to draw on Pedro and the Count Claudio alone, tell them that you know that Hero loves me, intend a kind of a sole both to the Prince and Claudio (as in a loue of your brothers honor who hath made this match,) and his friends reputation, who is thus like to be cofen’d with the semblance of a maid, that you haue difcouver’d thuthy will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them infinaces which shall beare no leffe likelihood, than to fee mee at her chamber window, hence mee call Margaret, Hero; hence Margaret term me Claudio, and bring them to fee this the very night before the intended wedding, for in the meanes time, I will fo fusilion the matter, that Hero shall be abient, and there shall appear such seeming truths of Heroes dilhonesty, that Leonato shall be call’d assurance, and all the preparation ouerthrown.

Bona. Grow this to what aduerce issue it can, I will put it in practive: be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducates.

Bona. Be thou constant in the accusation, and my cuning (hall not blame mee.

Isb. I will preferntlie goe learne their day of marriage.

Exit.

Enter Benedick alone.

Bona. Boy.

Boy. Signior.

Bona. In my chamber window lies a booke, bring it hithe to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am heere already sir.

Exit.

Bona. I know that, but I would haue thee hence, and heere againe. I doe much wonder, that one man seeing how much another man is a fooloe, when he devides his behavious to loue, will after hee hath laught at such foolish follies in others, become the argument of his owne scorn, by falling in loue, & such a man is Claudio, I have known when there was no musick with him but the drum and the fire, and now had hee rather heare the taber and the pipe: I have knowne when he would haue walkd ten mile afoot, to fee a good armor, and now will he lie ten nights awake caruing the fusilion of a new dublet: he was wont to speake plaine, & to the purpoe (like an honest man & a foulider) and now is he turn’d orthography, his words are a very fantasticall banquet, sait so many strange difies: may I be fo converted, & fee with these eyes? I cannot tell, I thinke not: I will not bee fwise, but loue may transforme me to an olyster, but Ie take my oaths on it, till he haue made an olyster of me, he shall never make me such a fooloe: one woman is faire, yet I am well: another is wife,yet I am well: another virtuous, yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace: rich shee shall be, that’s certaine: wife, or lie none: vertuous,or lie neuer cheape her: faire, or Ie never looke on her: milde, or come not neere me: Noble, or not for an Angell: of good discoure: an excellent Mufitian, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God, hah! the Prince and Monfieur Louis, I will hide me in the Arbor.

Enter Prince, Leonato, Claudio, and Jacke Wilson.

Prin. Come,shall we hear this musick?

Claud. Yea my good Lord: how stille the evening is,

As hurth on purpoe to grace harmonie.

Prin. See you where Benedick bath hid himselfe?

Claud. O very well my Lord: the musick ended, We’ll fit the kid-foxes with a penny worth.

Prince. Comesaltatorial,ye’ll hear that song again.

Balth. O good my Lord, taxe not to bid a voyce,

To fander musickie any more then once.

Prin. It is the witnesse fill of excellency,

To
Much ado about Nothing.

To slander Musicke any more then once.
Princ. It is the witnesse still of excellency,
To put a strange face on his owne perfection,
I pray thee sing, and let me wooe no more.
Balth. Because you talke of wooing, I will sing,
Since many a woode doth commene his suit,
To her he thinkes not worthy, yet he wooes,
Yet will he fweare he loues.
Princ. Nay pray thee come,
Or if thou wilt hold longer argument,
Doe it in notes.
Balth. Note this before my notes,
Theres not a note of mine that's worth the noting.
Princ. Why there are very crotchets that he speaks,
Note notes foroath, and nothing.

Ben. Now divine sire, now is his foule rault, is it not strange that sheepe guts shoulde foules out of mens bodies? well, a horne for my money when alls done.

The Song.

Sing no more Ladies, sing no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One finte in Sea, and one on shore,
To one thing constant neuer,
Then sigh not fo, but let them gas,
And be you kisse and kenne,
Converting all your founds of woe,
Into boy nony nony.

Sing no more dittyes, sing no more,
Of dumpes so dull and beaute,
The fraud of men were ever fo,
Since summer fyrth was leaute,
Then sigh not fo, &c.

Princ. By my troth a good song.
Balth. And an ill finger, my Lord.
Princ. Ha, no, no faith, thou singst well enough for a shift.

Ben. And he had been a dog that shoulde haue howled thus, they would haue hang'd hym, and I pray God his bad voyce bode no mishike, I had as litle haued heard the night-rauen, come what plague haue com after it.

Princ. Yea marry, doth thou heare Balthasar? I pray thee get vs some excellent musick : for to morrow night we will haue ane at the Lady Hero chamber window.
Balth. The beef I can, my Lord.
Exit Balthasar.

Princ. Do fo, farewel. Come hither Leonato, what was it you told me of to day, that your Niece Beatrice was in love with signior Benedick?
Cia. O I, talke on, talke on, the foule sin. I did never thinke that Lady would haue loved any man.

Ben. No, nor I neither, but most wonderfull, that she should so dote on Signior Benedick, whom shee hath in all outward behauiours feemeuer euene to abhorre.

Bene. Is't possible? is't the windie in that corner?

Leo. By my troth my Lord, I cannot tell what to thinkne of it, but that she loues him with an inraged affection, it is past the infinite of thought.

Princ. May be the doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith like enough.

Leo. O God! counterfeit? there was never counterfeit of passion, came fo neere the life of passion as he discovered it.

Princ. Why what effects of passion shewes she?

Claud. Balte the hooke well, this fish will bite.

Leo. What effects my Lord? shee will fit you, you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did indeed.

Prin. How, how I pray you? you amaze me, I would haue thought her spirit had beene Invincible against all afflaments.
Leo. I would haue sworn it had, my Lord, especially against Benedick.

Bene. I should think this a gull, but that the whitebearded fellow speakes it: knavey cannot sure hide himself in such reuerence.

Claud. He hath tane this infection, hold it vp.

Princ. Hath shee made her affection known to Benedick?

Leonato. No, and shewes he never will, that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true indeed, so your daughter faies: shall I, faies she, that haue so oft encountered him with scornes, write to him that I love him?
Leo. This faies shee now when shee is beginning to write to him, for she'll be vp twenty times a night, and there will she fit in her smockes, till she write a sheet of paper: my daughter tells vs all.

Claud. Now you talke of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty left your daughter told vs of.

Leon. O when she had writ it, & was reading it ouer, she found Benedick and Beatrice betwixt the sheete.

Claud. That.

Leo. O the tere the letter into a thousand halfeines, ralld at her self, that she should be so immobile to write, to one that shee knew would flout her: I measure him, faies she, by my owne spirit, for I should flout him if hee write to me, yea though I love him, I should.

Claud. Then downe vpon her knees she falls, weepes, sobes, bestes her heart, tears her hayres, prays, curset, O sweet Benedick, God give me patience.

Leon. She doth indeed, my daughter faies so, and the extase hath so much overborne her, that my daughter is fortime afeard she will doe a desperate out-rage to her selfe, it is very true.

Princ. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claud. To what end? he would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor Lady worde.

Prin. And he shoulde, it were an almes to hang him, there's an excellent sweet Lady, and (out of all fulspition,) she is vertuous.

Claud. And she is exceeding wife.

Princ. In every thing, but in loving Benedick.

Leo. O my Lord, wifedome and blood combating in so tender a body, we haue ten proofes to one,that blood hath the victorie, I am forry for her, as I haue hearde cause, being her Vnclle, and her Guardian.

Princ. I would shee had befowled this dotage on mee, I would haue daft all other respects, and made her halfe my felle: I pray you tell Benedick of it, and heare what he will fay.

Leo. Were it good thinke you?

Claud. Hero thinkes sorely the wil die, for she faies she will die, if hee loue her not, and shee will die ere she make her loue knowne, and she will die if shee woor her, rather than shee will bate one breath of her accustomed crofnesse.

Prin. She doth well, if she shoulde make tender of her loue, loue, 'tis very possible he'll scorne it, for the man (as you know all) hath a contemplative spirit.

Clau. He is a very proper man.

Prin. He hath indeed a good outward happiness.

Clau. 'Tis true God, and in my minde very wife.

Prin. He doth indeed shew some sparkes that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

Prin. As Heuer, I affure you, and in the managing of quarrels you may see hee is wife, for either hee auoydes them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a Christian-like fear.

Leon. If hee doe feare God, a must neceffarie keepe peace, if hee breake the peace, hee ought to enter into a quarrell with fear and trembling.

Prin. And so will he doe, for the man doth fear God, however it seemes not in him, by some large leafts hee will make: well, I am forry for your niece, shall we goo see Benedick, and tell him of her love.

Claud. Neuer tell him, my Lord, let her wearie it out with good counsell.

Leon. Nay that's impossible, she may weare her heart out first.

Prin. Well, we will hearie further of it by your daught-er, let it coole the while, I loue Benedicke well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himselfe, to fee hauing in him he is unworthy to have so good a Lady.

Leon. My Lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Clau. If he doe not doat on vpon this, I will never truft my expectation.

Prin. Let there be the name Spred for her, and that must your daughter and her gentlemewan carry: the sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter, that's the Scene that I would see, which will be meerely a dumble shew: let vs send her to call him into dinner.

Exit.

Bene. This can be no tricke, the conference was fadly borne, they have the truth of this from Hero, they feeme to pitie the Lady: it seemes her affections have the full bent: loue me? why it must be requited: I heare how I am cenfur'd, they say I will bære my felfe prouided, if I perceive the loue come from her: they say too, that shee will rather die than goo any signe of affection: I did neuer thinke to marry, I must not feeme prouid, happy are they that heare their detractions, and can put them to mending: they say the Lady is faire, 'tis a truth, I can bære them witnessse: and veruuous, tis so, I cannot reprooue it, and wife, but for louing me, by my truth it is no addition to her witte, nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in loue with her, I may chance have some odde quirkes and reminants of witte broken on mee, becaus I haue railld so long against marriage: but doth not the appetite alter? a man loues the meat in his youth, that he cannot indure in his age. Shall quips and censures, and these paper bullets of the braineawe a man from the careare of his humour? No, the world must be peopled. When I saide I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married, here comes Beatrice: by this day, there's a faire Lady, I doe fine some markes of loue in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my wil I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Bene. Faire Beatrice, I thanke you for your paynes.

Beat. I tooke no more paynes for those thankes, then you take paynes to thanke me, if it had been painefull, I would not have come.

Bene. You take pleasure then in the meaffe.

Beat. Yea lift fo much as you may take upon a knifes point, and choake a daw withall: you have no Romacke signlor, fare you well.

Bene. Ha, against my will I am sent to bid you come into dinner: there's a double meaning in that: I tooke no more paynes for those thankes then you tooke paynes to thanke me, that's as much as to say, any paynes that I take for you is as calde as thankes: if I do not take pity of her I am a villain, if I do not loue her I am a lew, I will goe get her picture.

Enter Hero and two Gentleman, Margaret, and Vrjula.

Here. Good Margaret runne thee to the parlour, there shalt thou finde my Cofin Beatrice,
Proposing with the Prince and Claudius,
Whisper her care, and sett her in and Vrjula,
Walk in the Orchard, and our whole discourse
Is all of her, say that thou over-heardst vs,
And bid her steale into the pleased bower,
Where hony-fuckles ripened by the funne,
Forbid the funne to enter: like fauourites,
Made proud by Princes,that advance their pride,
Against that power that bred is,there will she hide her,
To liften our purpofe, this is thy office,
Besee thee well in it, andleave vs alone.

Marg. Ile make her come I warrant you presently.

Here. Now Vrjula, when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley vp and downe,
Our talee muft onely be of Benedickes,
When I doe name him, let it be thy part,
To praffle him more then euier man did merit,
My tale to thee muft be how Benedick is ficken in love with Beatrice: of this matter,
Is little Cupids crafty arrow made,
That onely wounds by heare-fay now begin,
Enter Beatrice.

For looke where Beatrice like a Lapwing-runs,
Clape by the ground, to heare our conference.
Vrj. The pleasant'th angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden ores the faluer streame,
And greedily dewoure the treacherous baite:
So angle we for Beatrice, who eu'n now,
Is couched in the wood-bine concerte,
Faire you not my part of the Dialogue.

Here. Then we neare her that her care loofe nothing,
Of the false sweete baite that we lay for it:
No truely Vrjula, she is too difdainfull,
I know her spirits are as coy and wilde,
As Haggers of the rocks.

Vrjula. But are you sure,
That Benedickes loves Beatrice so intirly?
Here. So saies the Prince, and my new trothed Lord.
Vrj. And did they bid you tell her of it, Madam?
Here. They did intreate me to acquaint her of it,
But I peruaide them, if they lovd Benedick.

K
Much ado about Nothing.

To with him wrestle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Frjula. Why did you so? doth not the Gentleman defere as full as fortunate a bed,
As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

Her. O God of love! I know he doth defere,
As much as may be yeelded to a man:
But Nature neuer fram'd a womans heart,
Of proverbe'thuse then that of Beatrice:
Difaine and Scorne ride sparkling in her eyes,
Mid-prizing what they look on,
And her wit
Values it selfo so highly, that to her
All matter else femes weake: she cannot lose,
Nor take no shape nor procect of affection,
Shee is so fefte incearde.

Frjula. Sure I think it so,
And therefore certainly it was not good
She knew his love, left she make sport at it.

Her. Why you speake truth, I never yet saw man,
How wife, how noble, young, how rarely fear'd a.
But were I to tell him what I knew
She would swear the gentleman should be her fitter:
If blacke, why Nature drawing of an anticke,
Made a foule blot if tall, a launce ill headed:
If low, an agot very vilifie cut:
If speaking, why a vaine blowne with all windes:
If silent, why a blocke moud with none,
So turnes the euym the man the wrong side out,
And neuer glues to Truth and Vertue, that
Which simplefesse and merit purchaseth.

Frj. Sure, sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.
Her. No, not to be fo odde, and from all fashions, As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable,
But who dare tell her fo? if I should speake,
She would mocke me into a'ye, O shee would laugh me Out of my felfe, precise me to death with wit,
Therefore let Benedick like covered fire,
Confame away in fighthes, waffe inwardly:
It was a better death, to die with mockes,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.

Frj. Yet tell her of it, heare what thee will say.
Her. No, rather I will goe to Benedick,
And counthelle him to fight against his falcon,
And truly Ie deule some honest flanders,
To flaine my coyn with, one doth not know,
How much an ill word may impofion likingen.

Frj. O doe not doe your coyn such a wrong,
She cannot be so much without true judgment, Having fo swift and excellent a wit
As hee is pride to have, as to refuse
So rare a Gentleman as signior Benedick,

Her. He is the onely man of Italy,
Alwaies excepted, my deare Claudia,
Frj. I pray you be not angry with mee, Madame,
Speaking my fantasy? Signior Benedick,
For shape, for bearing argument and valour,
Goes fomfort in report through Italy.

Her. Indeed he hath an excellent good name.

Frj. His excellence did earne it ere he had it.
When are you married Madame?

Her. Why euer day to morrow, come goe in,
Ie faw thee some attires, and have thy counthell,
Which is the beft to furnish me to morrow.

Frj. She's tane I warrant you,
We have caught her Madame?
Her. If it proue fo, then louing goes by haps,
Some Cupid kills with arrowes, some with traps.
Exit.

Beat. What fire is in mine eares! can this be true?
Stand I commend'd for pride and scorn so much?
Contempt, farlewell, and maideen prides, adew,
No glory lues behind the bucke of fuch.
And Benedick, love on, I will require thee,
Taming my wide heart to thy louing hand:
If thou doft loue, my kindeneff shall incite thee
To binde our louses wp in a holy band.
For others sty thou doft defere, and I
Receaze it better then reportingly.
Exit.

Enter Prince, Claudius, Benedick, and Leonato.

Prince. I doe but flay till your marriage be confirmate, and then goe I toward Arragon.

Claus. He bring you thither your Lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.

Prin. Nay, that would be as great a foyle in the new gloffe of your marriage, as to shew a childe his new coat and forbid him to weare it, I will oneely bee bold with Benedick, to chuse a dauncie, for from the crowne of his head, to the fole of his foot, he is all mirth, he hath twice or thrice cut Cupids bow-fringe, and the little hang-man dare not flout at him, he hath a heart as found as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper, for what his heart thinkes, his tongue speaks.

Bene. Gallants, I am not as I haue bin.

Leo. So faie I, methinks you are fadder.

Claus. I hope he be in loue.

Prin. Hang him truant, there's no true drop of bloud in him to be truly toucht with loue, if he be fad, he wants money.

Bene. I haue the tooth-ach.

Prin. Draw it.

Bene. Hang it.

Claus. You must hang it ifft, and draw it afterwards.

Prin. What figh for the tooth-ach.

Leo. What is but a humour or a worme.

Bene. Well, euer one cannot matter a griefe, but hee that has it.

Claus. Yet faie I, he is in loue.

Prin. There is no appearance of fancy in him, vnlesse it be a fancy that he hath to strange difguifes, as to bee a Dutchman to day, a Frenchman to morrow: vnlesse hee haue a fancy to this foolery, as it appears hee hath, hee is no foole for fancy, as you would haue it to appeare he is.

Claus. If he be not in loue with some vvwman, there is no beholding old signes, a bruishe his hat a mornings, What shoulde that bode?

Prin. Hath any man scene him at the Barbers?

Claus. No, but the Barbers man hath beene feen with him, and the olde ornament of his checke hath alreadie fhaft tennis balls.

Leo. Indeed he looks youner then hee did, by the loffe of a beard.

Prin. Nay a rubs himfelfe vvith Cluit, can you fimmle him out by that?

Claus. That's as much as to faie, the sweet youths in loue.

Prin. The greatenote of it is his melancholy.

Claus. And when was he vronto to vvash his face?

Prin. Yes, or to paint himfelfe? for the which I hearre what they fay of him.

Claus. Nay, but his lefting spirits, wvich is now crept into a lute dring and now govern'd by fops.

Prince.
Much ado about Nothing.

Prin. Indeed that tells a heavy tale for him: conclude, he is in love.
Clau. Nay, but I know who loves him.
Prince. That would I know too, I warrant one that knows him not.
Clau. Yes, and his ill conditions, and in despite of all, dies for him.
Prin. She shall be buried with her face upwards.
Benv. Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ache, old fignior, walk ye strife with me, I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.
Prin. For my life to break with him about Beatrice.
Clau. 'Tis even so, Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two Bears will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter John the Watcher.
Baff. My Lord and brother, God faue you.
Prin. Good den brother.
Baff. If your leisure fer'd, I would speak with you.
Prince. In private.
Prin. If it please you, yet Count Claudio may hear, for what I would speake of concerns him.
Prin. What's the matter?
Baff. Means ye your Lordship to be married to morrow?
Prin. You know he does.
Baff. I know not that when he knows what I know.
Clau. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.
Baff. You may think I love you not, let that appear hereafter; and seem better at me by that I now will manifest, for my brother (I think he holds you well, and in dearest of heart) hath holp to effect your ensuing marriage: sureely futile ill spent, and labour ill bestowed.
Prin. Why, what's the matter?
Baff. Means ye your Lordship to be married to morrow?
Lady. Is he your Hero?
Baff. Even she, Leonatus Hero, your Hero, every mans Hero.
Clau. Dilloyall?
Baff. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness, I could say the were worse, think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it: wonder not till further warrant: goe but with mee to night, you shall fee her chamber window entred, even the night before her wedding day, if you loose her, then to morrow wed her: But it would better fit your honour to change your mind.
Claud. May this be so?
Prince. I will not think it.
Baff. If you dare not truit that you see, confesse not that you know: if you will follow mee, I will shew you enough, and when you have seene more, & heard more, proceed accordingly.
Clau. If I see any thing to night, why should I not marry her to morrow in the congregation, where I shold wedde, there will I shame her.
Prin. And as I woed for thee to obtaine her, I will joyn with thee to disgrace her.
Baff. I will dispesse her no farther, till you are my witnesse, beare it coldly but till night, and let the issue shew it selfe.
Prin. O day vntowardly turned!

Claud. O mischief estranged thwarting!
Baffard. O plague right well presented! so will you say, when you have seene the sequel.

Exit.

Enter Dogberry and his companion with the watch.
Dog. Are you good men and true?
Verg. Ye, or else it were piteous but they should suffer salvation body and soule.
Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the Princes watch.
Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogbery.
Dog. First, who think you the most desartlefe man to be Confitable?
Watch. 1. Hugh Oke-cake sir, or George Sea-coale, for they can write and read.
Dogb. Come hither neighbour Sea-coale, God hath blest you with a good name: to be a wel-favoured man, is the gift of Fortune, but to write and read, comes by Nature.
Watch. 2. Both which Master Conitable
Dogb. You have: I knew it would be your answer: well, for your favour sir, why glue God thankes, & make no boaste of it, and for your writing and reading, let that appeare when there is no need of such vanity, you are thought here to be the most senflefe and fit man for the Conitable of the watch: therefore beare you the lanthorne: this is your charge: You shall comprehend all vagrom men, you are to bid any man stand in the Princes name.
Watch. 2. How if a will not stand?
Dogb. Why then take no note of him, but let him go, and pretendly call the rest of the Watch together, and thank God you are ridde of a knave.
Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the Princes subiects.
Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the Princes subiects: you shall also make no noise in the streets: for, for the Watch to babble and talkes, is most tolerable, and not to be inured.
Watch. We will rather fliepe than talkes, wee know what belongs to a Watch.
Dog. Why you speake like an ancient and most quiet watchman, for I cannot see how cleeping should offend: only have a care that your bills be not fione: well, you are to call at all the Allehoueset, and bid them that are drunke get them to bed.
Watch. How if they will not?
Dogb. Why then let them alone till they are sober, if they make you not then the better answer, you may say, they are not the men you tooke them for.
Watch. Well sir.
Dogb. If you meet a thiefe, you may suspect him, by vertue of your office, to be no true man: and for such kindes of men, the least you meddle or make with them, why the more is for your honesty.
Watch. If wee know him to be a thiefe, shall wee not lay hands on him.
Dogb. Truly by your office you may, but I think they that touch pitch will be deflied: the most peaceable way for you, if you doe take a thiefe, is, to let him shew himselfe what he is, and fleaze out of your company.
Verg. You have bin alwaies cal'd a merciful man partner.
Dog. Truely I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath ane honesty in him.
Much adoe about Nothing.

Verger. If you heare a child cry in the night you must call to the nurse, and bid her fill it.

Watch. How if the nurse be asleep, and will not hear you?

Dog. Why then depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying, for the ewe that will not heare her Lambe when it bies, will never anwer a calf when he bleates.

Verger. 'Tis true very.

Dog. This is the end of the charge: you confable are to prevent the Princes owne perfon, if you meete the Prince in the night, you may stale him.

Verger. Nay birladie that I thinke a cannot.

Dog. Flue billings to one on't with anie man that knows the Statues, he may stale him, marrie not without the prince be willing, for indeed the watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to flay a man against his will.

Verger. Birladie I thinke it be fo.

Dog. Ha, ha, ha, well matters good night, and there be many matters of what a deare, call vp me, keep your fellows confalues, and your owne, and good night, come neighbour.

Watch. Well matters, we heare our charge, let vs go fit here vpon the Church bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dog. One word more, honest neighbors. I pray you watch about signior Lomatius doore, for the wedding being there to morrow, there is a great coyle to night, adiew, be vigilant I beseech you.

Exeunt.

Enter Basilio and Conrade.

Ber. What, Conrade?

Watch. Peace, fir not.

Ber. Conrade I say.

Con. Here man, I am at thy elbow.

Ber. Mas and my elbow itch, I thought there would a cabbie follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that, and now forward with thy tale.

Ber. Stand thee close then vnder this penthouse, for it drippes raine, and I will, like a true drunkard, vter all to thee.

Watch. Some treason matters, yet stand close.

Ber. Therefore know, I have earned of Don Iohn a thousand Ducates.

Con. Is it possible that anie villanous should be so deare?

Ber. Thou shouldst rather ask if it were possible anie should be so rich for when rich villains have neede of prore ones, prore ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Ber. That shewes thou art vnconfirmed, thou knowest that the fashions of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Ber. I mean the fashion.

Con. Yes the fashion is the fashion.

Ber. Truth, I may as well say the fowle's the fowle, but seest thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

Watch. I know that deformed, a has bin a vile theefe, this vil. yeare, a goes vp and downe like a gentle man: I remember his name.

Ber. Didst thou not heare some bodie?

Con. No, was the vaine on the house.

Ber. Seest thou not (I say) what a deformed thief this fashion is; how giddily a turns about all the Hot-
Much ado about Nothing.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. God give mee joy to weare it, for my heart is exceeding heavy.

Marga. 'Twill be heuerier soone, by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fie upon thee, art not ashamed ?

Marga. Of what Lady ? of speaking honourably ? Is not marriage honourable in a beggar ? is not your Lord honourable without marriage ? I think you would have me fay, saving your reverence a husband : and bad thinking do not wreft true speaking, Ile offend no body, is there any harme in the hauing for a husband ? none I think, and it be the right husband, and the right wife, otherwise 'tis light and not heavy, aske my Lady Beatrice elfe, here she comes.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow Coze.

Beat. Good morrow sweet Hero.

Hero. Why how now ? do you speake in the fick tune ?

Beat. I am out of all other tune, me thinks.

Hero. Claps into Light a love, (that goes without a burden,) do you fong it and Ile dance it.

Beat. Ye Light alowe with your heele, then if your hauing faire enough, you'll looke he shall lacke no bernes.

Hero. No illegitimate construction ! I forne that with my heele.

Beat. 'Tis almoft flue a clocke cohn, 'tis time you were ready, by my troth I am exceeding ill, hey ho.

Mar. For a howke, a horfe, or a husband ?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Mar. Well, and you be not turn'd Turke, there's no more faying by the flarre.

Beat. What means the foole tow ?

Mar. Nothing I, but God send every one their harts desire.

Hero. These gloues the Count fent mee, they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am flue cohn, I cannot smell.

Mar. A maid and fluff ! there's goodly catching of cold.

Beat. O God helpe me, God helpe me, how long have you profytt apprehension ?

Mar. Euer since you left it, doth not my wit become me rarely ?

Beat. It is not feene enough, you should weare it in your cap, by my troth I am fickle.

Mar. Get you some of this distill'd cordeus beneiticus and lay it to your heart, it is the onely thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prickt her with a thiffell.

Beat. Benedictus, why benedictus ? you have some morall in this benedictus.

Mar. Monall ? no by my troth, I have no morall meaning, I meant plaine holy thiffell, you may thinkke per-chance that I thinkke you are in loose, nay birauly I am not such a foole to thinke what I lift, nor lift not to thinke what I can, nor indeed I cannot thinke, if I would thinke my hart out of thinking, that you are in loose, or that you will be in loose, or that you can be in loose ; yet Benedictus was fuch another, and now is he become a man, he swore hee would never marry, and yet now in deplot of his heart he estees his meat without guerdging, and how you may be converted I know not, but me thinkes you looke with your eyes at other women doe.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keepeas.

Mar. Not a faie gallop.

Enter Verges.

Verg. Madam, withdraw, the Prince, the Count, signior Benedick, Don Iohn, and all the gallants of the town are come to fetch you to Church.

Hero. Haue help to dreffe mee good coze, good Madam, good Verges.

Enter Leonato, and the Confiable, and the Headborough.

Leonato. What would you with mee, honest neighbour ?

Conf. Dog. Mary sir I would have some confidence with you, that descerns you nearly.

Leon. Briefe I pray you, for you see it is a bufe time with me.

Conf. Dog. Mary this it is sir.

Head. Yes in truth it is sir.

Leon. What is it my good friends ?

Conf. Dog. Goodman Verges sir speaks a little of the matter, an old man sir, and his wits are not fo blunt, as God helpe I would defire they were, but infall honest as the skin between his brownes.

Head. Yes I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honefter then I.

Conf. Dog. Comparisons are odorous, paleras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Conf. Dog. It pleases your woraship to fay fo, but we are the poore Dukes officers, but truely for mine owne part, if I were as tedious as a King I could finte in my heart to bellow it all of your woraship.

Leon. All thy tediousness on me, ah !

Conf. Dog. Yes, and I'vre a thousand times more than this, for I heare as good exclamation on your Worship as of any man in the Citie, and though I bee but a poore man, I am glad to heare it.

Head. And so am I.

Leon. I would faine know what you have to fay.

Head. Marry sir, our watch to night, excepting your worships prefence, haue tane a couple of as arrant knaues as any in Meffina.

Conf. Dog. A good old man sir, hee will be talking as they faie, when the age is in, the wit is out, God helpe vs, it is a world to fee : well fiid yfaith neighbour Verges, well, God's a good man, and two men ride of a horfe, one must ride behinde, an honest foule yfaith sir, by my troth he is, as euer broke bread, but God is to bee worshipfull, all men are not alike, alas good neighbour.

Leon. Indeed neighbour he comes too short of you.

Leon. I must leave you.

Conf. Dog. One word sir, our watch sir have indeed comprehended two affidious perfons, & we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination your selfe, and bring it mee, I am now in great haste, as may appeare unto you.

Conf. It shall be suffigence.

(Exit.)

Leon. Drinkke some wine ere you goe : fare you well.

Meffing. My Lord, they fay for you to giue your daughter to her husband.

Leon. Ile wait vpon them, I am ready.

Dog. Goe good partner, goe get you to Francis Swinge, bid him bring his pen and inkborne to the Gaole : we are now to examine thofe men.

Verges. And we must doe it wifely.

Dog. Wee will spare for no witte I warrant you :
Enter Prince, Ballard, Leonato, Frier, Claudia, Benedick, Hero, and Beatrice.

Leonato. Come Frier Francis, be briefe, onely to the plaine forme of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Frie. You come hither, my Lord, to marry this Lady.
Cla. No.
Lez. To be married to her: Frier, you come to marry her.
Frie. Lady, you come hither to be married to this Count.
Hero. I do.
Frie. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be coniyned, I charge you on your foules to viter it.

Claud. Know you anie, Hero?
Hero. None my Lord.

Frie. Know you anie, Count?
Leon. I dare make his answer, None.

Cla. O what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do!

Bene. How now! interjections! why then, some be of laughing, as ha, ha, ha.

Claud. Stand thee by Frier, father, by your leave, Will you with free and uncontrained foule Glue me this maid your daughter?
Leon. As freely fonne as God did glue her me.

Claud. And what haue I to glue you back, whose worth May counterpoife this rich and precious gift?

Princ. Nothing, vnlecce you render her agonie.

Claud. Sweet Prince, you learn me noble thankfulnes:
There Leonato, take her backe againe,
Guis not this rotten Orange to your friend,
Shes but the figne and feeme of her honour:
Behold how like a maid the blusses heere!
O what authority and fiew of truth
Can cunning finne cover it felle withall!
Comes not that blood, as modift euidence,
To witnesse simple Vertue? would you not fware
All you that fee her, that the were a made,
By thefe exterior fiewes? but she is none:
She knowes the heat of a luxurious bed:
Her blush is gulltineffe, not modelife.

Leonato. What doe you meane, my Lord?
Claud. Not to be married,
Not to knit my foule to an approued wanton.

Leon. Deere my Lord, if you in your owne profe,
Have vanquished the refillance of her youth,
And made defeat of her virginitie.

Claud. I know what you would fay: if I have knowne
You will fay, she did imbrace me as a husband,
And fo extenuate the forehand finne: No Leonato,
I neuer tempted her with word too large,
But as a brother to his fitter, theved
Baffullencitie and comely lone.

Hero. And feme'd I euer otherwife to you?
Much ado about Nothing.

Bea. How now cousin Hero?
Fri. Have comfort, Ladie.
Leon. Dost thou look vp?
Fri. Yea, wherefore should he not?
Leon. Wherfore? Why dost not every earthly thing
Cry flame upon her? Could the heere denie
The story that is printed in her blood?
Do not like Hero, do not one chine eyes:
For did I think thee wouldst not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger then thy flames,
My selfe would on the reward of reproches
Strike at thy life. Grief'd I, I had but one?
Chid I, for that at frugal Nature's frame?
O one too much by thee: why had I one?
Why euer was thou louelie in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Tooke vp a beggars life at my gates,
Who fastned thus, and med'd with infamous, I Might haue saied, no part of it is mine:
This flam' deriu'd it selfe from unknowne loines,
But mine, and mine I lou'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on mine so much,
That I my selfe, was to my selfe not mine:
Valewing of her, why thee, O she is false
Into a pit of Inke, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her cleane again,
And felt too little, which may seafon guie
To her foule tainted flesh.

Ben. Sir, fie, be patient: for my part, I am so attired in wonder, I know not what to say.
Bea. O on my soule my coyn is belied.
Ben. Ladie, were you her bedfellow last night?
Bea. No truly: not although untill last night,
I have this twelvemonth bin her bedfellow.

Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd, O that is stronger made
Which was before barr'd vp with ribs of iron.
Would the Princes lie, and Claudio lie,
Who lou'd her so, that speaking of her fouleness,
Wast'd it with tears? Hence from her, let her die.

Fri. Hearre me a little, for I haue onely bene silent so long, and gien way vnto this course of fortune, by noting of the Ladie, I haue marke.
A thousand blushing apparitions,
To start into her face, a thousand innocent flames,
In Angel whiteneffe heare away those blusses,
And in her eie there hath appear'd a fire
To burne the errors that thefe Princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a foole,
Tru't not my reading, nor my observation,
Which with experimental seiel doth warrant
The tenure of my bookes: trust not my age;
My reuerence, calling, nor diuinity,
If this sweet Ladie lye not guildeffe heere,
Vnder some bitting error.

Leon. Friar, it cannot be:
That all the once that the hath left,
Is, that the wil not add to her damnation,
A finne of perjury, she not denie it:
Why seek'll thou then to cover with excuse,
That which appears in proper nakendesse?
Fri. Ladie, what man is he you are accus'd of?

Her. They know that do accuse me, I know none:
If I know more of any man alive
Then that which maiden modelfe doth warrant,
Let all my finnes lacke mercy. O my Father,
Prove you that any man with me conuerst,

At hours vymeete, or that I yefternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.
Fri. There is some strange misprision in the Princes.
Ben. Two of them have the verie bent of honor,
And if their wisdomes be mislaid in this:
The prouidence of it liues in Leon the bastard,
Whose spirits toile in frame of villainies.

Leon. I know not: if they speake but truth of her,
These hands shall teare her: if they wrong her honour,
The prouedest of them shall wel hear of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age to eate vp my inventhon,
Nor Fortune made such hauccke of my meanes,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall finde, a wake'd in fuch a kinde,
Both strength of limbe, and policie of minde,
Ability in meenes, and choyle of friends,
To quie me of them throughly.

Fri. Paufe a while:
And let my counsell fway you in this cafe,
Your daughter heere the Princesse (left for dead)
Let her a while be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she's dead indeed:
Maintaine a mourning overtrau'tment,
And on your Families old monument,
Hang mournefull Epithaphes, and do all rites,
That appertaine vnto a burriall.

Leon. What shall become of this? What wil this do?
Fri. Marry this wel carri'd, shall on her behalfe,
Change flander to remorse, that is some good,
But not for that dreame I on this strange course,
But on this trau'ling looke for greater birth:
She dyeing, as it must be fo maintain'd,
Vpon the infant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd
Of every hearer: for it fo falls out,
That what we have, we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enioy it; but being lack'd and lost,
Why then we racke the value, then we finde
The vertue that poftification would not flew vs
Whiles it was ours, fo will it fare with Claudio:
When he shal heare the dyed vpon his words,
Th' Idee of her life shal sweetly creepe
Into his fludy of imagination,
And evry lovely Organ of her life,
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habite:
More mouing delicate, and ful of life,
Into the eye and profpe't of his soule
Then when the lid's indeed: then shal he mourne,
If euer Loue had intercept in his Loure,
And with he had not so accused her
No, though he thought his accusation true:
Let this be so, and doubt not but frustrate
Wil fashion the easent in better shape,
Then I can lay it downe with such like hold;
But if all syne but this be lusel'd fale,
The supposition of the Ladies death,
Will quench the wonder of her infamie.
And if it fort not well,you may conceale her,
As best befits her wounded reputacion,
In some recluswe and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, mindes and injuries.

Ben. Signior Leonato, let the Frier aduise you,
And though you know my inwardness and loue
Is very much vnto the Prince and Claudio.

Yet
Yet, by mine honor, I will deal in this,
As secretly and slyly, as your soul
Should with your bodie.

Beat. Princes and Counties I surelie a Princely testimon-y
A goodly Count, Comely, a sweet Gallant sure-lie, O that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is me-tting into curises, valour into complement, and men are once in the tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie, and swears it: I cannot be a man with wailing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.

Beat. Tarry good Beatrice, by this hand I love thee.

Beatrice. Vfe it for my love some other way then swear-ing by it. Bended. Think you in your soule the Count Claudio hath wrong'd Here?

Beat. Yet, as sure as I have a thought, or a soule.

Beatrice. Enough, I am engage, I will challenge him, I will kife your hand, and so leave you: by this hand Claudi shall render me a deere account: as you hear of me, so think of me: I doe comfort your cooin, I must lay the dead, and so farewell.

Enter the Constables, Borachio, and the Towne Clerk in gownes.

Keppe. Is our whole diffemibly appear'd?

Cewley. O a boole and a cushion for the Sexton.

Sixton. Which be the malefactors?

Andrew. Marry that am I, and my partner.

Cewley. Nay that's certaine, wee have the exhibition to examine.

Sixton. But which are the offenders that are to be ex-amined, let them come before master Constable.

Kemp. Yes marry, let them come before mee, what is your name, friend?

Bor. Borachio.

Kemp. Pray write downe Borachio. Yours fir.

Com. I am a Gentleman sir, and my name is Coradre.

Kee. Write downe Master gentleman Coradre, master, doe you serue God: masters, it is proved alreade that you are little better than falle knaues, and it will goe neere to be thought so shortly, how anwer you for your offences?

Com. Master sir, we say we are none.

Kemp. A marvoules witty fellow I affure you, but I will goe about with him: come you hither fir, a word in your ear sir, I say to you, it is thought you are falle knaues.

Bor. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Kemp. Well, stand aside, fore God they are both in a tale: have you writ downe that they are none?

Sext. Master Constable, you goe not the way to ex-amine, you must call forth the watch that are their ac-cusers.

Kemp. Yes marry, that's the effect way, let the watch come forth: masters, I charge you in the Princes name, accuse these men.

Watch 1. This man said fir, that Don John the Princes brother was a villain.

Kemp. Write down, Prince John a villain: why this is flat perjurie, to call a Princes brother villain.

Bora. Master Constable.

Kemp. Pray thee fellow peace, I do not like thy looke I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

Watch 2. Mary that he had receiued a thousand Du-kates of Don John, for accusing the Lady Hero wrong-fully.
Enter Leontes and his brother.

Brother. If you goe on thus, you will kill your selfe, and 'tis not wise to doe thus to second griefe, against your selfe.

Leom. I pray thee cease thy counsafe, which falls into mine ears as profane, as water in a fume: give not me counsafe, nor let me comfort delight mine ears, but such a one whole wrongs doth fite with mine. Bring me a father that fo lou'd his child, whose joy of her is over-welmed like mine, and bid him speake of patience, measure his woe the length and breadth of mine, and let it anwere every braine for braine, as thus for thus, and such a grief for such, in every lineament, branch, shape and forme: if such a one will smile and froke his heard, and forrow, wagg, cry him, when he should grone, patch griefe with pover, make misfortune drunke, with candle-waters: bring him yet to me, and I of him will gather patience: but there is no such man, for brother, men can counsafe, and speake comfort to that griefe, which they themselves not feel, but feting it, their counsafe turns to paffion, which before, would glue preceptissi medicine to rage, fretter strong madness in a filkene thred, harme ache with ayre, and agony with words, no, no, 'tis all mens office, to speake patience to thole that wring vnder the load of sorrow: but no mans vertue nor sufficiency to be fo morall, when he shall endure the like himselfe: there fore glue me no counsafe, my griefs cry lowder then aduentement.

Broth. Therein do men from children nothing differ. Leom. I pray thee peace, I will be feels and bles, for there was never yet Philosophers, that could endure the toole-sake patiently, how euer they have writ the file of gods, and made a push at chance and sufferance. Broth. Yet bend not all the harme vpon your felse, make thole that doe bend you, suffer too. Leom. There thou speake'rt reaon, nay I will doe so, my foule doth tell me, here is beleved, and that shall Claudio know, so shall the Prince, and all of them that thus diholour her.

Enter Prince and Claudio.

Brot. Here comes the Prince and Claudio haftily.

Prin. Good den, good den.

Claud. Good day to both of you.

Leom. Hear ye my Lords?

Prin. We have some haft Leomens.

Leom. Some haft my Lord? well, fareyouwel my Lord, are you so haftly now? well, all is one.

Prin. Nay, do not quarrel with vs, good old man.

Brot. If he could rite himselfe with quarrelling, some of vs would lie low.

Claud. Who wrongs him?

Leom. Marry y' doft wrong me, thou diffembler, thou, Nay, never lay thy hand vpon thy sword, I feare thee not.

Claud. Mary befhrow my hand, if it should give your age such cause of fear, Inflath my hand meant nothing to my sword.

Leom. Tush, tush, man, never feare nor left at me, I speake not like a dotard, nor a fool, as vnder prunelude of age to bragge, What i have done byeng, or what would doe, Were not old, know Claudio to thy head, Thou haft so wrong'd my innocent child and me, that I am forc'd to lay my reverence by, and with grey haires and bruife of many daies, doe challenge thee to triall of a man, I lay thou haft belied mine innocent child, thy flander hath gone through and through her heart, and the ies buried with her ancestor: O in a tome where neuer scandall flept, Saue this of hers, fram'd by thy villanie.

Claud. My villany?

Leom. Thine Claudio, thine I say.

Prin. You say not right old man.

Leom. My Lord, my Lord, Ile proue it on his body if he dare, Delight his nice fence, and his aduis prelife, His Maie of youth, and bloom of lufhlood.

Claud. Away, I will not have to do with you.

Leom. Canst thou so daufe me? haft haft kill my child, if thou kill me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.

Brot. He shall kill two of vs, and men indeed, but that's no matter, let him kill one first:

Actus Quintus.
Win me and weare me, let him answere me,
Come follow me boy, come sir boy, come follow me
Sir boy, lie whip you from your foyning fence,
Nay, as I a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother.

Bro. Content your self, God knows I lou'd my necce,
And she is dead, flander'd to death by villaines,
That dare as well answer a man indeede,
As I dare take a ferpent by the tongue.

Boy espress, braggarts, I ackes, milke-fops.

Leon. Brother Antonio.

Bro. Hold you content, what man? I know them, yea
And what they weigh, even to the vtmoff scruple,
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-monging boyes,
That lye, and cog, and fount, deprave, and flander,
Goe antiquely, and thou outward hidiousness,
And speake of half a dozen dang'rous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durft.
And this is all.

Leon. But brother Antonio.

Ant. Come, 'tis no matter,
Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.

Pri. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience
My heart is forry for your daughters death:
But on my honour she was charg'd with nothing
But what was true, and very full of prooffs.

Leon. My Lord, my Lord.

Pri. I will not heare you.

Enter Benedick.

Les. No come brother, away, I will be heard.

Exeunt ambo.

Bro. And shall, or some of us will fmarit for it.

Pri. See, see, here comes the man we went to seeke.

Clau. Now fignior, what newes?

Ben. Good day my Lord.

Pri. Welcome fignior, you are almoft come to part almoft a fray.

Clau. Wee had likt to have had our two noxes snapt off with two old men without teeth.

Pri. Leone and his brother, what think'thout had wee fought, I doubt we should have beene yong for them.

Ben. In a fift quarrell there is no true valour, I came to seeke you both.

Clau. We have beene vp and downe to seeke thee, for we are high proofes melancholy, and would faine have it beaten away, witt thou wt ye witt?

Ben. It is in my feabearb, Ihall I draw it?

Pri. Dost thou weare thy witt by thy fide?

Clau. Neuer any did fo, though verie many have beene beside their witt, I will bid thee drawe, as we do the minfrel, draw to pleafure vs.

Pri. As I am an honnef man he lookes pale, art thou ticks, or angrie?

Clau. What, courage man: what though care kill'd a cat, thou haft mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Ben. Sir, I hall meete your wit in the careeree, and you charge it against me, I pray you chufe another subiect.

Clau. Nay then give him another sallie, this laft was broke croffe.

Pri. By this light, he changes more and more, I think he be angrie indeede.

Clau. If he be, he knowes how to turne his giddle.

Ben. Shall I speake a word in your care?

Clau. God bife me from a challenge.

Ben. You are a villaine, I left not, I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare:
do me right, or I will protest your cowardice: you have kill'd a fairete Ladie, and her death shall fall heauie on you, let me answere from you.

Clau. Well, I will meets thee, so I may haue good answere.

Pri. What, a staff, a ftaff?

Clau. I faith I thanke him, he hath bid me to a calues head and a Capon, the which if I do not care mouf curiously, lay my knife's naught, shall I not finde a woodcocke too?

Ben. Sir, your wit ambles well, it goes easly.

Pri. Ile tell thee how Beatrice prais'd thy witt the other day: I faid thou had a fintrue fakes fhee, a fine little one: no faid I, a great witt; right fakes fhee, a great groffe one: fay faid I, a good witt; but faid fhee, it hurts no body: fay faid I, the gentleman is wife: certain faid fhee, a wife gentleman: fay faid I, he hath the tongues:
that I beleue faid fhee, for hee fware a thing to me on munday night, which he forfwore on tuesfday morning:
there's a double tongue, there's two tongues: thus did fhee in howre together tranf-shape thy particular ver-tues, yet at laft she concluded with a figh, thou wait the proppr man in Italie.

Clau. For the which she wept heartily, and faid fhe card not.

Pri. Yea that she did, but yet for all that, and if fhee did not hate him deadlie, fhee would love him dearly, the old mans daughter told vs all.

Clau. All, all, and moreover, God faw him when he was hid in the garden.

Pri. But when shall we fet the favage Bulls horns on the fenfible Benedicks head?

Clau. Yea and text under-neath, heere dwells Benedicke the married man.

Ben. Fare you well, Boy, you know my minde, I will leave you now to your goffip-lik humors, you breake lefs as braggards do their blades, which God be thank-full hurst not: my Lord, for your manie courteties I thank you, I must difcontinue your company, your brother the Esafard is fled from Messina: you have among you, kill'd a fweet and innocent Ladie: for my Lord Lacks-beard there, he and I shall meete, and till then peace be with him.

Pri. He is in earneft.

Clau. In moil profound earneft, and Ile warrant you, for the lone of Beatrice.

Pri. And hath challeng'd thee.

Clau. Mofh fincerly.

Pri. What a prettie thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hofe, and leaves off his wit.

Enter Constable, Conrade, and Borachio.

Clau. He is then a Giant to an Ape, but then is an Ape a Docthor to such a man.

Pri. But foff you, let me be, plucke vp my heart, and be fad, did he not fay my brother was feld?

Con. Come you sir, if inuifce cannot tame you, thee shall here weig more reaons in her balance, nay, and you be a curing hypocrite once, you must be looke to.

Pri. How now, two of my brothers men bound? Bo-racchio one.

Clau. Harken after their offence my Lord.

Pri. Officers, what offence have thefe men done?

Con. Marrie
Much ado about Nothing.

Conf. Marrie sir, they have committed false report, moreover they have spoken vntruths, secondayly
they are flanders, first and lastly, they have belyed a Ladie, thirdly, they have verified vniust things, and to conclude they are lying knaves.

Prin. Firft I ask thee what they have done, thridle
I ask thee what's their offence, first and lastly why they are committed, and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Clau. Rightlie reafoned, and in his owne diuision, and by my truth there's one meaning vvvell fatted.

Prin. Who have you offended madam, that you are thus bound to your anfwer? this learned Contable is too cunning to be vnderfoold, what's your offence?

Bor. Sweete Prince, let me go no farther to mine an-fwere: do you heare me, and let this Count kill mee? I have deed enorie of your noble nie; what your wife-domes could not dilouer, these shallow fooles have brought to light, who in the night overheard me con-feffing to this man, how Don John your brother incenfed me to flander the Ladie Hero, how you were brought into the Orchard, and faw me court Margaret in Heroes garments, how you dignifed her when you should marrie her: my villainie they haue vpon record, which I had rather feale with my death, than repeate ouer to my fame: the Ladie is dead vpon mine and my masters false accuation: and brefeilie, I define nothing but the reward of a villain.

Prin. Runs not this fppech lie yron through your blood?

Clau. I haue drunke poifon whiles he vtted it.

Prin. But did my Brother fet thee on to this?

Bor. Yes, and paid me richly for the prafite of it.

Prin. He is compos'd and fram'd of teachertie,
And flid he is vpon this villainie.

Clau. Sweet Hero, now thy image doth appear
In the rare femeblance that I loud it firft.

Conf. Come, bring away the fpftiffies,by this time our Section hath reform'd Signior Leonato of the matter:
and matters, do not forget to fixepiche when time & place shall ferue, that I am an Agit.

Con. a. Here, here comes master Signior Leonato, and the Section too.

Enter Leonato.

Leon. Which is the villainie? let me fee his cies,
That when I note another man like him,
I may avoide him: which of thefe is he?

Bor. If you would know your wronges, looke on me.

Leon. Art thou thoe the fpake that with thy breath haft kild mine innocent childe?

Bor. Yes, eu'n I alone.

Leon. No, no to villainie, thou belief thy felie,
Have drunke poifon of thy noble fons.
A third is fled that had a hand in it:
I thanke you Princes for my daughters death,
Record it with your high and worthe decees,
'Twas bravely done, if you bethinke you of it.

Clau. I know not how to praye your patience,
Yet I muft speake, choofe your reuenge you felie,
Impofe me to what penance your intention
Can lay vpon my finne, yet finne'd I not,
But in miflaking.

Prin. By my foule nor I,
And yet to finde this good old man,
I wou'd bend vnder anie heauie vweight,
That heele enioyne me to.

Leon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter blue,
That were impossible, but I praye you both,
Poliffe the people in Muffine here,
How innocent she died, and if your loue
Can labour aught in fad intention,
Hang her an epitaph vpon her toomb,
And fing it to her bones, fing it to night :
To morrow morning come you to my houfe,
And if you could not be my fonne in law,
Be yet my Nephew: my brother hath a daughter,
Almoft the cople of my childe that's dead,
And she alone is helre to both of vs,
Glue her the right you fhould giue in her cofin,
And fo dies my reuenue.

Clau. O noble Sir!
Your ouerkindneffe doth wring teares from me,
I do embrace your offer, and difpoce
For henceforth of poore Claude.

Leon. To morrow then I will efpext your comming,
To night I take my leauo, this naughtie man
Shall fake to face be brought to Margaret,
Who I beleuue was packt in all this wrong,
Hired to it by your brother.

Bor. No by my foule the was not,
Nor knew not what he did when the spoke to me,
But always hath bin luft and vertuous,
In anie thing that I do know by her.

Conf. Moreover fir, which indeeude is not vnder white and black, this fpitate here, the offendour did call mee afie, I befeech you let it be remembered in his punishment, and also the vwatch heard them talke of one Deformed, they lay he weares a keynie his cure and a lock hanging by it, and borowes monie in Gods name, the which he hath w'd fo long, and neuer pailed, that now men grow hard harted and will lend nothing for Gods fake: praise you examine him vpont that point.

Leon. I thanke thee for thy care and honest paines.

Conf. Your vvorship fpakes like a moft thankfull and reuerend youth, and I praiue God for you.

Leon. There's for thy paines.

Conf. God fawe the foundation.

Leon. Go, I difcharge thee of thy prifones, and I thanke thee.

Conf. I leave an arrant knawe vwith your vworship, which I befeech your vworship to correct thy felie, for the ex ample of others: God keepe your vworship, I with your vworship vwell, God refoure you to health,
I humble you to leuue to denart, and if a merrie meeting may be wift, God prohibite it: come neighbour.

Leon. Vntill to morrow morning, Lords, farewell.

Exeunt.

Brot. Farewell my Lords, we looke for you to morrow.

Prin. We will not faile.

Clau. To night Ie mourne with Hero.

Leon. Bring you thofe fellows on, weel talke vwith Margaret, how her acquaintance grew vwith this lewd fellow.

Exeunt.

Enter Benedigie and Margaret.

Ben. Praye thee fweete Miffis Margaret, deferie vwell at my hands, by helping mee to the fppech of Betrice.

Mar. Will
Much ado about Nothing.

Marc. Will you then write me a Sonnet in praise of my beautie?

Beat. In so high a style Margaret, that no man living shall come ouer it, for in most comely truth thou deseruest it.

Marc. To have no man come ouer me, why, shall I alwaies kepe belowe flaires?

Beat. Thy wit is as quickie as the grey-hounds mouth, it catches.

Marc. And yours, as blunt as the Fencers foiles, which hit, but hurt not.

Beat. A most manly wit Margaret, it will not hurt a woman: and so I pray thee call Beatrice, I give thee the bucklers.

Marc. Give vs the swords, wee haue bucklers of our owne.

Beat. If you vfe them Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice, and they are dangerous weapons for Maides.

Marc. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I think hath legges.

Exit Margaret.

Marc. And therefore will come. The God of loue that fits above, andknowes me, and knows me, how pitiful I defende. I meane in finging, but in loving. Lean, the good fwinmer, Troilous the first imploier of pandars, and a whole booke full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose name yet runne smoothly in the eu-uen rode of a blanke verde, why they were never so true-ly turned ouer and ouer as my poore felfe in loue: marrie I cannot owre it rime, I haue tried, I can finde out no rime to Ladie but baby, an innocent rime: for sorne, horne, a hard time: for schoole fule, a babling time: verie ominous endings, so, I was not borne under a ri-ming Planett, for I cannot wooe in poetical terms:

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Wouldst thou come when I cal'd thee?

Marc. Yes Signior, and depart when you bid me.

Marc. O flay but till then.

Beat. Then, is spoken: fare ye well now, and yet ere I goe, let me goe with that I came, which is, with knowing what hath passe betweene you and Claudius.

Beat. One by foule words, and therupon I will kiffe thee.

Beat. Foulle words is but foule wind, and foule wind is but foule breath, and foule breath is no faire, therefore I will depart vs kit.

Beat. Thou haft righted the word out of his right fonce, so forcible is thy wit, but I must tell thee plainely, Claudius undergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward, and I pray thee now tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in loue with me?

Beat. For them all together, which maintain'd so politique a flate of cuill, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them: but for which of my good parts did you first fuffer loue for me?

Beat. Suffer loue! a good epithete, I do fuffer loue indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart I think, alas poore heart, if you spight for my fake, I will spight it for yours, for I will never loue that which my friend hates.

Beat. Thou and I are too wise to woole peaceable.

Beat. It appears not in this confession, there's not one wise man among twentieth that will praise himselfe.

Beat. An old, an old infance Beatrice, that liued in the time of good neighbours, if a man doe not ered in this age his owne tombe ere he dies, hee shall liue no longer in monuments, then the Bel's ring, & the Widow wepe.

Beat. And how long is that thynke you?

Beat. Queffion, why an hower in clamour and a quar-ter in rhemwe, therefore is it most expedient for the wife, if Don worme (his confience) finde no impediment to the contrare, to be the trumpet of his owne verses, as I am to my felfe so much for praifying my felfe, who I my felfe will haue winifles is praine worthie, and now tell me, how doth your cofin?

Beat. Verie ill.

Beat. And how doe you?

Beat. Verie ill too.

Enter Ursula.

Beat. Serue God, loue me, and mend, there will I leave you too, for here comes one in halfe.

Prs. Madam, you must come to your Vnce, youn-der old coife at home, it is proved my Ladie He-re hath bin falifelle accufle, the Prince and Claudius mightbelle abufe, and Don Iohn is the author of all, who is fled and gone: will you come prefentlie?

Beat. Will you goe heare this newes Signior?

Beat. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be burried in thy clies: and moreover, I will goe with thee to thy Vnces.

Exeunt.

Enter Claudius, Prince, and three or foure with Tapers.

Claus. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Lord. It is my Lord.

Epitaph.

Done to death by flanders tongue,
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death in guardion of her wrongs,
Giers her fame which never dies:
So the life that dyed with shame,
Lives in death with glorius fame.
Hang thou there upon the tombe,
Praifing her whom I am diuine.

Claus. Now muffle found & ting your solemn hymne

Song.

Pardon godfifhe of the night,
Those that flew by virgins knight,
For the which with songs of vone,
Round about her tombe they goe:
Midnight affift our mune, helpe us to figh and groan.
Heavenly, beamy.
Graves yarne and yelds your dead,
Till death be wittered,
Heavenly, heavenly.

(two right)

Lo. Now vnto thy bones good night, yeereely will I do

Prin. Good morrow maisters, put your Torches out,
The wolues haue preied, and looke, the gentle day Before the whelles of Phoebus, round about Dappes the drowsie Eaft with spots of gray:
Thanks to you all, and leasse vs, fare you well.

Claus. Good morrow maisters, each his feueral way.

Prin. Come let vs hence, and put on other weedes,
And then to Leonato we will goe.

Claus. And Hymen now with bucklier issue speedes.

Then
Then thus for whom we rendred vp this wo. Exeunt.
Enter Leonato,Bene. Marg. Virsula,old man, Frier, Hero, Frier. Did I not tell you she was innocent? Leo. So are the Prince and Claudia who accus'd her, Vpon the error that you heard debated: But Margaret was in some fault for this, Although againft her will as it appears, In the true course of all the question. Old. Well, I am glad that all things fort so well. Bene. And so am I, being eile by faith enforc'd To call young Claudia to a reckoning for it. Leo. Well daughter,and you gentelwomen all, Withdraw into a chamber by your selues, And when I fend for you, come hither mask'd: The Prince and Claudia promis'd by this howre To visit you, you know your office Brother, You must be father to your brother daughter, And give her to young Claudia. And I doe with an eye of loue requite her. Leo. The light whereof I thynke you had from me, From Claudia,and the Prince, but what's your will? Bene. Your answer fir is Enigmatical, But for my will, my will is, your good will May stand with ours, this day to be conldoy, In the state of honourable marriage, In which(good Frie) I shall defire your helpe. Leon. My heart is with your liking. Frier. And my helpe. Enter Prince and Claudia, with attendants. Prin. Good morrow to this faire assembly. Leo. Good morrow Prince,good morrow Claudia : We heere attend you, are you yet determin'd, To day to marry with my brothers daughter ? Claudia. Ile hold my minde were she an Ethiope. Leo. Call her forth brother,heres the Frier resdy. Prin. Good morrow Benedice,why this is what's the matter? That you have such a February face. So ful of frost,of storme,and coldwine. Claudia. I thynke he thinks vpon the fause bull : Thuffs, feare not man,we'll tip thy horses with gold, And all Europa shall relyose at thee, As once Eriopa did at Charlemain. When he would play the noble beast in love. Bene. Bull louse fir, he had an amiable low, And some fuch frange bull leapt your fathers Cow, A got a Calfe in that fame noble fleete, Much like to you, for you have iut his blate. Enter brother,Hero,Beatrice,Margarit,Virsula. Clau. For this I owe her here comes other rechings. Which is the Lady I must feele vpon ? Leo. This fame is she, and I doe glue you her. Clau. Why then she's mine, sweet let me see your face. Leon. No that you shall nee till you take her hand, Before this Frier, and sweare to marry her. Clau. Glue me your hand before this holy Frier, I am your husband if you like of me. Hero. And when I li'd I was your other wife, And when you li'd I was your other husband. Clau. Another Hero? Hero. Nothing certiner. One Hero died, but I doe liue, And surely as I liue, I am a maid. Prin. The former Hero, Hero that is dead. Leon. Shew diied my Lord, but whiles her flander liu'd. Frier. All this amazement can I quallifie, When after that the holy rites are ended, Ile tell you largely of fake Heroes death : Meane time let wonder teeme familiar, And to the chappell let vs preffently. Bene. Soft and faire Frier,which is Beatrice? Beat. I answer to that name, what is your will ? Bene. Doe not you loue me? Beat. Why no, no more then reafton. Bene. Why then your Uncle, and the Prince, & Clau- dia, have beene deceiued, they loued you did. Beat. Doe not you loue mee? Bene. Troth no, no more then reafton. Beat. Why then my Cofin Margaret and Virsula Are much deceiued,fors they did sweare you did. Bene. They sweare you were almof t ficker to me. Beat. They sweare you were wel-eye dead for me. Bene. 'Tis no matter, then you doe not loue me? Beat. No truly, but in friendly recompence. Leon. Come Cofin, I am sure you loue the gentem. Clau. And lie be fworne vp'n, that he loues her, For heres a paper written in his hand. A halting fanett of his owne pure braine, Fashioned to Beatrice. Hero. And heere another, Writ in my cofins hand, fille in her pocket, Containing her affeccion vnto Benedick. Bene. A miracle, here's our owne hands against our hearts: come I will haue thee, but by this light I take thee for pitie. Beat. I would not denye you, but by this good day, I yeold vpon great perifhacion, & partly to fave your life, for I was told, you were in a confumption. Leon. Peace I will stop your mouth. Prin. How doth thou Benedick the married man ? Bene. Ile tell thee what Prince : a College of witte-crackers cannot flout mee out of my hummery, doft thou think I care for a sonet or an Epigram ? no, if a man will be beaten with braines, a shall wearable nothing handfome about him : in briefe, since I do purpofe to marry, I will think nothing to any purpofe that the world can fay gainft it, and therefore never flout at me, for I haue faid againt it : for man is a giddy thing, and this is my con- clusion : for thy part Claudio, I do thinke to have beaten thee, but in that thou art like to be my kinman, lie vn- brull'd, and loue my couln. Clau. I had well hop'd ye would have denied Beatrice, I might have cudgell'd thee out of thy finge life, to make thee a double delicer, which out of queftion thou wilt be, if my Cousin do not looke exceeding narrowly to thee. Bene. Come, come, we are friends, let's haue a dance ere we are married, that we may lightten our own hearts, and our viles heales. Leon. We'll haue dancing afterward. Bene. First, of my vord, therfore play musick. Prince, thou art fad, get thee a vife, get thee a vife, there is no stuff more reuerent then one fipt with horn. Enter Mf. Mejfen. My Lord,your brother John is inue in flight, And brought with armed men becke to Miffinne. Bene. Thinke not on him till to morrow, ile deale thee braue punishments for him: strike vp Pipers. Dance.

FINIS.
Enter Ferdinand King of Navarre, Beroune, Longauill, and Dumaine.

Ferdinand.

That endeavours, that all hunt after in their lives, Lust requir'd upon our broken Tombs,
And then grace vs in the disgrace of death:
When sight of corrompt doth ouer Time,
The endeavour of this present breath may buy:
That honour which shall bate his Rythes keen edge,
And make vs heare of all eternities.
Therefore brave Conquerours, for so you are,
That warre against your owne affections,
And the huge Armie of the worldes desire.
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force,
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world.
Our Court shal be a little Achademe,
Sell and contemplative in living Art.
You three, Beroune, Dumaine, and Longauill,
Have sworn for these yeeres terme, to live with me:
My fellow Schollers, and to keepe those statutes
That are recorded in this Jedule here.
Your oathes are pitifully subscrib'd now your names,
That his owne hand may striking his honour downe,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm'd to bee, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your depe oaths, and keepe it to.
Longauill. I am resolv'd, 'tis but a three yeeres faft:
The minde shall banquet, though the body pine,
Fat paunches haue leave pates: and dainty bits,
Make rich the ribs, but bale out the wins.
Dumaine. My loving Lord, Dumaine is mortified,
The groser manner of these worlds delights,
He throwes upon the groffe worlds bafer flaues:
To lose, to wealth, to pompe, I pine and die,
With all these living in Philosophie.
Beroune. I can but say their protestation ouer,
So much, deare Liege, I have already sworn,
That is, to live and fludy heere three yeeres.
But there are other strict observances:
As not to fee a woman in that terme,
Which I hope well is not enrol'd there.
And one day in a weke to touch no foodes:
And but one meale on every day before:
The which I hope is not enrol'd there.
And then to sleepe but three hours in the night,
And not be scene to winke of all the day.
When I was wont to thinke no harms all night,
And make a darke night too of halfe the day:
Which I hope well is not enrol'd there.
O, these are barren taskes, too hard to keepe,
Not to see Ladies, fludy, fast, not sleepe.
Ferd. Your oath is past, to passe away from these.
Beroune. Let me say no more my Liege, and if you please,
I onely swore to fludy with your grace,
And they heere in your Court for three yeeres pace.
Long. You swore to that Beroune, and to the rest.
Beroune. By yea and nay fir, than I swore in left.
What is the end of study, let me know?
Ferd. Why that to know which else wee shold not know.
Ber. Things hid & bard (you meane) from common sense.
Ferd. 1, that is studies god-like recompence.
'Bers. Come on then, I will sweare to study so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus, to study where I well may dine,
When I to fast expressly am forbid.
Or fludy where to meete some Midstrefte fine,
When Midstrefte from common sense are hid.
Or having sworn too hard a keeping oath,
Studie to break it, and not breake my troth.
If studies gaine be thus, and this be so,
Studie knowes that which yet it doth not know,
Sware me to this, and I will nere say no.
Ferd. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And traine our intellectuals to vaine delight.
Ber. Why? all delights are vaine, and that most vaine
Which with paine purchas'd, doth inherit paine,
As painfully to poore upon a Booke,
To seeke the light of truth, while truth the while
Doth eilely blinde the eye-light of his booke:
Light fcareing light, doth light of light beguile:
So ere you finde where light in darkenesse lies,
Your light growes darke by lofing of your eyes.
Studie me how to please the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a faire eye,
Who darie bo, that eye shall be his heed,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Studie is like the heauens glorious Sunne,
That will not be deepe seach'd with fawcy lookes:
Small have commend'd plodders ever wonne,
Sane base authority from others Bookes.
These earthly Godfathers of heauens lights,
That gue a name to every fixed Starre,
Have no more profit of their shining nights,
Then those that walke and wot not what they are.
Too much to know, is to know nought but fame:
And every Godfather can gue a name.
Ferd. How well hee's read, to reason against reading.

Dum. 133.
Loues Labour's lost.

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding.
Lan. Her weedes the corne, and still letts grow the weeding.
Ber. The Spring is near when greene geefle is a breeding.
Dum. How followeth that?
Ber. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reason nothing.
Ber. Something then in rime.
Ferd. Berenice is like an enuous sneaping Froft, That bites the first borne infants of the Spring.
Ber. Well, say I am, why should proud Summer boast,
Before the Birds have any caufe to sing?
Why should I loy in any abortive birth?
At Christmas I no more defer a Roe,
Then with a Snow in Mayes new fangled showes:
But like of each thing that in season growes.
So you to studie now it is too late,
That were to clyme ore the house to unlocke the gate.
Fer. Well, fit you out: go home Berenice: ause.
Ber. No my good Lord, I haue sworn to fly with you.
And though I haue for barbarisme spoke more,
Then for that Angell knowledge you can say,
Yet confident Ie keepe what I have sworne,
And hide the penance of each three yeares day.
Give me the paper, let me reade the fame,
And to the strictest decree Ie write my name.
Fer. How well this yielding referees thee from blame.
Ber. Item. That no woman shall come within a mile of my Court.
Hath this bin proclaimed?
Lan. Four days agoe.
Ber. Let's fee the penaltie.
On paine of louing her tongue.
Who deueth this penaltie?
Lan. Marry that did I.
Ber. Sweete Lord, and why?
Lan. To fright them hence with that dread penaltie,
A dangerous law against gentilitie.
Item. If any man be seen to talke with a woman within the terme of three yeares, hee shall induce such publike flame as the rest of the Court shall possibly deuise.
Ber. This Article my Ledge ye your felfe must brake,
For well you know here comes in Embassie
The French Kings daughter, with your felle to speake:
A Maid of grace and compleate maiestie,
About surrender vp of Aquitaine:
To her deceipt, fike, and bed-nid Father.
Therefore this Article is made in vain:
Or vainly comes th'amired Princefse hither.
Fer. What fay you Lords?
Why, this was quite forgot.
Ber. So Studie eevermore is ouerhoht,
While it doth studye to have what it would,
It doth forget to doe the thing it should:
And when it hath the thing it hungeth most,
'Tis won as townes with fire, so won,so loft.
Fer. We must of force difference with this Decree,
She must lye here on meere necessitie.
Ber. Necessity will make vs all forsworne
Three thousand times within this three yeeres space:
For euery man with his affeks is borne,
Not by might maffred, but by specall grace.
If I breake faith, this word shall breake for me,
I am forsworne on meere necessitie.

So to the Lawes at large I write my name,
And he that breaches them in the least degree,
Stands in attainer of eternall flame.
Suggretions are to other as to me;
But I believe although I feeme fo loth,
I am the last that will lett keepe his oth,
But is there no quicke recreation granted?
Fer. I that there is, our Court you know is hanted
With a refined traualer of Spaine,
A man in all the worlds new fashion planted,
That hath a mint of phrafaes in his braine:
One, who the musick of his owne vaine tongue,
Doth rauih like inchanting harmonie:
A man of complements whom right and wrong
Haue chose as vmpire of their mutinie.
This childe of fancie that Armado hight,
For Interim to our studiies shall relate,
In high-borne words the worthe is many a Knight:
From tawne Spaine lost in the worlds debate.
How you delight my Lords, I know not I,
But I protest I love to heare him lie,
And I will vfe him for my Minstreline.
Bera. Armado is a most Illuflrious wight,
A man of fire, new words, fations owne Knight.
Lan. Coflard the swaine and he, shall be our sport,
And fo to studie, three yeeres is but short.

Con. Signior Army,Army comends you:
Ther's villanie abroad, this letter will tell you more.
Clow. Sir the Contempts thereof are as touching mee.
Fer. A letter from the magnificent Armado.
Ber. How low souer the matter, I hope in God for high words.
Lan. A high hope for a low heauen, God grant vs patience.
Ber. To heare, or forbeare hearing.
Lan. To heare meekely firs, and to laugh moderately, or to forbeare both.
Ber. Well firs, be it as the firs shall give vs cause to clime in the merrinfe.
Clow. The manner is to me firs, as concerning Iaquenetta.
The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.
Ber. In what manner?
Clow. In manner and forme following fir all thofe three.
I was feene with her in the Manner house, fitting with her vpun the Forme, and taken following her into the Parke; which put to gether, is in manner and forme following.
Now fir for the manner; It is the manner of a man to speake to a woman, for the forme in forme forme.
Ber. As the following fir.
Clow. As it shall follow in my correffion, and God defend the right.
Fer. Will you heare this Letter with attention?
Ber. As we would heare an Oracle.
Clow. Such is the simplicitie of man to harken after the fleep.

Cfist. Of other mens secrets I befeech you.

Ferd. So it is befieged with fable coloured melancholy, I did commend the blacke oppressing humour to the moft whole-fome Physicke of thy healt-giving eyre: And as I am a Gentleman, because my felfe to awake the time When I about the first hour, When befitts moft greats, birds left pecks, and men fit downe to that nonrfiment which is called supper: So much for the time When. Now for the ground Which? which I meane I wake upon, it is efticed, Thy Parkes. Then for the place Where? where I mean: I did encounter that obfene and moft proprieouers event that draweth from my fnow-white pane the then coloured Ive, which becre thou twis wifcowft, behold it, sharpened, or jet. But to the place Where? It is Bandebt North North-east, and by Eafi from the Wofl corner of thy curioust knotted garden; There did I fee that low spirite Samwe, that boft Mivew of thy myth, (Cfist. Keep) that unfortuned small knowing foule, (Cfist Me) that fallow-kefll (Cfist. Still mee?) which as I remember, bight Coftard, (Cfist. O me) forfted and comforted contrary to thy eftablished proclam'd Edict and Contin, Canm: Which with, awith, but with the I fation to fay wherewith:

Cfist. With a Wench.

Ferd. With a child of our Grandmutter Eoe, a female; or for thy more fweet understanding a woman: kim, (as my ever efclamed dutie prickes me on) have fent to thee, to receive the med of punishment by thy fweet Greates Officer Anthony Dunl, a man of good repatus, carriage, bearing, & elimination. Anth. Mean't shall pleafe you? I am Anthony Dunl.

Ferd. For laquenetta (Ic is the weaker defcall called) which I apprehended with the afterfald Samwe, I keppe her as a cffall of thy Leofe fons, and f Joanna of thy next notice, being her to retial. These in all complements of windy and heart-burning heat of dutie.

Don Adriana de Armado.

Bar. This is not fo well as I looked for, but the beft that ever I heard.

Fer. I the beft, for the worft. But fira, Whay fay you to this?

Cfist. Sir I confefte the Wench.

Fer. Did you heare the Proclamation?

Cfist. I do confefte much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

Fer. It was proclaimed a yeeres imprifonment to bee taken with a Wench.

Cfist. I was taken with none fir, I was taken with a Damofell.

Fer. Well, it was proclaimed Damofell.

Cfist. This was no Damofell neyther fir, shee was a Virgin.

Fer. It is fo varried, for it was proclaimed Virgin.

Cfist. If it were, I deny her Virginitie: I was taken with a Maid.

Fer. This Maid will not ferue your turne fir.

Cfist. This Maid will ferue my turne fir.

Kin. Sir I will pronounce your fentence: You shall falt a Weeke with Branne and water.

Cfist. I had rather pray a Moneth with Mutton and Porridge.

Kin, And Don Armado shall be your keeper.

My Lord Berewmen, fee him deliuer'd ore, And goo we Lords to put in practice that, Which each to other hath fo strongly sworne.

Ber. Ie lay my head to any good mans hat, These othes and lauves will prove an idle fororne.

Sirr., come on.

Cfist. I suffer for the truth fir: for true it is, I was taken with laquenetta, and laquenetta is a true girl, and therefore welcome the foeure cup of proporitie, affifi- on may one day finale againe, and vintill then fit downe forrow.

Enter Armado and Mek b. Page.

Arna. Boy, What figne is it when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Boy. A great figne fir, that he will looke fad.

Boy. Why? Sineffe is one and the felfe-fame thing dearde impe.

Boy. No no, O Lord fir no.

Boy. How canft thou part fideffe and melancholy my tender Ivanell?

Boy. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough figneur.

Boy. Why tough figneur? Why tough figneur?

Boy. Why tender Ivanell? Why tender Ivanell?

Boy. I spoke it tender Ivanell, as a congruent app- atthon, appertraining to thy young daues, which we may nominate tender.

Boy. And I tough figneur, as an appertinent title to thy oldie time, which we may name tough.

Boy. Pretty and apt.

Boy. How meanes you fir, I pretty, and my faying apt? or I apt, and my faying prettie? I.

Boy. Thou pretty becaufe little.

Boy. Little pretty, becaufe little: wherefore apt?

Boy. And therefore apt, becaufe quicke.

Boy. Speake you this in my praffe Mafter?

Boy. In thy condigne praffe.

Boy. I will praffle an Eele with the fame praffe.

Boy. What? that an Eele is ingenuous.

Boy. That an Eele is quicke.

Boy. I doe fay thou art quicke in anfweres. Thou heat't my bloud.

Boy. I am anfwer'd fir.

Boy. I loue not to be croft.

Boy. He speakes the meere contrary,croffes loue not.

Boy. I have promis'd to study ij. yeares with the Duke.

Boy. You may doe it in an houre fir.

Boy. Impossibile.

Boy. How many is one thrice told?

Boy. I am ill at reckning, it fits the spirit of a Tapiter.

Boy. You are a gentleman and a gamefier fir.

Boy. I confede both, they are both the varnish of a comples man.

Boy. Then I am fure you know how much the grosfe fumm of deul-rice amounts to.

Boy. It doth amount to one more then two.

Boy. Which the lafe vulgar call three.

Boy. True.

Boy. Why fir is this fuch a peece of fudy? Now here's three studies,ere you'll thirle wink, & how eafe it is to put yeares to the word three, and thyue three yeeres in two words, the dancing horfe will teell you.

Boy. A
Loues Labour's lost.

Brag. A most fine Figure.

Boy. To proue you a Cypher.

Brag. I will hereupon confess I am in loue; and as it is bile for a Souldier to love; so am I in loue with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affoord, would deliver mee from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Defire prisoner, and ranfome him to any French Courtier for a new deuls'd curtie. I think sicorne to figh, me thinkes I should out-swear Cupid. Comfort me Boy, What great men have beene in loue!

Boy. Hercules Master.

Brag. Most sweete Hercules: more authority dear Boy, name more; and sweet my child let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Boy. Sampfon Master. was a man of good carriage, great carriage: for hee carried the Towne-gates on his backe like a Porter: and he was in loue.

Brag. O well-knit Sampfon, strong ioynted Sampfon! I doe excell thee in my rapier, as much as thou diest mee in carrying gates. I am in loue too. Who was Sampfon loue my deare Master?

Boy. A Woman Master.

Brag. Of what complexion?

Boy. Of all the foure, or the three, or the two, or one of the foure.

Brag. Tell me precisely of what complexion?

Boy. Of the sea-water Greene fir.

Brag. Is that one of the foure complexions?

Boy. As I have read fir, and the beeft of them too.

Brag. Greene indeed is the colour of Louen: but to have a Loue of that colour, methinks Sampfon had small reason for it. He sorely affected her for her wit.

Boy. It was so fir, for she had a Greene wit.

Brag. My Loue is most immaculate white and red.

Boy. Most immaculate thoughts Master, are mask'd under such colours.

Brag. Define, define, well educated infant.

Boy. My fathers witte, and my mothers tongue affist mee.

Brag. Sweet inoculation of a child, most pretty and pathetical.

Boy. If thee be made of white and red, Her faults will never be knowne:

For bloud in cheeks by faults are bred,

And fears by pale white shone:

Then if the fear, or be to blame,

By this you shall not know,

For still her cheeks oflate the fame,

Which natur the doth owe:

A dangerous time master against the reason of white and red.

Brag. Is there not a ballet Boy, of the King and the Beggar?

Boy. The world was very guilty of such a Ballet some three ages since, but I thinke now 'tis not to be found: or if it were, it would neither serve for the writing, nor the tune.

Brag. I will have that subject newly writ ore, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I doe loue that Country girl that I tooke in the Parke with the rationall hinde Coftard: shee deferves well.

Boy. To bee whipt: and yet a better loue then my Master.

Brag. Sing Boy, my spirit grows heavy in loue.

Boy. And that's great manuell, louing a light wench.

Brag. I say ang.

Boy. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter Clerve, Confidie, and Wench.

Conf. Sir, the Dukes pleasure, is that you keepe Coftard safe, and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance, but hee must fast three dailes a weeke: for this Damfell, I must keepe her at the Parke, shee is aloof for the Day-woman. Fare you well.

Exit.

Brag. I do betray my felle with blushing: Maide.

Maid. Man.

Brag. I will visit thee at the Lodge.

Maid. That's here by.

Brag. I know where it is situate.

Maid. Howe wife you are!

Brag. I will tell thee wonders.

Mr. With what face?

Boy. I love thee.

Mai. So I heard you say.

Brag. And so farewell.

Maid. Fare well after you.

Clo. Come Iaquemette, away.

Execut.

Brag. Villaine, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Clo. Well sir, I hope when I doe it, I shall doe it on a full stomack.

Brag. Thou shalt be heauily punished.

Clo. I am more bound to you then your fellowes, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Clo. Take away this villaine, shut him vp.

Boy. Come you tranfgreffing blase, away.

Clerv. Let mee not bee pent vp sir, I will being loue.

Boy. No sir, that were fast and loue: thou shalt to prifon.

Clerv. Well, if ever I doe fee the merry days of defolation that I have seen, some shall fee.

Boy. What shall some fee?

Clerv. Nay nothing, Master Meth, but what they looke vp they. It is not for prisoners to be silent in their words, and therefore I will say nothin I thanke God, I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet.

Brag. I doe affect the very ground (which is base) where her shooe (which is bafer) guided by her foote (which is balest) doe tread. I shall be forsworn (which is a great argument of faultihood) if I loue. And how can that be true loue, which is falsly attempted? Loue is a familiar, Loue is a Diswell. There is no euel Angell but Loue, yet Sampfon was so tempted, and he had an excellent strength: Yet was Solomon so seduced, and hee had a very good witte. Caples Butshaft is too hard for Heradder Clubbe, and therefore too much ods for a Spaiuers Rapier: The first and second cause will not ferue my turne: the Paffado hee refpech not, the Duelle he regards not; his digracy is to be called Boy, but his gerie is to subdue men. Adue Valour, ruff Rapier, bee still Drum, for your manager is in love; yee hee loueth. Allit me some extemporall god of Rome, for I am sure I shall turne Sonnet. Deule Wit, write Pen, for I am for whole volumes in folio.

Actus Secunda.

Enter the Princeps of France, with thre three attending Ladies, and three Lords.

Boyet. Now Madam summon vp your dearest spirits, Consider who the King your father fends: To whom he fends, and what's his Embaflie. Your felfe, held precious in the worlds esteme, To parle with the folc inheritour Of all perfecions that a man may owe, Matchfeele Nauros, the plea of no leffe weight Then Aquatina, and Davus. Be now as prodigall of all deare grace, As Nature was in making Graces deare, When she did warne the generall world before. And prodigall gave them all to you. Queen. Good L. Boyet, my beauty though but mean, Nor not the praife of your prouder praeife. Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye, Not vttred by base fale of chapmans tongues: I am leffe proud to heare you tell my worth, Then you much wiling to be counted wife, In spending your wit in the prafe of mine. But now to task the tasker, good Boyet, Prin. You are not ignorant all-telling fame Doth noye abroad Nauros hath made a vow, Till painfull patience shall out-weare three yeres, No woman may approach his silent Court: Therefore to's fomelth it a needful course, Before we enter his forbidden gates, To know his pleasure, and in that behalfe Bold of your worthineffe, we angle you, As our belt moving faire solidite: Tell him, the daughter of the King of France, On furious busineffe crauing quicke dispatch, Importunnes perfonall conference with his grace. Hafe, lignifie fo much while we attend, Like humble vifag'd futers his high will.

Boy. Proud of improvement, willingly I goe. Exit. Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is fo: Who are the Voratieus my louting Lords, that are vow-fellowes with this vertuous Duke? Lor. Langaulif is one.

Prin. Know you the man? I Lady, I know him Madame at a marriage feast, Betweene L. Pevigrt and the beautious heire Of Inques Fauconbridge solemnized. In Normandie saw I this Langaulif, A man of furious partes he is extem'd: Well armed in Arms, glories in Quiems: Nothing becomes him ill that he would well. The onely foyle of his faire vertues flotte, If vertues flotte will thrive with any foile, Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a Will: Whole edge hath power to cut whole will all wills, It should none pare that come within his power. Prin. Some merry mocking Lord beleife, It to? Lad. 1. They say fo moft, that moft his humors know. Prin. Such shott lid'ud wits do wither as they grow. Who are the reth? 2. Lad. The yong Dumas, a well accomplifh youth,

Of all that Vertue lose, for Vertue loused. Most power to doe most harme, leaft knowing ill: For he hath wit to make an ill shape good, And shape to win grace though she had no wit. I saw him at the Duke Alanjes once, And much too little of that good I saw, Is my report to his great worthinesse.

Ruja. Another of thefe Students at that time, Was there with him, as I have heard a truth.

Bereuwel they call him, but a merrier man, Within the limit of becoming mirth, I never spent an hours talk withall. His eye begets occasion for his wit, For evey obiect that the one doth catch, The other turns to a mirth-moving loyn. Which his faire tongue (conceits expeditor) Deliuereth in a courfe apt and gracius, That aged eares play treuant at his tales, And yonger hearings are quite ruffhied.

So sweet and volable is his discours.

Prin. God bleffe my Ladies, are they all in love? That every one her owne hath garnished, With such bedecking ornament of prafe.

Ma. Heere comes Boyet.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance Lord? Boyet. Nauros hath notice of your faire approach; And he and his competitors in oath, Were all ahide to meete you gentle Lady Before I came: Marrie thus much I have learnt, He rather meanes to lodge you in the field, Like one that comes heere to befiege his Court, Then seekke a difpenfation for his oath: To let you enter his vnpoepleed houfe.

Enter Nauros, Longaulif, Dumas, and Bereuwel.

Heere comes Nauros.

Nauros. Faire Princeffewel comew to the Court of Nauros.

Prin. Faire I give you backe againe, and welcome I have not yet: the roofe of this Court is too high to bee yours, and welcome to the wide fields, too fafe to be mine.

Nauros. You shall be welcome Madam to my Court. Prin. I will be welcome then, Condoft me thither.

Nauros. Heare me deare Lady, I have sworne an oath. Prin. Our Lady helpe my Lord, he'll be forsworne.

Nauros. Not for the world faire Madam, by my will. Prin. Why, will shal heire it will, and nothing els. Nauros. Your Ladiship is ignorant what it is.

Prin. Were my Lord fo, his ignorance were wife, Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance. I hearre your grace hath sworne o're Housekeeping: 'Tis deadly finne to keepe that oath my Lord, And finne to breake it:

But pardon me, I am too fodaine bold, To teach a Teacher ill befemeth me. Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my comming, And sodainly refolute me in my fute.

Nauros. Madam, I will, if sodainly I may.

Prin. You will the sooner that I were away, For you'll prooue perjur'd if you make me fay.

Bereuwel. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once? Rifa. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ber. 1
Loues Labour's lost.

Ber. I know you did.
Rofa. How needlesse was it then to ask the question?
Ber. You must not be so quick.
Rofa. 'Tis long of you I spurn with such questions.
Ber. Your wit's too hot, it spoild too fast, 'twill fire.
Rofa. Not till it leauë the Ruser in the mire.
Ber. What time a day?
Rofa. The howre that foolish should ask.
Rofa. Faire fall beare your maske.
Rofa. Faire fall the face it coveres.
Ber. And lend you many runners.
Rofa. Amen, so you be none.
Ber. Nay then will I be gone.

Kin. Madame, your father heere doth intime,
The palment of a hundred thousand Crownes,
Being but th'o halfe, of intire damme,
Disburied by my father in his waies.
Ber. Shall I say then, as you do in your song.
Rofa. I receiug'd that damme, yet there remaynes unpaid
A hundred thousand more: in surety of the which,
One part of Aquaine is bound to vs,
Although not valued to the monies worth.
Ber. If then the King your father will restore
But that one halfe which is unfastified.
We will give vp our right in Aquaine,
And hold faire friendship with his Maiestie:
But that he seemes he little purpofeth,
For heere doth demand to haue repair
An hundred thousand Crownes, and not demands
One palment of a hundred thousand Crownes,
To haue his title lieue in Aquaine,
Which we much rather had depart withall,
And haue the money by our father lent,
Then Aquaine, so guelded as it is.
Deare Princeffe, were not his requeu'ts fo faire
From reaons yielding, your faire felfe shoule make
A yeuling gainst some reaon in my breif,
And soe well satisfied to France againe.

Prin. You doe the King my Father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In soe unconfortable receiue receiued
Of that which hath fo faithfully beene paid.
Kin. I doe protest I never heard of it,
And if you proue it, Ie repaye it backe,
Or yeild vp Aquaine.

Prin. We arreft your word:
Boyet, you can produce acquitances
For such a damme, from speciall Officers,
Of Charles his Father.
Kin. Satisfie me so.
Boyet. So pleasse your Grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialitie are bound,
To morrow you shall have a fight of them.
Kin. It shall sufficke me, at which interview,
All liberal reason would I yeild vnto:
Meane time, receiue such as is my hand,
As Honour, without breach of Honour may
Make tender of, to thy true worthinesse.
You may not come faire Princeffe in my gates,
But heere without you shalbe so receiued,
As you shall deeme your faile lodg'd in my heart,
Though soe deale'd farther harbour in my house:
Your owne good thoughts excute me, and farewell,
To morrow we shall visit you again.

Prin. Sweet health & faire deires confort your grace.
Kin. Thy own with which I thee, in every place. Exit.

Boy. Lady, I will commend you to my owne heart.
La. Re. Pray you doe my commendations,
I would be glad to see it.
Boy. I would you heard it gone.
La. Re. Is the foule sickle?
Boy. Sickle at the heart.
La. Re. Alack, let it bloud.
Boy. Would that doe it good?
La. Re. My Philicke faies I.
Boy. Will you pricks with your eye.
La. Re. No poynt, with my knife.
Boy. Now God save thy life.
La. Re. And yours from long lying.
Ber. I cannot stay thankfulling. Exit.

Enter Dumaine.

Dum. Sir, I pray you a word; What Lady is that fame?
Boy. The heire of Laffon, Refalls her name.
Dum. A gallant Lady, Mounfier fare you well.
Long. I bfetch you a word: what is she in the white?
Boy. A woman fontimes, if you saw her in the light.
Long. Perchance light in the light: I defire her name.
Boy. Shee hath but one for her felfe,
To defire that were a flame.
Long. Pray you fir, whose daughter?
Boy. Her Mothers, I haue heard.
Long. Gods blessing a your beard.
Boy. Good fir be not offended,
Shee is an hyere of Pauicbridge.
Long. Nay, my choller is ended:
Shee is a most sweet Lady.
Boy. Not unlike fir, that may be.

Enter Berowe.

Ber. What's her name in the cap.
Boy. Katherine by good hap.
Ber. Is she wedded, or no.
Boy. To her will fir, or fo.
Ber. You are welcome fir, adieu.
Boy. Fare well to me fir, and welcome to you. Exit.
La. Ma. That left is Berowe, the mery mad-cap Lord.

Not a word with him, but a left.
Boy. And every left but a word.
Frit. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
Boy. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to boarde.
La. Ma. Two hot Sheepe marie:
And wherefore not Ships?

Boy. No Sheepe (sweet Lamb) vnletterd we feed on your Lyn.
That Sheep and I pasture: shall that finish the left?
Boy. So you grant pasture for me.
La. Not fo gentle beast.
My lips are no common, though feuerall they be.
Bo. Belonging to whom?
La. To my fortunes and me.
Prin. Good wits will be tangling, but gentles agree.
This ciuill warre of which were much better vfed
On Nunnar and his booke-men, for heere 'tis about.
Bo. If my obseruation (which very seldom lies
By the hearts still rhetorick'd, discolod with eyes) Deceiue me not now, Nunnar is infect'd.
Prin. With what?
Bo. With that which we Louers intite affected.
Prin. Your reason.
Bo. Why all his behawvours doe make their retire,
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire.
His hart like an Agot with your print impreffed,

Proud
Proud with his forme, in his ele pride express'd.
His tongue all impatient to speake and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his ele-fight to be,
All fenses to that fence did make their repair,
To feele oneely looking on fairest of faire's?
Me thought all his fenses were lockt in his eye,
As Jewels in Chriftall for some Prince to buy.
(ghast,
Who tending their own worth from whence they were
Did point out to buy them along as you pifi.
His faces owne margent did coate such amazes,
That all eyes faw his eles enchanted with gazes.
He give you appilates, and all that is his,
And you give him for my fake, but one looking Kiffe.

Prin. Come to our Pauilion, Boyer is disposed.
Bro. But to speake that in words, which his ele hath dif-
I onelie have made a mouth of his ele.
(cho'd.

Boy. What then, do you fee?

Lad. 1. I, our way to be gone.
Boy. You are too hard for me.

Brag. Sweete Ayer, go tenderneffe of yeares: take this Key, glue enlargement to the swaine, bring him fe-

Edlinly hither: I must implo him in a letter to my Loue.

Boy. Will you win your Loue with a French bracle?

Bra. How meaneat thou, brauling in French?

Boy. No my compleat mater, but to ligge off a tune at the tongues end, canarie to it with the feete, humour it with turning vp your ele: fish a note and fing a note, sometyme through the throuse; if you swallowed Loue with finging, loue sometime through; note as if you inuif vp voue by smelling loue with your hat penthoufelike ore the thop of your eles, with your armes croft on your thinbellie doublet, like a Rabbiit on a spit, or your hands in your pochet, like a man after the old painting, and keepe not too long in one tune, but a fip and away: these are complements, these are humourous, these betraie nice wenchese that would be betrayed without thef, and make them men of note: do you note men that moft are affected to thefe?

Brag. How haft thou purchased this experience?

Brag. By my penne of observation.

Brag. But O, but O.

Boy. The Hobblie-horfe is forgot.

Bra. Call'th thou my loue Hobblie-horfe.

Boy. No Matter, the Hobblie-horfe is but a Colt, and and your Loue perhaps a Hacknie:

But have you forgot your Loue?

Brag. Almof I had.

Boy. Negliget fttant, leame her by heart.

Brag. By heart, and in heart Boy.

Boy. And out of heart Mather: all thofe three I will prove.

Brag. What wilt thou prove?

Boy. A man, if I liue(and this)by,in, and without, vp-on the infant: by heart you love her, becaufe your heart cannot come by her: in heart you love her, becaufe your heart is in love with her: and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

Brag. I am all thafe three.

Boy. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Brag. Fetch hither the Swaine, he muft carrie mee a letter.

Boy. A meffage well sympathi'd, a Horfe to be em-baflallour for an Affe.

Brag. Ha, ha! What faieft thou?

Boy. Marrie fir, you must fend the Affe vpon the Horfe for he is very flow gated: but I goe.

Brag. The way is but short, away.

Boy. As swift as Lead fir.

Brag. Thy meaning prette ingenious, is not Lead a met-tall heauie, dull, and flow?

Boy. Miomine honest Mather, or rather Mather no.

Brad. I luy Lead is flow.

Boy. You are too swift fir to say fo.

Is that Lead flow which is fir'd from a Gunne?

Brag. Sweete fmoake of Rhetoricks,

He repukes me a Cannon, and the Bullet that's he:

I choote thee at the Swaine.

Boy. Thump then, and I fee.

Bra. A Moft acute lueneall, volable and free of grace,

Moft rude melancholie, Valour gives thee place.

Arg. No Pag, it is an epilogue or discourse to make some obscure prudence that hath tofore bin faine.

Now will I begin your morall, and do you follow with my lenamy.

The Foxe, the Ape, and the Humble-Bee,

Were fill at oddes, being little three.

Arna. Vatill the Goofe came out of doores,

Staying the oddes by adding foure.

Cle. The Boy hath fold him a bargain, a Goofe, that's that's Sir, your penny-worth is good, and your Goose be fat.

To sell a bargaine well is as cunning as fish and foole:
Let me see a fat Lenwy, I that's a fat Goose.

Ar. Come hither, come hither:
How did this argument begin?
Boy. By saying that a Coifard was broken in a shin.
Then call'd you for the Lenwy.
Clow. True, and I for a Plantan:
Thus came your argument in:
Then the Boyes fat Lenwy, the Goose that you bought,
And he ended the market.

Ar. But tell me: How was there a Coifard broken in

Peg. I will tell you feinely.
Clow. Thou haft no feeling of it Mag.
I will speake that Lenwy.
1 Coifard running out, that was safely within,
For one thing forsooth, that I shal intrate.
Arm. We will take no more of this matter.
Clow. Till there be more matter in the shin.
Arm. Sirra Coifard, I will infranchifie thee.
Clow. Or, marrie me to one France, I smell some Lenwy, some Goose in this.

Bear this significant to the country Mulde Inquenittas:
it is remuneracion, for the best ward of mine honours is rewarding my dependants. Mone, follow.
Peg. Like the sequell I.
Signeour Coifard adiew.
Clow. My sweete ounce of mans flesh, my in-conie
Iew: Now will I looke to his remuneracion.
Remuneracion, O, that's the Latine word for three-farthings:
Three-farthings remuneracion, What's the price of this yncle? I, d.no, lie give you a remuneracion: Why?
It carries it remuneracion: Why? It is a fairer name then a French-Crowne. I will neuer buy and fell out of this word.

Enter Bervowe.

Ber. O my good knawe Coifard, exceedingly well met.
Clow. Pray you sir, How much Carnation Ribbon am a man buy for a remuneracion?
Ber. What is a remuneracion?
Coifard. Marrie sir, half a penny farthing.
Ber. O, Why then three-farthings worth of Silke.
Coifard. I thanke your worship, God be wy you.
Ber. O thy flaus, I must employ thee.
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knawe,
Do as one thing for me that I shall intrate.
Clow. When would you have it done far?
Ber. O this after-noone.
Clow. Well, I will doe it far: Fare you well.
Ber. O thou knowest not what it is.
Clow. I shall know far, when I have done it.
Ber. Why villaines thou must know first.
Clow. I will come to your worship to morrow morning.
Ber. It must be done this after-noone,
Harke flaus, it is this:
The Princecess comes to hunt here in the Parke,
And in her traine there is a gentle Ladie:
When tongues speake sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her, ask for her:
And to her white hand fee thou do commend
This feal'd vp counsell. Th'ers thy guerdon: goe.
Ch. Garden, O sweete garden, better then remuneration, a leucencepeenaeuthing better: moost sweete gar-
don. I will doe it fir in print: garden, remuneration.

Ber. O, and I forsooth in loue,
I that have beene loues whip?
A verie Beadle to a hurneous fig : A Criticke,
Nay, a night-watch Confable.
A domineering pedant ore the Boy,
Then whom no mortall fo magnificent.
This vimiplied, whyning, pubblinde waryard Boy,
This signior Lunoys gent draws, don Capid,
Regent of Loues-tymes, Lord of hunte armes,
Thannomitted foureaigne of fighthes and graces:
Liedge of all loteyers and malecontents:
Dread Prince of Placcats, King of Copeeeces.
Sole Emperor and great general
Of trotting Marrators (O my little heart.)
And I to be a Corporall of his field,
And wære his colours like a Tumblers hoore.
What? I love, I suee, I seke a wife,
A woman that is like a German Cloake,
Still a repairing: cur out of frame,
And never going a right, being a Watch:
But being watch't, that it may still goe right.
Nay, to be purride, which is worst of all:
And among three, to lose the worst of all,
A wheel wanton, with a veilct brow.
With two pitchبالs flucke in her face for eyes,
Lend by heauen, one that will doe the deede,
Though Argus were her Eunuch and her garde.
And I to fighe for her, to watch for her,
To pray for her, go to: it is a plague
That Capid will impoze for my neglect,
Of his almighty dreadfull little might.
Well, I will love, write, figh, pray, due, grone,
Some men must love my Lady, and some Ione.

For. Ye Madam faire.
L. Nay, neuer paint me now,
Where faire is not, praiue cannot mend the brow.
Here (good my glasse) take this for telling true:
Faire paiments for foule words, is more then due.
For. Nothing but faire is that which you inherit.
L. See, see, my beautie will be fau'd by merit,
O herefie in faire, fit for these daies,
A giuing hand, though foule, shall haue faire praiue.
But come, the Bow: Now Mercie goes to kill,
And shooting well, is then accouted ill:
Thus will I faue my credit in the shoote,
Not wounding, pittle would not let me doe't:
If wounding, then it was to shew my skill,
That more for praiue, then purpoce meant to kill.
And out of question, fo it is sometimes:
Glory growses gullite of deftred crimes,
When for Fames sake, for praiue an outward part,
We bend to that, the workings of the hart.
As I for praiue alone now seeke to spill
The poore Deeres blood, that my hart means no ill.
Boy. Do not curst wisees hold that selfe-foueragniue Oneely for praiue sake, when they trie to be Lords ore their Lords?
L. Onely for praiue, and praiue we may aford,
To any Lady that subdeuws a Lord.

Boy. Here comes a member of the common-wealth.
Clo. God dig-you-den all, pray you which is the head Lady?
L. Thou shalt know her fellow, by the reft that have no heads.
Clo. Which is the greatest Lady, the highest?
Boy. The thickest, and the talllest.
Clo. The thickest, & the talllest: it is fo, truth is truth.
And your waite Mistris, were as slender as my wit,
One a thefe Maltes girdles for your waife should be fit.
Are not you the chiefest woman? You are the thickest here?
L. What's your will sir? What's your will?
Clo. I have a Letter from Monfier Bervone.
To one Lady Rafaline.

Boy. O thy letter, thy letter: He's a good friend of mine.
Stand a good good bearer.

This Letter is mitbooke: it importeth none here:
It is wrtie to Laperunea.
L. We will read it, I fware.
Brauke the necke of the Waxe, and every one gie care.

Boyet reads.

By heauen, that thou art faire, is most infallable: true that thou art beauituous, truth it selfe that thou art lovely:
more faire then faire, beautifull then beauituous, true then truth it felle: hauue comiferation on thy heroic

the Begger. The conclusion is viictorie: On whom fide

Shall I entreate thy loue? I will. What, that thou ex-

Thus expexting thy reply, I prophane my lips on

Boy. I am much deceuied, but I remember the fille.
Boy. Efte your memorie is bad, going ore it erewhile.
Boy. This Armado is a Spaniard that keeps here in court
A Phantafime, a Monarcho, and one that makes fport
To the Prince and his Booke-mates.
Boy. Thou fellow, a word.
Who gaue thee this Letter?
Clo. I told you, my Lord.
Boy. To whom fhould't thou give it?
Clo. From my Lord to my Lady.
Boy. From which Lord, to which Lady?
Clo. From my Lord Bervone, a good mater of mine,
To a Lady of France, that he call'd Rafaline.
Boy. Thou haft mitthen his letter. Come Lords away.

Hang me by the necke, if hornes that yeare miscarrie.
Finely put on.
Rafa. Well then, I am the shooter.
Boy. And who is your Deare.
Rafa. If we chosse by the hornes, your felfe come not

Ped. The Deare was (as you know) fanguis in blood, ripe as a Pomewater, who now hangeth like a Jewell in the care of Calle the fkie, the weelen the heaven, and a non falleth like a Crab on the face of Terra, the foyle, the land, the earth.

Cert. Nath. Truly M. Holferens, the epithethes are fweetly varied like a scholler at the leaste but if I affure ye, it was a Bucke of the first head.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, hand credo.

Dul. 'Twas not a hand credo, 'twas a Pricket.

Hol. Moft barbarous intimation: yet a kind of intimation, as it were in wia, in way of explication fivere: as it were replication, or rather oftentare, to shew as it were his inclination after his vnprebred, vnpolifhed, vnaeducat'te, vnpruned, vntrained, or rather valettered, or rather unconfirmed fashion, to infringe againe my hand credo for a Deare.

Dul. I fald the Deare was not a hand credo, 'twas a Pricket.

Hol. Twice fod simplicitie, bis cælatus, O thou monfter Ignorance, how deformed dooef thou looke.

Nath. Sir lice hath never fed of the daunites that are bred in a booke.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity, I say th'allusion holds in the Exchange.

Dul. And I say the polusion holds in the Exchange: for the Moone is never but a month old: and I say bide that, 'twas a Pricket that the Princefle kill'd.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you heare an extemporall Epitaph on the death of the Deare, and to humour the ignorant call'd the Deare, the Princefle kill'd a Pricket.

Natb. Perge, good M. Holferens, perge, so it shall pleafe you to abrogate facultie.

Hol. I will something affect the letter, for it argues facultie.

Natb. This is a gift that I have simple: simple, a fooliish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, Ideas, apprehensions, motions, resolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourish'd in the wombe of primaters, and delivred upon the mellowing of occasion: but the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankfull for it.

Hol. Sir, I praffe the Lord for you, and so may my pa-throners, for their Sonnes are well tutor'd by you, and their Daughters profit very greatly under you: you are a good member of the common-wealth.

Natb. Me becle, If their Sonnes be ingenious, they shall Cl.Marry M. Schoolmaster, hee that is likest to a hoghead.

Nath. Of peruing a Hoghead, a good luther of conceit in a turph of Earth, Fire enough for a Flint, Pearle enough for a Swine: 'tis prettie, it is well.

Iap. Good Master Parfon be so good as reade mee this Letter, it was giuen mee by Cifard, and fert mee from Doez Arrmato: I befeech you reade it.

Nath. Facile precor gellida, quando pecas omnia hab umbras ruminas, and so forth. Ah good old Mantuan, I may speake of thee as the trauerle doth verfe, 'veni, veniam, venia, non te vult, non te pertecet. Old Mantuan, old Mantuan. Who vnderhandeth thee not, veg fol la mi fa: Vnder pardon sir, What are the contents? or rather as Horace lays in his, What my soule veres.

Hol. I sir, and very learned.
Nath. Let me haere a thinf, a flanze, a verfe, Legge do- mine.

If Loue make me forworne, how shall I sweare to loue? Ah newer faith could hold, if not to beautie vowed. Though to my felfe forworn, to thee Jle faultfull proue. Thofe thoughts to mee were Okes, to thee like Oifers bowed.

Which not to anger bent, is musique, and fweet fire. Cecettall as thou art, Oh pardon loue this wrong. That fings heauen praffe, with fuch an earthly tongue. Ped. You finde not the apothephas, and fo misfe the accent. Let me fuperfune the cangenet.

Tear Ladiships in all defred imploymt, Berowme.

Per. Sir Horfeferes, this Berowme is one of the Votaries with the King, and here he hath framed a Letter to a fe- quent of the stranger Queens; which accidently, or by the way of progredius, hath miscarried. Trip and

Ped. Sir tell not me of the Father, I doe colourable colours. But to returne to the Verfes, Did they pleae you Sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Maruoules well for the pen.

Ped. I do dine to day at the fathers of a certaine Pu- pill of mine, where if (being repast) it shal pleae you to gratifie the table with a Grace, I will on my prouifuall I have with the parents of the forefaid Childe or Pupill, vndertake your bien vounts, where I will proue thofe Verfes to be very undernour, neither fauouring of Pootrie, Wit, nor Invention. I befeech your So- ciety.

Not. And thanke you to: for societe (faith the text) is the happinffe of life.

Ped. And certes the text moft infallibly concludes it. Sir I do incite you too, you shall not fay me nay: paucu verbus.

Away, the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation.

Enter Berowme with a Paper in his hand, alone.

Bera. The King he is hunting the Desre, I am courting my felfe.

They haue pitched a Toyle, I am toyling in a pytch, pitch that defilies; defile, a foule word: Well, let thee downe forrow; fo for they fay the foule fald, and fo fay I, and I the foule: Well proued wit. By the Lord this Loue is as mad as Saiir, it kils fheep, it kils mee, I a fheeper. Well proued againe a my fide. I will not loue; if I do hang me; yfaith I will not. O but her eye: by this light, but for her eye, I would not loue her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I doe nothing in the world but lye, and lye in my throte. By heauen I doe loue, and it hath taught mee to Rime, and to be mallowie: and here is part of my Rime, and heere my mallicolle. Well, the hath one a my Sonnets already, the Clowme bore it, the Foulle fent it, and the Lady had it: fweet Clowme, fweete- ter Foule, fweeteft Lady. By the world, I would not care a pin, if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper, God glue him grace to grone.

He stands afeide. The King entreats.

Kin. Ay mee!

Ber. Shot by heauen: proceede fweet Cupid whom I haft thump him with thy Birdbolt vnder the left papin faith secrets.

King. So sweete a kiffe the golden Sunne guies not, To thofe fresh morning drops upon the Rofe.

As thy eye beams, when their freth raye haue fmut.

The night of dew that on my cheekes douile fowes.

Nor fhines the filver Moone one halfe fo bright.

Through the transparent buttoe of the drepe.

As doth thy face throughe teares of mine giue light:

Thou thinkest in euery teare that I doe wepe,

No drop, but as a Coach doth carry the.

So ridest thou triumphing in my woe.

Do but behold the teares that dwell in me,

And they thy glory through my giere will flow:

But
But do not loue thy selfe, then thou wilt keepe
My teares for glaifes, and still make me wepe.
O Queene of Queenes, how farre doth thou excell,
No thought can thinke, nor tongue of mortall tell.
How shall the know my griefes? Ile drop the paper.
Sweet leaves shadie folly, who is he comes here?

Enter Long auall. The King steps aside.
What Long auall, and reading : liken care.
Ber. Now in thy likenesse, one more foole appeare.
Long. Ay me, I am forsworne.
Ber. Why he cometh in like a periure, wearing papers.
Long. In loue I hope, sweet fellowship in flame.
Ber. One drunckard loues another of the name.
Lon. Am I the first I have beena'ld so? (know.
Ber. I could put thee in comfort, not by two that I
Thou art the triumph'd, face corner cap of societie.
The shape of Loues Tiburine, that hang vp simplicite.
Lon. I fear thee fubborn lines lack power to moue.
O sweet Maria, Empresse of my Loue,
These numbers will I teare, and write in profe.
Ber. O Rimes are gards on wanton Capides hole,
Disguise not his Shop.
Lon. This name shall goe. He reads the Sonnet.
Did not the heavenly Rotteride of thine eye,
"Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,
Perfongs my heart to this false periure?"
Peruse for thee brake defrance not punishment.
A Woman I forswore, but I will prove,
Thou being a Goddesse, I forswore not thee.
My Vew was earthly, thou a heavenly Loue.
Thy grace being gaitd doth cure all difficrce in me.
Peruse are but breath, and breath a vapour is.
Then thou faire Sun, which on my earth doth shine,
Exaltd this vapour vppon thee it is:
If broken then, it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke, What foole is to fowe,
To lofe an oath, to win a Paradise?
Ber. This is the bluer venine, which makes fles hy deity.
A greene Goose, a Coddell, pure Idletry.
God amen vs, God amen, we are much out o' th'way.

Enter Domaine.
Lon. By whom shall I find this (company?) Stay.
Ber. All kid, all hid, an old infant play.
Like a demie God, here fit I in the skie,
And wretched fooleis secret hidefuly ore-eye.
More Sacks to the myll. O heuement I have my wifh, Dumaine transform'd, faire Woodcocks in a dill.
Dum. O moft diuine Kate.
Ber. O moft prophane coccobre.
Dum. By heaven the wonder of a mortall eye.
Ber. By earth she is not, corpordall, there you lye.
Dum. Her Amber haires for foule hath amber coted.
Ber. An Amber coloured Rauen was well noted.
Dum. As vighted as the Cedar.
Ber. Stoope I fay, her shoulder is with-child.
Dum. As faire as day.
Ber. I as some daies, but then no funne must shine.
Dum. O that I had my wifh?
Lon. And I had mine.
Kin. And mine too good Lord.
Ber. Amen,so I had mine : is not that a good word?
Dum. I would forget her, but a Feuer she Raignes in my blood, and will remembred be.
Ber. A Feuer in your blood, why then incision.
Would let her out in Sawcres, sweet mifirifion.
Dum. Once more Ile read the Ode that I have wriete.
Ber. Once more Ile marke how Loue can vary Wit.

Domains reads bis Sonnet.
On a day, alack the day:
Loue, whose Month is every May,
Spied a blosisme paffing faire,
Playing in the winton ayre:
Through the Veluet, leaves the winde,
All vnforme, can paffage finde.
That the Louer jelt to death,
Wife himselfe the heavenly breath.
Ayre (quoth he) thy cheeks may blowe,
Ayre, would I might triumph fo.
But alacke my knight a faire corner cap of societie,
Nere to plucke thee from thy thron.
Vow alacke for youth vnmeetes,
Teath fo apt to plucke a sweet.
Doe not call it fune in me,
That I am forsworne for thee,
Thou for whom Loue would favore,
Ino but an Echop were,
And denie himselfe for loue.
Turning mortall for thy Loue.

This will I send, and something else more plaine.
That shall expresse my true-loues faining paine.
O would the King, Beroone and Long auall,
Were Louen too, ill to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note:
For none offend, where all slicke doe dote.
Lon. Domaine, thy Loue is farre from charlilie,
That in Loues griefe defir'd societie:
You may looke pale, but I should blueth I know,
To be ore-hoard, and taken napping so.
Kin. Come frst, you blueth so his, your cafe is such,
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You do not loue Maria? Long auall,
Did neuer Sonnet for her fake compile.
Nor neuer lay his wreathed armes athwart
His louing bosome, to keepe downe his heart.
I have bene cleefly throwed in this bath,
And marketh you both, and for you both did blueth.
I heard your guilty Rimes, obser'd your fashion:
Saw righeese rekke from you, noted well your paffion.
Aye me, fayes one! O Ioue, the other crye!
On her haires were Gold, Chriftall the others eyes.
You would for Paradise breake Faith and troth,
And Ioue for your Loue would infringe an oath.
What will Beroone say when that he shall hear
Faith infringed, which fuch zeale did fware.
How will he fcone? how will he fpned his wit?
How will he triumph, leape, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that euer I did fee,
I would not have him know so much by me.
Ber. Now rep I forth to whip hypocrifie.
Ah good my Ledge, I pray thee pardon me.
Good heart, What grace halfe thou thus to reprove
These wormes for louing, that art mort in love?
Your eyes doe make no couches in your teares.
There is no certaine Princesse that appears,
You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hateful thing:
Tush, none but Minrels like of Sonnetteing.
And are you not ashamed? I say, are you not
Loues Labour's lost.

All three of you, to be thus much ore'hot?
You found his Moth, the King your Moth did fee:
But I a Beame doe finde in each of thre.
O what a Scene of fool'ry have I seen,
Of fighs, of grones, of sorrow, and of teene:
O me, with what thrift patience have I fat,
To fee a King transformed to a Grat?
To fee great Hercules whipping a Gigge,
And profound Solomon tuning a lygge.
And Neptun play at puth pin with the boyes,
And Cetticle Tyron laugh at idle toyes.
Where lies thy griefe? O tell me good Dommaine;
And gentle Longaunell, where lies thy paine?
And where my Liedges? all about the brest:
A Candle ho!
Kin. Too bitter is thy left.
Are wee betrayed thus to thy over-view?
Ber. Not you by me, but I betrayed to you.
I that am honest, I that hold it finne
To breake the vow I am ingaged in.
I am betrayed by keeping company
With men, like men of inconstancie.
When shall you fee me write a thing in rime?
Or gone for Iane? or spend a minutes time,
In prunning me, when shall you heere that I will prase a hand, a foot, a face, an eye: a gate, a flate, a brow, a brest,
a watch, a legge, a limme.
Kin. Soft, Whither a way so faft?
A true man, or a theafe, that gallops fo.
Ber. I post from Loue, good Louer let me go.

Enter Lagonetta and Clowse.

Lag. God blesse the King.
Kin. What Prefent haft thou there?
Clo. Some certaine treafon.
Kin. If it marre nothing neither, the treafon and you goe in peace away together.
Lag. I brieefh your Grace let this Letter be read,
Our perfon mis-doubts it: it was treafon he said.

Kin. Berewes, read it ouer. He reads the Letter.
Kin. Where hadst thou it?
Lag. Of Cypard.
King. Where haft thou it?
Cyp. Of Dun Abrandelle, Dun Abrandelle.
Kin. How now, what is in you? why doft thou tear it?
Ber. A toy my Liedge, a toy: your grace needes not fear it.
Lag. It did moue him to paffion, and therefore let's hear it.

"Dum. It is Berewes writing, and here is his name.
Ber. Ah you whereon loggethead, you were borne to doe me shame.
Guilty my Lord, guilty: I confesse, I confesse.
Kin. What?
Ber. That you three fooles, lackt mee fool, to make vp the meffe.
He, he, and you, and I you, and I, are picke-purfes in Loue, and we delurce to die.
O diemisse this audience, and I shall tell you more.
"Dum. Now the number is euen.
Berewes. True, true, we are fowre: will thefe Turtles be gone?
Kin. Hence fir, away.
Clo. Walk aside the true folkes, & let the traytors flay.

Ber. Sweet Lords, sweet Louers, O let vs imbrace,
As true we are as fleth and bloud can be,
The Sea will ebebe and flowing, heauen will hew his face:
Young bloud doth not obey an old decree.
We cannot crofte the caufe why we are borne:
Therefore of all hands mutt we be forsworne.

King. What, did thefe rent lines thow some louse of thine?

Ber. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heavenly
That (like a rude and fauage man of Ande.)
At the first opening of the gorgeous Eaf,
Bowses not his vaffal head, and ftruken blinde,
Kiffes the bafe ground with obedient breath?
What peremptory Eagle-fightefed eye
Dares looke vpn the heauen of her brow,
That is not blinded by her malefic?

Kin. What zale, what furie, hath inspir'd thee now?
My Loue (her Miftres) is a gracios Moone,
Shee (an attending Starre) scarce feene a light.
Ber. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Berewes,
O, but for my Loue, day would turne to night,
Of all complexions the cul'd forseralnty,
Doe meet as at a faire in her faire checke,
Where feuenall Worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants, that want it felle doth feecke.
Lend me the flourith of all gentle tongues,
Fie painted Bethericke,O the needs it not,
To things of fale, a tellers praffe belongs:
She paffes praye, then praye too short doth blot.
A withered Hermithe, fluetyre winters worn,
Might fhaue off fifie, looking in her eye:
Beauty doth varieth Age, as it new bornes,
And glues the Crutch the Cradles infaunlt:
O 'tis the Sunne that maketh all things shine.

King. By heauen, thy Loue is blacke as Ebionie, Berew. Is Ebionie like her? O word divine?
A wife of fuch wood were felicate.
O who can glue an oth? Where is a booke?
That I may fwear Beauty doth beauty lacke,
If that she learnt not of her eye to looke:
No face is faire that is not full fo blacke.

Kin. O paraide, Blacke is the badge of hell,
The hue of cunning, and the Schooles of night:
And beauties creft becomes the heauens well.
Ber. Diuels foundest tempt refembling spirits of light.
O if in blacke my Ladies browes be deckt,
It murmures, that painting vferping halfe
Should ramnit doters with a fell apiece.
And threfore is the borne to make blackes faire.
Her favoure turns the fashion of the days,
For native bloud is counted painting now:
And therefore red that would avoide diaprasi,
Paints it felle blackes, to imitate her brow.

"Dum. To look like her are Chinnie-sweeper blacke.
Lan. And fince her time, are Colliers counted bright.
King. And a Epifcop of their sweet comexation crake.
Dum. Dark needes no Candles now, for dark is light.
Ber. Your midrefses dare neuer come in raine,
For feare their colours should be blown away.

Kin. Iwere good yours did for fir, to tell you plaine,
I finde a fairer face not wath to day.
Ber. Ile proue her faire, or talke till dooms-day here.

Kin. No Diuell will fright thee then so much as thee.
Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuffe fo dere.
Lan. As hot, his head's thy loue, his foot and her face fee.
Ber. O if the streets were pased with thine eyes, Her

Enter the Pedant, Curate and Dull.

Pedant. Saudit quid justificat.

Curat. Praie God for you sir, your reasons at dinner have bene sharper & fententious pleasent without furcility, witty without affection, audacious without improperity, learned without opinion, and strange without herefi: I did conuerse this quantum day with a companion of the Kings, who is intituled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Avarnato.

Ped. Nunc humilium tangam te. His humour is lofty, his difcourse peremptorie: his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gate maiestical, and his generall behavour vaine, ridiculous, and thrafonical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too peregriant, as I may call it.

M 2.

Curat.
Carat. A most singular and choifie Epithat,
\textit{Draw out his Table-book.}

Peda. He draweth out the thred of his verbofity, fir then the flaple of his argument. I abhor such pha-natical phantastms, such infociable and poynt double companions, such rackers of ortagaphie, as to speake dout fine, when he should say doubt; det, when he shold pronounce debt; d\textit{e} b\textit{t}, not \textit{det}; he clepeth a Cali, Calue, halle, haufe; neighbour \textit{vocatur} nebour; neig abreuned net: this is abominable, which he would call abomini-ablecit infrunuthe me of infamie: ne intellig domine, to make frantick, lunaticke?

Cura. Laus deo, bene intellige.

Peda. \textit{Borne born for bron prifion, a little scratcht; twill serue.}

\textit{Enter Bragart, Boy.}

Carat. \textit{Vide ne quis veniat?}

Peda. \textit{Vide, & gandi.}

Brag. \textit{Chira.}

Peda. \textit{Hau, Chira, not Sirra?}

Brag. \textit{Men of peace well inquired.}

Ped. \textit{Most militarie fr futilation.}

Boy. They have beene at a great feast of Languages, and ilone the kraps.

Clew. O they have lia'd long on the almes-basket of words. I maruell thy M, hath not eaten thee for a word, for thou art no loong by the head as honorificabilitudintitubus: Thou art easier swallowed then a flapdra-gon.

Page. Peace, the peale begins.

Brag. Mounifter, are you not lutter?
Page. Ye\textit{t},\textit{yes}, he teaches boyes the Horne-book:
What is Ab geted backward with the horn on his head?
Peda. \textit{Bapurticia with a horse added.}

Page. Ba moft feely Sheepe, with a horse: you heare his learning.

Peda. \textit{Quis quis, thou Confomant?}

Page. The laft of the fieu Vowells if You repeat them, or the fift if I.

Peda. I will repeat them : a e i.
Page. The Sheepe, the other two concludes it ou.
Brag. Now by the falt wave of the mediteran, a sweet tutch, a quick vne we of wit, fuip snap, quick & home, it reioycych my intellect,\textit{true wit.}

Page. Offered by a childe to an olde man : which is wit-old.

Peda. What is the figure? What is the figure?
Page. Hornes.
Peda. Thou disputes like an Infant : goe whip thy Gigge.

Page. Lend me your Horne to make one, and I will whip about your infamie \textit{vnum cita} a gigge of a Cuckolds horne.

Clew. And I had but one penny in the world, thou shoulft have it to buy Ginger bread: Hold, there is the very Remuneration I had of thy Maifter, thou halfpenny parle of wit, thou Pigleon-egg of disfrecion. O & the heavens were then pleas'd, that thou wert but my Bafftrd;
What a joyfull father would thou make me? Goe to, thou haft it \textit{ad dungil}, at the fingers ends, as they faie.
Peda. Oh I smel fealle Latine, dungbel for enguim.
Brag. \textit{Artf-man preambulat}, we will bee angiled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the Charghouse on the top of the Mountaine?

Peda. \textit{Or Most the hill.}

Brag. At your sweet pleafure, for the Mountaine.

Peda. I doe fans queftion.

Brag. Sir, it is the Kings most sweet pleafure and af-fecction, to congratulatate the Princelfe at her Pauliun, in the \textit{piffer} of this day, which the rude multitude call the after-noone.

Ped. The \textit{piffer} of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and meaffurable for the after-noone: the word is well culd, chofe, sweet, and apt I doe affure you
Sir, I doe affure.

Brag. Sir, the King is a noble Gentleman, and my familiar, I doe assure ye very good friend: for what is inward betweene vs, let it paffe. I doe beeche the remember thy curteisie. I beeche thee apparell thy head:
and among other importunate & moft serverous defignes, and of great import indeed too: but let that paffe, for I must tell thee it will pleafe his Grace (by the world) sometime to leave upon my poore shoulder, and with his royall finger thus daliie with my excrement, with my mutrhor : but sweet heart let that paffe. By the world
I recollect no fable, some certaine speciall honours it pleafeth his grootness to impart to \textit{Armado} a Souldier, a man of trauell, that hath seene the world: but let that paffe; the very all of all is but sweet heart, I do implore fercretie, that the King would have mee present the Princelfe (sweet chucke) with some delightful orientation, or show, or pageant, or anticke, or fire-worke.
Now, unverfhanding that the Curate and your sweet selfe are good at such ephusions, and sodaine breaking out of myth (as it were) I have acquainted you withall, to the end to careless your affiance.

Peda. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir \textit{Hofformet}, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the potier of this day, to bee rendred by our affiantst the Kings command ; and this moft gallant, illuftrate and learned Gentleman, before the Princelfe: I lay none fo fit as to prefent the Nine Worthies.

Carat. Where will you finde men worthy enough to pretend them?

Peda. \textit{Ejus, your selfe fymef fice}, and this gallant gentleman \textit{Iudan Mackaben} & this Swaine (because of his great Emme or ioynt) shall paffe \textit{Pompey} the great, the Page \textit{Herocles.}

Brag. Pardon sir, error: He is not quantifie enough for that Worthyes thumbe, hee is not fo big as the end of his Club.

Peda. Shall I haue audience? he shall pretent \textit{Herculet} in minoritie: his enter and exit shall be stranfing a Snake; and I will have an Apologe for that purpoff.

Page. An excellent deuide: So if any of the audience hilfe, you may cry, Well done \textit{Herocles, now thou crushelt the Snake}, that is the way to make an offence gracious, though fewe have the grace to doe it.

Brag. For the reft of the Worthies?

Peda. I will play three my felfe.

Page. \textit{Triche worthy Gentleman.}

Brag. Shill I tell you a thing?
Peda. \textit{We attend.}

Brag. We will have, if this fadge not, an Antique. I beeche you follow.

Peda. \textit{Via good-man Dull}, thou haft spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor underfood none neither sir.
\textit{Page Dull}, we will employ thee.

Dull. I le make one in a dance, or so : I will play on Loues Labour's lost.

on the taber to the Worthies, & let them dance the hey.

Ped. Most Dull, honest Dull, to our sport away. Exit.

Enter Ladies.

Qu. Sweet hearts we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully.
A lady wal'd about with Diamonds : Look you,what I have from the loving King.

Rof. Madam, came nothing else along with that?
Qu. Nothing but this : yes as much louse in Rime,
As would be cram'd vp in a sheet of paper
Writ on both sides the leaves, margin and all,
That he was faile to feale on Cupids name.

Rof. That was the way to make his god-head wax :
For he hath beene five thousand yeares a Boy.

Kath. I, and a thread vnappy gallows too.

Rof. You'll neere be friends with him, a kild your fitter.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and beauty, and so she died : had the beene Light like you, of such a merrie nimble flaring spirit, the might a bin a Grandam ere she died. And so may you. For a light heart lives long.

Rof. What's your darke meaning mouse, of this light word.

Kath. A light condition in a beauty darke.

Rof. We need more light to finde your meaning out.

Kath. You'll marre the light by taking it in snuffe :
Therefore lie darkely end the argument.

Rof. Look what you dooe, you doe it fill I th darke.

Kath. So do not you, for you are a light Wench.

Rof. Indeed I waigh not you, and therefore light.

Kath. You waigh me not, O that's you care not for me.

Rof. Great reason : for paft care, is still paft care.

Kath. Well bandied both, a fet of Wit well played.

But Reallye, you have a Favour too?
Who sent it ? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew.
And if my face were but as faire as yours,
My Favour were as great, be wittes this.
Nay, I haue Verfes too, I thankke Berowme,
The numbers true, and were the numerous too,
I was the fairest goddeffe on the ground.
I am compar'd to twenty thousand faire.
O haue drawne my picture in his letter.

Qu. Any thing like?

Rof. Much in the letters, nothing in the praffe.

Qu. Beauteous as Incke : a good conclusion.

Kath. Faire as a teext B. in a Coppie booke.

Rof. Were penfals, How? Let me not die your debtor,
My red Dominicall, my golden letter.

Qu. That your face were full of Oes.

Rof. A Pox of that leff, and I befhrew all Shrewes:
But Katherine, what was sent to you
From faire Duanie?

Kath. Madame, this Gloue.

Qu. Did he not send you twaine?

Kath. Ye Madame : and moreouer,
Some thousand Verfes of a faithfull Lourer.
A huge translation of hypocrifie,
Vildly compiled, profound simplicitie.

Mar. This, and therfe Pearls, to me sent Longuail.

The Letter is too long by halfe a mile.

Qu. I thinke no leffe : Doth thou witt in heart
The Glaine were longer, and the Letter shorter.

Mar. I, or I would those hands might neuer part.

Qu. We are wife girles to mockke our Louers fo.

Rof. They are wors foole to purchase mocking fo.

That fame Berowme ile torture ere I goe,
O that I knew he were but in by th'weeke,
How I would make him fawe, and begge, and fecke,
And wait the feaon, and obferve the times,
And spend his prodgall with in bootelles rimes.
And shape his feruice wholly to my deare,
And make him proud to make me proud that leff.
So pertauer like would I o'reway his flate,
That he thold be my foole, and I his fate.

Qu. None are so furely caught, when they are catcht,
As Wit turn'd foole, fille in Wifedome hatch'd :
Hath wifdoms warrant, and the helpe of Schoole,
And Wits owne grace to grace a learned Foole ?

Rof. The blood of youth burns not with fuch exceffe,
As grudges resolt to wantons be.

Mar. Tolle in Fooles beares not fo strong a note,
As fool'y in the Wife, when Wit doth dote :
Since all the power thereof it doth apply,
To proue by Wit, worth in simplicite.

Enter Boyet.

Qu. Heere comes Boyet, and mirth in his face.

Boy. O I am hab'd with laughter, Wher's her Grace?

Qu. Thy newes Boyet ?

Boy. Prepare Madame, prepare.

Arne Wenchers arme, encounteres mounted are,
Against your Peace. Loue doth approach,dives'd :
Armed in arguments, you'll be surpris'd.
Muffer your Wits,find in your owne defence,
Or hide your heads like Cowards, and flie hence.

Qu. Saint Demas to S. Cupid: What are they,
That charge their breath againft vs ? Say fooner lay.

Boy. Vnder the coole fiaede of a Siccamore,
I thought to clofe mine eyes some halfe an houre:
When lo to interrupt my purpoe'd reff,
Toward that fiaede I might behold addreff,
The King and his companions waresly
I clole into a neighbour thicket by,
And ouer-heard, what you shall ouer-heare:
That by and by digni'd they will be heere.
Their Herald is a pretty Knauifh Page :
That well by heart hath con'd his emballege,
Action and accent di'd they teach him there.
Thus muft thou speake, and thus thy body beare.
And euer and anon they made a doubt,
Prefence mateficial would put him out:
For quoth the King,an Angell fhal thou fee :
Yet beware not thou, but speake audaciously,
The Boy reply'd, An Angell is not euill :
I should haue feared her, had the beene a devill.
With that all laugh'd, and clap'd him on the shoulder,
Making the bold wagg by their praffles bolder.

One rob'd his elboe thus, and floop'd, and fware,
A better fpeech was never fpoke before.
Another with his finger and his thumb,
Cry'd wia, we will not, come what will come.
The third he caper'd and cried, All goes well.
The fourth turn'd on the toe, and downe he felled:
With that they all did tumble on the ground,
With fuch a zealous laughter fo profound,
That in this fpleene ridiculous appears,
To check their folly faffions solemnne teares.

Qu. But what, but what, come they to visit vs?

Boy. They do, they do, and are apparel'd thus, Like Magicians, or Kunfants, as I fpee.
Their purpofe is to parle, to court, and dance,
And every one his Loue-feat will advance,
Vnto his feuerall MilTreffe: which they'll know
By fawours (external, which they did before,
Queen. And will they fe? the Gallants shall be task:
For Ladies; we will every one be maskt,
And not a man of them shall have the grace
Delight of fute, to fee a Ladies face.
Hold record, this Fawour thou shalt weare,
And then the King will court thee for his Deare:
Hold, take thou this my sweet, and give me thine,
So shall Brounaw take me for Record.
And change your Fauours too, fo shall your Loues
Woo contrary, deceed'd by these remoues.
Refa. Come on them, wear the fawours most in sight.
Keith. But in this changing, What is your intent?
Queen. The effect of my intent is to croffe theirs:
They doe it but in mocking merriment,
And mocke for mocke is only my intent.
Their feuerall clothes they vnbroke shill,
To make them melt, and their faces rich, fo infinite.
Vpon the next occacion that we meete,
With Wifages dispayd to talke and greete.
Refa. But shall we dance, if they desire vs too't?
Queen. No, to the death we will not move a foot,
Nor to their pen'd speech render we no grace:
That while 'tis joke, each turns away his face.
Boy. Why that contempt will kill the keepers heart,
And quite diuorce his memory from his part.
Queen. Therefore doe it, and I make no doubt,
The reft will ere come in, if he be out.
There's no fuch sport, as sport by sport overthrown:
To make theirs ours, and ours none but our owne.
So shall we fly mocking entended game,
And they well mock't, depart away with flame. Sound.
Boy. The Trumpet sounds, be maskt, the maskers come.

Enter Black mores with muffack, the Boy with a speech, and the reft of the Lords disfigu'd.

Page. All bailes, the riches Beaus on the earth.
Boy. Beauties no richer than rich Taffita.
Pag. A holy parcell of the fairest dames that ever turn'd their backs to mortal viewes.
The Ladies turne their backs to him.
Boy. Their eyes villainize, their eyes.
Pag. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal viewes.
Out.
Boy. True, out indeed
Pag. Out of your fawours beaunty spirit's vouchfafe.
Not to beholds.
Boy. Once to behold, rogue.
Pag. Once to behold, with your Sunne beam'd eyes,
With your Sunne beam'd eyes.
Boy. They will not anwer to that Epythire,
You were beft call it Daughter beam'd eyes.
Pag. They do not marke me, and that brings me out.
Boy. Is this your perfecution? be gon you rogue.
Refa. What would these strangers?
Know their minds Boyet.
If they doe speake our language, 'tis our will
That some paine man recount their purpofes.
Know what they would?
Boy. What would you with the Princes?
Boy. Nothing but peace, and gentle vifitation.
Refa. Why that they have, and bid them fo be gon.
Boy. She faves you have it, and you may be gon.
Kim. Say to her we have meafur'd many miles,
To treat a Meafure with you on the graffe.
Boy. They fay that they have meafur'd many a mile,
To treat a Meafure with you on this graffe.
Refa. It is not fo. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile? If they have meafur'd manie,
The meafure then of one is eafeft told.
Boy. If to come hither, you have meafur'd miles,
And many miles is the Princefle bids you tell,
How many inches doth fill vp one mile?
Boy. Tell her we meafure them by weary fteps.
Boy. She heares her felte.
Refa. How manie weare fteps,
Of many weare miles you have one-gone,
Are numbred in the truell of one mile?
Ber. We number nothing that we fpend for you,
Our duties mild for you, and frong, fo infinite.
That we may doe it fill without accompl.
Vouchfafe to fhew the fhinne of your face,
That we (like fawours) may worship it.
Refa. My face is but a Moone, and clouded too.
Kim. Blefted are clouds, to doe as fuch clouds do.
Vouchfafe bright Moone, and thefe thy fen to fhine,
(Thofe clouds remoued) upon our watterie eyne.
Refa. O valeye petitioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requets but Moonshine in the water.
Kim. Then in our meafeur, vouchfafe but one change.
Thou bidst me begge, this begging is not strange.
You may doe it fill without accompl.
Vouchfafe to fhew the fhinne of your face,
That we (like fawours) may worship it.
Refa. My face is but a Moone, and clouded too.
Kim. Blefted are clouds, to doe as fuch clouds do.
Vouchfafe bright Moone, and thefe thy fen to fhine,
(Thofe clouds remoued) upon our watterie eyne.
Refa. O valeye petitioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requets but Moonshine in the water.
Kim. Then in our meafeur, vouchfafe but one change.
Thou bidst me begge, this begging is not strange.
You may doe it fill without accompl.
Vouchfafe to fhew the fhinne of your face,
That we (like fawours) may worship it.
Refa. My face is but a Moone, and clouded too.
Kim. Blefted are clouds, to doe as fuch clouds do.
Vouchfafe bright Moone, and thefe thy fen to fhine,
(Thofe clouds remoued) upon our watterie eyne.
Refa. O valeye petitioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requets but Moonshine in the water.
Kim. Then in our meafeur, vouchfafe but one change.
Thou bidst me begge, this begging is not strange.
You may doe it fill without accompl.
Vouchfafe to fhew the fhinne of your face,
That we (like fawours) may worship it.
Refa. My face is but a Moone, and clouded too.
Kim. Blefted are clouds, to doe as fuch clouds do.
Vouchfafe bright Moone, and thefe thy fen to fhine,
(Thofe clouds remoued) upon our watterie eyne.
Refa. O valeye petitioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requets but Moonshine in the water.
Kim. Then in our meafeur, vouchfafe but one change.
Thou bidst me begge, this begging is not strange.
Loues Labour's loft.

Lu. Gall, better.
Ber. Therefore meeet.
Dy. Will you vouchsafe me to change a word?
Mar. Name it.
Dum. Fare Ladie.
Mar. Say you so? Fare Lord:
Take you that for your faire Lady.
Dy. Please it you,
As much in private, and Ile bid adieu.
Mar. What was your vizard made without a tong?
Long. I know the reason Ladie why you ask.
Mar. O for your reason, quickly sir, I long.
Long. You have a double tongue within your mask.
And would affoord my speechlesse vizard halfe.
Mar. Veale quoth the Dutch-man: Is not Veale a Calfe?
Long. A Calfe faire Ladie?
Mar. No, a faire Lord Calfe.
Long. Let part the word.
Mar. No, Ile not be your halfe:
Take all and were it, it may prove an Oxe.
Long. Look how you but your felle in these tharpe mockes.
Will you give horns chaff Ladie? Do not fo.
Mar. Then die a Calfe before your horns do grow.
Lon. One word in private with you ere I die.
Mar. Beet softly then, the Butcher heares you cry.
Boyet. The tongues of mocking wits are ween
As is the Razors edge, inuible:
Cutting a smaller hair then may be seene,
Above the senfe of fence fofensible:
Scemeth their conference, their conceits have wings,
Fleeter then arrows, bullets wind, thought, wither things.
Rof. Not one word more my maidens, break off, break of.
Ber. By heauen, all drie beaten with pure fofce.
King. Farewell madde Wenches, you have simple wits.
Exit.
Lu. Twente adieu my frozen Mofcouites.
Are thefte the breed of wits so wonderd at?
Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweete breathes put out.
Rof. Wel liking wits they haue, groffe, groffe, fat, fat.
Rof. O pouerite in wit, Kingly poor stout.
Will they not (thynke you) hang themselfes to night?
Or euer but in vizards fwee thwmselfes?
This pert Berewne was out of countnance quite.
Rof. They were all in lamentable cafes.
The King was weeping rife for a good word.
Rof. Berewne did fware himselfe out of all fute.
Mar. Dumaine was at my feruice, and his word:
No point (quoth 11) my fervant drift vwas mut.
Ka. Lord Longauill fald I came ore his hart:
And trow you what he call'd me?
Lu. Qualme perhaps.
Kat. Yes in good faith.
Lu. Go ficknese as thou art.
Rof. Well, better wits haue worn plain flatrate caps,
But will you heare; the King is my loue fowne.
Lu. And quicke Berewne hath plighted faith to me.
Kat. And Longauill was for my feruice borne.
Mar. Dumaine is mine as fure as barke on tree.
Boyet. Madam, and prettie mistrefles glue eare,
Immediately they will againe be heare
In their owne shapes: for it can never be,
They will digest this harth indignite.

Lu. Will they returne?
Boy. They will they will, God knowes,
And leape for joy, though they are lame with blowes:
Therefore change Faouris, and when they repaire,
Blow like sweet Rofes, in this summer aire.
Lu. How blow? how blow? Speake to bee vnder food.
Boy. Fare Ladies maskt, are Rofes in their bud:
Difmaskt, their damaske sweet commixture shovne,
Are Angels valling clouds, or Rofes blowne.
Lu. Auant perplexité: What shall vve do,
If they returne in their owne shapes to wo?
Rof. Good Madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,
Let's mocke them till as well knowne as difguis'd:
Let vs complaine to them what foolish were heare,
Difguis'd like Mofcouites in shapefele geare:
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow thowes, and Prologue vildely pen'd:
And their rough carriage so ridicule,
Should be prefented at our Tent to vs.
Boyet. Ladies, withdrawe: the gallants are at hand.
Rof. Whip to our Tents, as Roes runnes one Land.

Enter the King and the refit.

King. Faire sir, God faue you. Wheres the Princeffe?
Boy. Gone to her Tent.
Please it your Maiestie command me any feruice to her?
King. That the vouchsafe me audience for one word.
Boy. I will, and so will fhe, I know my Lord. Exit.
Ber. This fellow pickes vp wit as Pigeons peafe,
And ytters it againe, when few doth pleafe.
He is Wits Peeller, and retails his Wares,
At Wakes, and Waffels, Meetings, Markets, Faires.
And we that fell by groffe, the Lord doth know,
Have not the grace to grace it with such fhow.
This Gallant pinn the Wenchens on his fleece.
Had he bin Adam, he had tempted Eve.
He can cure too, and lifte: Why this is he,
That kif away his hand in courtefe.
This is the Ave of Forme, Monfieur the nice,
That when he plate at Tables, chides the Dice
In honorable tearmes: Nay he can fage
A mane most meane, and in Wabing
Mend him who can: the Ladies call him fweete.
The faires as he tredds on them fiffe his feste.
This is the flower that fmilles on euerie one,
To fhow his teeth as white as Whales bone.
And confidences that will not die in debts,
Pay him the dutie of honef-tongued Boyet.
King. A blifer on his sweet tongue with my hart,
That put Armatiion Page out of his part.

Enter the Ladie.

Ber. See where it comes, Behaviour what wer't thou,
Till this madam swhe'd thee? And what art thou now?
King. All halfe sweet Madame, and faire time of day.
Lu. Faire in all Halle is foule, as I conceuie.
King. Contruie my spechees better, if you may.
Lu. Then with me better, I will give you leaque.
We came to visit you, and purpose now
To leade you to our Court, vouchsafe it then.
Lu. This field felde hold me, and fo hold your row.
Nor God, nor I, delights in perfur'd men.
King. Rebuke me not for that which you prouoke: The
The vertue of your eie must breake my oth.

2. You nickname vertue: vice you should have spake:
   For vertues office neuer breakes men troth.
Now by my maidens honor, yet as pure
As the vnfallen Lilly, I protest,
A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yeild to be your housewes guete:
So much I hate a breaking saufe to be
Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integritie.

Kin. How Madam! Ruffians?

2. Not fo my Lord, it is not fo I sware,
   We haue had paitimes here, and plentifall game,
A meife of Ruffians left us but of late.

Kin. O you haue lie'd in defolation here,
Vnleeme, vnlistred, much to our shame.

2. Not fo my Lord, it is not fo I sware.
   We haue had paitimes here, and plentifall game,
A meife of Ruffians left us but of late.

Kin. How Madam! Ruffians?

2. I in truth, my Lord.

Trim gallants, full of Courtship and of flate.

Refa. Madam speake true. It is not fo my Lord:
   My Ladie (to the manner of the daies)
In curtenece gies vndefiering praffe.

Ber. This left is dreie to me. Gentle sweete,
Your eies makes wife things foolish when we greate
With eles beft feeling, heacuns fierie eie:
By light we looffe light; your capacitie
Is of that nature, that to your huge flores,
Wife things teeme fooffish, and rich things but poore.

Refa. This proues you wife and rich: for in my eie
   Ber. I am a foole, and full of poouerte.
Refa. But that you take what doth to you belong,
   It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.

Ber. O, I am yours, and all that I pooffe.
Refa. All the foole mine.
Ber. I cannot give you leffe.
Refa. Which of the Vizarts what it that you wore:
   Ber. Wherefore? What Vizard?

Kin. Why demand you this?

Refa. There, then, that vizard, that superfluous cafe,
   That hid the worfe, and hee'w'd the better face.

Kin. We are defir'd,

They'll mocke vs now downright.

Dn. Let vs confesse, and turne it to a left.

Refa. Amaund my Lord? Why looke's your highnes
   As fooke?

Refa. Helpe hold his browes, hee'l found: why looke you pale?
Sea-fiske I think thee comming from Mucosie.

Ber. Thus pour the staves down plaques for periury.
Can any face of brasse hold longer out?
Here and I Ladie darst thy skill at me,
Brutifie me with fornone, confound me with a flout.
Thrust thy sharpe wt quite through my ignorance.
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit:
And I will with thee none more with dance,
Nor newer more in Rusalian habit waite.
O! newer will I truuf to speeches pen'd,
Nor to the motion of a Schoole-boys tongue.
Nor newer come in vizard to my friend,
Nor woo in time like a blind-harpers Tongue,

Three-pl'd Hyperboles, spruce affection;

Figures pedanticall, thefe summer flies,
Haue blowne me full of maggot ostentation.
I do forswear them, and I heere protest,
By this white Gloue (how white the hand God knows)
Henceforth my woing minde shall be express'd
In ruffet yeas, and honest kerrie noes.
And to begin Wench, fo God helpe me law,
My loue to thee is found, fans cracke or flaw.

Refa. Sam. fans, I pray you.

Ber. Yet I have a tricke
Of the old rage: beare with me, I am fiche.
I leae it by degrees: foft, let vs fee,
Write Lord haue mercy on vs, on thofe three,
They are infect'd, in their hearts it lies:
They have the plagues, and caught it of your eyes:
These Lords are vitified, you are not ffree:
For the Lords tokens on you do I fee.

Refa. No, they are free that gave these tokens to vs.
Ber. Our flates are forfeit, festeke not to vs.
Refa. It is not fo: for how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being thefe here?
Ber. Peace, for I will not have to do with you.
Refa. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.
Ber. Speak for your felves, my wit is at an end.
King. Teach vs fweete Madam, for our rude tranfgration, some fute excufe.

Refa. The fuit is eonfufion,
Were you not heere but euyn now, difgus'd?
Kin. Madam, I was.

Refa. And were you well adu'd?
Kin. I was faire Madam.

Refa. When you then were heere,
Whit did you whisper in your Ladies ear?
King. That more then all the world I did refeft her.

Refa. When thee shall challenge this, you will refeft her.
King. Upon mine Honor no.

Refa. Peace, peace, forbear: your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.

King. Defpife me when I break this oath of mine.

Refa. I will, and therefore keepe it. Refa.

What did the Russian whipper in your care?

Refa. Madam, he fware that he did hold me deare
As precious eye-light, and did value me.

Aboue this World: adding thereto moreover,
That he vsould Wed me, or Else die my Louser.

Refa. God glue thee love of him the Noble Lord
Most honorably doth uphold his word.

King. What meane you Madam?

By my life, my troth,
I neuer fware this Ladie fuch an oth.

Refa. By heauen you did; and to confirme it plaine, you gave me this: But take it fir again.

King. My faith and thin, the Princeffe I did glide,
I knew her by this Jewell on her fleee.

Refa. Pardon me fir, this Jewell did the weare,
And Lord Berroune (I thanke him) is my deare.

What? Will you haue me, or your Pearle againe?

Ber. Neither of either, I remit both twaine.
I fee the tricke on't: Here was a content,
Knowing aforeshand of our erriment,
To dauf it like a Christmass Comedie.

Some carru-tale, some pleate-man, some flight Zanie,
Some mumble-newes, some trencer-knight, some Dick
That tops his checke in yeares, and knowes the tricke
To make my Lady laugh, when he's dispo'd;
Told our intents before: which once disclosed,
The Ladies did change Favour; and then we Following the signes, who'd but the signe of she.
Now to our pericule, to adde more terror,
We are againe forsworne in will and error.
Much upon this tis; and might not you
Forehall our sport, to make vs thus vntrue?
Do not you know my Ladies foot by'th squarer?
And laugh upon the apple of her eie?
And stand betweene her backe fir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, leifting merrile?
You put our Page out: go, you are al ow'd.
Dye when you will, a smocke shall be your throwed.
You leer upon me, do you? There's an eie
Wounds like a Leader sword.
Boy. Full merrily hath this braue manager, this careere bene run.
Ber. Loe, he is tilting straight. Peace, I have don.

Enter Clowes.

Welcome pure wit, thou part'fl a faire fray.
Clow. O Lord fir, they would kno,
Whether the three worthies shall come in, or no.
Ber. What, are there but three?
Clow. No fir, but it is vare fir,
For euery one purfents three.
Ber. And three times thrice is nine.
Clow. Not so fir, vnder correclion fir, I hope it is not so.
You cannot bag vs fir, I can affure you fir, we know what we know: I hope fir three times thrice fir.
Ber. Is not nine.
Clow. Vnder correclion fir, wee know where-vntill it doeth amoun.
Ber. By Ione, I alwayes tooke three threes for nine.
Clow. O Lord fir, it were pittie you should gettie your living by reckning fir.
Ber. How much is it?
Clow. O Lord fir, the parties themsches, the actors fir will flew where-vntill it dooth amoun: for mine owne part, I am (as they say, but to perfect one man in one poore man) Pompey the great fir.
Ber. Art thou one of the Worthies?
Clow. It pleased them to thinke me worthy of Pompey the great: for mine owne part, I know not the degree of the Worthie, but I am to fland for him.
Ber. Go, bid them prepare. Exit.
Clow. We will turne it finely off fir, we wil take some care.
King. Berowres, they will shame vs.
Let them not approach.
Ber. We are flame-proofs my Lord: and 'tis some police, to have one flew worfe then the Kings and his company.
King. I say they shall not come.
Boy. Nay my good Lord, let me ord-rule you now;
That sport best pleases, that doth least know how.
Where Zeale fhrives to content, and the contents
Dies in the Zeale of that which it preffes:
Their forme confounded, makes most forme in mirth,
When great things labouring perish in their birth.
Ber. A right description of our sport my Lord.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Annointed, I implore so much expence of thy royall sweet breath, as will vter a brace of words.
Ou. Doth this man ferue God?
Ber. Why ask ye?
Ou. He speak's not like a man of God's making.
Brag. That's all one my faire sweet honie Monarch:
For I protest, the Schoolmater is exceeding fantaffically: Too too vaine, too too vaine. But we will put it (as they say) to Fortuna delagar, I wish you the peace of minde most royall supplement.
King. Here is like to be a good preface of Worthies;
He preffents Ilieter of Troy, the Swaine Pompey the great,
the Parith Curate Alexander, Armados Page Hercules, the Pedant Iudas Macabens: And if these four Worthies in their first shewe thrieue, these four will change habites, and preffent the other fue.
Ber. There is five in the first shew.
Kin. You are deceived, tis not fo.
Ber. The Pedant, the Braggart, the Hedge-Prief, the Fool, and the Boy,

Cannot pricke out fine fuch, take each one in's vaine.
Kin. The ship is vnder failie, and here the coms amain.

Clow. I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the big.
Du. The great.
Clow. It is great fir: Pompey surnam'd the big:
That sitt in fieldes, with Target and Shield,
did make my foe to fventat:
And trembling alonge the coaft, I beare am come by chance,
And lay my Armes before the legs of the faire Laff of France.
If your Ladiship would fay thanks Pompey, I had done.
La. Great thankses great Pompey.
Clow. Tis not so much worth: but I hope I was per-fich.
I made a little fault in great.
Ber. My hat to a halfe-penie, Pompey prooues the beft Worthie.

Enter Curate for Alexander.

mander:

My Scutcheon plains declares that I am Alifander.

For it fhalt be too right.
Ber. Your nose smels no, in this moit tender fming foole, will be guen to Aiax. He will be the ninth wor-thile. A Conqueror, and afraid to speake? Runne away lie milde man, an honet man, looke you, & soon daife.

He is a maruellous good neighbour insooth, and a verie good Bowler: but for Ailflander, alas you fee, how 'tis a little ore-parted. But there are Worthies a comming,

Thus did he triangle Serpents in his Manus:

Ie flalls, Ie do it by the sword: I pray you let mee borrow my Armes againe.
Dum. Room for the incend Lynorths.
Qo. Ie do it in my hirt.
Dum. Moit refolute Pompey.
Page. Mafter, let me take you a button hole lower:
Do you not fee Pompey is vncauffling for the combat: what meane
meane you? you will lose your reputation.

Brag. Gentlemen and Souldiers pardon me, I will not combat in my shirt.

Du. You may not deny it, Pompys hath made the challenge.

Brag. Sweet bloods, I both may, and will.

Bar. What reason have you for't?

Brag. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt, I go worldwide for penance.

Boy. True, and it was informd him in Rome for want of Linnen: since when, lie be sworne he wore none, but a dishcloth of Inquisition, and that hee weares next his heart for a favoure.

Enter a Message, Mayfieur Marcade.

Mar. God faue you Madame.

Qu. Welcome Marcade, but that thou interruptst our merriment.

Marc. I am forrie Madame, for the newes I bring is haue in my tongue. The King your father

Qu. Dead for my life.

Mar. Even fo : My tale is told.

Bar. Worthes away, the Scene begins to cloud.

Brag. For mine owne part, I breath free breath: I have fene the day of wrong, through the little hole of discretion, and I will right my selfe like a Souldier.

Exeunt Worthis

Kin. How farre's your Maiflief?

Qu. Boyet prepare, I will away to night.

Kin. Madame not fo, I do beseech you stay.

Qu. Prepare I say, I thanke you gracious Lords For all your faire enteours and entreats ;

Out of a new fad-foule, that you vouchsafe,

In your rich wifdomc to excufe, or hide,

The libraill oppression of our spirits,

If ouer-boldly we have borne our felves,

In the converfe of breath (your gentlemene

Was guilte of it.) Farewell wonderlie Lord :

A heauie heart beares not a humblle tongue.

Excufe me fo, comming fo short of thankes,

For my great fault, fo easily obtain'd.

Kin. The extreme parts of time, extremelie formes

All causse to the purpoe of his fpee:

And often at his very liefc decores

That, which long proccfe could not arbitrate.

And though the mourning bow of progenie

Forbid the smiling curtefie of Loue :

The holy fale which faine it would convince,

Yet fince loues argument was firft on foote,

Let not the cloud of forrow iuffle it

From what it purpo: fince to waile friends lof,

Is not by much fo whollome profitable, As to rejoyce at friends but newly found.

Qu. I vnderstand you not, my greeses are double.

Bar. Honest plain words, beft pierce the ears of griefe

And by these badges vnderstand the King,

For your faire fakes hau we neglected time,

Plain foule play with our orthis your beautie Ladies

Hath much deformed vs, fadithing our humors

Even to the opped end of our intents.

And what in vs hath feem'd ridiculous : As Loue is full of vnbeiting fraines,

All wanton as a childie, skipping and vaine.

Form'd by the eie, and therefore like the eie.

Full of draying shapes, of habits, and of formes

Varying in subiecks as the eie doth roule,

To euerie varied object in his glance : Which partie-coated preence of loose love

Put on by vs, if in your heavenly eies,

Hauie misbecom'd our oathes and grauites.

Those heauenelie eies that looke into their faults,

Suggered vs to make : therefore Ladies

Our love being yours, the error that Loue makes

Is likewize yours. We to our felues proue false,

By being once faile, for euer to be true.

To chose that make vs both, fare Ladyes you.

And euen that falhood in it felfe a faine,

Thus purifies it felfe, and turns to grace.

Qu. We have receiv'd your Letters, full of Loue:

Your Favour, the Ambassadors of Loue,

And in our maiden counfalle rated them,

At courdship, pleasant left, and curtefie,

As bumbaff and as lining to the times:

But more devout then thence are our respects

Have we not bene, and therefore met your loues

In their owne fashion, like a merriment.

Du. Our letters Madam, would much more then left.

Len. So did our lookes.

Refa. We did not cost them fo.

Kin. Now at the latest minute of the houre,

Grant vs your loues.

Qu. A time me thinkes too short,

To make a world-without-end bargain in ;

No, no my Lord, your Grace is periur'd much,

Full of theake gullitinesse, and therefore this :

If for my Loue (as there is no fuch caufe)

You will do ought, this shall you do for me.

Your oth, I will not truft: but go with fpee:

To some forlorne and naked Hermitage,

Remote from all the pleasures of the world :

There fay, untill the twelve Celefliall Signes

Hauie brought about their annuall reckoning.

If this authore infoluble life,

Change not your offer made in heate of blood :

If froths, and fails, hard lodging, and thin weeds

Nip not the gaudie blossomes of your Loue,

But that it bearre this triall, and laft loue :

Then at the expiracion of the yeare.

Come challenge me, challenge me by these deferts,

And by this Virgin palme, now kiding thine,

I will be thine: and till that infant that

My wofull felie vp in a mourning howle,

Raining the teares of lamentation,

For the remembrance of my Fathers death.

If this thou do denie, let our hands part,

Neither intitled in the other hart.

Kin. If this, or more then this, I would denie,

To flatter vp thefe powers of mine with reft,

The fadaine hand of death clofe vp mine eie,

Hence euer then, my heart is in thy breth.

Bar. And what to me my Loue? and what to me?

Refa. You muft be purged too, your furs are rack'd.

You are attaint with faults and perjurie :

Therefore if you my fower meanes to get,

A twelvemonth fhall you fpend, and never reft,

But feeke the weare beds of people fickes.

Du. But what to me my loue? but what to me?

Kat. A wife? a heard, faire health, and honeftie,

With three-fold loue, I wish you all thefe three.

Du. O flall I say, I thanke you gentle wife?

Kat. Not fo my Lord, a twelvemonth and a day,

Ille
Loues Labour's lost.

Ile marke no words that smoothes'd woorers say.
Come when the King doth to my Ladie come:
Then if I have much loue, Ie give you some.

Dum. Ile ferue thee true and faithfully till then.

Kath. Yet swearst not, leeff ye be foriworne agen.

Loule. What file's Maria?

Mari. At the tweluemonths end,
Ile change my blakke Gowne, for a faithfull friend.

Loule. Ile stay with patience: but the time is long.

Mari. The liker you, few taller are so yong.

Ber. Studies my Ladie? Mifrefle, looke on me,
Behold the window of my heart, mine eie:
What humble sulte attends thy anfwer there,
Impose some ferulce on me for my loue.

Ref. Of haue I heard of you my Lord Bervoure,
Before I saw you: and the worlds large tongue
Proclames you for a man regale with mockes,
Full of comparisons, and wounding floures:
Which you on all easates will execute,
That lie within the merce of your wit.
To weed this Wormewood from your fruitfull braine,
And therewithall to win me, if you please,
Without the which I am not to be won:
You shall this tweluemonth terme from day to day,
Vifte the speechleffe ficks, and still converffe
With graving wretchtes: and your taskel shall be,
With all the fercce endeare of your wit,
To enforce the pained impotent to smile.

Ber. To moue wilde laughter in the throatte of death?
It cannot be, it is impossible.

Mirth cannot moue a foule in aponie.

Ref. Why's that's the way to choie a giying spirit,
Whole influence is begot of that loofe grace,
Which shallow laughing heares gue to foolish?
A lefts prosperite, lies in the eare
Of him that heares it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it: then, if sickly eares,
Dealt with the clamors of their owne deare grones,
Will heare your idle fonees; continue then,
And I will haue you, and that fault withall.
But if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I haue finde you empte of that fault,
Right loyall of your reformation.

Ber. A tweluemonth? Well I beffal what beffal,
Ile lea a tweluemonth in an Hofsitall.

Qu. I sweet my Lord, and so I take my leave.

King. No Madam, we will bring you on your way.

Ber. Our woing doth not end like an old Play:
Jacke hath not Gill: the Ladys courteze
Might wel haue made our sport a Comedie.

Kin. Come fir, it wants a tweluemonth and a day,
And then 'twil end.

Ber. That's too long for a play.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Sweet Maiefey voucheffe me.

Qu. Was not that Hector?

Dum. The worthie Knight of Troy.

Brag. I wil kiffe thy royall finger, and take leave,
I am a Votarie, I haue vow'd to Lupensta to holde the Plough for her sweet loue three years. But moft efteem ded greatneffe, wil you heare the Dialogue that the two Learned men haue compiled, in praffe of the Owle and the Cuckow? It shoule have followed in the end of our shew.

Kin. Call them forth quickely, we will do so.

Enter all.

This side is Hymen, Winter.
This Ver, the Spring: the one maintained by the Owle,
The other by the Cuckow.
Ver, begin.

The Song.

When Dafus pied, and Violets blew,
And Cuckow-buts of yellow howe:
And Ladie-smockes all fluer white,
Do paint the Medowes with delight.
The Cuckow then on euerie tree,
Mockes married men, for thus fings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow; a word of feare,
Vnpleasing to a married eare.

When Shepheardes pipe on Osten owne,
And merrie Larkes are Ploughmens clockes:
When Turtles tied, and Rookes and Dawes,
And Maidens bleach their summer smockes:
The Cuckow then on euerie tree
Mockes married men; for thus fings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow; a word of feare,
Vnpleasing to a married eare.

Winter.

When Ificles hang by the wall,
And Dicke the Shepheard blows his nalle;
And Tom beares Logges into the hall,
And Milke comes frozen home in pale:
When blood is nipt, and wales be fowle,
Then nightly fings the flaring Owle
Tu-whit to who.
A merrie note,
While greacie lone doth keele the pot.

When all sloud the winde doth blow,
And coiling drowne the Parfons faw;
And birds fit brooding in the snow,
And Marrians nofe looks red and raw:
When rosted Crabs hisse in the bowle,
Then nightly fings the flaring Owle,
Tu-whit to who:
A merrie note,
While greacie lone doth keele the pot.

Brag. The Words of Mercurie,
Are hard after the fongs of Apollo:
You that way: we this way.

Excuse annes.

FINIS.
A MIDSOMMER Nights Dreame.

Actus primus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolita, with others.

Theseus.

Ow faire Hippolita, our nuptiall hour
Drawes on space: foure happy daies bring in Another Moon: but oh, me thinke, how low
This old Moon wanes: she lingers my desires
Like to a Step-dame, or a Dowager,
Long withering out a yong mans reuenn.

Hip. Foure daies will quickly steep themselves in nights
Foure nights will quickly dream away the time:
And then the Moone, like to a fluer bow,
Now bent in heauen, shal behold the night
Of our solemnities.

The. Go Pilgrimage,

Stirre vp the Athenian youth to merriments,
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth,
Turne melancholy forth to Funerals:
The pale companion is not for our pOME,
Hippolita, I woo thee with my sword,
And wonne thy loue, doing thee injuries:
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pompe, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus and his daughter Hermia, Lyfander, and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned Duke.
The. Thanks good Egeus what's the news with thee?
Ege. Full of vexation, come I, with complaint
Against my childe, my daughter Hermia.

Stand forth Demetrius.

My Noble Lord,

This man hath my consent to marry her.

Stand forth Lyfander.

And my gracious Duke,

This man hath bewitch'd the bofore of my childe:
Thou, thou Lyfander, thou hast gien her times,
And interchandg'd love-tokens with my childe:
Thou haft by Moone-light at her window fung,
With faining voice, veris of faining love,
And fline the impression of her fantasie,
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawdes, conceits,
Knaakes, trifles, Note-gales, sweet meats(measengers
Of strong preualiment in vnhardned youth.)

With cunning haft thou dich'd my daughters heart,
Turn'd her obedience (which is due to me)
To stubborne harfheffe. And my gracious Duke,
Be it to thee will not here before your Grace,
Confent to marrie with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient pruillage of Athens:
As she is mine, I may dispoze of her;
Which shall be either to this Gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our Law,
Immediately prouided in that cafe.

The. What say you Hermia? be advis'd faire Maide,
To you your Father should be as a God;
One that compos'd your beauties; yea and one
To whom you are but as a forme in weaxe
By him imprinpted: and within his power,
To leave the figure, or disfigure it:
Demetrius is a worthy Gentleman.

Her. So is Lyfander.

The. In himselfe he is

But in this kinde, wanting your fathers voyce.
The other must be held the worthier.

Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.

The. Rather your eies must with his judgment looke.

Her. I do entreat your Grace to pardon me.

I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern my modestie
In such a preence heere to ploe ade my thoughts:
But I beseech your Grace, that I may know
The word that may befall me in this cafe,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to dye the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore faire Hermia question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether (if you yeeld not to your fathers choice)
You can endure the liuerie of a Nunne,
For aye to be in shady Cloister mee'd,
To liue a barren fitter all your life,
Chanting faint hymnes to the cold fruitlesse Moone,
Thrice blessest they that matter fo their blood,
To vndergoe such maiden pilgrimage,
But earthlier happie is the Rofe diil'd,
Then that which withering on the virgin thorne,
Growes,lines, and dies; in holie blesseftefe.
Swift as a shadow, short as any dreame,
Briefe as the lightning in the collied night,
That (in a speene) vnfolds both heaven and earth;
And ere a man hath power to lay, behold,
The lawes of darkneffe do devoure it vp;
So quicke bright things come to confusion.

Her. If then true Louers have bene euer croft,
It standes as an edict in defining:
Then let vs teach our trill patience,
Because it is a custome barefse.
As due to love, as thoughts, and dreames, and fighes,
Wifes and tears; poore Fancies followers.

Lyf. A good perfuasione; therefore hear me Hermia,
I haue a Widdow Aunt, a dowager,
Of great reuenue, and the hath no childe,
From Athens is her houfe remou'd feuen leagues,
And she refpects me, as her only Sonne:
There gentle Hermia, may I marrie thee,
And to that place, the fharpe Athenian Law
Cannot pursue vs. If thou loue me, then
Steale forth thy fathers houfe to morrow night:
And in the night, doe come, in a league without the bataue,
(Where I did meeute thee once with Helena,
To do obfervance for a morne of May)
There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lyfander,
I sweare to thee, by Cupids strongest bow,
By his left arrow with the golden head,
By the similitude of Venus Doves,
By that which knitteth foules, and propers loue,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage Queene,
When the faile Troyan vnder faile was feene,
By all the vowes that euer men haue broke,
(In number more then euer women spake)
In that fame place thou haft appointed me,
To morrow truly will I meeute with thee.

Lyf. Keepe promife loue; looke here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speed thee faire Helena, whither away?
Hel. Cal you me faire? that faire againe vnfaie,
Demetrius loues you faire: O happe faire!
Your eyes are loadfarres, and your tongues fweet ayre
More tuneable then Larkie to shepheards ear,
When wheate is greene, when hauthouse buds appear,
Sickneffe is catching: O were faie for,
Your words I catch, faire Hermia ere I go,
My eare should catch your voice, my eye, your eie,
My tongue should catch your tongues fweet melodie,
Were the world mine, Demetrius being lated,
The reft Ile gue to be to you tranflated.
O teach me how you looke, and with what art
you fway the motion of Demetrius hart.

Her. I frowne vpon him, yet he loues me still.
Hel. O that your frownes would teach my fmalles fuch skil.
Her. I glie him curfes, yet he glies me loue.
Hel. O that my prayers could fuch affection moone.
Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.
Hel. The more I loue, the more he hateth me.
Her. His folly Helena is none of mine.
Hel. None but your beauty, wold that fault wer mine
Her. Take comfort: he no more shall fee my face,
Lyfander and my felie will file this place.
Before the time I did Lyfander fee,
Seem'd Athens like a Paradise to mee.
A Midsummer night's Dreame.

O then, what graces in my Loue do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heauen into hell.
Ly. Helen, to you my minde we will vnfold,
To morrow night, when Phoebus doth behold
Her Rayer vllage, in the weary glasse,
Decking with liquid pearle, the blazed glass:
(A time that Louers flights doth still conceale)
Through Athen's gates, haue we deu'd to slaele.
Her. And in the wood, where often you and I,
Upon faint Primrose beds, were wont to lye,
Emptying our bottomes, of their countell viles:
There my Lyjander, and my furtle shall meete,
And thence from Athen's turne away our eyes
To fekke new friends and strange companions,
Farwell sweet play-fellow, pray thou for vs,
And good lucke grant thee thy Demetrius.
Keepe word Lyjander we must forsooke our fight,
From louers toile, till morrow deepde midnights.

Exit Hermia. Ly. I will my Hermia: Helena aside.
Ask him, Demetrius dore on you. Exit Lyjander.
Helo. How happy some or other some can be?
Through Athen is I am thought as faire as she.
But what of that? Demetrius thinkes not so:
He will not know, what all, but he doth know,
And as hee erres, doing on Hermia eyes;
So I, advertisinge of his qualities:
Things base and vilde, holding no quantitie.
Loue can transforme to forme and dignitie,
Loue looks not with the eyes, but with the minde,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blinde.
Nor hath loues minde of any judgement taile:
Wings and no eyes, figure, vnheedy faire.
And therefore is Loue faile to be a childe,
Because in choise he is often beguil'd,
As waggil boyes in game themselues forwaere;
So the boy Loue is perier'd every where.
For ere Demetrius looke on Hermia eyes,
He hall'd downe oasthes that he was onely mine.
And when this Halle some heat from Hermia felt,
So he diffus'd, and showres of oasthes did melt,
I will goe tell him of faire Hermia flight:
Then to the wood will be, to morrow night
Purse her; and for his intelligence,
If I haue thankes, it is a deere expence:
But herein meanes I to enrich my paine,
To save his fight thither, and backe again.

Exit.

Enter Quince the Carpenter, Snug the Juyner, Bottom the Weaver, Flute the bellower-mender, Snout the Tinker, and Starveling the Taylor.

Quin. Is all our company heere?
Bot. You were bett to call them generally, man by man, accounting to the scrip.

Quin. Here is the crolwe of every mans name, which is thought fit through all Athen's, to play in our Enterlude before the Duke and the Dutches, on his wedding day at night.
Bot. First, good Peter Quinces, by what the play treats on: then read the names of the Actors: and so grow on to a point.

Quin. Marry our play is the most lamentable Comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisbe.
Bot. A very good peace of worke I assure you, and a merry. Now good Peter Quinces, call forth your Actors by the crolwe. Matters spred your felues.

Quin. Answere as I call you. Nick Bottom the Weaver.

Bottom. Ready; name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quin. You Nick Bottom are set downe for Pyramus.
Bot. What is Pyramus, a louer, or a tyrant?

Quin. A Louer that kills himselfe most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will aske some tears in the true performing of it; if I do it, let the audience looke to their eies: I will moue thernes: I will condole in somme measure. To the rest yet, my chief humour is for a tyrant. I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to teare a Cat in, to make all spilt the raging Rocks; and shivering shocks shall break the locks of prion gates, and Pithon's carre shall shone from farre, and make and marre the foolish Fates. This was lofty. Now name the rest of the Players. This is Ercles vaine, a tyrants vaine: a louer is more condescending.

Quin. Franch Flute the bellower-mender.
Flu. Heere Peter Quinices.

Quin. You must take Thebbee on you.
Flu. What is Thebbee, a wandering Knight?

Quin. It is the Lady that Pyramus must loue.

Flu. Nay faith, let not mee play a woman, I haue a beard comming.

Quin. That's all one, you shall play it in a Make, and you may speake as small as you will.

Bot. And I may hide my face, let me play Thebbee too: Ie speake in a monfrous little voyce; Thibin, Thibes, th Pyramus my louver deare, thy Thibes deare, and Ladie deare.

Quin. No no, you must play Pyramus, and Flute, you Thibin.
Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling the Taylor.
Star. Heere Peter Quinces.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thibbes mother?

Tom Snout, the Tinker.
Snoout. Heere Peter Quinices.

Quin. You, Pyramus father; my self, Thibes father;
Snagge the Iuyner, you the Lyons part: and I hope there is a play fitted.

Snag. Have you the Lyons part written? pray you if be, give it me, for I am flow of fludie.

Quin. You may doe it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let mee play the Lyon too, I will roare that I will doe any mans heart good to heare me. I will roare, that I will make the Duke say, Let him roare again, let him roare again.

Quin. If you should doe it too terribly, you would frighte the Dutcheffe and the Ladies, that they would shriake, and that were enough to hang vs all.

All. That would hang vs euery mothers sonne.

Bottom. I grant you friends, if that you should frighte the Ladies out of their Witteres, they would have no more discretion but to hang vs: but I will aggrauate my voyce so, that I will roare you as gentely as any fucking Doue; I will roare and twere any Nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus, for Piran-

N 2
A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Enter a Fairie at one door, and Robin good-fellow at another.

Rob. How now spirit, whether wander you?

Fai. Ouer hill, ouer dale, through boughs, through brier, ouer parke, ouer pale, through flood, through fire, I do wander euery where, twitter then y Moons sphere; I and Ierue the Fairy Queene, to dew her orbs upon the Cowflips tall, her pen-fomers bee, (green.) In their gold coats, spots you fee, Thofe be Rubics, Fairies fauors, In thofe freckles, live their fauors, I must go feeke some dew drops here, And hang a pearle in euery cowflips ear, Farewel thou Lob of spiritis, Ile be gon, Our Queene and all her Elues come heere anon.

Rob. The King doth keepe his Reuels here to night, Take heed the Queene come not within his sight, For Oberon is fallingell and wrath, Because that she, as her attendant, hathe A louely boy flowne from an Indian King, She never had so sweet a changeling, And jealous Oberon would have the childe Knight of his traine, to trace the Forrests wilde, But the (perforce) with holds the loued boy, Crownes him with flowers, and makes him all her ly, And now they never meeete in grove, or greene, By fountaine cleere, or spangled star-light sheene, But they doe floure, that all their Elues for feare Creep into Acornes caps and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mischief your shape and making quite, Or else you are that threwd and knauish spirit Cal'd Robin Good-fellow. Are you not hee, That frights the maidens of the Villagere, Skim milke, and sometimes labour in the querne, And bodefull make the breathlesse huswife chore, And sometime make the drinke to beare no barme, Mileade night-wanderers, laughing at their harme, Thofe that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Pucke, You doe their worke, and they shal have good lucke. Are not you hee?

Rob. Thou speak'st aright; I am that merrie wanderer of the night: I left to Oberon, and make him smile, When I a fat and beane fed horfe beguile, Neighing in likenesse of a filly foale, And sometime lurke I in a Gooseys bole, In very likenesse of a rosalid crab: And when she drinks, against her lips I bob, And on her wethered dewlop poure the Ale. The wilie Aunt telling the faddled tale, Sometime for three foot foole, milkesketh me, Then flip I from her bum, downe topples the, And tiloure cries, and falls into a coffee. And then the whole quire hold their hips, and luffe, And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swarea, A merrier houre vs never waited there. But roome Fairy, heere comes Oberon.

Fai. And heere me my Miftris: Would that he were gone.

Enter the King of Fairies at one doore with bis traine, and the Queene at another with hers.

Ob. Ill met by Moone-light, Proud Tytania.

Qy. What, leauous Oberon? Fairy skilp hence. I have forsworne his bed and companie.

Ob. Tarry ruft Wanter; am not I thy Lord?

Qy. Then I must be thy Lady: but I know When thou wvast flone away from Fairy Land, And in the shape of Ceres fate al day, Playing on pipes of Corne, and verting louse To amorous Philida. Why art thou heere Come from the farthest steepe of Indie? But that forsooth the bouncing Amanon Your buskin'd Miftrife, and your Warrior louse, To Thefien must be Wedded; and you come, To glue their bed ly and prosperfite.

Ob. How canst thou thus for Thame Tytania, Glance at my credite, with Hippolita? Knowing I know thy louse to Thefien? Daf't thou not leave him through the glimmering night From Perseus, whom he rauiled? And make him with fire Esels brake his faith With Ariadne, and Atropa?

Qy. These are the forgeries of jealous, And never since the middle Summers spring Met vve on hille, in dale, forrest, or mead, By paued fountaine, or by rufie brooke, Or in the beache margent of the sea, To dance our rингlets to the whilling Wind, But vith thy braules thou haft disturbed our sport. Therefore the Windes, piping to vs in vaine, As in reooke, have yack'd a vp from the sea. Contagious fogges: Which falling in the Land, Hath euery petty Riner made fo proud, That they have ouer borne their Continents. The Oxe hath therefore stretc'h'd his yaske in vaine, The Ploughman loft his sweat, and the greene Corne Hath roto, ere his youth attaine a beard: The fold fandles empty in the drowned field, And Crowes are fittet with the murrion flocke,
The nine mens Morris is fild vp with mud,
And the quinet Mazes in the wanton greene,
For lacke of tred are vndistinguishable.
The humane mortals want their winter heere,
No night is now with hymne or caroll bleft;
Therefore the Moone (the gouernor of floods)
Pale in her anger, washes all the aire;
That Rheumsticke diases doe abound.
And through this diatemperture, we fee
The feaons alter; hoared headled frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson Rose,
And on old Hymen chime and Ice crowne,
An odorous Chaplet of sweet Sommer buds
Is as in mockery fet. The Spring, the Sommer,
The chiling Autumn, angry Winter change
Their wonted Loeeries, and the mazed world,
By their increade, now knowns not which is which;
And this fame progeny of euilla,
Comes from our debate, from our diftension,
We are their parents and original.
Ober. Do you amend it then, it lies in you,
Why should Titania croffe her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changing boy,
To be my Hancheman.
Qu. Set your heart at rest,
The Fairy land buyes not the childe of me,
His mother was a Votere of my Ordes,
And in the spiced Indian aire, by night
Full often hath the goippi of my fide,
And fat with me on Neptune yellow fands,
Marking th'embarke tradors on the flood,
When we have laught to fee the falles conceive,
And grow big belliad with the wanton winde:
Which she with prettly and with swimming gate,
Following (her wonbe then rich with my yong ifquire)
Would imitate, and falle upon the Land,
To fetch me tribes, and returne againe,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandize.
But the being mortall, of that boy did die,
And for her fake I doe reare vp her boy,
And for her fake I will not part with him.
Ob. How long within this wood intend you stay?
Qu. Parchance till after Theseus wedding day.
If you will patiently dance in our Round,
And see our Moone-light reuels, goe vs with;
If not, then me and I will faire your haunts.
Ob. Glue me that boy, and I will goe with thee.
Qu. Not for thy Fairy Kingdome. Fairies away!
We shall chide downe right, if I longer stay.
Exc.
Ob. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from this grove,
Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Pucke come hither; thou remembret
Since once I faw upon a promontory,
And heard a Mere- made on a Dolphins backe,
Vittering fuch dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude fea grew chyll at her fong,
And certaine frases hot madly from their Spheres,
To hear the Sea-maids musicke.
Pos. I remember.
Ob. That very time I faw (but thou could not)
Flying betweene the cold Moone and the earth,
Cupid all arm'd; a certaine aime he tooke
At a faire Vefhall, throne of the Weft,
And loue his loose-shaft fmarly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hunderd thousand hearts,
But I might fee young Cupids fiery shaft
Quencht in the chaffe beamses of the wafty Moone;
And the imperiall Votreife paffed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy free.
Yet markt I where the bolt of Cupid fell.
It fell vpon a little weiferne flower ;
Before, milke-white; now purple with loues wound,
And maidens call it, Loue in idlenesse.
Fetch me that flower; the hearb I faw'd thee once,
The ioyce of it, on sleeping eye-lids laid,
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Vpon the next live creature that it fees.
Fetch me this hearbe, and be thou heere againe,
Ere the Lewathan can swim a league.
Pucke. Ille put a girdle about the earth, in forty minites,
Ober. Having once this ioyce,
Ille watch Titania, when she is asleepe,
And drop the liqour of it in her eyes:
The next thing when the waking lookses vpon,
(Be it on Lyon, Beare, or Wolfe, or Bull,
Or medling Monkey, or on bufie Ape)
Shes shall pursue it, with the soul of loue.
And ere I take this charmse off from her fight,
(As I can take it with another hearse)
Ile make her render vp her Page to me.
But who comes heere? I am insubile,
And I will ouer-heare their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following him.

Deme. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.
Where is Lyfander, and faire Hermia?
The one Ile flay, the other thyereth me.
Thou toldfed me they were fholne into this wood;
And heere am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.
Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted Adaman,
But yet you draw not Iron, for my heart
Is true as flcele. Leave you power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.
Deme. Do I enice you? do I speake you faire?
Or rather doe I not in plainett truth,
Tell you I doe not, nor I cannot love you?
Hel. And even for that doe I love thee the more;
I am your spaniell, and Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will favne on you.
Vie me but as your spaniell; spurne me, strike me,
Negleft me, lose me; onely give me leane
(Vnworthy as I am) to follow you.
What worfer place can I begin in your loue,
(And yet a place of high respect with me)
Then to be vfed as you doe your dogge.
Dem. Temp not too much the hatred of my spirit,
For I am facke when I do looke on thee.
Hel. And I am facke when I looke not on you.
Dem. You doe impeach your modesty too much,
To leuase the Citty, and commit your felle
Into the hands of one that loues you not,
To truft the opportunity of night,
And the ill counsell of a defert place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.
Hel. Your vertue is my pruelidge: for that
It is not night when I doe fsee your face.
Therefore I thinke I am not in the night,
Nor doth this wood lacke worlds of company, 150

A Midsommer nights Dreame.

For you in my respect are all the world,
Then how can it be said I am alone,
When all the world is here to looke on me?

But I'll run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,
And loose thee to the mercy of wildle leafe.

Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you;
Runne when you will, the story shall be chang'd:
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chace;
The Doe pursues the Griffin, the milde Hinde
Makes speed to catch the Tyger. Birdlike speedes,
When cowardlike pursues, and valour flies.

Demet. I will not stay thy questions, let me go;
Or if thou follow me, do not beleue,
But I shall doe thee mishcliffe in the wood.

Hel. I, in the Temple, in the Towne, and Field
You doe me mishcliffe. Eye Demetria,
Your wrongs doe fet a scandal on my fexe:
We cannot fight for lose, as men may doe;
We should be wood, and were not made to woole.
I follow thee, and make a heauen of hell;
To die upon the hand I love so well. Exit.

Ob. Fare thee well Nymph, ere he do loose this grous,
Thou shalt flie him, and he shall feele thy love.
Hait thou the flower then? Welcome wanderer.

Enter Puck.

Pack. I, there it is.

Ob. I pray thee give it me.

I know a banke where the wilde time blowes,
Where Oxflips and the nodding Violet growes,
Quite over-cannoped with luscious woodbine,
With sweete muske rodes, and with Eglandite;
There sliues Tytania, sometime of the night,
Lull'd in these flowers, with dances and delight:
And there the snaue throwes her enamell'd skinne,
Weed wide enough to rap a Fairy in,
And with the iuynce of this I theeke her eyes,
And make her full of hatefull fantasie.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grous;
A sweete Athenian Lady is in lazen
With a disdainfull youth ; annoint his eyes,
But doe it when the next thing he eplies,
May be the Lady. Thou shalt know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on,
Effect it with some care, that he may proue
More fond on her, then the vpon her love;
And looke thou meet me ere the first Cocke crow.

Pres. Fear not my Lord, your servant shall do so. Exit.

Enter Queen of Fairies, with her traine.

Queen. Come, now a Roundell, and a Fairy song;
Then for the third part of a minute hence,
Some to kill Cankers in the muske rod buds,
Some warre with Reermifl, for their heathen wings,
To make my small Elies costes, and some keepe backe
The clamorous Owle that nightly hoots and wonders
At our queint spirits : Sing me now aleepe,
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

Fairies Sing.

Sing in your sweet Lullaby,
Lullie, lullie, lullaby, lullie, lullie, lullaby;
Nectar barme, nor spoil nor charmes,
Come our lovely Lady eyes,
So good night mercy with Lullaby.
2. Fairy. Weasing Spiders come not here,
Hence you long leg'd Spinners, hence;
Beetles blacke approach not here;
Worme nor Single doe no offence.
Philomel with melody, &c.

1. Fairy. Hence away, now all is well;
One aliope, famd Concinell.
Shoo sleepe.

Enter Oberon.

Ober. What thou feelest when thou dost wake,
Doe it for thy true Louse take:
Louse and languish for his fake,
Be it Ounce, or Catte, or Beare,
Pard, or Boore with brifilt hair,
In thy eye that shall appeare,
When thou wak'th, it is thy deare,
Wake when some vile thing is neere.

Enter Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. Faire love,you faynt with wandering in y'wood,
And to speake troth I haue forgot our way:
We'll ret vs Hermia, if you thinke it good, *
And tarry for the comfort of the day.
Herm. Be it to Lysander; finde you out a bed,
For I vpon this banke will rett my head.
Lys. One tyme shall ferue as pillow for both,
One heart, one bed, two bofomes, and one troth.
Herm. Nay good Lysander, for my sake my deere
Lie further off yet, doe not lie fo neere.
Lys. O take the fence sweet, of my innocence,
Louse takes the meaning, in louses conference,
I meant that my heart vnto yours is knitt,
So that but one heart can you make of it.
Two bofomes interchanged with an oath,
So then two bofomes, and a fingle troth.
Then by your fide, no bed-roome me deny,
For lying fo, Hermia, I doe not lye.
Herm. Lysander riddles very prettily;
Now much beflow my manners and my pride,
If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lied.
But gentle friend, for love and courttefe
Lie further off, in humane moiterie,
Such separation, as may well be said,
Becomes a vertuous batchelour, and a maide,
So farre be difant, and good night sweet friend;
Thy love nere alter, till thy sweet life end.
Lys. Amen, amen, to that faire prayer, say I,
And then end life, when I end loyalty:
Here is my bed, sleepe glue thee all his reft.
Herm. With halfe that wish, the widers eyes be preft.

Enter Puck.

They sleepe.

Pack. Through the forest haue I gone,
But Athenian finde I none,
One whose eyes I might approye
This flowers force in stiring loue,
Night and filence ; who is here?
Weedes of Athens he doth weare:
This is he (by my matter said)
Despifed the Athenian maid:
And here the maiden sleepeing found,
On the danke and dartie ground.
Pretty foule, the durt is not lye
Nere, this lacke-lous, this kill-curtuefie.
Charle, vpon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charme doth owe :
When thou wak'st, let loue forbid
Sleepe his fate on thy eye-lid.
So awake when I am gone:
For I must now to Oeben.

Exit.

Enter Demetrius and Helena running.

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweete Demetrius.
De. I charge thee hence, and do not haunt me thus.
Hel. O wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.
De. Stay on thy peril, I alone will goe.

Exit Demetrius.

Hel. 0 I am out of breath, in this fond chace,
The more my prayer, the leerrer is my grace,
Happy is Hermia, wherefore the lies ;
For the hath blefed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with fault teares.
If so, my eyes are oftner women then hers.
No, no, I am as vugly as a Bear.
For beales that meeke me, strange away for feare,
Therefore no maruall, though Demetrius
Doe as a monter, fie my preience thus.
What wicked and diffloming glasse of mine,
Made me compare with Hermia spheiry euye?
But who is here? Lyfander on the ground;
Dende or asleepe? I fee no blood, no wound,
Lyfander, if you live, good frie awake.

Lyf. And run through fire I will for thy sweete fake.
Transparent Helena, nature her bowes art,
That through thy bofome makes me fee thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? oh how fit a word
Is that vile name, to perish on my fword!
Hel. Do not say so Lyfander, say not so;
What though he love your Hermia? Lord, what though?
Yet Hermia still loves you; then be content.

Lyf. Content with Hermia? No, I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her haue spent.
Not Hermia, but Helena now I love;
Who will not change a Raen for a Dose?
The will of man is by his reaon (way'd)
And reaon files you are the worthier Maide,
Things growing are not rife vntill their reafon;
So I being yong, till now ripe not to reafon,
And touching now the point of humane skill,
Reafon becomes the Marshall to my will,
And leads me to your eyes, where I oreloke
Loues stories, written in Loues richest booke.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keene mockerye borne?
When at your hands did I deferve this fcrone?
If not enough, if not enough, yong man,
That I did never, nor nor not earie can,
Deferve a sweete looke from Demetrius eye,
But you must flout my inffuficiency?
Good troth you do me wrong (good-footh you do)
In such deftinfall manner, me to woe.
But fare you well; perforce I must confesse,
I thought you Lord of more true gentenneffe,
Oh, that a Lady of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd.

Exit.

Lyf. She fees not Hermia: Hermia sleepe thou there,
And never maiit thou come Lyfander neere;

For as a ferviet of the sweetefte things
The deepest loathing to the stomache brings:
Or as the herrefies that men do leave,
Are hated most of those that did deceiue:
So thou, my ferviet, and my heresie,
Of all be hated, but the most of me;
And all my powers address your love and might,
To honour Helen, and to he her Knight.

Exit.

Her. Helpe me Lyfander, helpe me; do thy beft
To plucke this crawling serpent from my bref;
Aye me, for pitty; what a dreame was here?

Lyfander lookst, how I do quake with feare
Me-thought a serpent eate my heart away,
And yet fat smiling at his cruel prey.
Lyfander, what remou'd? Lyfander, Lord,
What out of hearing, gone? No found, no word?
Alacke where are you? speake and if you heare:
Speake of all loues; I found amost with feare.
No, then I well perceiue you are not nye,
Either death or you Ile finde immediately.

Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Clowres.

Bot. Are we all met?
Quin. Pat, pat, and here's a maruallous convenient place for our rehearfall. This greene plot shall be our stage, this hauthern brake our trying house, and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the Duke.

Bot. Peter quince?
Peter. What fault thou, bully Bottom?
Bot. There are things in this Comedy of Pyramus and Thisby, that will neuer please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill hymselfe; which the Ladies cannot abide.
How answere you that?
Snout. Berlaken, a parlous feare.
Stear. I beleue we must leave the killing out, when all is done.
Bot. Not a whit, I have a deuide to make all well. Write me a Prologue, and let the Prologue seeme to say, we will do no harme with our swords, and that Pyramus is not kill'd indeede: and for the more better assurance, tell them, that I Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottom the Weazer; this will put them out of feare.

Quin. Well, we will haue such a Prologue, and it shall be written in eight and fixe.

Bot. No, make it two more, let it be written in eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the Ladies be afeard of the Lyon?
Stear. I feare it, I promis you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with your selues, to bring in(God shiel) that Lion among Ladies,is a most dreadfull thing. For there is not a more fearfull wilde foule then your Lyon fluing: and wee ought to looke to it.

Snout. Therefore another Prologue must tell he is not a Lyon.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and halfe his face must be feene through the Lyons necke, and he himselfe must speake through, faying thus, or to the fame defect; Ladies, or faire Ladies, I would with you, or I would request.
request you, or I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a Lyon, it were pitty of my life. No, I am no fuch thing, I am a man as other men are; and there indeed let him name his name, and tell him plainly hee is Such the iony.

Quin. Well, it shall be so; but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moone-light into a chamber: for you know, Piramus and Thisby meete by Moone-light.

Sn. Doth the Moone shine that night wee play our play?

Bot. A Calenger, a Calenger looke in the Almanack, finde out Moone-shine, finde out Moone-shine.

Enter Pucke.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. What then may you leave a cafement of the great chamber window (where we play) open, and the Moone may shine in at the cafement.

Quin. 1, or else one must come in with a buch of thorns and a lanthorne, and fay he comes to disfigure, or to pre- fent the perfon of Moone-thine. Then there is another thing, we must have a wall in the great Chamber; for Piramus and Thisby (faies the story) did talk through the chinke of a wall.

Sn. You can never bring in a wall. What fay you Botome?

Bot. Some man or other muft preffent wall, and let him have fome Plater, or fome Lome, or fome rough caft about him, to dignifie wall; or let him hold his figh- ners thus: and through that cranny, hall Piramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, fit downe euery mothers fonne, and reheare your parts. Piramus, you begin; when you haue spoken your speeche, enter into that Brake, and fo euery one according to his cue.

Enter Robin.

Rob. What hempen home-spuns have we fweage- ring here, So neere the Cradle of the Fairie Queene?

What! Play toward? He be an auditor, An Actor too perhaps, if I fee caufe.

Quin. Speake Piramus; Thisby hand forth.

Pir. Thisby, the flowers of odious fowers sweete.

Quin. Odoors, odoors.

Pir. Odoors fowers sweete,
So hath thy breath, my dearer Thisby deare.

But haute, a voyce! flay thou but here a while,
And by and by I will to thee appeare. Exit. Pir. Puck. A Stranger Piramus, then ere plaid here.

Thyf. Muit I speake now?

Pet. I marry muft you. For you muft vnderhand he goes but to fee a noyfe that he heard, and it is to come a- gain.

Thyf. Most radiant Piramus, mift Lilly white of hue,
Of colour like the red rofe on triumphant bryer,
Most brisky hueneall, and eke mift lovely Jew,
As true as truift horfe, that yet would never tyre,
He meete thee Piramus, at Ninnets toome.

Pet. Ninnus toome mane: why, you muft not speake that yet; that you anfwere to Piramus: you speake all your part at once, cues and all. Piramus enter,your cue is pit; it is never tyre.

Thyf. Or as true as truift horfe, that yet would never tyre:

Pir. If I were faire, Thisby I were onely thine.
Per. O monftrous, O strange. We are hanted: pray masters, fye masters, helpe.

Pet. I leue follow you, I leue lead you about a Round, Through bogge, through buft, through brake, through Sometime a horfe Ile be, sometime a hound: (bryer,
A bogge, a headlefe beare, sometimne a fire,
And Neigh, and barke, and grunt, and rore, and burne,
Like horfe, hound, hogge, beare, at euery turne. Exit.

Enter Piramus with the Affe head.

Bot. Why do they run away? This is a knauery of them to make me afeard. Enter Souweet.

Sn. O Bottom, thou art chang'd; What doe I fee on thee?

Bot. What do you see? You see an Affe-head of your owne, do you?

Enter Peter Quince.

Pet. Bleffe thee Bottome, bleffe thee; thou art tranla- ted. Exit. Bot. I fee their knauery; this is to make an affe of me, to fright me if they could; but I will not flire from this place, do what they can. I will walke vp and downe here, and I will fing that they hall heare I am not a-fraid.

The Wooffe cooke, so blacke of hew,
With Orange-tawny bill.
The Throffe, with his note so true,
The Wren and little quill.

Tyta. What Angell wakes me from my flowrie bed?

Bot. The Finch, the Sparrow, and the Larke,
The plainfong Cuckow gray;
Whole note full many a man doth make,
And dares not anfwer, nay.

For indeede, who would set his wit to fo foolish a bird? Who would glue a bird the lye, though he cry Cuckow, neuer fo.

Tyta. I pray thee gentle mortall, fing againe,
Mine ear is much enamoered of thy note;
On the first view to fay, to swear I love thee.
So is mine eye enthralled to thy hape,
And thy faire vertues force (perforce) doth move me.

Bot. Me-thinkes mineffe, you should have little reafon for that; and yet to fay the truth, reafon and loue keepe little company together, nowadayes.
The more the pittie, that fome honest neighbours will not make them friends.

Nay, I can gleeke vpon occafion.

Tyta. Thou art as wife, as thou art beautifull.

Bot. Not fo neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to ferue mine owne turne.

Tyta. Out of this wood, do not defire to goe,
Thou halt remaine here, whether thou wilt or no.
I am a spirit of no common rate:
The Summer ftil doth tend vpon my flate,
And I doe love thee; therefore goe with me,
Ile glue thee Fairies to attend on thee;
And they hall fetch thee Jewels from the deepes,
And fing, while thou on perflied flowers doft fleep:
And I will purge thy mortal groffeneffe, for
That thou halft like an aire spirit go.

Enter Peas-blossome, Cloverow, Moch, Masterward- zard, and foure Fairies.

Fai. Ready; and I, and I, and I, Wherehall we go?

Tita. Be
A Midsummer Night's Dream.

"Thou be kinde and courteus to this Gentleman, Hop in his walkes, and gambole in his eies, Feede him with Apricocks, and Dewberries, With purple Grapes, greene Figs, and Mulberries, The hone-sbags steale from the humble Bees, And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighs, And light them at the fierie-Glow-wormes eyes, To have my love to bed, and to arise: And pluck the wings from painted Butterflies, To fan the Moone-beames from his sleepeing eies. Nod to him Eluys, and doe him curtseys."

"I.
Fac. Halle mortall, halle.
2. Fac. Halle.
3. Fac. Halle.

But I cry your worshipes mercy hardly; I befeech your worshipes name.

"Cob. Cobweb.

But I shall defire you of more acquaintance, good Master Cobweb: if I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you."

"Your name honest Gentleman?"

"Perf. Peas-blossome;
Perf. Peas-blossome.

But I pray you commend mee to mistrefe Spagii, your mother, and to master Peasfood your father. Good master Peas-blossome, I shall defire of you more acquaintance to. Your name I befeech you sir?"

"Maj. My lord the Gentleman.
Perf. Peas-blossome.

But good master Mylord seedes, I know your patience well: that fame cowardly gant-like Ox-eye had desoured many a gentleman of your house. I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now, I defire you more acquaintance, good Master Mylord-seedes."

"Titania. Come waite upon him, lead him to my bower. The Moone me-thinks, lookes with a warrte eie, And when he weepes, weepes everie little flower, Lamenting some enforced charitie. Tye vp my lovers tongue, bring him silently."

"Enter King of Pharies, solus.

Oh, I wonder if Titania be awake?
Then what it was that next came in her eie, Which the mift dote on, in extremetie."

"Enter Pucke."

Here comes my messenger: how now mad spirit, What night-rule now about this gauze mount?"

"Puck. My Misfri des monsieur is in loue, Neere to her clofe and consecrated bower, While she was in her dull and sleepeing hower, A crew of patches, rude Mechanicals, That worke for bread vpoun Athenian flats, Were met together to rehearse a Play, Intended for great Telleus nuptiall day: The slenderest thick-skin of that barren fort, Who Piramus prefented, in their sport, Forlook his Scene, and entered in a brake, When I did him at this advantage take, An Affes note I fixed on his head, Anon his Tribble must be answered, And forth my Mimmick comes: when they him spie, As Wilde-geese, that the creeping Fowler eye, Or ruffed-pated Peshes, many in fort (Riding and cawing at the gun report) Sensor them selves, and madly sweep the skye:"

So at his sight, away his fellowes flye, And at our flandre, here ore and ore one fall; He murtheres cryes, and helpe from Athenian cats. Their fene thus weake, lost with their fears thus strong, Made fenesleffe things begin to doe them wrong. For briars and thornes at their apparell stick, Some fleues, some hats, from yeelders all things catch, I led them on in this drifted fears, And left sweete Pyramus translated there: When in that moment (so it came to paffe) Tytania waked, and straightway Iou'd an Affe.

"Oh. This falls out better then I could deuide: But haue thou yet lucht the Athenian eyes, With the lowe lyue, as I did bid thee doe?"

"Rob. I tooke him sleepeing (that is finneth to) And the Athenian woman by his side, That when he wake't, of force the musk be yeede."

"Enter Demetrius and Hermia."

"Oh. Stand clofe, this is the same Athenian.
Rob. This is the woman, but not this the man."

"Dem. O why rebuke you him that loves you? Lay breath in bitter on your bitter toe."

"Herm. Now I but chide, but I should vie thee worfe. For thou (I fear) haft given me cause to curse, If thou haft saine Lyfander in his sleepe, Being ore choosen in bloud, plunge in the deep, and kill me too:
The Sunne was not so true vnto the day, As he to me. Would he have stabbed away, From sleepeing Hermia? He believe as soon This whole earth may be borth, and that the Moone May through the Center crepe, and to dissipe Her brothers noontide, with th' Antipoetes. It cannot be but thou haft murded him, So shoulde a murtherer looks, so dead, so grim."

"Dem. So shoulde the murderers looks, and so shoulde I, Pierced through the heart with thine harsh cruelty: Yet you the murderer looks as bright as cleare, As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere.
Herm. What's this to my Lyfander? where is he?
Ah good Demetrius, wilt thou glue him me?"

"Dem. I'd rather glue his caraff to my hounds."

"Herm. Out dog, out cur, thou driu't me past the bounds Of maidens patience. Haft thou slain him then?
Henceforth be never numbred among men.
Oh, once tell true, even for my sake, Durst thou a lookt vpoun him, being awake? And haft thou kill'd him sleepeing? O brave tutch: Could not a worme, an Adder do so much? An Adder did it: for with double tongue Then thine (thou serpente) neueradder rung."

"Dem. You spend your passion on a milpried mood, I am not guilty of Lyfanders blood:
Nor is he dead for ought that I can tell."

"Herm. I pray thee tell me then that he is well.
Dem. And if I could, what should I get therefore?"

"Herm. A priulidge, never to see me more; And from thy hated preference part I see me no more Whether he be dead or no."

"Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vaine, Here therefore for a while I will remaine, So forrowes theseinesse doth heavier growe: For debt that bankrout flip doth sorrow owe, Which now in some flight measure it will pay,
Enter Puck.

Puck. Captaine of our Fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, mitlooke by me,
Pleading for a Lovers fee.
Shall we their fond Pageant fee?
Lord, what foules these mortals be!
Oh, Stand aside: the noyse they make,
Will caufe Demetrius to awake.

Puck. Then will two at once woe one,
That muft needs be sport alone:
And those things doe beit pleas me,
That befall preposterously.

Enter Lysander and Helena.

Lyf. Why should you think I should woe in sport?
Scorne and derision never comes in teares;
Looke when I vow weeppe; and vowes doe borne,
In their nature all truth appears.
How can these things in me, seeme sorne to you?
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true.

Hely. You doe advance your cunning more & more,
When truth kills truth, O diuellish hoile tray!
These vowes are Hermias. Will you glue her ore?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh,
Your vowes to her, and me, (put in two scales)
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.

Lyf. I had no judgmeunte, when to her I swore.
Hely. Nor none in my minde, now you glue her ore.

Lyf. Demetrius loves her, and he loues not you. A kw.

Did. O Helen, goddeffe, nimph, perfect, divine,
To what my loue, shall I compare thine eyene?
Christaffil is mudy, O how ripe in show,
Thy lips,those kifing cherrie, tempting grow!
That pure concealed white, high Taurus snow,
Fan’d with the Eastern winde, turns to a crow,
When thou holdest vp thy hand. O let me kiffe
This Princeffe of pure white, this seale of blifte.

Hely. O sport! O hell! I see you are all bent
To fet against me, for your merriement;
If you were ciuil, and knew curteiue,
You would not doe me thus much injury.

Can you not hate me, as I know you doe,
But you mult ioyne in soules to mocke me to?
If you are men, as men you are in how,
You would not vie a gentle Lady fo;
To vow, and iure, and superpraze my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.
You both are Rivals, and loue Hermias;
And now both Rivals to mocke Helena.
A trim exploit, a manly enterprise,
To conjure teares vp in a poore maids eyes,
With your derision; none of noble fort,
Would fo offend a Virgin, and extort;
A poore soules patience, all to make you sport.

Lyf. You are vnkind Demetrius;be not fo,
For you loue Hermias; this you know I know;
And here with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermias loue I yeeld you vp my part,
And yours of Helena, to me bequeath,
Whom I do loue, and will do to my death.

Hely. Neuer did mockers want more idle breth.

Did. Lysander, keep thy Hermia, I will none:
If ere I lou’d her, all that loue is gone,
My heart to her, but as guiffe-wit solomn’d,
And now to Helen it is home return’d,
There to remaine.

Lyf. It is not fo.

Did. Diaprage not the faith thou doft not know,
Leit to thy perill thou abide it deare.
Looke where thy Loue comes,yonder is thy deare.

Enter Hermia.

Hely. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,
The eare more quicke of apprehension makes,
Wherein it doth impair the seeing fense,
Ir pales the hearing double recom pense.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander found,
Mine eare (I thank it) brought me to that found.
But why vnkindly dint thou leave me so?
(To go?)

Lys. Why should you hee flay whom Looe doth preffe
Her. What loue could preffe Lysander from my side?

Lys. Lysanders love (that would not let him bide)
Faire Helena; who more engiis the night,
Then all you fierie oes, and eles of light.
Why seeke’t thou me? Could not this make thee know,
The hate I bare thee, made me leave thee so?

Hely. You speake not as you thinke; it cannot be.

Hely. Lo, she is one of this confedery,
Now I perceive they have coniuy’d all three,
To fashion this falle sport in fplight of me,
Injuirous Hermia, most vngratefull maid,
Hau we conipar’d, hau we with thefe contrib’d
To batte me, with this foule defirion?
Is all the counsell that we two have all they’d,
The fillers vowes, the hours that we have spent,
When wee haue chal the hilty footed time,
For parting vs; O is all forgot?
All schoolemales talieth child,child—hood innocence?
We Hermia, like two Artificall gods,
Hauwe with our needles, created both one flower,
Both on one sampler, fitting on one cusion,
Both warbling of one song,both in one key;
As if our hands, our fides, voices, and minds
Had beene incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, forming parted,
But yet a union in partition,
A Midsummer nights Dreame.

Two lovely berries molded on one stem,
So with two seeming bodies, but one heart,
Two of the first life costs in Heraldry,
Due but to one and crowned with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love alway?
To loyne with men in forming your poore friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly.
Our fexe as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone doe feel the iniuries.

Her. I am amazed at your passionate words,
I scorn you not; it seemeth that you scorn me.
Hel. Have you not yet Lyfander, as in former
To follow me, and praise my eyes and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius
(Who even but now did spurne me with his foot)
To call me godselfe,nymph, divine, and rare,
Precious, cold? what? when did he this
To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lyfander
Denie your love (for rich within his soule)
And tender me (forsooth) affection,
But by your setting on, by your content?
What though I be not so in grace as you,
So hung upon with loues, so fortunate?
(But miserable moost, to love vnlove?)
This you should pittie, rather then despise.

Her. I understand not what you meane by this.

Hel. I, do, perfore, counterfeitt fad lookes,
Make mouches ypon me when I turne my bucke,
Winke each at other, hold the sweete left vp:
This sport well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pittie, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument:
But faire ye well, 'tis partly mine owne fault,
Which death or absence loone shall remeide.

Lyf. Stay gentle Helena, heare my excuise,
My loue, my life, my soule, faire Helena.

Hel. O excellent!  forsooth, do not fcorne her so.

Dick. If she the cannot entreate, I can compell.

Lyf. Thou canst compell, no more then the entertaine.
Thy threats have no more strengthe then her weak praife.

Helen, I loue thee, by my life I doe;
I fwear by that which I will lose for thee,
To proue him falle, that fates I loue then not.

Dem. If I may, I loue thee more then he can doe.

Lyf. If thou say so, with draw and prove it too.

Dem. Quick, come.

Hel. Lyfander, whereto tends all this?

Lyf. Away, you scurril.

Dem. No, no, Sir, beware to breake loose.

Take on as you would follow,
But yet come not: you are a tane man, go.

Lyf. Hang off thou eate, thou burly thing let loose,
Or I will shawe thee from me like a serpent.

Hel. Why are you growne so rude?
What change is this sweete Loue?

Lyf. Thy loue? out swamy Tartar, out;
Our loathed medicine; O hated poison hence.

Her. Do you not like?

Hel. Yes, girl, and do to you.

Lyf. Demetrius I will keep my word with thee.

Dem. I would I had your bond: for I perceiue
A weake bond holds you; Ie not trauet your word.

Lyf. What, should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, Ie not harme her so.

Her. What can you do me greater harms then hate?

Hate me, wherefore? O me, what news my Loue?
Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lyfander?
I am as faire now, as I was ere while.
Since night you loued me yet since night you left me.
Why then you left me (O the gods forbid)
In earneft, shall I say?

Lyf. By my life; and never did desire to fee thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of question, of doubt;
Be certain, nothing truer: 'tis no leas,
That I doe hate thee, and loue Helena.

Hel. O me, you figrer, you canker bloffe
You theefe of loue: What, have you come by night,
And done my loues heart from him?

Hel. Fine yse:
Hate you no modestly, no maiden shame,
No touch of bafline, what, will you teaze
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?

Fie, fie, you counterfeitt, you puppet, you.

Hel. Puppet? why so? I, that way goes the game.
Now I perceiue that the hath made compare.
Betweene our cuttures, the hath urg'd her height,
And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height (forsooth) she hath prevail'd with him,
And are you growne so high in his effeme.
Because I am so dwarfish, and so low?
How low am I, thou painted May-pole? Speake,
How low am I? I am not yet so low,
But that my nailes can reach vnto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you though you mocke me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me; I was neuer curfit:
I have no gift at all in threweinheffe;
I am a right madde for my cowardize;
Let her not strike me: you perhaps may thinke,
Because she is something lower then my felis,
That I can match her.

Hel. Lower? harke againe.

Hel. Good Hermia, doe not be so bitter with me,
I euermore did loue you Hermia,
Did euer keep your counsell, never wronged you,
Sawe that in loue vnto Demetrius,
I told him of your health vnto this wood.
He followed you, for loue I followed him,
But he hath chid me hence, and threatned me
To strike me, spurne me, nay to kill me too;
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly backe,
And follow you no further. Let me go.
You see how simple, and how fond I am.

Hel. Why get you gone: who lift that hinderes you?

Hel. A foolish heart, that I lese here behinde.

Lyf. What, with Lyfander?

Hel. With Demetrius.

Lyf. Be not afraid, she shall not harme thee Helena.

Dem. No sir, she shall not, though you take her part.

Hel. O when she's angry, she is keene and threwd,
She was a vixen when she went to schoole,
And though she be but little, she is fierce.

Hel. Little agane! Nothing but low and little?
Why will you fuffer her to flout me thus?
Let me come to her.

Lyf. Get you gone you dwarfe,
You minium, of hindring knot-grace made,
You bead, you aumone.

Dem. You are too officious,
In her behalfe that fcorne your servises.

Let
Let her alone, Speake not of Helena,
Take not her part. For if thou dost intend Neuer so little shew of love to her,
Thou shalt abide it.

Let. Now she holds me not,
Now follow if thou dar'st, to try whole right,
Of thine or mine is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow? Nay, Ile goe with thee checke by lowle.

Her. You Mistirs, all this coyle is long of you.
Nay, goe not backe.

Hel. I will not truss you,
Nor longer stay in your curt compaine.
Your hands then mine, are quicker for a fray,
My legs are longer though to runne away.

Enter Oberon and Pucke.

Ob. This is thy negligence, still thou mistak't,
Or else commit'th thy knaureys willingly.

Puck. Bleeuce me, King of shadoyes, I mifbooke,
Did not you tell me, I should know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on?
And so farre blamelose proues my enterprise,
That I have nooted an Athenians eies,
And so farre am I glad, it so did fort,
As this their langling I efteeme a sport.

Thou feelst thefe Louers fecke a place to fight,
Hie therefore Robin, overcatt the night,
The starrie Welkin couer thou anon,
With drooping fogge as blacke as Acheron,
And lead thee tettie Riuais to altray,
As one come not within anothers way.
Like to Lyfander, sometime frame thy tongue,
Then hire Demetrius vp with bitter wrong;
And sometime raile thou like Demetrius;
And from each other looke thou lead them thus,
Till ore their browes, death-counterfeiting, fleepe
With leaden legs, and Battel-wings doth creepe;
Then criue this heare into Lyfanders eie,
Whose liquor hath this virtuouse properitie,
To take from thence all error, with his might,
And make his eie-bals role with wonted light.
When they next wake, all this derision
Shall frame a dreame, and fruitlesse vition,
And backe to Acheron shall the Louers wend
With league, whose date till death shall never end.
While I in this affaire do thee imply,
Ile to my Queene, and beg her Indian Boy;
And then I will her charmed eie releae
From monstros view, and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My Fairie Lord, this must be done with haste,
For night swift Dragons cut the Clouds full fast,
And yonder thines Auros harbinger;
At whose approach Ghosts wandring here and there,
Troope home to Church-yards; damned spirits all,
That in croft-waies and bowes have burelall,
Areadie to their wormie beds are gone;
For feare lest day should looke thier flames vpon,
They wilfully themselfes exile from light,
And must for aye comfort with blacke broude night.

Ob. But we are spirts of another fort:
I, with the mornings loue have oit made sport,
And like a Forrester, the growes may tread,
Euen till the Eastern gate all fierie red,
Opening on Neptune, with faire bleeled beames,
Turnet into yellow gold, his felt Greene dreames.
But notwithstanding haue, make no delay:
We may effect this businesse, yet ere day.

Puck. Vp and downe, vp and downe, I will leade them vp and downe: I am fear'd in field and towne.

Goblin, lead them vp and downe: here comes one.

Enter Lyfander.

Lyf. Where art thou, proud Demetrius?

Speake thou now.

Rob. Here villain, drawne & ready. Where art thou?

Lyf. I will be with thee outright.

Rob. Follow me then to plainer ground.

Enter Demetrius.

Dem. Lyfander, speake againe;
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?

Speake in some busie: Where doft thou hide thy head?

Rob. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the stars,
Telling the busses that thou lookest for wars,
And wilt not come? Come recreant, come thou child,
Ile whip thee with a rod. He is desist'd
That draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yes, art thou there?

Ro. Follow my voice, we'll try no manhood here. Exit.

Lyf. He goes before me, and still dares me on,
When I come where he calls, then he's gone.

The villain is much lighter hee'd then I:
I followed fast, but fafter he did flye;

Shifting places.

That fallen am I in darke someueen way,
And here will rest me. Come thou gentle day:
Ie downe.

For if but once thou show me thy gray light,
Ile finde Demetrius, and revenge this slight.

Enter Robin and Demetrius.

Rob. Ho, ho, ho; coward, why com'lt thou not?

Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st.

For well I wot,

Thou runst before me, shifting every place,
And dar't not stand, nor looke me in the face.

Where art thou?

Rob. Come hither, I am here.

Dem. Nay then thou mock'st me; thou shalt buy this Learre,

If euer I thy face by day-light see.

Now goe thy way: sifnnetle confrainteth me,
To measure out my length on this cold bed,
By daies approche looke to be viuited.

Enter Helena.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious night,
Abate thy hours, shine comforts from the Earl,
That I may backe to Athens by day-light,
From thence that my poore companie detest;

And sleepe that sometime flutes vp forrowes eie,
Steale me a while from mine owne companie.

Sleepe.

Rob. Yet but three? Come one more,

Two of both kindes makes vp foure.

Here he comes, curt and fat,
Cupid is a knauih lad,

Enter Hermia.

Thus to make poore females mad.

Her. Neuer fo weare, neuer fo in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew and borne with briaire,
I can no further crawl, no further goe;
My legs can keepe no pace with my desires.
Here will I renn me till the brake of day,
Heaven's shield Lyfander, if they mean a fray.

Rob. On the ground sleepe found,

Ile apply your eie gentle lover, remedy.
When thou wak'st, thou tak'st

True delight in the light of thy former Ladies eye,
A Midsummer night's Dreame.

And the Country Proverb knowne,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be flowne,
Jatte shall have ill, nought shall goe ill,
The man shall have his Mare againe, and all shall bee well.

They sleepe all the Ait.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Queen of Faires, and Cloone, and Faires, and the King behind them.

Tita. Come, sit thee downe vpon this flowry bed,
While I thy amiable checkes doe coy,
And flicke muske roes in thy fleece smoothe head,
And kiffe thy faire large ears, my gentle joy.
Clowf. Where's Peafe blissome?
Peaf. Ready.
Clowf. Scratch my head, Peafe-blissome. Wher's Moun-

Enter Moun-

Clowf. Mounfieur Cobe, good Mounfier get your weapons in your hand, & kill me a red hipt humble-Bee, on the top of a thistle; and good Mounfier bring mee the hony bag. Doe not fret thy selfe too much in the action, Mounfier; and good Mounfier have a care the hony bag breake not, I would be loth to have yon over-flowne with a hony-bag signilour. Where's Mounfier Mushardied?

Muf. Ready.
Clo. Glue me your neafe, Mounfieur Mushardied. Pray you leave your courtesy good Mounfier.

Muf. What's your will?
Clo. Nothing good Mounfier, but to help Caualary Cobe to farthac. I must to the Barres Mounfier, for me-thinkes I am marvoulous hairy about the head. And I am such a tender aff, if my hair de do tinkle mee, I must scratch.

Tita. What, wilt thou have some muffcke, my sweet love.
Clowf. I have a reasonable good ear in muffcke. Let vs have the tongs and the bones.

Musficke Tongs, Rurall Musficke.

Tita. Or say sweete Louse, what thou defirest to eat.
Cloone. Truly a pecke of Prouender; I could munch your good dry Oates. Me-thinkes I have a great defire to a bottle of hay; good hay, sweete hay hath no fellow.

Tita. I have a venroutous Fairy,
That shall flicke the Squirrels hoard,
And fetch thee new Nuts.
Clo. I had rather have a handfull or two of dried pease, But I pray you let none of your people flire me, I have an expostion of sleepe come vpon me.

Tita. Sleepe thou, and I will winde thee in my arms,
Faires be gone, and be alwaies away.
So doth the woodbine, the sweete Honifuckle,
Gently entwist; the female Iuy so,
Enrings the barking fingers of the Elme.

O how I loue thee! how I do re on thee!

Enter Robin goodfellow and Oberon.
Ob. Welcome good Robin:
Seekst thou this sweet fight?
Her dotage now I doe begin to pity.
For meeting her of late behinde the wood,
Seeking sweete fayours for this hateful foole,
I did vpraid her, and fall out with her.
For his hairy temples then had rounded,
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers.
And that fame dew which sometime on the busb,
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls;
Stood now within the pretty flouriet eyes,
Like tears that did ther owne disgrace bewaile.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in milde tares beg'd my patience,
I then did asek of her, her changeling child;
Which straight the gave me, and her Fairy sent
To heare him to my Bower in Fairy Land.
And now I haue the Boy, I will vndoe
This hatefull imperfection of her eyes.
And gentle Pucke, take this transformed falke,
From off the head of this Athenian swaine;
That he awaking when the other doe,
May all to Athen backe againe repaire,
And thinke no more of this nights accidents,
But as the fierce vexation of a dreame.
But first I will releafe the Fairy Queene.

Now my Titania wake you my sweet Queene.

Tita. My Oberon, what violons haue I sence!
Me-thought I was enamoured of an Aife.
Ob. There lies your love.
Tita. How came they things to passe?
Oh, how mine eyes doth loath this vilage now!
Ob. Silence a while. Robin take off his head:
Titania, muffcke call, and strike more dead.
Then common seepe of all thefe, fine the fen.

Tita. Muffcke, ho muffcke, such as charmeth sleepe.

Muffcke full.

Rob. When thou wakest, with thinne owne foolest eies peape.

Ob. Sound muffcke; come my Queene, take hands with
And rocke the ground whereon these sleepers bee.
Now thou and I are now in amity,
And will to morrow midnight, solemnly,
Dance in Duke Theseus house triumphantly,
And baffle it to all faire pottefry.
There shall the paires of faithfull Louers be Wedded, with Theseus, all in iolity.

Rob. Faire King attend, and marke,
I doe heare the morning Larke.
Ob. Then my Queene in silence sate,
Tripe we after the nights shade; we
The Globe can compasse foome,
Swifter then the wandering Moone.

Tita. Come my Lord, and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping here was found.

Sleepers Eye full.

O With
With these mortals on the ground.

Enter Theseus, Egeus, Hippolita and all his traines.

T. f. Go one of you, finde out the Forrester,
For now our observation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My Loue shall hear the murlick of my hounds.
Vncouple in the Weterne valley, let them goe;
Difpatch I say, and finde the Forrester.
We will faire Queene, vp to the Mountaines top.
And marke the muscall confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hipp. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Crecte they bayed the Bear
With hounds of Spartæ; neuer did I heare
Such gallant chalynd. For besides the groves,
The field, in the mountaines, the fountains way,
Seeme all one mutuell cry. I neuer heard
So muscall a discord, such sweet thunder.

T. f. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kinde,
So frew 'd, to fanned, and their heads are hung
With ears that wike the morning dew,
Crooke kneeed, and dew-lapt, like Testatum Buls,
Slow in purfuit, but match'd in mouth like bels,
Each vnnder each. A cry more tunable
Was neuer hallowed to, nor cheare'd with home,
In Crecte, in Spartæ, nor in Tefally;
Judge when you heare. But looke, what nymphs are these?
Egeus. My Lord, this is my daughter here aleepe,
And this Lyfander, this Demetrius is,
This Helena, olde Nedarus Helena,
I wonder of this being hereee together.
Th. No doubt they rofe vp early, to obserue
The right of May; and hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity.
But speake Egeus, is not this the day
That Hermia should give anwer of her choice?
Egeus. It is, my Lord.

T. f. Goe bid the hunt-men wake them with their horns.
Horns and they wake.

Shout within, they all start vp.

T. f. Good morrow friends! Saint Valentine is paft,
Begin thele wood birds but to couple now?
Lyf. Pardon my Lord.
T. f. I pray you all stand vp.
I know you two are Riall enemies.
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is is so farre from Jealousie,
To fleepe by hate, and feare no eminity.
Lyf. My Lord, I shall reply amazely,
Halt fleepe, halfe waking. But as yet, I fware,
I cannot truly lay how I came here.
But as I thynke (for truly would I speake)
And now I die forthine my selfe, as it is; I came with Hermia hither. Our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian Law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my Lord; you have enough;
I beg the Law, the Law, upon his head;
They would have Stolne away, they would Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me:
You of your wife, and me of my confent;
Of my confent, that she should be your wife.

Dem. My Lord, faire Helen told me of their health,
Of this their purpos hither, to this wood,

And I in furie hither followed them;
Fair Helen, in fancy followed me.
But my good Lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is,) my love
To Hermia (melted as the snow)
Seems to me now as the remembrance of an idle gaude,
Which in my childhood I did doat upon:
And all the faith, the vertue of my heart,
The object and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is solely Helen. To her, my Lord,
Was I betrath'd, ere I faw Hermia,
But like a fickeneffe did I loath this food,
But as in health, come to my natural tate,
Now doe I wth it, love it, long for it,
And will for euermore be true to it.

T. f. Where Lovers, you are fortunately met;
Of this discourse shall hear a more anon.
Egeus, I will ouer-beare your will;
For in the Temple, by and by with vs,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpos hunting shall be fet aside.
Away, with vs to Athens; three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnite.

Come Hippolita.

Dem. These things seem small & vndistinguifhable,
Like barley off into Clouds.

Herm. Me-thinks I fee these things with parted eye,
When every thing seemes double.

Helm. So me-thinks:
And I have found Demetrius, like a j ewell,
Mine owne, and not mine owne.

Dem. It seemes to mee,
That yet we fleepe, we dreame. Do not you thynke,
The Duke was here, and bid vs follow him?
Herm. Yea, and my Father.
Helm. And Hippolita.
Lyf. And he bid us follow to the Temple.

Dem. Why then we are awake? let us follow him,
And by the way let vs recount our dreams.

Bottomes wakes.

Enter Lovers.

Clav. When my cue comes, call me, and I will anwer.
My next is, most faire Piramus. Hey ho. Peter Qunice?
Flute the bellows-mender? Sowt the tinkers? Starveling?
Gods my life! Stolne hence, and left me aleepe: I have a maid a rare vision.
I had a dreaming, past the wit of man, to say, what dreame it was. Man is but an Affe,
If he goe about to expound this dreame. Me-thought I was, there is no man can tell what.
Me-thought I was, and me-thought I had. But man is but a patch'd fool,
If he will offer to say, what me-thought I had.The eye of man hath not heare,
The care of man hath not heere, mans hand is not able to taffe, his tongue to conceiue, nor his heart to report,
What my dreame was. I will get Peter Quinice to write a ballate of this dreame, it shall be called Bottomes Dreame,because it hath no bottome; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the Duke.
Pertadventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death.

Exit.

Enter Quinices, Flute, Christmas, Starveling.

Ruin. Have you sent to Bottomes house? Is he come home yet?

Starr. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is transported.

Th. If
A Midsummer Night's Dream.

If he come not, then the play is mar'd. It goes not forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not possible: you have not a man in all Athens able to discharge Piramis but he.

Tbf. No, hee hath simpilly the best wit of any handy-craft man in Athens.

Quin. Yes, and the best perfon too, and hee is a very Paramour, for a sweet voyce.

Tbf. You must say, Paragon. A Paramour is (God bleffe vs) a thing of nought.

Enter Snug the Joiner.

Snug. Masters, the Duke is comimg from the Temple, and there is two or three Lords & Ladies more married: If our sport had gone forward, we had all bin made men.

Tbf. O sweet bally Bottom: thus hath he left fore-pence a day, during his life, he could not have faped sixpence a day. And the Duke had not given him fixpence a day for playing Piramus, Ile be hang'd. He would have deferved it. Sixpence a day in Piramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottom.

But. Where are thefe Lads? Where are thefe hearts?

Quin. Bottom, 3 most couragious day! O must hap-

But. Masters, I am to dis confuse you, but ask me not what. For if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you every thing as it fell out.

Py. Let vs hear, sweet Bottom.

But. Not a word of me: all that I will tell you, is, that the Duke hath dinet. Get your apparell together, good things to your bearde, new ribbonds to your pumps, meete prefectly at the Palace, every man looke by his part: for the short and the long is, our play is prefered: In any cafe let Thisby have cleane linen: and let not him that plays the Lion, pare his nailes, for they shall hang out for the Lions claws. And most deare Actors, eate no Onions, nor Garlicke; for wee to vster sweete Comedy, and I doe not doubt but to hear ye say, it is a sweet Comedy. No more words: away, go away.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolite, Egeus and his Lords.

Hip. This strange my Theseus, y these lourers speake of. Thee more strange then true. I never may beleue These ancie fables, nor these Fairy toyses, Lovers and mad men have fuch feething braines, Such shaping plants, faine that apprehend more Then coole reason ever comprehends. The Lunaticke, the Louer, and the Poet, Are of imagination all compact. One fees more dulces then vaile hell can hold; That is the mad man. The Louer, all as franticke, Sees Helens beauty in a brow of Egypt. The Poets eye in a fine frenzy rolling, doth glance From heaven to earth, from earth to heauen. And as imagination bodies forth the forms of things Unknoowne: the Poets pen turns them to shapes, And gives to aire nothing, a local habitation, And a name. Such trickes hath strong imagination, That if it would but apprehend some joy, It comprehends some bringer of that joy. Or in the night, imagining some faire, How easie is a bull supposd a Bear? Hip. But all the rotie of the night told ouer, And all their minds transfused to together, More wittoeth then fancies images, And grows to something of great constancies; But howfouer, strange, and admirable.

Enter lourers, Lisander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

The. Heere come the lourers, full of joy and mirth: Joy, gentle friends, joy and fresh days Of louse accompany your hearts.

Lys. More then to vs, wait in your royall walkes, your board, your bed.

The. Come now, what makess, what dances shall we haue, To weare away this long age of three houres, Between our after supper, and bed-time? Where is our vilial manager of mirth? What Reuels are in hand? Is there no play, To safe the anguish of a torturing hour?

Call Egeus.

Ege. Heere mighty Theseus.

The. Say, what abridgement haue you for this evening? What makese? What musick? How shall we beguile The lazie time, if not with some delight? Ege. There is a breete how many sportes are rife: Make choife of which your Highenesse will fee first.

Lys. The battell with the Centaurs to be fung By an Athenian Eunuch, to the Harpe.

The. Woe! none of that. That haue I told my Loue In glory of my kinsman Hercules.

Lys. The riot of the tipic Bachanals, Tearing the Thracian finger, in their rage?

The. That is an old deceite, and it was plaid When I from Theseus came laft a Conqueror.

Lys. The thrice three Muses, mourning for the death of learning, late defeat in beggerie.

The. That is some Satire keene and critical, Not forting with a nuptiall ceremoney.

Lys. A tedious breede Scene of your Piramus, And his loue Thisby; very tragicall mirth.

The. Merry and tragical! Tedious, and briefe! That is, hot ice, and wondrous strange snow. How shall we finde the concord of this discord?

Ege. A play there is, my Lord, some ten words long, Which is as breefe, as I have knowne a play; But by ten words, my Lord, it is too long; Which makes it tedious. For in all the play, There is not one word apt, one Player fitten. And tragical my noble Lord it is: for Piramus Therein doth kill himselfe. Which when I saw Reheard, I must confesse, made mine eyes water: But more merrie teares, the passion of loud laughter Neuer fhad.

Tbf. What are they that do play it?

Ege. Hard handed men, that worke in Athens heere, Which neuer labord in their minds till now; And now have toyed their unbreathed memories With this same play, against your nuptiall.

The. And we will hear it.
One noble Lord, it is not for you. I have heard
It o'er, and it is nothing, nothing in the world ;
Vaine you can find sport in their intents,
Exremely stretch'd, and conv with cruel paine,
To doe you feruice.

But we will hear that play. For newer any thing
Can be amisse, when simpliceness and duty tender it.
Goe bring them in, and take your places, Ladies.

Thou, why gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.
This He fakes, they can doe nothing in this kinde.

Thou, the kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing
Our sport shall be, to take what they mi$take ;
And what does poor duty cannot, noble reftpect
Takes it in might, not merit.

Where I have come, great Clerks have purpo fie
To greete me with pretemeditated welcomes;
Where I have seen themتميزer and looke pale,
Make period in the midst of sentences,
Thro' their practis'd accent in their fears,
And in conclusion, dummy have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. Trust me sweetie,
Out of this silence yet, I picket a welcome:
And in the modesty of fearfull duty,
I read as much, as from the rating tongue
Of fancy and audacious eloquence;
Loze therefore, and tongue-tide simplicity,
In leaf, speake most, to my capacity.

Enter the Prologue. Quince.

Pro. If you offend, it is with our good will.
That you shoule think, we come not to offend,
But with good will. To shew our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Consider then, we come but in delight.
We do not come, as mindeing to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not herere. That you should here repent you,
The Actors are at hand; and by their shew,
You shall know all, that you are like to know.

Thou. This fellow doth not stand upon points.

Lyf. He hath hid his Prologue, like a rough Colt: he knowes not the flop. A good morall my Lord. It is not enough to speake, but to speake true.

Hif. Indeed he hath plaid on his Prologue, like a child on a Recorder, a found, but not in government.

Thou. His speech was like a tangled chaine nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Actoryer with a Trumpet before them.

Enter Pyramus and Thisbie, Wall, Mome-fline, and Lyon.

Pro. Gent. perchance you wonder at this shew,
But wonder on, till truth make all things plaine.
This man is Pyramus, if you would know;
This beauteous Lady, Thisbie is certaine.
This man, with lyme and rough-calf, doth pretend
Wall, that vile wall, which did these lovers arm'd
And through walls chink (poor foules) they are content
To whisper. At the which, let no man wonder.
This man, with Lanthorne, dog, and bush of thorne,
Pretendeth moone-fline. For if you will know,
By moone-fline did those Lovers think no more
To meet at Nimus toombe, there, there to woe:

This grisly beart (which Lyon hight by name)
The trufly Thoby, comming firft by night,
Did scare away, or rather did affright;
And as she fled, her mantle she did fall ;
Which Lyon vile with bloody mouth did flaine.
Anon comes Pirames, sweet youth and tall,
And finds his Thisbius Mantle flaine;
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blamefull blade,
He bravely brought his boiling bloody breast,
And Thoby, tarrying in Mulberry shade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
Let Lyon, Mome-fline, Wall, and Lovers twaine,
At large discourses, while here they doe remaine.

Exit all but Wall.

Thou. I wonder if the Lion be to speake.
Deme. No wonder, my Lord: one Lion may, when many Afes doe.

Exit Lyon, Thisbius, and Mommesine.

Wall. In this fame Interlude, it doth befall,
That I, one Swett (by name) present a wall:
And such a wall, as I would have you think,
That had in it a cramp'd hole or chinkie;
Through which the Lovers, Pirames and Thisbius
Did whisper often, very secretly.
This loame, this rough-calf, and this stone doth shew,
That I am that same Wall; the truth is so.
And this the cranny is, right and thinke,
Through which the fearfull Lovers are to whisper.

Thou. Would you desire Lime and Haire to speake better?

Deme. It is the vittifer partition, that euer I heard discourse, my Lord.

Thou. Pyramus draws near the Wall, silence.

Enter Pyramus.

Pir. O grim lookt night, o night with hue fo blacke,
O night, which euer art, when day is not :
O night, o night, alacke, alacke, alacke,
I feare my Thisbius promife is forgot.
And thou o vall, thou sweet and lovely vall,
That fands betweene her fathers ground and mine,
Thou vall, o vall, o sweet and lovely vall,
Shew me thy chinkie, to blinke through yth with mine eire.
Taneues courtesy vall. I nee fheild thee vall for this.
But what fee I? No Thisbius doe I fee.
O wicked vall, through whom I fee no bliffe,
Curft be thy fones for thus deceiving me.

Thou. The vall me-thinkes being fenfible, should curfe againe.

Pir. No in truth fir, he should not. Deseiving me,
Is Thisbius eue, the e is to enter, and I am to spy.
Her through the vall. You shall fee it vall fall.

Enter Thisbius.

Pat as I told you; yonder she comes.

Thou. O vall, full often hath thou heard my mone,
For parting my faire Pirames, and me.
My cherry lips have often kift thy fones;
Thy fones vith Lime and Haire knitt vp in thee.

Pyra. I fee a voyce; now vull I to the chinke.
To spy and I can hear my Thisbius face. Thisbius?

Thou. My Loue thou art, my Loue I thinke.

Pir. Thinke what thou vilt. I am thy Louears grace,
And like Limander am I trufly still.

Thou. And like Helen till the Fates me kill.
Pir. Not Sefafalus to Procrus, was fo true.

Thou. As Sefafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pir.
Pir. O kiss me through the hole of this vile wall.
Telf. I kiss the walls hole, not your lips at all.
Pir. What thou at Ninian tomeet me straight way?
Telf. This is the filled stuffe that ere I heard.
Du. This is the morall downe betweene the two Neighbours.
Dem. No remedy my Lord, when Wals are so wilfull, to heare without warning.
Du. I must by your imagination then, & not theirs.
Du. If wee imagine no worre of them then they of themselves, they may paff for excellent men. Here come two noble beafts, in a man and a Lion.

Enter Lyon and Moone-faine.
Lyon. You Ladies, you (whole gentle harts do fear
The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floor:) May now perchance, both quake and tremble here, When Lion rough in wildest rage doth roare.
Then know that I, one Smug the loyner am A Lion fell, nor else no Lions dam: For if I should as Lion come in strive Into this place, 'twere pittie of my life.
Du. A vere gentle beaft, and of a good confidence.
Dem. The verie beaft at a beaft, my Lord, yere I saw.
Lij. This Lion is a verie Fox for his valor.
Du. True, and a Goofe for his discretion.
Dem. Not to my Lord: for his valor cannot carry his discretion, and the Fox carries the Goofe.
Du. His discretion I am sure cannot carry his valor: for the Goofe carries not the Fox. It is well; leave it to his discretion, and let vs hearken to the Moone.
Mon. This Lanthorne doth the horned Moone present.
De. He should have wore the hornes on his head.
Du. Hee is no crencent, and his hornes are inusitible, within the circumfrence.
Mon. This lanthorne doth the horned Moone present: My felpe, the man i'th Moone doe femee to be.
Du. This is the greatest error of all the reft; the man should be put into the Lanthorne. How is it els the man i'th Moone?
Dem. He dares not come there for the candle. For you fee, it is already in fruife.
Du. I am vearie of this Moone; 'would he should change.
Lij. Proceed Moone.
Mon. All that I have to fay, is to tell you, that the Lanthorne is the Moone: I, the man in the Moone; this thorne buie, my thorne biff; and this dog, my dog.
Dem. Why all these should be in the Lanthorne: for they are in the Moone. But silence, heere comes Thoby.

Enter Thoby.
Thoby. This is old Ninian tombe: where is my loue?
Lyon. Oh.
Thoby. The Lion roares, Thoby runs off.
Dem. Well roar'd Lion.

Du. Well run Thoby.
Dut. Well done Moone.
Truly the Moone shines with a good grace.
Du. Wel mouz'd Lion.
Dem. And then came Piramus.
Lij. And so the Lion vanilh.

Enter Piramus.
Pyr. Sweet Moone, I thank thee for thy funny bemses, I thank thee Moone, for shining now so bright: For by thy gracious, golden, glittering beams, I truft to taste of truest Thoby's light.
But tay: O sight! but marke, poore Knight, What dreadful dole is heere?
Eyes doo you fee? How can it be!
O dainty Duke: O Deere!
Thy mantle good; what staind with blood!
Approch you Furies fell:
O Fates! come, come: Cut thred and thrum, Quilf, crufh, conclude, and quell.
Du. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, Would go neere to make a man looke fad.
Du. Beflaw my heart, but I pittie the man.
Pir. O wherefore Nature, did'th thou Lions fame? Since Lion vilde hath heere defcour'd my deere: Which is: no, no, which was the faireft Dame
That hu'd, that loo'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheere.
Come teares, confound: Out sword, and wound
The pap of Piramus:
I, that left pap, where heart doth hop;
Thus dye I, thus, thus, thus.
Now am I dead, now am I fled, my foule is in the sky, Tongue lofe thy light, Moone take thy flight,
Now dye, dye, dye, dye, dye.
Dem. No Die, but an ace for him; for he is but one.
Lij. Left then an ace man. For he is dead, he is nothing.
Du. With the helpe of a Surgeon, he might yet recover, and proue an Afro.
Du. How chance Moone-faine is gone before?
Thoby comes backe, and finds her Louer.

Enter Thoby.
Duke. She will finde him by farre-light.
Heere she comes, and her passion ends the play.
Du. Me thinkes shee should not vie a long one for such a Piramus: I hope he will be breve.
Dem. A Moth will turne the balancie, which Piramus which Thoby is the better.
Lij. She hath fpred him already, with thofe sweete
Dem. And thus the meanes, videlicit.
This. Aifece my Loue? What dead my Douse?
O Piramus arife:
Speake, Speake. Quite dumbe? Dead, dead? A tombe
Mufi couer thy sweet eyes.
These Lilly Lips, this cherry nofe,
These yellow Cowflip cheeckes
Are gone, are gone: Louers make monke:
His eyes were greene as Leeks.
O fifters three, come, come to mee,
With handes as pale as Milke,
Lay them in gore, since you have shore
With theares, his thred of filke.
Tongue not a word: Come trufly fword:
Come blade, my breaf imbren:
O 3 And
And farewell friends, thus Thebaic ends;
Adieu, adieu, adieu.

Duk. Moon-shine & Lion are left to bury the dead.
Drom. I, and Wall too.
Bar. No, I assure you, the wall is downe, that parted their Fathers. Will it please you to see the Epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance, betweene two of our company?

Duk. No Epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if hee that writ it had plaide Pomona, and hung himselfe in Thebaic garret, it would have beene a fine Tragedy: and so it is truly, and very notably diuerg'd. But come, your Bergomask; let your Epilogue alone.
The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve.
Louers to bed, 'tis almost Fairy time.
I fear we shall out-diepe the comming morn,
As much as we this night have ouer-watcht.
This palpable groffe play hath well beguil'd
The heavy gate of night. Sweet friends to bed.
A fortnight hold we this solemnity.
In nightly Reuel; and new iollitie.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry Lyons rores,
And the Wolfe beholds the Moone:
Whilst he the hauly ploughman shoores,
All with weary taske fore-done.
Now the wafted brands doe glow,
Whilst the fritch-owle scratching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shrowd.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graues, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprite,
In the Church-yard paths to glide.
And we Fairies, that do runne,
By the triple Hecates teame,
From the presence of the Sunne,
Following darknesse like a dreame.
Now are frolickes, not a Moufe
Shall disturb his hallowed houfe.
I am fent with broome before,
To sweep the dust behinde the doore.

Enter King and Queenes of Fairies, with their traines.
Ob. Through the houfe glue glimmering light,

By the dead and droweke fer,
Euerie Elfe and Fairy sprite,
Hop as light as bird from brier,
And this Ditty after me, sing and dance it trippingly.

Tit. First rehearse this song by roate,
To each word a warbling note.
Hand in hand, with Fairy grace,
Will we sing and bleffe this place.

The Song.
Now untill the breake of day,
Through this houfe each Fairy stray.
To the best Bridie-bed will we,
Which by we shal bless be:
And the issue there create,
Euer shal be fortunate:
So shal all the couples three,
Euer true in loving be:
And the blots of Nature's hand,
Shall not in their issue stand.
Nor male, barren, nor scarce,
Nor marke proligious, such as are Displeas'd in Naturaltie,
Shall upon their children be:
With this field dews consecrate,
Every Fairy take his gate,
And each several chamber bleffe,
Through this Palace with sweet peace,
Euer shal in safety rest,
And the owner of it bleffe,
Trip away, make no play;
Meet me all by breake of day.

Robin. If we shadowes have offended,
Thinke but this (and all is mended)
That you have but flumberd here;
While these visions did appear,
And this weake and idle theame,
No more yeelding but a dreame;
Centes, doe not reprehend.
If you pardon, we will mend.
And as I am an honest Puck,
If we have uerned lucke,
Now to gave the Serpentes tongue,
We will make amends ere long:
Elfe the Pucke a lyar call.
So good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

FINIS.
The Merchant of Venice.

Actus primus.

Enter Antinio, Salario, and Salanio.

Antinio.

N' sooth I know not why I am so sad,
It wearies me; you say it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What stuffe 'tis made of, whereof it is borne,
I am to learn; and such a Want-wit falloffie makes of me,
That I have much ado to know my selfe.
Sol. Your minde is tosift on the Ocean,
There where your Argoves with portly falle
Like Signiors and rich Burgiers on the flood,
Or as it were the Pageants of the sea,
Do ouer-peepe the Petti Traffiquers
That curtie to them, do them reverence
As they flye by them with their woven wings.
Sal. Believing me for, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections, would
Be with my hopes abrode. I should be still Plucking the graffe to know where fits the winde,
Peering in Maps for ports, and peers, and rode:
And every obiect that might make me feare
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
Would make me sad.
Sol. My winde cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an Ague, when I thought
What harme a winde too great might doe at sea.
I should not see the saultie loure-galfe runne,
But I should thinkke of shallows, and of flats,
And fee my wealthy Andrew dockes in hand,
Vailing her high top lower then her ribs
To kisse her buriall; should I goe to Church
And fee the holy edifice of stone,
And not behincke me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle Veolves side
Would scatter all her splices on the stremee,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my skiles,
And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Shall I have the thought
To thinke on this, and shall I lacke the thought
That such a thing bechaunc'd would make me sad?
But tell not me, I know Antinio
Is sad to thinke upon his merchandize.

Ant. Beleeue me no, I thank me fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottome truthed,
Nor to one place; nor is my whole effate
Vpon the fortune of this preuent yeere:
Therefore my merchandize makes me not sad.
Sala. Why then you are in loue.
Anth. Fiat, fi.
Sala. Not in louse neither: then let vs say you are sad
Because you are not merry; and 'twere as easie
For you to laugh and leape, and say you are merry
Because you are not sad. Now by two-headed Lamen,
Nature hath fram'd strange followes in her time:
Some that will euermore pepe through their eyes,
And laugh like Parrats at a bag-piper.
And other of such vipher apec'd,
That they'll not shew their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nefur fwear the left be laughable.

Enter Baffanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.
Sala. Heere comes Baffanio,
Your most noble Kinman,
Gratians, and Lorenzo. Paryewell,
We leave you now with better company.
Sala. I would have fluid till I had made you merry,
If worther friends had not prevented me.
Ant. Your worth is very deere in my regard.
I take it youe owne busines calls on you,
And you embrasse th'occasion to depart.
Sala. Good morrow my good Lords.
Baff. Good signiors both, when shall we laught fay,
You grow exceeding strange, must it be so?
Sala. We'll make our leyfiores to attend on yours.
Exeunt Salario, and Salanio.

Lor. My Lord Baffanio, since you have found Antinio
We two will leave you, but at dinner time
I pray you haue in minde where we must meete.
Baff. I will not faiue you.
Grat. You looke not well signior Antinio,
You have too much relpect vpon the world;
They loose it that doe buy it with much care,
Beleeue me you are maruellous chang'd.
Ant. I hold the world but as the world Gratiano,
A flage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a fad one.
Grat. Let me play the fool,
With mirth and laughther let old wrinckles come,
And let my Lauer rather heate with wine,
Then my heart coole with mortifying grotes,
Why should a man whose blood is warme within,
Sit like his Grandfat, cut in Alabaster?
Sleepe when he wakes? and creep into the Iaudies
By
By being peevish? I tell thee what \textit{Antonius},
I love thee, and it is my love that speakes:
There are a sort of men, whole visages
Do creame and mantle like a standing pond,
And do a wilfull filthfull entertaine,
With purpose to be drew in an opinion
Of wildome, gravity, profound conceit,
As who shuld say, I am sir an Oracle,
And when I open my lips, let no dogge barke.
O \textit{my Antonius}, I do know of thee
That therefore onely are reputed wise,
For saying nothing; when I am verie sure
If they shoule speake, would almost dam thiose ears
Which hearing them would call their brothersfooles:
I tell thee more of this another time.
But thin not with this melancholy bale
For this foole Goddias this is Come good \textit{Lorenzo}, faryewell a while,
I end my exhortation after dinner.

\textit{Exeunt.}

\textit{Enter Portia with her waiting woman Nerissa.}

\textit{Portia.} By my troth \textit{Nerissa}, my little body is a weare of this great world.

\textit{Ner.} You would be sweet Madam, if your miseries were in the fame abundance as your fortunes are:
and yet for ought I fee, they are as ficker that furtet with too much, as they that fare with nothing; it is no small happinesse therefore to be fated in the meanes, superflu-\fi comes sooner by white haires, but competencie lives longer.

\textit{Portia.} Good sentences, and well pronounc'd.

\textit{Ner.} They would be better if well followed.

\textit{Portia.} If to doe were as ease as to know what were good to doe, Chappells had beene Churches, and poor mens cottages Princes Palace:s; it is a good Diuine that followes his owne instructions; I can eaiser teach twenty what were good to be done, then be one of the twen-tie to follow mine owne teaching: the brains may de-utilize thes for the blood, but a hot temper leapes oer a cold decre, such a hare is madnede the youth, to skip ore the methes of good counsaille the cripple; but this reason is not in fashion to choose me a husband; O mee, the word choose, I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike, so is the will of a living daughter curb'd by the will of a dead father: it is not hard \textit{Nerissa}, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none.

\textit{Ner.} Your father was euer vertuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations, therefore the loterie that hee hath deviued in thefe three cheffes of gold, fluer, and lace, whereof who choose his meaning,choose chooses you, will no doubt never be chosen by any rightly, but one who you shall rightly love: but what warmth is there in your affection towards any of those Princely futures that are already come?

Por. I pray thee own-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them, and according to my description shouldst thou in my affection.

Nor. First there is the Neapolitan Prince.

Por. That's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse, and he makes it a great appropration to his own good parts that he can shoo him himself: I am much afraid my Lady his mother plaid false with a Smyth.

Nor. Than is there the County Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frowne as who should say, and you will not have me, choofoo: he heares merrie tales and smiles not, I fear he will prove the weeping Phrygian when he grows old, being so full of vn-naturally sadness in his youth. I had rather to be married to a deaths head with a bone in his mouth, than to either of these: God defend me from these two.

Nor. How say you by the French Lord, Mounfer Le Boune?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him passe for a man, in truth I know it is a sinne to be a mocker, but he, why he hath a horse better then the Neapolitans, a better bad habite of frowning then the Count Palatine, he is every man in no man, if a Traffell finge, he fisa fraught a capring, he will fence with his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twentie husbands: if hee would despeare me, I would forgive him, for if he lose me to madneffe, I should never require him.

Nor. What say you then to Fauncombe, the young Baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him, for hee vnderstands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latine, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the Court &eware that I have a poore penne-worth in the Englijhe: hee is a proper mans picture, but alas who can converse with a dumbbe shewe? how odly he is futed, I thinke he bought his doubllet in Italie, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germanie, and his behaviour euywhere.

Nor. What thinke you of the other Lord his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charitie in him, for he borrowed a boxe of the care of the Englijman, and swore he would pay him againe when hee was able: I thinke the Frenche man became his furietie, and feald vnder for another.

Nor. How like you the yong Germane, the Duke of Saxonys Nephew?

Por. Very vildely in the morning when hee is sober, and most mvildilly in the afternoone when hee is drunke: when he is beft, he is a little worfe then a man, and when he is worste, he is little better then a beast: and the worste fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to doe without him.

Nor. If he shoule offer to choos, and choos the right Casket, you shousl refuse to performe your Fathers will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore for fear of the worste, I pray thee set a deeppe glasse of Reinwijn on the contrary Casket, for if the dueell be within, and that temperament without, I know he will choofoo it. I will do any thing Nerriffa ere I will be married to a spunge.

Nor. You neede not Rare Lady the hauing any of thefe Lords, they have acquainted me with their determinations, which is indeed to returne to their home, and to trouble you with no more false, unless you may be won by some other fort then your Fathers imposition, depending on the Caskets.

Por. If I flue to be as old as Sibilla, I will dye as chaffe as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my Fathers will: I am glad this parcel of woers are so reasonble, for there is not one among them but I doe on his very abstinence: and I with them a faire departure.

Nor. Doe you not remember Ladie in your Fathers time, a Vencian, a Scholler and a Soulidor that came hither in companie of the Marqueffe of Mount-forest?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Baffano, as I thinke, so was hee call'd.

Nor. True Madam, hee of all the men that euer my foolish eyes look'd vpon, was the best deferving a faire Lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy prifhe.

Enter a Servingman.

Ser. The foure Strangers fecke you Madam to take their leave: and there is a fore-runner come from a fift, the Prince of Moros, who brings word the Prince his Maifter will be here to night.

Por. If I could bid the fift welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other foure farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a Saint, and the complection of a diuell, I had rather hee should shrieve me then wise me. Come Nerriffa, firra go before; whiles wee shunt the gate vpon one wooer, another knocks at the door.

Enter Baffano with Skylocks the Jew.

Jew. Three thousand ducats, well.

Baff. I fir, for three months.

Jew. For three months, well.

Baff. For the which, as I told you, Antinio shall be bound.

Jew. Antinio shall be come bound, well.

Baff. May you fleed me? Will you pleasure me?

Jew. Shall I know your anfwer?

Baff. Three thousand ducats for three months, and Antinio bound.

Jew. Your anfwer to that.

Jew. Antinio is a good man.

Baff. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary.

Jew. Ho no, no, no, no: my meaning in saying he is a good man, is to have you vnderstand me that he is sufficient, yet his means are in supposition: he hath an Argosie bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies, I understand moreover vpon the Rytla, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures hee hath squadron abroad, but ships are but boards, Sayers but men, there be land rats, and water rats, water thieves, and land theuws, I meane Pyrats, and then there is the perrill of waters, winde, and rocks: the man is notwithstanding sufficient, three thousand ducats, I thinke I may take his bond.

Baff. Be allured you may.
Enter Antionio.

Baff. This is signior Antionio.

Iev. How like a fawning publican he lookes.

I hate him for he is a Christian:

But more, for that in low simplitie
He lends out money gratis, and brings downe
The rate of vfnce here with vs in Venice.

If I can catch him once vpon the hip,
I will feede fit the ancient grudge I bear him.

He hates our sacred Nation, and he rales
Even there where Merchants must doe congregate
On me, my bargains, and my well-worne thrift,
Which he calls interret: Curfed be my Trybe
If I forgive him.

Baff. Shylock, doe you heare.

Sym. I am debating of my present store,

And by the neere gefle of my memorie
I cannot infantly raife vp the gropfe
Of full three thousand ducats: what of that?
Tubal. A wealthy Hebrew of my Tribe
Will furnish me; but how many months
Do you defire? Retch you faire good signior,
Your worship was the last man in our mouths.

Ant. Shylock, although I neither lend nor borrow
By taking, nor by giving of exceffe,
Yet to supply the ripe wants of my friend,
Ie breake a cuftome: is he yet pooffe
How much he would?

Sym. I, I, three thousand ducats.

Ant. And for three months.

Sym. I had forgot, three months, you told me fo.

Well then, your bond: and let me fee, but heare you,
Me thoughts you fay, you neither lend nor borrow Vpon advantage.

Ant. I doe neuer vfe it.

Sym. When Iacob graed his Vncle Labans thepepe,
This Iacob from our holy Abram was
(As his wife mother wroght in his behalfe)
The third pooffeer; I, he was the third.

Ant. And what of him, did he take interest?

Sym. No, not take interest, not as you would fay
Directly interest, marke what Iacob did,
When Laban and himselfe were comperrym'd
That all the eandlings which were fireakt and pidd
Should fall as Iacobs hier, the Ewes being rancke,
In end of Autunme turned to the Rammes,
And when the worke of generacion was Betwene those wolly breeders in the a(e,
The skilful hepheard pild me certaine wands,
And in the dooing of the dece of kindes,
He flake them vp before the fullome Ewes,
Who then conceaung, did in eaning time
Fall party-coloure'd lambs, and those were Iacobs.
This was a way to thriue, and he was bleft:

And thirft is blling if men fleale it not.

Ant. This was a venture for that Iacob feru'd for,
A thing not in his power to bring to passe,
But fway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heaven.

Was this inferted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and fliuer Ewes and Rams?

Sym. I cannot tell, I make it breete as falt,
But note me signior.

Ant. Marke you this Baffanios,
The drell can cite Scripture for his purpose,
An euill foule producing holy witneffe
Is like a vllaine with a finding cheere,
A goodly apple roten at the heart.
O what a goodly outide falsehood hath.

Sym. Three thousand ducats, 'tis a good round fum.

Three months from twelue, then let me fee the rate.

Ant. Well Shylock, shall we be beholding to you?

Sym. Signior Antionio, many a time and oft
In the Rallyo you have rated me
About my monies and my vfnces:
Still have I borne it with a patient frug.
(For suffrance is the badge of all our Tribe.)
You call me misbeleeuer, cut-chroate dog,
And fpent upon my Jewish gaberden,
And all for vfe of that is mine owne.

Well then, it now appeares you neede my helpe:
Goe to then, you come to me, and you fay,
Shylock, we would have moneys, you fay fo:
You that did voide your rume vpon my beard,
And foote me as you fpurne a stranger curre
Over your threhold, moneys is your fuite.
What should I fay to you? Should I not fay,
Hath a dog money? Is it poiffible
A curre should lend three thousand ducats? or Shall I bend low, and in a bond-mans key
With bated breath, and whifpring humbleneffe,
Say this: Faire sir, you fpent on me on Wednesday laft;
You fpurned me fuch a day; another time
You caid me dog: and for these curtedies
He lend you thus much moneys.

Ant. I am as like to call thee fo againe,
To fpet on thee againe, to fpurne thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friends,for when did friend/fhip take
A breede of barraine mettall of his friend?
But lend it rather to thine enemie,
Who if he breake, thou maift with better face
Exaft the penaltys.

Sym. Why looke you how you fhorne,
I would be friends with you, and have your loue,
Forget the fames that you have flaind me with,
Supple your preuent wants, and take no doite
Of vfnce for my moneys, and youle not heare me,
This is kinde I offer.

Baff. Well these were kindneffe.

Sym. This kindneffe will I foowe,
Goe with me to a Notarie, fale me there
Your fingle bond, and in a merrie fport
If you repaie me not on fuch a day,
In fuch a place, fuch fum or fums as are Express in the condition, let the forfeite
Be nominated for an equall pound
Of your faire ffe, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your bodie it pleafeth me.

Ant. Content infall, Ie fale to fuch a bond,
And fay there is much kindneffe in the Iew.
Bass. You shall not fear to task a bond for me, Ile rather dwell in my necessitie, Sir. Why fear not man, I will not forfeit it, Within these two months, that’s a month before This bond expire, I doe expect returne Of thrice three times the wale of this bond. Sir. O father Abram, what thefe Christians are, Whoe owne hard dealings teaches them fupped The thoughts of others: Praie you tell me this, If he fhould breake his date, what fhould I gaine By the exaction of the forfeiture? A pound of mans flesh taken from a man, Is not fo effimable, profitable neither As flefh of Muttons, Beefe, or Goates, I fay To buy his favours, I extend this friendship, If he will take it, fo if not allow, And for my love I prave you wrong me not. Sir. Yes, Sleybte, I will feale vnto this bond. Stay. Then meete me forthwith at the Notaries, Gie me his direcition for this merrie bond, And I will goe and purfe the duetes traitre. See to your houfe left in the fearefull gard Of an unchristian knave: and prefherable Ile be with you. Exit. Sir. He thie gentle Jew. This Hebrew will turne Christian, he grows kinde. Bass. I like not faire teames, and a villaines minde. Sir. Come on, in this there can be no disfince, My Shippes come home a month before the date. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Moroles cu.et vmo. Morose all in white, and three or foure followers accordingly, with Portia, Nerissa, and their maides. Flo. Cornets.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion, The shadowed licrole of the burnifhe fonne, To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred. Bring me the faireft creature Northward borne, Where Phoebus fire fcarce thaves the ycleps, And let vs make incifion for your love, To prove whose blood is reddest, his or mine. I tell thee Ladie this afpeafe of mine Hath feared the valiant, (by my love I swear) The belt regardid Virgins of our Clyme Haue lou’d it to: I would not change this hue, Except to fteale your thoughts my gentle Queene. Per. In termes of choife I am not fole led By nice direcition of a matrons eye: Beside, the lottrice of my defteinie Bars me the right of voluntarie choofing: But if my Father had not fainted me, And hed’d me by his wit to yeade my felle His wife, who wins me by that means as I told you, Your felle (renowned Prince) then flone as faire As any commer I have look’d on yet For my accent. Mor. Even for that I thanke you, Therefore I pray you leade me to the Caskets To trie my fortune: By this Symitrate

That flew the Sophie, and a Perifian Prince That won three fields of Sultan Solymon, I would ore-flare the ferneffe zies that looke: Out-braue the heart moft daring on the earth: Plucke the yong fucking Coub from the fie Beare, Yes, mocke the Lion when he roars for pray To win the Ladie. But alas, the white If Hercules and Lyctus pleaf at dice Which is the better man, the greater throw May turne by fortune from the weaker hand: So is Aicilder beaten by his rage, And fo may I, blinde fortune leading me Mifle that which one vnworthier may attaine, And die with grieuing. Port. You muft take your chance, And either not attempt to choofe at all, Or fwear before you choose, if you choose wrong Neuer to feake to Ladie afterward In way of marriage, therefore be aduis’d. Mor. Nor will not, come bring me vnto my chance. Per. Firt forward to the temple, after dinner Your hazard shall be made. Mor. Good fortune then, Cornets, To make me bleit or curf’d it among men. Exeunt.

Enter the Cloane alone.

Chor. Certenely, my confidence will ferue me, to run from this Jew my Mafter: the fied is at mine elbow, and tempts me, faying to me, Ides, Launceler Ides, good Launceler, or good Ides, or good Launceler Ides, vfe your legs, take the fart, run away: my confidence fays no; take heed honefe Launceler, take heed honefe Ides, or as afore-faid honefe Launceler Ides, doe not runne, fcone running with thy heelles; well, the moft coragious fied bids me packe, fia faries the fied, away fides the fied, for the heauens route vp a braue minde fides the fied, and run; well, my confidence hanging about the necke of my heart, fates verele widelye to me; my honeft fRIEND Launceler, being an honeft mans fonne, or rather an honeft womans fonne, for indeede my Father did something fmacs, something grow too; he had a kinde of tafte; well, my confidence fays Launceler bouge not, bouge not fides the fied, bouge not fides my confidence, confidence fay I you compaffe well, fient fay I you compaffe well, to be rul’d by my confidence I should fay with the Jew my Mafter, (who God bleffe the marke)is a kinde of diuell; and to run away from the Jew I should be ruled by the fied, who faying your reverence is the diuell himfelfe: certainly the Jew is the verie diuell incarnation, and in my confidence, my confidence is a kinde of hard confidence, to offer to compaffe fide to flay with the Jew; the fied gives the more friendly compaffe: I will runne fide, my heelles are at your commandement, I will runne.

Enter old Gobbo with a Bafier.

God. Mafter yong-man, you 1 prave you, which is the wale to Mafter Jewes? Lan. O heauen, this is my true begotten Father, who being more then fand-bline, high grauel blinde, knows me not, I will trie confusions with him. God. Mafter yong Gentleman, I prave you which is the wale to Mafter Jewes. Lan. Turne upon your right hand at the next turnning, but at the next turning of all on your left; marrie at the verie next turning, turne of no hand, but turn downe indirectlie to the Iews house.

Gob. Be Gods fonties 'twill be a hard waie to hit, can you tell me whether one Lancelot that dwells with him, dwell with him or no.

Lan. Talkle you of yong Maister Lancelot, marke me now, now will I raise the waters; talke you of yong Maister Lancelot?

Gob. No Maister fir, but a poore mans sonne, his Fa- ther though I fay't is an honell exceeding poore man, and God be thanked well to line.

Lan. Well, let his Father be what a will, wee talke of yong Maister Lancelot.

Gob. Your worshipes friend and Lancelot.

Lan. But I praiie you erge old man, erge I befeech you, talkle you of yong Maister Lancelot.

Gob. Of Lancelot, ant please your maistership.

Lan. Erge Maister Lancelot, talke not of maister Lancelot, for the yong gentle man according to fates and definities, and fuch oddays fayings, the fitter three, & fuch braches of lernings is indeeited deceas'd, or as you would fay in plain teares, gone to heauen.

Gob. Marrie God forbid, the boye was the verie flaffe of my age, my verie prop.

Lan. Do I look like a cudgel or a houell-post, a flaffe or a prop: doe you know me Father.

Gob. Alacke the day, I know you not yong Gentle man, but I praiie you tell me, is my boye God reft his foule alive or dead.

Lan. Doe you not know me Father.

Gob. Alacke fir I am fain blindle, I know you not.

Lan. Nay, indeeide if you had your esies you might faile of the knowing me: it is a wife Father that knows his owne childe. Well, old man, I will tell you newes of your fan, give me your blessing, truth will come to light, murder cannot be hid long, a mans fonne may, but in the end truth will out.

Gob. Praye you fir stand vp, I am fere you are not Lancelot my boye.

Lan. Praye you let's have no more fooling about it, but give mee your blessing: I am Lancelot your boye that was, your fonne that is, your childe that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think ye are my fonne.

Lan. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Lancelot the Iews man, and I am sure Margerie your wife is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margerie indeede, Ibe fureone if thou be Lancelot, thou art mine owne flesh and blood: Lord woldhipt me he be, what a bearded thou got; thou haft got more haire on thy chin, then Dobbin my philhlophere has as on his tale.

Lan. It should feme me then that Dobbins tale grows backward. I am fure he had more haire of his tale then I have of my face when I left faw him.

Gob. Lord how art thou chang'd: how doft thou and thy Maister agree, I have brought him a prefent, how gree you now?

Lan. Well, well, but for mine owne part, as I have fet vp my refl to run awake, I go not refl till I have run some ground; my Maister's a verie Iews, give him a prefent, give him a halter, I am famifhit in his fervice. You may tell euerie finger I haue with my ribs: Father I am glad you are come, give me your prefent to one Maister Baffianio, who indeede giues rare new Liversie, if I fere not him, I will run as far as God has anie ground. O rare fortune, here comes the man, to him Father, for I am a Iew if I fere the Iew anie longer.

Enter Baffianio with a follower or two.

Baff. You may doe fo, but let it be fo hated that fupper be readie at the fartheft by fue of the cluке: fee thefe Letters deliuered, put the Liueries to making, and defire Gratiano to come amone to my lodging.

Lan. To him Father,
Gob. God bleffe your worship.

Baff. Gramercie, would'thou ought with me.
Gob. Here's my fonne fir, a poore boy.

Lan. Not a poore boy fir, but the rich Iews man that would be, my Father shall fpecifie.

Gob. He hath a great importation, as one would fay to ferue.

Lan. Indeede the shorte and the longe is, I fere the Iew, and have a defire as my Father shall fpecifie.

Gob. His Maister and he(fauing your worships reuerence) are scarce catercofins.

Lan. To be brieve, the verie truthe is, that the Iew hauing done me wrong, doth caufe me as my Father be Iing I hope an old man shall frutile unto you.

Gob. I have here a difh of Douse that I would beftow upon your worship, and my fuiue is.

Lan. In verie brieve, the fuite is imperient to my felle, as your worship shall know by this honeft old man, and though I say I is, though old man, yet poore man my Father.

Baff. One speake for both, what would you?

Lan. Serue you fir.

Baff. That is the verie defect of the matter fir.

Baff. I know thee well, thou haft obtayn'd thy fuite, Skylocke thy Maister fpoke with me this daie, And hath prefir'd thee, if it be prefumtion To leue a rich Iews fervice, to become The follower of fo poore a Gentleman.

Clo. The old prouerbe is verie well parted betweene my Maister Skylocke and you fir, you have the grace of God fir, and he hath enough.

Baff. Thou speake it well; so Father with thy Son, Take leave of thy old Maister, and enquire My lodging out, giue him a Luiere

More garded then his fellows: see it done.

Clo. The Father fir, I cannot get a fervice, no, I have here a tongue in my head, well: if anie man in Italy haue a firfer table which doth offer to ferve upon a booke, I fhall have good fortune; goe too, here's a simple line of life, here's a small trifles of wines, alas, fiftene wines is nothing, a leuen widlowes and nine maides is a fimple comming in for one man, and then to fcape drowning thricethre, and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a featherbed, here are fimple fapes: well, if Fortune be a woman, he's a good wench for this gere: Father come, lie take my leave of the Iew in the twinking.

Exit Clowne.

Baff. I praiie thee good Leonard think on this.

Thefe things being bought and orderly befowed Returne in hafe, for I doe feate to night

My beft eftemed acquaintance, hie thee goe.

Lan. My beft eftendeauntes shall be done herein. Exit. Le.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where's your Maister.

Lan. Yonder.
Leon. You'd fir: he walks.

Gra. Signior Bassanio.

Bass. Gratiano.

Gra. I have a fute to you.

Bass. You have obtain'd it.

Gra. You must not dente me, I must goe with you to Belmont.

Bass. Why then you must: but heare thee Gratiano, Thou art to wilde, to rude, and bold of voyce,

Parts that become thee happily enough,

And in such eyes as ours appeare not faults;

But where they are not knowne, why there they show

Something too liberal, pray thee take paine

To allay with some cold drops of modeifie

Thy skipping spirit, leaft through thy wilde behauiour

I be mistaken in the place I goe to,

And looke my peace.

Gra. Signior Bassanio, hear me,

If I doe not put on a sober habite,

Talkie with respehe, and sware but now and than,

Were prayer bookes in my pocket, looke demurely,

Nay more, while grace is living, hood mine eyes

Thus with my hat, and ashy and fray Amen:

Vfe all the obseruance of chiuillie

Like one well studied in a fad offent

To please his Grandam, neuer truft me more.

Bass. Well, we shall fee your bearing.

Gra. Nay but barre to night, you shall not gage me

By what we doe to night.

Bass. No that were pittie,

I would intreate you rather to put on

Your boldest fute of mirth, for we have friends

That poffege merriment: but far you well,

I have some businesse.

Gra. And I mutf to Lorenzo and the rest,

But we will vifite you at supper time.

Exeunt. Enter Iffica and the Cloane.

Iff. I am forry thou wolt leaue my Father so,

Our houfe is hell, and thou a merrie divell

Do's rob it of some saie of tediumfneffe; but far thee there, there is a darke for thee,

And Lancelot, fooe at fupper fhalt thou fee

Lorenzo, who is thy new Mahers gueft,

Gue him this Letter, doe it fecretly,

And fo farrewell: I would not haue my Father

See me take with thee.

Clo. Adeue, teares exhibit my tongue, most beautifull

Pagan, moft sweete Jew, if a Christian doe not play the knaue and get thee, I am much deceived: but adeue, thefe foolish drops doe sometyme drowne my manly fpirit; adeue.

Exeunt. Enter Iffica.

Iff. Farewell good Lancelot,

Alacke, what hainous finne is it in me

To be afhamed to be my Fathers childe,

But though I am a daughter to his blood,

I am not to his manners: O Lorenzo,

If thou keepe prouifie I shall end this fufe,

Become a Christian, and thy loving wife.

Exeunt. Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salamain, and Salanio.

Lan. Nay, we will flanke away in supper time,

Diguife vs at my lodging, and returne all in an houre.

Gra. We have not made good preparation.

Sal. We have not spoke vs yet of Torch-bearers.

Sel. 'Tis vife vneffe it may be quainty ordered,

And better in my minde not vnderfooke.

Lor. 'Tis now but foure of clock, we have two houres

To furnifh vs; friend Lancelot what's the newes.

Enter Lancelot with a Letter.

Lan. And it shall pleafe you to break vp this, it shall vseome to figuife.

Lor. I know the hand, in faith this is a faire hand

And whiter then the paper it writ on,

I the faire hand that writ.

Gra. Loue newes in faith.

Lan. By your leave sir.

Lor. Whither goeft thou?

Lan. Marry fir to bid my old Mafter the Jew to sup to night with my new Mafter the Christian.

Lor. Hold here, take this, tell gentle Iffica

I will not faile her, preake it priviteely:

Go Gentlemen, will you prepare you for this Maske to night,

I am prouded of a Torch-bearer.

Exit. Cloane.

Sel. I marry, ile be gone about it ftrait.

Sel. And fo will I.

Lor. Meete me and Gratiano at Gratianos lodgine

Some houre hence.

Sel. 'Tis good we do fo.

Gra. Was not that Letter from faire Iffica?

Lor. I mutf needs tell thee all, the hath directed

How I shall take her from her Fathers houfe,

What gold and jewels she is furnifh with,

What Papers fute the hath in readineffe:

If ere the Jew his Father come to heaven,

It will be for his gentle daughters fake;

And neuer dare misfortunue croffe her feetes,

Vneffe she doe it vnder this excufe,

That she is ififie to a faithflie Jew:

Come goe with me, perve it as thou goeft,

Faire Iffica shall be my Torch-bearer.

Exit. Enter Jew, and his man that was the Cloane.

Jew. Well, thou shall fee, thy eyes shall be thye judge,

The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio;

What Iffica, thou shalt not gurmandize

As thou haft done with me? what Iffica?

And sleepe, and floere, and rend apparell out,

Why Iffica I say.

Clo. Why Iffica.

Clo. Your worship was wont to tell me

I could doe nothing without bidding.

End Iffica.

Iff. Call you? what is your will?

Shy. I am bid forth to fupper Iffica,

There are my Keyes: but wherefore should I go?

I am not bid for love, they flatt're me,

But yet Ile goe in hate, to feeke vpon

The prodigall Christian. Iffica my girle,

Looke to my houfe, I am right loath to goe,

There is some ill a bruine towards my rett,

For I did dreame of money bags to night.

Clo. I befoche you sir goe, my yong Mafter

Doth expect your reproach.

Shy. So doe I his.

Clo. And they have confpired together, I will not say you shall see a Maske, but if you doe, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on blacke monday

Here dwells my father Iew. Hoa, who's within?

Ieffica, above.

Iff. Who are you? tell me for more certainty,
Albeit Ile sware that I do know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy loue.

Iff. Lorenzo certaine, and my loue indeed,
For who loue I is much? and now who knowes
But you Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lor. Haue, and thy thoughts are witness that thou art.

Iff. Heere, catch this casket, it is worth the paines,
I am glad 'tis night, you do not looke on me,
For I am much aANNOT'S of my exchange:
But loue is blinde, and louers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselfes commit,
For if they could, Cupid himselfe would blush
To fee me thus transformed to a boy.

Lor. Defende, for you must be my torch-bearer.

Iff. What, must I hold a Candle to my flames?
They in themselfes goodsooth are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of dioucere Loue,
And I should be obcur'd.

Lor. So you are sweet,
Even in the louely garnish of a boy: but come at once,
For the clocke night doth play the run-away,
And we are flaid for at Baffiano's feast.

Iff. I will make fast the doores and guard my selfe
With some more ducats, and be with you faire.

Gra. Now by my hand, a gentle, and no Iew.

Lor. Be thow I loue my heartily.

For the is wife, if I can judge of her,
And faire she is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true the is, as the hath prou'd her selfe:
And therefore like her selfe, wife, faire, and true,
Shall he be placed in my conffant foule.

Enter Iffica.

What, art thou come? on gentlemen, away,
Our masking mates by this time for to fly.

Exit.

Enter Antonio.

Ant. Who's there?

Gra. Signior Antonio?

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano, where are all the rest?
'Tis nine a clocke, our friends all fly for you,
No make to night, the windes is come about,
Baffiano presently wol go aboord,
I have sent twenty out to secke for you.

Gra. I am glad on't, I defire no more delight
Then to be vnder falle, and gone to night.

Execute.

Enter Portia with Mardoc, and both their trains.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and difcouer
The feuerall Caskets to this noble Prince:
Now make your choice.

Mar. The first of gold, who this inscription beares,
Who chooeth me, shall gaine what men defire.
The second flueres, which this promife carrie,
Who chooeth me, shall get as much as he defereus.
This third, still lead, with warning all as blunt,
Who chooeth me, must glue and hazard all he hath.
How shall I know if I doe chooeth the right?

Por. The
The Merchant of Venice.

How shall I know if I do choose the right.

Por. The one of them contains my picture Prince,
If you choose that, then I am yours withall.

Mor. Some God direct my judgment, let me see,
I will survey the inscriptions, backe againe:
What fates this leaden casket?

Who chooseth me, must glue and hazard all he hath.
Muft glue, for what? for lead, hazard for lead?
This casket threatens men that hazard all.

Doe it in hope of faire advantages:
A golden minde floopes not to thowes of droffe,
Hie then nor glue nor hazard ought for lead.
What fates the Siluer with her virgin hue?
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deferves.

As much as he deferves; paule there Mirocko,
And weigh thy value with an euene hand,
If thou beft rated by thy estimation
Thou dooët deferve enough, and yet enough,
May not extend fo farre as to the Ladic:
And yet to be afraid of my deferving,
Were but a weake disbling of my felfe.
As much as I deferves, why that's the Lady,
I doe in birth enforce her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding:
But more then thefe, in love I doe deferve.

What if thou draid no farther, but chofe here?
Let's fee once more this laying grau'd in gold.
Who chooët me shall gaine what many men defire:
Why that's the Lady, all the world defires her:
From the foure corners of the earth they come
To kfite this fhine, this mortall breathing Saint.
The Hircanion deferts, and the vafe widnes,
Of wide Arabia are as thoroughfares now.
For Princes to come view feare Portia.
The waterie Kingdome, whose ambitious head
Spets in the face of heaven, is no barre
To flop the fornaine spirits, but they come
As ore a brooke to fea faire Portia.

One of thefe three contains her heavenly picture.
It's like that Lead contains her twere damnation
To chinke fo bafe a thought, it were too grofe
To rib her fearcloath in the obfure graue:
Or shall I thinke in Siluer he's immor'd
Being ten times undervalued to true gold;
O finfull thought, neuer fo rich a Lem
Was fet in worfe then gold? They have in England
A coyne that beares the figure of an Angell
Stamp't in gold, but that's infulut upon:

But here an Angell in a golden bed
Lay all within.
Deliver me the key:
Here doe I chooue, and thirue as I may.

Por. There take it Prince, and if my forme yere there
Then I am yours.

Mor. O hell! what have we here, a carrion death,
Within whose efting eye there is a written frowne:
Ile reade the writing.

All that glisters is not gold,
Often have you heard that told;
Many a man his life hath sold
But muft out fiue to behold;

Guillemet timber doe wormses infold;
Had you beeue as wife as bold,
Tong in limbs, in judgment old,
Your answears had not beene infring'd,
Farewell you, your faulte is cold.

Mor. Cold indeed,e and labour loth,
Then farewell heate, and welcome frost:
Portia adew, I have too grief'd a heart.

To take a tedious leave: thus looers part.

Exit.

Por. A gentle riddance: draw the curtains, go:
Let all of his complexion chooëe me so.

Enter Salario and Solanio.
Flo, Cornets.

Sal. Why man I saw Baffiano vnnder fayle,
With him is Gratiano gone along;
And in their ship I am sure Lorenzo is not.

Sal. The villaine Iew with outwardes raflet the Duke,
Who went with him to search Baffiano ship.

Sal. He comes too late, the ship was vnnderfaile;
But there the Duke was gluuen to vnderfaile
That in a Gondillo were fene together
Lorenzo and his amorous effe.

Besides, Antonio certified the Duke
They were not with Baffiano in his ship.

Sal. I neuer heard a paftion so confuf'd,
So strange,outragious, and fo variable,
As the dogge Iew did vttre in the streets;
My daughter, O my ducats, O my daughter,
Fled with a Chrifian, O my Christian ducats!
Ruftice, the law, my ducats, and my daughter;
A fealed bag, tvvo fealed bags of ducats,
Of double ducats,ofme from my daughter,
And tvve, two fones, two rich and proueious fones,
Stoine by my daughter: Ruftice, finde the girl,
She hath the fones vpon her, and the ducats.

Sal. Why all the boyes in Venice follow him,
Crying his fones, his daughter, and his ducats.

Sal. Let good Antonio looke he keepe his day
Or he shall pay for this.

Sal. Marry well remembered,
I reaon'd with a Frenchman yesterdaye,
Who told me, in the narrow lea that part
The French and English, there mifcar'd
A vefell of our countrey richly fraught:
I thought vpon Antonio when he told me,
And with in silence that it were not his.

Sal. Yo were beft to tell Antonio what you here.
Yet doe not fuddainely, for it may griete him.

Sal. A kinder Gentleman tends not the earth,
I saw Baffiano und Antonio part,

Baffiano told him he would make fome speede
Of his returne: he anfwered, doe not fo,
Shubber not bufeines for my fake Baffiano;
But ftay the very ripinge of the time,
And for the treuer bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your minde of loue:
Be merry, and impoy your chieftest thoughts
To courthip, and fuch faire offents of loue.
And if he wifely, happily you be,
As fahly conueniently become you there;
And even then his eye bright, and with teares,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affeftion wondrous fencible
He wrung Baffiano hand, and fo parted.
Sal. I thinke he onely loues the world for him,
I pray thee let us goe and raflet him out
And quicken his embraced heauineffe
With fome delight or other.

Sal. Doe we fo.

Enter Nerriffa and a Servaunt.

Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee, draw the curtain ftrait,

The
The Prince of Arragon hath tune his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Enter Arragon, his train, and Portia.

Fior. Cornets.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets noble Prince,
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptial rights be solemniz'd:
But if thou fail, without more speech my Lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enioy'd by oath to obtaine three things;
First, never to vnfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, nearer in my life
To weoe a maid in way of marriage:
Lastly, if I do fall in fortune of my choyse,
Immediately to Leone you, and be gone.
- Refering this choice intimation, we doth allure
That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Ar. And so have I address'd, fortune now
To my hearts hope; gold, filuer, and base lead.
Who choofeth me must glue and hazard all he hath.
You shall looke fairer ere I glue or hazard.
What faies the golden cheef, ha, let me fee;
Who choofeth me, shall gaine what many men desire;
What many men desire that many may be meant
By the foole multitude that choo' by how,
Not learning more then the fond eye doth teach,
Which prays not to th'interior, but like the Marliet
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Euen in the force and rude of catastale,
I will not choo' what many men desire,
Because I will not jumpe with common spirits,
And ranke me with the barbarous multitude.
Why then to thee thou Siluer treause houfe,
Tell me once more, what title thou doost bear;
Who choo'eth me shall get as much as he defueres;
And well fald too for who shall goe about
To cofon Fortune, and be honourable
Without the flame of merrit, let none presume
To weare an vndefér'd dignitie;
O that estates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deri'd corruptly, and that clear honour
Were purchaft by the merrit of the wearer;
How many then shold covar that stand bare?
How many be commanded that command?
How much low pleyfantry would then be gleaned
From the true feece of honor? And how much honor
Picket from the chaffe and ruine of the times,
To be new varnife: Well, but to my choise.
Who choofeth me shal get as much as he defueres.
I will affume defert; give me a key for this,
And infantly unlocke my fortunes here.

Por. Too long a paufe for that which you finde there.

Ar. What's here, the portrait of a blinking idiot
Presenting me a fiddle, I will reade it:
How much unlike art thou to Portia?
How much unlike my hopes and my deferinings?
Who chooseth me, shall have as much as he defueres.
Did I defuer no more then a foole head,
Is that my price, are my defers no better?

Por. To offend and judge are difficil offices,
And of oppofed natures.

Ar. What is here?

The fir, Javen times tried this,

Some times tried that indument is,
That did never choose am's,
Some there be that foodeowes kiffe,
Such bee as but a fuddowes kiffe:
There bee foles alike Twit
Siluer'd o're, and fo was th'is:
Take what wise you will to bed,
I will ever be your beds,
So be gone, you are fped.

Ar. Still more foole I shall appear
By the time I linger here,
With one foole head I came to woo,
But I goe away with two.
Sweet adue, Ile keepe my oath,
Patiently to bear my wroth.

Por. Thou hast the candle fing'd the mouth:
O thou, a higher foole if when they doe chooseth,
They have the wilifome by their wit to looke.

Ner. The ancient faying is no hereifie,
Hanging and wiuing goes by definifh.

Por. Come draw the curteine Neriffia.

Enter Messinger.

Mef. Where is your Lady?

Por. Here, what would your Lord?

Mef. Madam, there is a lighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To defir the approaching of his Lord,
From whom he bringeth fennible regreets;
To wit (besides commendis and curious breath)
Gifts of rich value; yet I have not feene
So likely an Embassador of love.
A day in April never came fo sweete
To shew how costly Sommer was at hand,
As this fore-furer comes before his Lord.

Por. No more I pray thee, I am halfe a feard
Thou wilt fay anoone he is fome kin to thee,
Thou fpand'null such high-day'd wit in praising him:
Come, come, Neriffia, for I long to fee
Quicke Cupids Poff, that comes fo mannerly.

Ner. Baffonia Lord, loove if thy will it be.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Solano and Salerino.

Sal. Now, what newes on the Ryalto?

Sal. Why yet it liues there vouchcheckt, that Anthonio hath a flip of rich lading wrackt on the narrow seas; the Goodwins I thinke they call the place, a very dangerous fat, and fastile, where the caraffes of many a tall ship,ye burned, as they say, if my goiffes report be an honest womman of her word.

Sal. I would the were as lying a goiff in that, as ever knapt Ginger, or made her neighbours beleue the weft for the death of a third husband: but it is true, without any flips of probability, or crefting the plain high-way of tale, that the good Anthonio, the honest Anthonio, that I had a title good enough to keep his name company!

Sal. Come, the full fit.

Sal. Ha, what sayest thou, why the end is, he hath lost a fit.
The Merchant of Venice.

Sol. I would it might prove the end of his loaves.
Sol. Let me say Amen betimes, lest the devil crooke my prayer, for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew. How now Shylock, what news among the Merchants?

Enter Shylock.

Shy. You knew none so well, none so well as you, of my daughters flight.

Sol. That's certain, I for my part knew the Tailor that made the wings the flew withal.

Shy. And Shylock for his own part knew the bird was fledg'd, and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shy. She is damned for it.

Sol. That's certain, if the diuell may be her Judge.

Shy. My owne flesh and blood to rebell.

Sol. Out upon it old carrion, rebels it at these yeares.

Shy. I say my daughter is my flesh and blood. Sol. There is more difference betweene thy flesh and hers, then betweene Lat and Lucret, more betweene your bloods, then there is betweene red wine and rennife: but tell vs, doe you heare whether Anthony haue had ane loffe at sea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match, a bankrout, a prodigall, who dare scarce flew his head on the Ryalto, a begger that was vs'd to come so smug upon the Mart: let him look to his bond, he was wont to call me Vfurier, let him looke to his bond, he was wont to lend money for a Christian curtie, let him looke to his bond.

Sol. Why I am sure if he forfeite, thou wilt not take his flesh, what's that good for?

Shy. To bathe withal, if it will feele nothing else, it will feele my revenge; he hath disgrac'd me, and hindred me halfe a million, laught at my loffes,mockt at my gaines, scorned my bargaines, cooled my friends, ende my enemies, and what's the reason? I am a Jew! Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dementions, senses, affections, passions, fed with the same fooche, hurt with the same weapons, sick and weak with the same diseases, warmed and cooled by the same Winter and Sommer as a Christian is: if you prick vs doe we not bleed? if you tickle vs, doe we not laugh? if you poison vs doe we not die? and if you vs any good we be not avenged?

Enter Tubal.

Tub. One of them hewed me a ring that hee had of your daughter for a Monke.

Shy. Out upon her, thou tortur'd me Tuball, it was my Turkies, I had it of Leah when I was a Batcheler: I would not have given it for a waldenite of Monckes.

Tub. But Anthony is certainly vndone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true, goe Tuball, fee me an Officer, bespeak him a fortnight before, I will haue the heart of him if he forfeit, for were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandise I will: goe Tuball, and meete me at our Sinagogue, goe good Tuball, at our Sinagogue Tuball.

Exeunt.

Enter Bassiano, Portia, Gratians, and all their traine.

Por. I pray you curre, paufe a day or two Before you hazards, for in choosing wrong I looke on your company; therefore forbear a while, There's something tells me (but it is not loue) I would not looke you, and you know your selue, Hate counfailes not in such a qualitie; But least you should not vnderstand me well, And yet a maiden hath no tongue, but thought, I will detaine you here three moneth or two Before you venture for me. I could teach you How to chose right, but then I am forsworne, So will I never be, so may you misse me, But if you doe, youe make me with a faine, That I had beene forsworne: Behrow your eyes, They haue ore-look't me and deuided me, One halfe of me is yours, the other halfe yours, Mine owne I would fay but of mine then yours, And so all yours, O these naughtie times Puts bars betweene the owners and their rights. And so though yours, not yours (praise it so), Let Fortune goe to hell for it, not I. I speake too long, but 'tis to peize the time, To ich it, and to draw it out in length, To flay you from eleclion.

The Merchant of Venice

Baff. Let me choose,
For as I am, I live upon the racke.
Par. Upon the racke Baffanio, then confess;
What treason there is mingled with your loue.
Baff. None but that vrgle treason of mistrust.
Which makes me feare the enjoying of my loue:
There may as well be sinfull and life,
'Tweene snow and fire, as treason and my loue:
Par. I, but I feare you speake upon the racke,
Where men enforced doth speake any thing.
Baff. Promiſfe me life, and Ie confess the truth.
Par. Well then, confess and live.
Baff. Confess and live.

Had beene the verie fum of my confeffion:
O happy torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me anuers for delierance:
But let me to my fortune and the caskets.
Par. Away then, I am lockt in one of them,
If you doe loue me, you will finde me out.

Nerfilia and the rest, stand all aloofe,
Let muſicke found while he doth make his choife,
Then if he loole he makes a Swan-like end,
Fading in muſicke. That the comparison
May stand more proper, my eye shall be the {3}erace
And watrie death-bed for him: he may win,
And what is muſicke than? Than muſicke is Even as the flourifh, when true书法te bowe
To a new crowned Monarch: Such it is,
As are thofe dulcett founds in breake of day,
That creepe into the dreaming bride-groomes ear,
And fummon him to marriage. Now he goes
With no leffe preference, but with much more loue
Then yong Alcides, when he did redeem
The vrgins tribute, paid by howling Troy
To the Sea-monster: I fand for facrifice,
The reft aloofe are the Dardanian wines:
With bleared vifages come forth to view
The issue of th' exploit: Goe Hercules,
Lieve thou, I live with much more diffay
I view the fight, then thou that mak'ft the fray.

Here Muficke.

A Song the vtilſt Baffanio comments on the Caskets to bijmſſe.

Tell me where a fancie bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head:
How begot, bow nourifhed.
Replie, replie.
It is engendered in the eyes,
With Generate feed, and faecies dies,
In the cradle wheare it lies:
Let us all ring faecies knell.
Ile begin it.
Ding, dong, bell,
All. Ding, dong, bell.

Baff. So may the outward showes be leaft themselves
The world is still decu'd with ornament.
In Law, what Plea fo tanted and corrupt,
But being feaon'd with a gracious voice,
Obferves the show of eulph. In Religion,
What damned error, but fome fober brow
Will bleffe it, and approfe it with a text,
Hiding the grofeneffe with faire ornament:
There is no voice fo fimple, but affumes
Some marke of vertue on his outward parts;

How manie cowards, whose hearts are all as faule
As fayers of fand, were ye vert upon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars,
Who inward feaeh, have lyuens white as milke,
And thee affume but valors excriment,
To render them redoubtles. Lookke on beauties,
And you shall fee 'ts purchafe by the weight,
Which therein worke a miracle in nature,
Making them lighted that ware moft of it:
So are thofe cripted fnakle golden locks
Which make fuch wanton gambols with the winde
Vpon suppedoed fairenesse, often knowne
To be the dowrie of a fecond head,
The faull that bred them in the Sepulcher.
Thus ornament is but the gullid shore
To a mort dangerous fea: the beautifull scarf
Valling an Indian beautie: In a word,
The feeming truth which cunning times put on
To intrap the wiſhet. Therefore then thou gaudie gold,
Hard food for Alidias, I will none of thee,
Nor none of thee thou pale and common drudge
'Tweene man and man: but thou, thou meager lead
Which rather threateneth then doth promise ought,
Thy palenie moues me more then eloquence,
And here choofe I, joy be the confequence.

Par. How all the other paftions fleet to ayre,
As doubling thoughts, and rash imprad' deare:
And shuddring fear, and greene-eyed jealousy.
O loue be moderate, alway thy extasie,
In meaure raine thy joy, feant this excelle,
I feele too much thy bleyning, make it leffe,
For feare I forfeit.
Baff. What finde I here?
Fare Poetia counterfeit, What demie God
Hath come fo neere creation? moue thefe efes?
Or whether riding on the bals of mine
Seeme they in motion? Here are feuer'd lips
Parted with fuger breath, fo sweet a barre
Should funder luch sweet friends: here in her hairs
The Painter plies the Spider, and hath wouen
A golden meff t' intrap the hearts of men
Fatter then gnats in cobwebs: but her efes,
How could he fee to doe them? haunting made one,
Me thinkes it shoule have power to fiale both his
And leave it felle unpalatable: Yet looke how farre
The fubftance of my praffe doth wrong this shadow
In vnderprifing it, fo farre this shadow
Doth limpe behind the fubftance. Here's the fercoute,
The continent, and fummarie of my fortune.

You that choofe not by the view
Chance as faires, and choofe as true:
Since this fortune fails to you,
Be content, and feke no more.
If you be well plaied with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss;
Turne you where your Lady is,
And claim her with a loving hiff.

Baff. A gentle fercoute: Fare Lady, by your leave,
I come by note to giue, and to receiue,
Like one of two containing in a prize
That thinkes he hath done well in peoples efes:
Hearing applaufe and vnuerfall shout,
Giddie in spiritt, still gazing in a doubt
Whether thofe pesels of praffe be his or no.
The Merchant of Venice.

So thrice faire Lady stand I even so,
As doubtfull whether what I see be true,
Wittill confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.
Por. You see my Lord Baffiano where I stand,
Such as I am; though for my selfe alone
I would not be ambitious in my with,
To wish my selfe much better, yet for you,
I would be troubled twenty times my selfe,
A thousand times more faire, ten thousand times
More rich, that onely to stand high in your account,
I might in vertues, beauties, luings, friends,
Exceed account; but the full summe of me
Is sum of nothing: which to termes in gross,
Is an vnselfed girl, vnschool'd, vnpreacht's,
Happy in this, she is not yet to old
But she may learn: happier then this,
Shee is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all, is that her gentle sprit,
Commits it faire to yours to be directed,
As from her Lord, her Gouernour, her King,
My selfe, and what is mine, to you and yours
Is now converted. But now I was the Lord
Of this faire mansion, master of my seruants,
Queene ere my selfe: and even now, but now,
This house, these seruants, and this fame my selfe
Are yours, my Lord, I give them with this ring,
Which when you part from, loose, or glue away,
Let it praffle the raine of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.
Baff. Madam, you have hereof me of all words,
Onely my blood speakes to you in your vaines,
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As after some oration fairely spake
By a beloved Prince, there doth appeare
Among the buzzing pleased multitude,
Where every thinge being blent together,
Turnes to a wilde of nothing, faue of joy
Express, and not express: but when this ring
Parts from this finger, then para life from hence,
0 then be hold to say Baffiano's dead.
Ner. My Lord and Lady, it is now our time
That hauie flood by and scene our wishes prosper,
To cry good joy, good joy my lord and Lady.
Gra. My Lord Baffiano, and my gentle Ladie,
I wish you all the joye that you can wish:
For I am sure you can wish none from me;
And when your Honours meane to solemnize
The bargaine of your faith: I doe beseech you
Even at that time I may be married too.
Baff. With all my heart, I thou canst get a wife,
Gra. I thankye your Lordship, you gave me one.
My eyes my Lord can looke as witt as yours:
You saw the mistres, I beheld the maid:
You lou'd, I lou'd for intermission,
No more pertaines to me my Lord then you;
Your fortune flood upon the caskets there,
And so did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooring heere untill I witt againe,
And Iwearing till my very rough was dry
With othes of lone, at last, if promise last,
I got a promise of this faire one heere
To have her love: provided that your fortune
Atchieu'd her mistreffe.
Por. Is this true Nerissa?
Ner. Madam it is so, so you stand pleas'd withall.
Baff. And doe you grant this mean this faith?
The Merchant of Venice.

Hath all his ventures fail'd, what not one hit,
From Tripolis, from Mexico and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India,
And not one well-fell scape the dreadful touch
Of Merchant-marrying rocks?

Sal. Not one my Lord.

Beshies, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it: never did I know
A creature that did bear the shape of man
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
He gies the Duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach, the freedom of the state
If they deny him justice. Twenty Merchants,
The Duke himself, and the Magnificoes
Of greatest port have all periwended with him,
But none can drive him from the enulous plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.

Ieff. When I was with him, I have heard him swear
To Tuball and to Chou, his Country-men,
That he would rather have Antipholus' thief,
Then twenty times the value of the summe
That he did owe him: and I know my Lord,
If law, authority, and power dente now,
It will goe hard with poore Antipholus.

Por. Is it thy deere friend that is thus in trouble?

Baff. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The belt condition'd, and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies: and one in whom:
The ancient Roman honneur more appears
Then any that draws breath in Italie.

Por. What summe owes he the Jew?

Baff. For me three thousand ducats.

Por. What, no more?

Pay him faire thousand, and deface the bond:
Double faire thousand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a hairre through Baffiano's fault.
First goe with me to Church, and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend:
For never shall you lie by Portia's side
With an vnquiet foule. You shall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over.
When it is payd, bring your true friend along,
My maid Nerissa, and my selfe meane time
Will live as maids and widdowes; I come away,
For you shall hence vpon your wedding day:
Bid your friends welcome, how a merry cheere,
Since you are deere bought, I will love you deere.
But let me hear the letter of your friend.

Sweet Baffiano, my ships have all miscarried, my Creditors growe cruel, my estate is very lowe, my bond to the Jew is forfeit, and since in paying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cled between you and I, if I might see you at my death: nowe take this: if your pleasures; if your love do not perforce you to come, let not my letter.

Por. O loue dispach all bufines and be gone.

Baff. Since I have your good leaue to goe away,
I will make haste; but till I come againe,
No bed shall ere be guilty of my lays,
Nor raffe be interpofter twist vs twaine.

Ieff. Enter the Jew, and Solanio, and Antipholus, and the Taylor.

Iew. Iaylor, looke to him, tell not me of mercy,
The Merchant of Venice.

The husbandry and manage of my house,
Yet till my Lord returne, for mine owne part
I have toward heauen breath'd a secret vow,
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Onely attend'd by Neriffa here,
Yet till her husband and my Lord returne:
There is a monethry too miles off,
And there we will abide. I doe defire you
Not to denie this imposition,
The which my love and some necessity
Now layes upon you.

Loren. Madame, with all my heart,
I shall obey you in all faire commands.
Per. My people doe already know my mindes,
And will acknowledge you and Ieffica
In place of Lord Bassanio and my selfe.
So fast you well till we shall meete again.

Lor. Fake thoughts & happy hours attend on you,
Ieff. With your Ladiship all hearts content.
Per. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd
To have it backe on your faryouell Ieffica.

Exit. Now Bassaio, as I have ever found thee honest true,
So let me finde thee still: take this coin letter,
And we all thou the indenser of a man,
In speed to Mantua, see thou render this
Into my cofins hand, Doctor Belard,
And looke what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them I pray the with imag'd speed
Vnto the Trancet, to the common Ferrie
Which trades to Venice: waife no time in words,
But get thee gone, I shall be there before thee.

Baili. Madam, I goe with all convenient speed.
Per. Come on Neriffa, I have worke in hand.
That you yet know not of; we'll see our husbands
Before they think of vs.

Neriffa. Shall they see vs?
Portia. They shall Neriffa: but in such a habit,
That they shall think we are accomplisht
With that we lacke: Ile hold thee any wager
When we are both accoutered like yong men,
Ile prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And weare my daguer with the brauer grace,
And speake betweene the change of man and boy,
With a redee voyce, and turne two minding dreps
Into a many stride; and speake of frayses
Like a fine bragging youth: and tell quaint lytes
How honourable Ladies bought my love,
Which I denying, they fell lice and died.
I could not doe withall: then Ile reape,
And with for all that, I had not kill'd them;
And twente of these purpie lies Ile tell,
That men shal sweare I have diuindshed school
Above a twelth moneth: I have within my minde
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging lacks,
Which I will prati.

Neriff. Why, shall wee turne to men?
Portia. Fle, what a questions that?
If thou wert nere a lewed interpreter:
But come, Ile tell thee all my whole deuide
When I am in my coach, which flayres for vs
At the Parke gate; and therefore halfe away,
For we must mesure twentie miles to day.

Exit.

Enter Clowes and Ieffica.

Clowes. Yes truly; for looke you, the finnes of the Father are to be laid upon the children, therefore I promise you, I feare you, I was alwayes plaine with you, and so now I speake my agitation of the matter: therefore be of good cheere, for truly I think you are damn'd, there is but one hope in it that can doe you ane good, and that is but a kinde of bafard hope neither.

Ieffica. And what hope is that I pray thee?
Clow. Marrie you may partlie hope that your father got you not, that you are not the lewes daughter.

Ieff. That were a kinde of bafard hope indeed, so the fins of my mother should be visited upon me.

Clow. Truly then I feare you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I thin Scilla your father, I fall into Carihde your mother; well, you are gone both wales.

Ieff. I shall be fau'd by my husband, he hath made me a Christian.

Clow. Truly the more to blame he, we were Christians euer before, e're as many as could well liue one by a-other: this making of Christians will raffe the price of Hogs, if wee grow all to be porke-eaters, wee shall not shortlie haue a raver on the coales for money.

Enter Lorenzo.

Ieff. Ile tell my husband Lancelet what you say, heere he comes.

Loren. I shall grow lesions of you shortly Lancelet, if you thus get my wife into corners?

Ieff. Nay, you need not fear vs Lorenzo, Lancelet and I are out, he tells me fatly there is no mercy for mee in heauen, because I am a lewes daughter: and hee saies you are no good member of the common wealth, for in converting lewes to Christians, you raffe the price of Porke.

Loren. I shall answere that better to the Commonwealth, than you can the getting vp of the Negroes belit; the Moore is with childe by you Lancelet?

Clow. It is much that the Moore should be more then reason: but if the be leffe than an honest woman, the is indeed more then I tooke her for.

Loren. How euer foole can play vpon the word, I think the beft grace of witte will shortlie turne into fi-lence, and doocourfe grow commendable in none onely but Parrots; goo in firra, bid them prepare for dinner?

Clow. That is done fir, they haue all stomacks?

Loren. Goodly Lord, what a witte-snapper are you, then bid them prepare dinner.

Clow. That is done to fir, onely couer is the word.

Loren. Will you couer than fir?

Clow. Not to fir neither, I know my dutie.

Loren. Yet more quarrelling with occasion, wilt thou flew the whole wealth of wit in an instant; I pray thee understand a plaine man in his plaine meaning: goo to thy fellowes, bid them couer the table, ferue in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Clow. For the table fir, it shall be feru'd in, for the meat fir, it shall bee couered, for your comming in to dinner fir, why let it be as humors and conceits shall goerne.

Exit Clowes.

Lor. O deare discretion, how his words are futed,
The foole hath planted in his memory
An Armie of good words, and I doe know
A many fooles that fland in better place,
Garnish't like him, that for a tricke ye word
Diffe the matterhow cheerr't thou Ieffica,
And now good sweet say thy opinion,
The Merchant of Venice.

How dost thou like the Lord Bassiano's wife?

If thy fault be not of thy own act,

The Lord Bassiano telleth thee that he wishes thee to be in his service.

For it is the custom of the merchants of Venice to have a servant who can speak several languages.

And if thou be not in his service, thou must not return to thine own country.

His servant, Portia, is to be sent to Bassanio to make an explanation.

And thou must be able to speak English.

Enter the Duke, the Magnificoes, Antonio, Bassanio, and Gratiano.

Duke. What, is Antonio here?

Ant. Ready, to please your grace.

Duke. I am for thee, thou art come to an answer.

Ant. A ducat or two, if thou hast not got them.

Enter Shylock.

Duke. Make room for Shylock. Let him stand before our face.

Shylock. Shylock the world thinkes, and I think so too.

Thou hast been dealt with in a manner that is not right.

To the last hour of thy life, and then 'tis thought

Thou'lt have thy money and remore more strange.

Than is strange apparent cruelty.

And where thou now exactest the penalty,

Which is a pound of this poor Merchant flesh.

Thou wilt not only lose the forfeiture,

But touch'd with humane gentleness and love.

Forgive a moatly of the principal,

Glancing an eye of pity on his lofes.

That have of late so bled on his backe,

Now to preffe a roayll Merchant downe;

And plucke commination of his flate

From braffe bobomes, and rough hearts of flints,

From stubborne Turkes and Tarters never trained.

To offices of tender curtesie,

We all expect a gentle answer:

Iew. I have poisseth your grace of what I purpose.

And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn,

To have the due and forfeit of my bond.

If you deny it, let the danger light

Upon your Charter, and your Cities freedom.

You'll make me why I rather choose to have

A weight of carrion flesh, then to receive

Three thousand Duckets? Hee not answer that?:

But say it is his humor; Is it answer'd?

What if my house be troubled with a Rat,

And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand Duckets

To have 't balm'd? What are you answer'd yet?

Some men there are lose not a gaping Pigge:

Some that are mad, if they behold a Cat;

And others, when the big -pipe fings 'tis note,

Cannot contain their V dine for affright.

Matters of passion fways it to the moode
Of what it likes or loathes, now for your answer:

As there is no firme reason to be rendred

Why he cannot abide an gaping Pigge?

Why he a harmefull necessarie Cat?

Why he a woollen bag-pipe: but of force

Must yeeld to such insusituable flame,

As to offend himselfe being offended:

So can I glue no reason, nor I will not,

More then a lodg'd hate, and a certaine loathing

I heare Antonio, that I follow thus

A looking suite against him? Are you answer'd?

Bass. This is no answer thou vanefseing man,

To excuse the currant of thy cruelty.

Iew. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.

Bass. Do all men kill the things they do not love?

Iew. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?

Bass. Euerie offence is not a hate at first.

Iew. What wouldst thou have a Serpent sting thee twice?

Ant. I pray you thinke you question with the Iew:

You may as well go stand upon the beach,

And bid the maine flood baite his vshall height,

Or even as well vfe question with the Wolf,

The Ewe bleate for the Lambe:

You may as well forbid the Mountain Pines

To wagge their high tops, and to make no noise

When they are set with the gusts of heaven.

You may as well do any thing most hard,

As fecke to softe that, then which what harder?

His Iewish heart. Therefore I do beseech you

Make no more offers, vie no farther meanes,

But with all brieue and plaine convenientce

Let me have judgement, and the Iew his will.

Bass. For thy three thousand Duckets hereis fix.

Iew. If euerie Ducat in fix thousand Duckets

Were in fixe parts, and every part a Ducate,

I would not draw them, I would haue my bond.

Do. How shalst thou hope for merce, rendring none?

Iew. What judgement shal I dread doing no wrong?

You have among you many a parchet flauu,

Which like your Affies, and your Dogs and Mules,

You vfe in abieed, and in fluidous parts,

Because you bought them. Shall I say to you,

Let them be free, marrie them to your heiress.

Why swete they vnder burthen? Let their beds

Be made as soft as yours: and let their palfats,

Be fefond with such Vlands: you will anver

The
The Merchant of Venice.

179

The flaves are ours. So do I answer you.

The pound of flesh which I demand of him

Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it.

If you deny me: I lie upon your Law,

There is no force in the decrees of Venice;

I stand for judgement, answer, Shall I have it?

Du. Upon my power I may dismiss this Court,

Valeffe Bellario a learned Doctor,

Whom I have hasted for to determine this,

Come heere to day.

Sal. My Lord, heere flaves without

A Messenger with Letters from the Doctor,

New come from Padua.

Du. Bring us these Letters, Call the Messengers.

Baj. Good cheere Anthenio. What man, corage yet?

The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,

Erre thou shalt looke for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted Weather of the Flock,

Meateth for death, the weakest kinde of fruite

Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me;

You cannot better employ'd Bellario,

Then to live fill, and write mine Epithaph.

Enter Nerilia.

Du. Came you from Padua from Bellario?

Ner. From both.

My Lord Bellario greetes your Grace.

Baj. Why dost thou writ when thy knife so earnestly?

Jew. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrout there.

Gra. Not on thy faire: but on thy faire harth Jew.

Thou mak'st thy knife keenie: but no mettall can,

No, not the hangmans Axe beare halfe the keeneness

Of thy sharpe enuy. Can no prayers pierce thee?

Jew. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.

Gra. O be thou damn'd, inexecrable dogge,

And for thy life let Justice be accus'd:

Thou almoft mak'st me waver in my faith;

To hold opinion with Pythagoras,

That foules of Animals inuole themselves

Into the truncks of men. Thy curruh spirit

Gouern'd a Wolfe, who hang'd for humane slauhter,

Even from the gallowes did his fell foule fleete;

And whilst it layeth in thy unhallowed dam,

Infod it felte in thee: For thy desires

Are Wouluih, bloody, fluent and raenous.

Jew. Tell thus canst reale from off my bond

Thou but offend'st thy Luens to speake so loud.

Repaire thy wit good youth, or it will fall

To endelesse ruine. I stand heere for law.

Du. This Letter from Bellario doth commend

A yong and Learned Doctor in our Court;

Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth heere hard by

To know your anwer, whether you'll admit him.

Du. With all my heart. Some three or four of you

Go give him curteous conduct to this place,

Meane time the Court shall heare Bellarias Letter.

Y our Grace shall understand, that at the receit of your Letter I am very faine; but in the influent that your messenger came, in loveing suggestion, was with me a young Doctor of Rome, his name is Balthasar: I acquainted him with the case in Controversie, betweene the Jew and Anthenio the Merchant: We turn'd our many Booke together: for is furnished with my opinion, which bordered his course learning, the greatest auhor of I cannot enough commend, caus'd with him at my importunity, to fill up your Grace's requisit in my stead. I beseech you, let his lacke of years be no impediment to let him lacke a rewarden committion: for I never knew so yong a body, with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his communion.

Enter Portia for Balthasar.

'Duke. You heare the learnt Bellario what he writes, And herefore I take it is the Doctor come.

Gie me your hand: Came you from old Bellario?

Por. I did my Lord.

Du. You are welcome: take your place;

Are you acquainted with the difference

That holds this present question in the Court.

Por. I am informed thoroughly of the cause.

Which is the Merchant hereof and which the Jew?

'Du. Anthenio and old Shylocke, both stand forth.

Por. Is your name Shylocke?

Iew. Shylocke is my name.

Por. Of a strange nature is the fute you follow,

Yet in such rule, that the Venetian Law

Cannot impugne you as you do proceed.

You stand within his danger, do you not?

Ant. I, fo he fayes.

Por. Do you confesse the bond?

Ant. I do.

Por. Then must the Jew be mercifull.

Iew. On what compulsion muft I? Tell me that.

Por. The quality of mercy is not strain'd,

It droppeth as the gentle raine from heaven

Upon the place beneath. It is twice blest,

It bleffeth him that giveth, and him that takes,

'Tis mighty in the mightie, it becomes

The throned Monarch better then his Crowne.

His Scepter fiewes the force of temporal power,

The attribute to awe and Maietie,

Wherein doth fit the dread and fear of Kings:

But mercy is above this sceptred sway,

It is enthroned in the hearts of Kings,

It is an attribute to God himselfe;

And earthly power doth then fiewe likeit Gods

When mercie lesions faluice. Therefore Iew,

Though Iewice by thy plea, consider this,

That in the course of Iulicie, none of us

Should fee futilion: we do pray for mercie,

And that fame prayer, doth teach vs all to render

The deeds of mercie. I have spoke thus much

To mitigate the faluice of thy plea:

Which if thou follow, this firit cours of Venice

Must needs giue fentence gainst the Merchant there.

Shy. My deeds vsyon my head, I craue the Law,

The penaltie and forfeite of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to discharge the money?

Baj. Yes, heere I tender it for him in the Court,

Yea, twice the summe, if that will not faluice,

I will be bound to pay it ten times ore,

On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart:

If this will not faluice, it must appeare

That malle beares downe truth. And I befeech you

Week once the Law to your authority,

To do a great right, do a little wrong,

And curb this cruell diuell of his will.

Por. It muft not be, there is no power in Venice

Can alter a decree establisht:

'Twill be recorded for a President,
And many an error by the same example, Will rush into the state: It cannot be.

Por. A Daniel come to judgement, yea a Daniel.

O wife young judge, how do I honour thee?

Por. I pray you let me looke upon the bond.

Por. Here be at most reverend Doctor, here it is.

Por. Shylock, there's thre' s thousand monie offered thee.

Shy. An oth' an oth', I have an oth' in heauen:
Shall I lay perjury upon my soule?
No not for Venice.

Por. Why this bond is forfeit,
And lawfully by this the Jew may claime
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Nearreth the Merchants heart; be mercifull,
Take thrice thy money, bid me teare the bond.

Por. When it is paid according to the tenure.

It doth appeare you are a worthy judge:
You know the Law, your councellor,
Hath beene most found. I charge you by the Law,
Whereof you are a well-defearing pillar,
Proceede to judgement: By my soule Ieware,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me: I lay here, you on my bond.

Por. Most heartily do I beseech the Court
To giue the judgement.

Por. Why then thus it is: you must prepare your bosome for his knife.

Por. O noble Judge, O excellent yong man.

Por. For the intent and purpose of the Law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which heere appeareth due upon the bond.

Por. 'Tis very true: O wife and upright Judge,
How much more elder art thou then thy lookes?

Por. Therefore lay bare your bosome.

Por. I, his breth,
So fayes the bond, doth it not noble Judge?
Nearreth his heart, those are the very words.

Por. It is so: Are there balanc' heere to weigh the flesh?

Por. I have them ready.

Por. Haue by some Surgeon Shylock on your charge
To stop his wounds, leafe he should bleed to death.

Por. It is not nominated in the bond?

Por. It is not so express: but what of that?

Por. Thus you do bud, nor cut thou leefe nor more
But is a pound of flesh: if thou tak'rt more
Or leefe then a pound, be it so much
As makes it light or heauy in the substance,
Or the duellion of the twentieth part
Of one poore scraple, say if the scale doe turne
But in the eballation of a hayre,

Por. Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. A secon Daniel, a Daniel law,
Now infidell I haue thee on the hip.

Por. Why doth the law proue, take thy forfeiture.

Por. Give me my princiall, and let me goo.

Por. I haue it ready for thee, heere it is.

Por. He hath refus'd it in the open Court,
He shall have meery luffe and his bond.

Gra. A Daniel till say I, a secon Daniel,
I thanke thee lew for teaching me that word.

Shy. Shall I not have barely my princiall?

Por. Thou haust not haue but the forfeiture,
To be taken so at thy peril lew.

Shy. Why then the Deuell giue him good of it?

Shy: ne'er no longer question.

Por. Tarry
The Merchant of Venice

Por. Tarry Jew,
The Law hath yet another hold on you.
It is enacted in the Lawes of Venice,
If it be proved against an Alien,
That by direct, or indirec't attempts
He feke the life of any Citizen,
The party gains the which he doth contrive,
Shall loose one halfe his goods, the other halfe
Comes to the pruie coffer of the State,
And the offenders life lies in the mercy
Of the Duke onely, gainst all other voice.
In which predicament I say thou:Randiff:
For it appears by manifest proceeding,
That indirec'tly, and directly to,
Thou haft contriv'd against the very life
Of the defendant: and thou hast incur'd
The danger formerly by me reheard.
Downe therefore, and beg mercy of the Duke.

Gra. Beg that thou maist haue lease to hang thy selfe,
And yet thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
Thou haft not left the value of a cord,
Therefore thou must be hang'd at the state's charge.

Duk. That thou mightst see the difference of our spirit,
I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it:
For halfe thy wealth, it is antoniano's,
The other halfe comes to the general state,
Which humblenesse may drive unto a fine.

Por. For the state, not for antoniano.

Sly. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that,
You take my house, when you do take the prop
That doth sustaine my house: you take my life
When you do take the means whereby I live.

Por. What mercy can you render him antoniano's?
Gra. A halfer gratia, nothing else for Gods sake.
Ant. So please my Lord the Duke, and all the Court
To quit the fine for one halfe of his goods,
I am content: so he will let me have
The other halfe in vfe, to render it
Upon his death, vnto the Gentleman
That lately stole his daughter.

Two things provided more, that for this favour
He presently become a Christen:
The other, that he doe record a gift
Herein in the Court of all he dies poss'd
Vnto his fonne Lorenzo, and his daughter.

Duk. He shall doe this, or else I doe recant
The pardon that I late pronounced here.

Por. Art thou contented Jew? what dost thou say?
Sly. I am content.
Por. Clarke, draw a deed of gift.

Sly. I pray you give me leave to goe from hence,
I am not well, fend the deed after me,
And I will signe it.

Duk. Get thee gone, but doe it.
Gra. In chriftening thou shalt have two godfathers,
Had I beene judge, thou shouldst have had ten more,
To bring thee to the gallows, not to the font.

Duk. Sir I intreat you with me home to dinner.
Por. I humbly doe desire your Grace of pardon,
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meete I presently set forth.
Duk. I am sorry that thy legesse serves you not:
Antoniano, gratifie this gentleman,
For in my minde, you are much bound to him.

Exit Duke and his traine.

Baff. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend

Have by your wisely done this day acquitted
Of greuous penalties, in lieu whereof,
Three thousand Ducats due vnto the Jew
We freely cope your curteous paines withall.

Ant. And stand indebted ouer and above
In love and service to you euermore.

Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied,
And I deliuerung you, am satisfied,
And therein doe account my selfe well paid,
My minde was neuer yet more mercinarie.
I pray you know me when we meete againe,
I with you well, and so I take my leave.

Baff. Deare sir, of force I must attempt you further,
Take some remembrance of vs as a tribute,
Not as fee: grant me two things, I pray you
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.

Por. You preffe mee faire, and therefore I will yield,
Gie me your gloves, Ile wear them for your sake,
And for your loue Ie take this ring from you,
Doe not draw backe your hand, Ie take no more,
And you in loue shall not deny me this?

Baff. This ring good sir, alas it is a trifle,
I will not flame my selfe to gue you this.

Por. I will haue nothing else but onely this,
And now methinkes I have a minde to it.

Baff. There's more depepends on this then on the vaelw,
The dearest ring in Venice will I gue you,
And finde it out by proclamation,
Onely for this I pray you pardon me.

Por. I see sir you are liberal in offers,
You taught me first to beg, and now me thinkes
You teach me how a beggar should be answer'd.

Baff. Good sir, this ring was gieen me by my wife,
And when she put it on, she made me vow
That I should neither fell, nor gue, nor lofe it.

Por. That feule serues many men to faue their gifts,
And if your wife be not a mad woman,
And know how well I haue deluer'd this ring,
Sche would not hold out enemy for euer
For gluing it to me: well, peace be with you.

Exeunt. My L. Baffanio, let him have the ring,
Let his deferings and my loue withall
Be valued against your wives commandement.

Baff. Goa Gratianio, run and ouer take him,
Gie him the ring, and bring him if thou canst
Vnto Antoniano house, away, make haste.

Exit Gratianio.

Come, you and I will thinke presently,
And in the morning early will we both
Flie toward Balsino, come Antoniano.

Exeunt.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. Enquire the Jews house out, gie him this deed,
And let him signe it, wee'1l away to night,
And be a day before our husbands home:
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratianio.

Gra. Faire sir, you are well ore-tane:
My L. Baffanio upon more advice,
Hath sent you hereto this ring, and doth intreat
Your company at dinner.

Por. That cannot be;
His ring I doe accept moft thankfully,
And so I pray you tell him: furthermore,
I pray you shew my youth old Shylocks house.

Gra. That will I doe.

Nor. Sir, I would speake with you:

Enter Clowns.

Clo. Sola, sola: wo ha ha, sola, sola.
When neither is attended: and I thinke
The Nightingale if the should sing by day
When every Goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a Murdian then the Wren?
How many things by feason, feason’d are
To their right praise, and true perfection:
Peace, how the Moone sleepes with Endimion,
And would not be awak’d.

Mystake caesars.

Lor. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiv’d of Portia.
Por. He knowes me as the blinde man knowes the Cuckow by the bad voice?

Lor. Deere Lady welcome home?
Por. We haue bne praying for our husbands welfare
Which speed we hope the better for our words,
Are they return’d?
Lor. Madam, they are not yet:
But there is come a Maffinger before
To signifie their comming.

Por. Go in Nerissia,
Give order to your Servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence,
Nor you Lorenzo, Let no you
A Tucket founds.

Lor. Your husband is at hand, I heare his Trumpet,
We are no tell-tales Madam, feare you not.

Por. This night methinkes is but the daylight succes,
It looks a little paler, ’tis a day,
Such as the day is, when the Sun is hid.

Enter Baffiano, Antonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Baf. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walke in abstinence of the funne.
Por. Let me glie light, but let me not be light,
For a light wife doth make a heaue husband,
And never be Baffiano so for me,
But God for all you are welcome home my Lord.
Baff. I thank you Madam, glie welcome to my friend
This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.
Por. You should in all fience be much bound to him,
For as I heare he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more then I am well acquitt’d of.
Por. Sir, you are verie welcome to our house:
It must appeare in other waies then words,
Therefore I fiant this breathing cartule.

Gra. By younder Moone I fweare you doe me wrong,
Infaith I gave it to the Judges Clearkes,
Would he were get that had it for my part,
Since you do take it Loue so much at hart.

Por. A quarrel hoe atreade, what’s the matter?
Gra. About a hoppe of Gold, a paltry Ring
That the did give me, whose Poesie was
For all the world like Cutlem Poetry
Upon a knife; Loue me, and leave mee not.

Por. What tale you of the Poesie or the valew?
You fvere to me when I did glie it you,
That you would wear it til the hour of death,
And that it should lye with you in your grave,
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You should have beene reprefeulie and haue kept it,
Gave it a Judges Clearkes: but well I know
The Clearkes wil nere ware halre on’se face that had it.

Gra. He wil, and if he live to be a man.
Neriffa. If, a Woman live to be a man.
Por. Now by this hand I gau’d it to a youth,
A kinde of boy, a little scrupled boy,
No higher then thy selfe, the Judges Clearkes,
A prating boy that begg’d it as a Fee,
I could not for my heart deny it him.
Por. You were too blame, I must be plaine with you,
To part fo slightly with your wives first gift,
A thing fuckle on with oathes upon your finger,
And fo rueted with faith vnto your fheft.
I gau my Loue a Ring, and made him feware
Neuer to part with it, and heere he fands:
I dare be sworn for him, he would not leave it,
Nor plucke it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world matters. Now in faith Gratians,
You glee your wife too vnkinde a caufe of griefe,
And twere to mee I should be mad.

Baff. Why I were belt to cut my left hand off,
And fware I loft the Ring defending it.
Gra. My Lord Baffiano gau his Ring away
Vnto the Judge that beg’d it, and indecede
Defere’d it too: and then the Boy his Clearkes
That tookke some paines in writing, he begg’d mine,
And neyther man nor matter would take ought
But the two Rings.

Por. What Ring gau ye my Lord?
Not that I hope which you receiv’d of me.

Baff. If I could add a lie vnto a fault,
I would deny it: but you see my finger
Hath not the Ring vpon it, it is gone.

Por. Euen fo voide is your falle heart of truth.
By heauen I will nere come in your bed
Vntil I fee the Ring.

Ner. Nor I in yours, til I againe fee mine.

Baff. Sweet Portia,
If you did knowne the vertue of the Ring,
Or halfe her worthinesse that gau the Ring,
And would confeue for what I gau the Ring,
And how unwillingly I left the Ring,
When nought would be accepted but the Ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure?

Por. If you had knowne the vertue of the Ring,
Or halfe her worthinesse that gau the Ring,
Or your owne honour to containe the Ring,
You would not then have parted with the Ring:
What man is there so much vareasurable,
If you had pleas’d to have defended it
With any terms of Zeale: wanted the modelle
To vgre the thing held as a ceremonie:
Neriffa teaches me what to believe,
Ile die for’t, but some Woman had the Ring?

Baff. No by mine honor Madam, by my soule
No Woman had it, but a cuill Doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand Ducates of me,
And begg’d the Ring; the which I did denie him,
And suffer’d him to go displea’d away:
Even he that had held vp the vere life
Of my deere friend. What shou’d I fay sweete Lady?
I was infor’d to fend it after him,
I was befet with flame and curtedie,
My honor would not let ingratitude
So much befmeare it. Pardon me good Lady,
And by thee bleffed Candles of the night,
Had you bene there, I thinke you would haue begg’d
The Ring of me, to glue the worthie Doctor.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orlando. As I remember Adam, it was upon this fashion bequeathed me by will, but poore a thousand Crownes, and as thou saist, charged my brother on his blessing to breed mee well: and I, besides my sadnesse: My brother daues he keepes at Schoole, and report speakes goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keepes me ruffly at home, or (to speake more properly) failes me here he at home vnderkep: for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differ not from the dalling of an Ox? his horses are bred better, for besides that they are faire with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end, Riders dearly hir'd: but I (his brother) gain nothing vnder him but growth, for the which his Animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I: besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gaue mee, his contenance seemes to take from me: hee lets mee feede with his Hinde, barres mee the place of a brother, and as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it Adam that grieues me, and the spirit of my Father, which I thinke is within mee, begins to mutinie against this servitude. I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wife remedy how to avoid it.

Enter Oliuer.

Adam. Yonder comes my Master, your brother.

Orl. Goe a-part Adam, and thou shall haue what he will shake me vp.

Oli. Now Sir, what make you here?

Orl. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

Oli. What mar you then Sir?

Orl. Marry sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poore vnworthy brother of yours with idlenesse.

Oliuer. Marry sir be better employed, and be naught a while.

Orl. Shall I keepe your hogs, and eat huakes with them? what prodigall portion haue I speate, that I should come to suche penury?

Oli. Know you where you are Sir?

Orl. O Sir, very well here in your Orchard.

Oli. Know you whom Sir?

Orl. I, better then him I am before knowes mee: I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me: the courtese of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first born, but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brethren betwixt vs: I haue as much of my father in mee, as you, albeit I contesse your comming before me is neerer to his reuerence.

Orl. What Boy.

Oli. Come, come elder brother, you are too yong in this.

Orl. Why stay I not hands on me villaine?

Oli. I am no villaine: I am the yongest sonne of Sir Rowland de Boys, he was my father, and he is thrice a villaine that failes such a father beget villaines: were thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pul'd out thy tongue for saying so, thou haft rality on thy selfe.

Adam. Sweet Masters bee patient, for your Fathers remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me goe I say.

Orl. I will not till I pleafe; you shall haue mee: my father charg'd you in his will to give me good education: you haue train'd me like a peasant, oldefuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities: the spirit of my father growes strong in mee, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercise as may become a gentleman, or glue mee the poore allottery my father left me by testament, with that I will goe buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what will thou do? beg when that is fent? Well Sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your will, I pray you leave mee.

Orl. I will no further offend you, then becomes mee for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you olde dogge.

Adam. Is olde dogge my reward: moe true, I haue loft my teeth in your service: God be with my olde master, he would not haue spoke such a word. Ex. Orl. Ad. Oli. Is it even so, begin you to grow vp on me? I will physticke your runcenne, and yet glue no thousand crownes neyther: holla Denni.

Enter Denni.

Den. Calls your worship?

Oli. Was not Charles the Dukes Wraffler heere to speake with mee?

Den. So pleafe you, he is heere at the doore, and importunes accessse to you.

Oli. Call him in: 'twill be a good way: and to morrow the wraffling is.

Enter Charles.

Char. Good morrow to your worship.

Oli. Good Mounther Charles: what's the newes at the new Court?

Char. There's no newes at the Court Sir, but the olde newes: that is, the old Duke is banished by his yonger brother the new Duke, and three or foure houing Lords

A. A
As you like it.

Scena Secunda.

Col. I pray thee Resalind, sweet my Cos, be merry.

Rof. Deere Cellia, I shew more mirth then I am mistrefle of, and would you yet were merrier: vnlfe you could teach me to forget a banisht father, you must not learne mee how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Col. Herein I see thou lon't mee not with the full weight that I love thee; if my Vnce thy banisht father had banisht thy Vnce the Duke my Father, so thou hadst bene still with mee, I could have taught my louse to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy louse to me were fo righteously temper'd, as mine is to thee.

Rof. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to joyne in yours.

Col. You know my Father hath no child, but I, nor none is like to have, and truely when he dies, thou shalt be his heire; for what hee hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee againe in affecction: by mine honor I will, and when I break that oath, let mee turne monarch therefore my sweet Rofe, my deare Rofe, be merry.

Rof. From henceforth I will Cos, and deuise sports: let me fee, what thinke you of falling in Love?

Col. Marry I prethce doo, to make sport withall: but love no man in good earned, nor no further in sport neyther, then with a bumb of a pure blifh, thou maist in honor come off agayne.

Rof. What shall be our sport then?

Col. Let vs fit and mocke the good housewife Fortune from her wheele, that her gifts may henceforth bee bellowed equally.

Rof. I would wee could doe so: for her benefits are mightily misplaced, and the bountifull blinde woman doth most mistaake in her gifts to women.

Col. 'Tis true, for thothe that the makes faire, the scarcity makes honed, & thothe that the makes honed, she makes very lifelessmore.

Rof. Nay now you goest from Fortunes office to Natures: Fortune reignes in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of Nature.

Enter Cluesne.

Col. No; when Nature hath made a faire creature, may she not by Fortune fall into the fire? though nature hath given vs wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune taint in this foole to cut off the argument?

Rof. Indeed there is fortune too hard for nature, when fortune makes natures natural, the cuttie off of natures wither.

Col. Peradventure this is not Fortunes work neither, but Natures, who perceieth our natural wits too dull to reason of such goddeses, hath sent this Naturall for our whettonece, for alwais the dulnede of the foole, is the whetstone of the witts. How now Witte, whether wander you?

Clues. Mistrefle, you must come away to your father.

Col. Were you made the meffenger?

Clues. No by mine honor, but I was bid to come for you.
As you like it.

Ref. Where learned you that oath foole?

Col. Of a certaine Knight, that swore by his Honour they were good Pan-cakes, and swore by his Honor the Mufard was naught; now Ie fland to it, the Pancakes were naught, and the Mufard was good, and yet was not the Knight forsworne.

Col. How prove you that in the great heape of your knowledge?

Ref. I marry, now vnmuzzle your wisdome.

Col. Stand you both forth now: broke your chinnes, and swearne by your heads that I am a knaue.

Col. By our heads (if we had them) thou art.

Col. By my knaure (if I had it) then I were; but if you swears by that that is not, you are not forsworne: no more was this knight swearing by his Honor, for he never had ane; or if he had, he had sworne it a waye, before ever he saw those Pancakes, or that Mufard.

Col. Prethee, who is’t thou mensa’t?

Col. One that old Fredericke your Father loves.

Ref. My Fathers love is enough to honor him enough; speake no more of him, you’l be whipt for taxation one of thee duels.

Col. The more pitte that fools may not speake willy, what Wifemen do foolishly.

Col. By my troth you failest true: For, since the little wit that fools haue was silenced, the little foolerie that wise men haue makes a great flor; Here is Monfieur le Beau.

Enter le Beau.

Ref. With his mouth full of neues.

Col. Which he will put on vs, as Pigeons feed their young.

Ref. Then shal we be neues-cram’d.

Col. All the better: we faile the more Marketable.

Bien-aure Monfieur le Beau, what’s the newes?

Le Beau. Faire Princke, you haue lost much good sport.

Col. Sport: of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour Madame? How shall I answer you?

Ref. As wit and fortune will.

Col. Or as the definies decrees.

Col. Well said, that was laid on with a trowlaw.

Col. Nay, if I keepe not my ranke.

Ref. Thou lookest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me Ladies: I would have told you of good wrasfling, which you haue left the fight of.

Ref. Yet tell vs the manner of the Wrasfling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning: and if it please your Ladiships, you may see the end, for the best is yet to doe, and here where you are, they are comming to performe it.

Col. Well, the beginning that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man, and his three sons.

Col. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper yong men, of excellent growth and presence.

Ref. With bilts on their neckes: Be it knowne vnto all men by these pretends.

Le Beau. The eldest of the three, wrafslied with Charles the Duke Wrafsli, which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribsbes, that there is little hope of life in him: So he fero’d the secon, and so the third: yonder they lie, the poor old man their Father, making such pitifull dole over them, that all the behol-
Col. Amide me to eke out hers.

Ref. Fare you wellsparke heauen I be deceiu'd in you.

Col. Your hearts defiles be with you.

Coes. Come, where is this yong gallant, that is so defrous to lie with his mother earth?

Oriet. Readie Sir, but his will hath in it a more modest working.

"Duk. You shall trie but one fall.

Coes. No, I warrant your Grace you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightlie perfwaded him from a first.

Oriet. You meane to mocke me after: you should not have mockt me before; but come your waies.

Ref. Now Hercules, be thy speede yong man.

Col. I would I were inhabillable, to catch the strong fellow by the legge.

Wrafit. Ref. Oh excellent yong man.

Col. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eie, I can tell who should downe.

Sbout. Duk. No more, no more.

Oriet. Yes I beseech your Grace, I am not yet well breath'd.

Duk. How do't thou Charles?

Le Beau. He cannot speake my Lord.

Duk. Bear him aweie:

What is thy name yong man?

Oriet. Orlands my Liege, the yongest fonne of Sir Roland de Boys.

Duk. I would thou hadst beene fone to fome man elfe, the world eftedm thy father honorable, but I did finde him full mine enemie:

Thou shouldeft have better plea'd me with this deede, Hadst thou defended from another house:

But fare thee well, thou art a gallant youth,

I would thou had't told me of another Father.

Exit Duke.

Col. Were I my Father ( Coze ) would I do this?

Oriet. I am more proud to be Sir Roland's fonne,

His yongest fonne, and would not change that calling

To be adopted heire to Fredrick.

Ref. My Father lou'd Sir Roland as his foule,

And all the world was of my Fathers minde,

Had I before knowne this yong man his fonne,

I shou'd have gien him teares vnto entreaties,

Ere he shou'd thus have ventur'd.

Col. Gentle Cozen,

Let vs goe thanke him, and encourage him:
My Fathers rough and enomious difpofition
Sticks me at heart: Sir, you have well defuer'd,
If you doe keepe your promisses in love;
But if lyly as you have exceede all promife,
Your Miftris shal be happy.

Ref. Gentleman,

Were this for me: one out of suites with fortune
That could giue more, but that her hand lacks means.

Shall we goe Coze?

Col. 1. fare you well faire Gentleman.

Oriet. Can I not say, I thanke you? My better parts
Are all downe and done with, and that which here flonds vp
Is but a quittan, a meerle teulele blocke.

Ref. He cales vs back: my pride fell with my fortunes,
He asketh what he would: Did you call Sir?
Sir, you have wrafited well, and ouerthrown the morn then your enemies.

Col. Will you goe Coze?

Ref. Have with you; fare you well.

Exit.

Oriet. What passion hangs these waights upon my toong?
I cannot speake to her, yet the vrg'd conference.

Enter Le Beau.

O poore Orlands! I thou art overthrowne,
Or Charles, or some weaker masters thee.

Le Beau. Good Sir, I do in friendship couneil to you
To leaue this place, Albeit you have defuer'd
High commendation, true applaus and love;
Yet such is now the Dukes condition,
That he miscouert all that you have done:
The Duke is humorous, what he is indeede
More suettes you to concewe, then I to speake of.

Oriet. I thancke you Sir; and pray you tell me this,
Which of the two was daughter of the Duke,
That here was at the Wrafitling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners,
But yet indeede the taller is his daughter,
The other is daughter to the banish'd Duke,
And here detain'd by her vpbring Vncele
To keepe his daughter companie, whose loves Are deterre then the naturall bond of Sifcers:
But I can tell you, that of late this Duke hath hane displeasure'd, his gentle Neece,
Grounded vpon no other argument,
But that the people praise her for her vertues,
And pittie her, for her good Fathers fake;
And on my life his malice, gaine the Lady
Will sodainly breake forth: Sir, fare you well,
Hereafter in a better world then this,
I shall defire more love and knowledge of you.

Oriet. I ref't much bounden to you: fare you well.
This night I from the flame into the simther,
From tyrant Duke, unto a tyrant Brother.

But heauenly Refalline.

Exit.

Scena Tertius.

Enter Celia and Refalline.

Col. Why Cofen, why Refalline: Capit! haue mercie,
Not a word?

Ref. Not one to throw at a dog.

Col. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away vpon curst, throw some of them at me; come lame mee with reasons.

Ref. Then there were two Cofens laid vp, when the one should be lam'd with reasons, and the other mad without any.

Col. But is all this for your Father?

Ref. No, some of it is for my childe Father: Oh how full of briers is this working day world.

Col. They are but burs, Cofen, throw vpon thee in holiday foolerie, if we walke not in the trodden paths our very petty-coates will catch them.

Ref. I could make them off my coate, these burs are in my heart.

Col. Hem them away.

Ref. I would try if I could cry hem, and haue him.

Col. Come, come, wrafitle with thy affections.

Ref. O they take the part of a better wraffler then my felf.

Col. Or, a good with vpon you: you will trie in time
As you like it.

in sight of a fall; but turning these leeks out of service, let vs talke in good earnest: Is it possible on such a sone then should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir
Roulands young fonne?
Rof. The Duke my Father lou'd his Father dereely. Duk. Doth it therefore enuffe that you should loue his Sonne dereely? By this kinde of chace, I should hate him, for my Father hated his Father dereely; yet I hate not Orlando.
Rof. No faith, hate him not for my fake.
Duk. Why should I not? doth he not deffere well?

Enter Duke with Lords.
Rof. Let me loue him for that, and do you loue him because I doe. Lookes, here comes the Duke.
Celt. With his icles full of anger.
Duk. Mistrie, dispatche you with your fathre halfe, And get you from our Court.
Rof. Me Vncele.
Duk. You Cofen,
Within thefe ten daies if thou best be found,
So neere our publicke Court as twenty miles,
Thou diell for it.
Rof. I doe beffech your Grace
Let me the knowledge of my fault beare with me:
If with my felfe I hold intelligence,
Or have acquittance with mine owne defires,
If that I do not dreame, or be not fritancle,
(As I doe truth I am not) then deere Vncele,
Neuer fo much as in a thought vnborne,
Did I offend your highneffe.
Duk. Thus doe all Traitors,
If their purgation did confute in words,
They are as innocent as grace it felle;
Let it suffice thee that I truft thee not.
Rof. Yet yr mistrilf cannot make me a Traitor;
Tell me whereon the likelihoods depends?
Duk. Thou art thy Fathers daughter, there's enough.
Rof. So was I when your highneffe took his Dukdome,
So was I when your highneffe banifh'd him;
Traiton is not inherited my Lord,
Or if we did derive it from our friends,
What's that to me, my Father was no Traitor,
Then good my Leige, mitake me not fo much,
To thinke my pouertie is treacherous.
Celt. Deere Soueraigne hear me speake.
Duk. I Celia, we flaid her for your fake,
Elfe had fhe with her Father rang'd along.
Celt. I did not then intrest to haue her stay,
It was your pleasure, and your owne remorfe,
I was too yong that time to value her,
But now I know her: if she be a Traitor,
Why fo am I: we ftoile here ftopt,
Rofe at an infall, learn'd, plaid, eate together,
And wherefore we went, like Ionas Swans,
Still we went coupled and inefperable.
Duk. She is too fubtle for thee, and her smoothnes;
Her verry silence, and per patience,
Speake to the people, and they pittie her:
Thou art a foule, the robs thee of thy name,
And thou wilt show more bright, & seem more vertuous
When the is gone: then open not thy lips.
Firme, and irreucable is my doome,
Which I have paft upon her, she is banish'd.
Celt. Pronounce that sentence then on me my Leige,
I cannot live out of her companie.

Duk. You are a foule: you Neice prouide your felfe,
If you ouf-gray the times, upon mine honor,
And in the greatness of my word you die.

Exit Duk, &c.
Celt. O my poor Reafeline, whether wilt thou goe?
Wilt thou change Father? I will glue thee mine:
I charge thee be not thou more grieff then I am.
Rof. I haue more caufe.
Celt. Thou haft not Cofen,
Prethee be cheerefull; know'r thou not the Duke
Hath banifh'd me his daughter?
Rof. That he hath not
Celt. No; hath not? Reafeline lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one,
Shall we be funder'd? shall we part sweete girls?
No, let my Father feeke another hirc:
Therefore defile with me how we may finde
Whether to goe, and what to beare with vs,
And doe not feeke to take your change upon you,
To beare your griefes your felfe, and leave me out:
For by this heaven, now at our forrowes pale;
Said what thou canst, Ie goe along with thee.
Rof. Why, whether shall we goe?
Celt. To feeke my Vncele in the Forrest of Arden.
Rof. Alas, what danger will it be to vs?
(Maides as we are) to traveull forth fo farre?
Beautie prouoked theues sooner then gold.
Celt. Ie put my felfe in poore and meane attire,
And with a kinde of vnber (vminch my face,
The like doe you, fo shall we paife along,
And neuer fir affillants.
Rof. Were it not better,
Because that I am more then common tall,
That I did fulte me all points like a man,
A gallant curtelax upon my thigh,
A bore-spear in my hand, and in my heart
Lye there what hidden womans feare there will,
Weele have a fwaifhing and a marfball outifide,
As maiple other mannifh cowards haue,
That doe outifce it with their semblances.
Celt. What fhall I call thee when thou art a man?
Rof. Ie haue no worfe a name then Iiones owne Page,
And therefore looke you call me Ganimed.
But what will you by call'd?
Celt. Something that hath a reference to my state:
No longer Celia, but Allea.
Rof. But Cofen, what if we affall to feale
The clownifh Foele out of your Fathers Court:
Would he not be a comfort to our trauailie?
Celt. Heele goe along ore the wide world with me,
Leaue me alone to weue him; Let's away
And get our Jewels and our wealth together,
Deuife the fittest time, and fafte way
To hide vs from purfuaitie that will be made
After my flight: now goe in we content
To libertie, and not to banifhment.

Exeunt.

Aetius Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke Senior: Amyntas, and two or three Lords like Forrefters.
Duk. Sen. Now my Coe-mates, and brothers in exile:
Hath not old cussome made this life more sweete

Then
As you like it.

Then that of painted pompe? Are not these woods
More free from peril then the enuious Court?
Here we feel we not the penalty of Adam,
The feasons difference, as the Icie phange
And charful chiding of the wintres whinde,
Which when it bites and blows vp my body
Even till I shinke with cold, I smile, and say
This is no flatterie: these are counsellors
That feelingly perwade me what I am:
Sweet are the ves of adverzie
Which like the toad, osyly and venemous,
Weares yet a precious Jewell in his head:
And this our life exempt from publique haunt,
Findes tongues in trees, bookes in the running brookes,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

Amien. I would not change it, happy is your Grace
That can translate the stubbornesse of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a file.

Duke. Come, shall we goe and kill vs venion?
And yet it irkes me the poore daped foole
Being natue Bureres of this defert City,
Should intheir owne confines with forked heads
Have their round hanches guarded.
1. Lord. Indeed my Lord,
The melancholy Lokes grieues at that,
And in that kinde sweare you doe more vfreue
Then doth your brother that hath banished you:
To say my Lord of Amiers, and my solde,
Did desire behind him as he lay along
Vnder an oakke, whose anticke roote peepes out
Vpon the brooke that brawles along this wood,
To the which place a poore sequestred Stag
That from the Hunters late had taken a hurt,
Did come to languish; and indeed my Lord
The wretched annimall headd forth such groanes
That their dfecharge did stetch his leathernr coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round teares
Cous'd one another downe his innocent nede
In piteous chafe: and thus the haire foole,
Much marked of the melancholie Lokes,
Stood on th'exceentl vertie of the swift brooke,
Augmenting it with teares.

Duke. But what said Lokes?
Did he not moralize this spectacile?
1. Lord. O yes, into a thousand familys.
First, for his weeping into the needleffe treame;
Poore Deere quoth hee, thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings doe, giving thy fum of more
To that which had too much: then being there alone,
Left and abandoned of his veluet friend;
'Tis right quoth he, thus miferie doth part
The fluxe of compacie: anon a carelesse Heard
Full of the patuer, jumps along by him
And never flaes to greet him: I quoth Lokes, Sweepe on you fat and grezie Citizens,
'Tis leste the fasion; wherefore doe you looke
Vpon that poore and broken bankrupt there?
Thus moost inuicelie he plercheth through
The body of Countrie, Citie, Court,
Yes, and of this our life, swearling that we
Are meerie vfreues, tyrants, and whates worfe.
To fright the Annimals, and to kill them vp
In their aflign'd and natuere dwelling place.

Duke. And did you leave him in this contemplation?
2. Lord. We did my Lord, weeping and commenting Vpon the folling Deere.

Enter Secunda.

Duke. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be, some villaines of my Court
Are of contef and sufferance in this.

1. Lord. I cannot heare of any that did see her,
The Ladies her attendants of her chamber
Saw her a bed, and in the morning early,
They found the bed vntreasur'd of their Milites.
2. Lord. My Lord, the roynl Clown, at whom so oft,
Your Grace was wont to laugh is alfo missing,
Hilferis the Princeesse Gentlewoman
Condefces that the secretry ore-heard
Your daughter and her Cofen much commend
The parts and graces of the Wrafeler
That did but lately foilie the fynovie Charles,
And the beloues where euere they are gone.
That youth is farely in their companie.

Duke. Send to his brother, fetch that gallant hither,
If he be abfent, bring his Brother to me,
Ile make him finde him: do this fodainly;
And let not search and inquisitio qualle,
To bring against these foolish runaways.

Enter Tertia.

Orl. Who's there?
Ad. What my Yong Mafter, oh my gentle mafter,
Oh my sweet mafter, O you memorie
Of old Sir Rowland; why, what make you here?
Why are you vertuous? Why do people loue you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be fo fund to overcome
The bonnie prieler of the humorous Duke?
Your prafe is now too swiftly home before you.
Know you not Mafter, to feeme kind of men,
Their graces ferue them but as enemies,
No more doe oures: your vertues gentle Mafter
Are fanbilied and holy traitors to you:
Oh what a world is this, when what is comely
Enuenoms him that bares it?
Why, what's the matter?
Ad. O vnappie youth,
Come not within these doores: within this roofe
The enemie of all your graces live.
Your brother, no, no brother, yet the fonne
(Yet not the fone, I will not call him fon)
Of him I was about to call his Father,
Hath heard your praires, and this night he meanes;
To burne the lodging where you vie to lye,
And you within if he faile of that
As you like it.

He will have other means to cut you off;
I overheard him: and his prachiles;
This is no place, this houle is but a batherie;
Abhorre it, fear it, doe not enter it.

Ad. Why whether Adam would'thou haue me go?
Ad. No matter whether,fo you come not here.
Ori. What would'thou haue me gode beg my food,
Or with a base and boistrous Sword enforce
A theeuch living on the common rote?
This I must do, or know not what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can.
I rather will subiect me to the malice
Of a dis cursed blood, and bloudie brother.
Ad. But do not fo: I have five hundred Crownes,
The thirftie hire I faued under your Father,
Which I did flore to be my fuffer Nurfe,
When feruice should in my old limbs lie lame,
And unregarded age in corners throwne,
Take that, and he that doth the Kauens feeke,
Ye a prouidiously eaters for the Sparrow,
Be comfort to my age: here is the gold,
All this I give you, let me be your fervant,
Though I looke old, yet I am strong and luttie;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot, and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with unbaftifull forehead see,
The meanes of weaknife and debilitie,
Therefore my age is as a luffie winter,
Frostie, but kindely; let me goe with you,
Ile doe the feruice of a yonger man
In all your bufineffe and necerfitie.
Ori. Oh good old man, how well in thee appeares
The confant feruice of the antique world,
When feruice fweate for duty, not for meede:
Thuor not for the fahion of thefe times,
Where none will fweate, but for promotion,
And hauing that do chance their feruice vp,
Euene with the hauing, it is not fo with thee:
But poore old man, thou prun'ft a rotten tree,
That cannot fo much as a fliome yeadle,
In lies of all thy paines and hauandrie,
But come thy waies, weele goe along together,
And ere we haue thy youthfull wages spent,
Weele light vpon some fettled lowe content.

Ad. Matter goe on, and I will follow thee
To the laft pape with truth and loyaltie,
From the fecond yeare, till now almost fooure.
Here liued I, but now live here no more
At feuentene yeares, many their fortunes fecke
But at fourefoore, it is to late a wecke,
Yet fortune cannot remcompence me better
Then to die well, and not my Maifers debter.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Rosaline for Ganymede, Celia for Aliena, and Clowne, alias Touchstone.

Ref. O Jupiter, how merry are my spirits?
Cl. I care not for my spirits, if my legges were not wearie.
Ref. I could finde in my heart to disgrace my mans apparel, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vefell, as doublet and hose ought to show it felfe courageous to petty-coate; therefore courage, good Aliena.

Cel. I pray you bear with me, I cannot goe no farther.

Cl. For my part, I had rather bear with you, then bear you: yet I should bear no croffe if I did bear you, for I thinke you have no money in your purs.

Ref. Well, this is the Forrest of Arden.

Cel. I, now am I in Arden, the more foole I, when I was at home I was in a better place, but Travellers must be content.

Enter Corin and Silvius.

Ref. I be fo good Touchstone Look you, who comes here, a yong man and an old in solerne talke.

Cor. That is the way to make her forne you fill.

Sil. Oh Corin, that thou knew'lt how I do love her.

Cor. I partly guesse: for I have lou'd ere noow.

Sil. No Corin, being old, thou canst not guesse,
Though in thy youth thou waft as true a lover
As ever figh'd vpon a midnight pillow:
But if thy loue were euer like to mine,
As fure I thinke did never man loue fo:
How many affions most ridiculous,
Haft thou beene drawne to by thy fantasie?

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.

Sil. Oh thou diidst then never love fo hardly,
If thou remembrest not the lighteft folly,
That euer loue did make thee run into,
Thou haft not lou'd.

Or if thou haft not beoke from companies,
Abruptly as my paffion now makes me,
Thou haft not lou'd.

O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe.

Ref. Alas poore Shepheard searching of their would,
I haue by hard adventure found mine owne.

Cl. And I mine: I remember when I was in love,
I broke my fword vpon a flone, and bid him take that for comming a night to Jane Smife, and I remember the kif-fing of her batler, and the Cowes dugs that her prettie chop't hands had milk'd; and I remember the wouding of a peecod instead of her , from whom I tooke two cond, and gluing her them againe, fild with weeping tears, weare thefe for my fake: wee that are true Lou-ers, runne into strange capers; but as all is mortall in nature, fo is all nature in love, mortall in folly.

Ref. Thou feake't wilt then thou art ware of.

Cl. Nay, I shall neere be ware of mine owne wit, till
I breake my thins against it.

Ref. Iours, Iours, this Shepheard's passion,
Is much vpon my fashion.

Cl. And mine, but it grows something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question you'd man,
If he for gold will guie vs any foode,
I faint almoft to death.

Cl. Holla, you Clowne.

Ref. Peace foode, he's not thy kinfman.

Cor. Who calls?

Cl. Your betters Sir.

Cor. Elfe are they very wretched.

Ref. Peace
As you like it.

Scena Quinta.

Enter, Amyens, Jaques, & others.

Song.

Under the green wood tree,
Who loves to lie with me,
And turne his merry Note,
Unto the sweete birds throte:
Come kither, come kither, come kither:
Here shall be seen no enemie,
But Winter and rough Weather.

Amy. More, more, I prethee more.

Amy. It will make you melancholly Monseur Jaques.

Amy. I thank it more: I prethee more, I can fucke melancholly out of a song.

As a Wazell fuckes eggs: More, I prethee more.

Amy. My voice is ragged, I know I cannot please you.

Amy. I do not desire you to please me,

I do desire you to sing:

Come, more, another fzano: Call you'em flanzo's?

Amy. What will you wil Monseur Jaques.

Amy. Nay, I care not for their names, they owe mee nothing.

Will you sing?

Amy. More at your request, then to please my selfe.

Amy. Well then, if ever I thank any man, Ie thanke you: but that they call complemment is like th'encounter of two dog-Ape.

And when a man thankes mee harrily, me thinkes I have given him a penie, and he renders mee the beggerly thankes. Come finge; and you that will not hold your tongues.

Amy. Well, Ie end the song.

Sirs, cover the while, the Duke will drinkke vnnder this tree; he hath bin all this day to looke you.

Amy. And Ie have bin all this day to avoid him:

He is too disputable for my companye:

I thinkes of as many matters as he, but I glue Heauen thankes, and make no boatt of them.

Come, warble, come.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Orlando, & Adam.

Adam. Deere Maister, I can go no further:

O I die for foo. Heere lie Ie downe,

And mesurfe out my grave. Farwel kinde maister.

Orl. Why how now Adam? No greater heart in thee:

Lis a little, comfort a little, cheere thy selfe a little.

If this vacuout Forrest yeild any thing fauage,

I will either be foo for it, or bring it for fooe to thee:

Thy conceite is neerer death, then thy powers.

For my sake be comfortable, hold death a while.

At the armes end: I will heere be with thee presenty,

And if I bring thee not somthing to eat,

I will glue thee loose to die: but if thou diest

Before I come, thou art a moeker of my labor.

Wel said, thou lookt cheerefully,

And Ie be with thee quickly: yet thou lefit

In the bleakie aire. Come, I will bear thee

To some shelter, and thou shalt not die.

For lacke of a dinner,

If there live any thing in this Destrify.

Cheeroely good Adam.

Scena Septima.

Du.Sen. I think he be transform'd into a beast, For I can no where finde him, like a man.
1. Lord. My Lord, he is but even now gone hence, Here he was merry, hearing of a Song.

Du.Sen. If he compact of laries, grow Muscull, We shall have shortly discord in the Spheres: Go seek him, tell him I would speake with him.

Enter Leagues.

1. Lord. He faues my labor by his owne approach.

Du.Sen. Why now Monfieur, what a life is this That your poor friends must woe your compeers, What you like, looke wisely.

Isag. A Foole, a foole; I met a foole lth Forreft,
A motley Foole (a miserable world:) As I do lie by foole, I met a foole,
Who bade him down, and bade him in the Sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good termes,
In good fet termes, and yet a motley foole.

Good morrow foole (quoth I:) no Sir, quoth he,
Call me not foole, till heaven hath sent me fortune,
And then he draw a dial from his poake,
And looking on it, with lache-luffre eye,
Says, very wifely, it is ten a clocke:
Thus we may fee (quoth he) how the world waggis:
'Tis but an house agoe, since it was nine,
And after one house more, twill be eieuen,
And fo from house to house, we ripe, and ripe,
And then from house to house, we rot, and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale. When I did heare
The motley Foole, thus morall on the time,
My Lungs began to grow like Chanticleere,
That Foole's should be so deepe contemplative:
And I did laugh, fans intermision
An hour by his diall. Oh noble foole,
A worthy foole: Motley's the onely warre.

Du.Sen. What foole is this?

Isag. O worthy Foole: One that hath bin a Courtier
And ydes, if Ladies he but yond, and faire,
They have the gift to know it: and in his braine,
Which is as drie as the remainder basket
After a voyage: He hath strange places cran'd
With obfervion, the which he vents
In mangled formes. O that I were a foole,
I am ambitious for a motley cost.

Du.Sen. Thou shalt have one.

Isag. It is my onely wight,
Provided that you weard your better judgements
Of all opinion that growes soke in them,
That I am wife. I must have liberty
Withall, as large a Charter as the winds,
To blow on whom I please, for fo fooles haue:
And they that are most gaught with my folly,
They most must laugh: And why so must they so?
The why is plaine, as way to Parid Church:
Hee, that a Foole doth very wifely hit,
Doth very foolishly, although he smart
Seeme fenfeleffe of the bobbe. If not,
The Wife-mans foole is anathomiz'd
Even by the quandering glances of the foole.

Inseet me in my motley: Glue me leave
To speake my minde, and I will through and through Cleanse the foule bodie of th'infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine.

Isag. What, for a Counter, would I do, but good?

Du.Sen. Most milcheuous foule foone, in chiding sin:
For thou thy selfe haft bene a Libertine,
As fenfull as the brutal thing it selfe,
And all th'miformd fores, and headed euils,
That thou with licene of free foot haft caught,
Wouldst thou disgorge into the general world.

Isag. Why who cries out on pride,
That can therein taxe any private party:
Doth it not flow as hugely as the Sea,
Till that the wareie verie meanes do ebe.
What woman in the Cité do I name,
When that I say the Cité? Woman beares
The coft of Princes on vaunworthy shoulders?
Who can come in, and say that I meane her,
When such a one as thee, such is her neighbor?
Or what is he of bafict function,
That fayes his brauerie is not on my coft,
Thinking that I meane him, but therein fults
His foly to the mettle of my speech,
There then, how then, what then, let me fee wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himfelfe: if he be free,
why then my taxing like a wild-goose flies
V'claim'd of any man. But who come here?

Enter Orlande.

Orl. Forbeare, and eate no more.

Isag. Why I have eate none yet.

Orl. Nor flalt not, till necessitie be feru'd.

Isag. Of what kinde should this Cocke come of?

Du.Sen. Art thou thus bolden'd man by thy diftre's?
Or else a rude defpiller of good manners,
That in ciuility thou feem'st fo empyle?

Orl. You touch'd my vene at firft, the thorny point
Of bare diftre's, hath tane from me the shew.
Of smooth ciuility: yet am I in-land bred,
And know some nourture: But forbeare, I say,
He dies that touches any of this fruite,
Tell I, and my affaires are answered.

Isag. And you will not be anfwer'd with reaon,
I must dye.

Du. Sen. What would you have?

Your gentlenesse shal force, more then your force
More vs to gentlenesse.

Orl. I almost die for food, and let me haue it.

Du. Sen. Sit downe and feed; welcom to our table

Orl. Speake you fo gently? Pardon me I praie you,
I thought that all things had bin fause here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of firme commandment. But what are you
That in this defert inacceffible,
Vnder the shade of melancholy boughs,
Loofe, and neglect the creeping hours of time:
If euer you have look'd on better dayes:
If euer scene where hells have kno'd to Church:
If euer fate at any good mans feate:
If euer from your eye-lijts wip'd a teare,
And know what 'tis to pitie, and be pitied:
Let gentlenesse my frong enforcement be,
In the which hope, I bluue, and hide my Sword.

R

Duke
As you like it.

Duke Sen. True is it, that we have seen better days, And have with holy bell bin knowed to Church, And fat at good mens feasts, and wip'd our eles Of drops, that faced pity hath engendred: And therefore fit you downe in gentleness; And take upon command, what helpe we have That to your wanting may be minisfred.

Orl. Then but forbear your food a little while: Whiles (like a Doe) I go to finde my Fawne, And give it food. There is an old poore man, Who after me, hath many a weary steppe Limpt in pure loue: till he be first suflfed, Opprest with two weake culls, age, and hunger, I will not touch a bit.

Duke Sen. Go finde him out. And we will nothing waift till you returne.

Orl. I thank ye, and be blest for your good comfort.

Duke Sen. Thou feelest, we are not all alone vnhappie: This wide and vnuierfall Theater

Prompts more wofull Pageants then the Scane

Wherein we play in,

Is. All the world's a stage,

And all the men and women, meerely Players;

They have their Exit and their Entrances,

And one man in his time plays many parts,

His Aks being feuen ages. At first the Infant,

Mewing, and puking in the Nurseth arms:

Then, the whining Schoole-boy with his Satchell

And shining morning face, creeping like snaille

Vnwillingly to schole. And then the Louter,

Sighing like Furnace, with a wofull ballad

Made to his Mistreffe eye-brow. Then, a Soldier,

Full of frawge oaths, and bearded like the Pard,

Icelous in honor, fodeine, and quicke in quarrell,

Seeking the bubble Reputation

Esen in the Canons mouth: And then, the Juifce

In faire round belly, with good Capon lin'd,

With eyes fevere, and head of formall cut,

Full of wife fawes, and moderne inffance,

And so he plays his part. The fast age shifs

Into the leane and flipper'd Pantaloon,

With spechacles on nofe, and pouch on fide,

His youthfull hode well fas'd, a world too wide,

For his thrunke thanke, and his bigge manly voice,

Turning againe toward children treble pipes,

And whistles in his found. Laft Scene of all,

That ends this frawge euemtfull historic,

Is second childfhood, and moree oblivion,

Sans teeth, fans eyes, fans teths, fans euyer thing.

Enter Orlando with Adam.

Duke Sen. Welcome: let downe your venerable burthen, and let him feede.

Ad. I thanke you most for him.

Duke Sen. Oh, so had you neede,

I scarce can speake to thanke you for my felse.

Orl. Welcome, fall too: I wil not trouble you,

As yet to queffion you about your fortunes:

Glue vs some Musick, and good Cosen, sing.

Song.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,

Thou art not so winckled, as mains ingratitude

Thy tooth is not so keen, because thou art not so although thy breath be rude.

Heigh bo, sing heigh bo, onto the greene bally,

Myt friendshipe, a loving, moft Loving, meere folly:

The heigh bo, the bally,

This light is moft silly.

Frieze, frieze, thou bitter skive that doft not bight so nigh

as benefits forgot:

Though thou the waters warpe, thy finge is not to fbarpe, as friend remember not.

Heigh bo, sing, &c.

Duke Sen. If that you were the good Sir Rowlands Son, As you haue whisper'd faithfully you were,

And as mine eye doth his effigies witniffe, Moft truly limed, and living in your face,

Be truly welcome hither: I am the Duke That lou'd your Father, the residue of your fortune,

Go to my Cauz, and tell mee. Good old man,

Thou art right welcome, as thy masters is: Support him by the arm: give me your hand,

And let me all your fortunes vnderhand. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Lords, & Oliver.

Duke. Do not see him since? Sir, fit, that cannot be:

But were I not the better part made mercie,

I should not feake an aldent argument

Of my reuenge, thou present: but looke to it,

Finde out thy brother whereofere he is,

Seeke him with Candle: bring him dead, or liuing

Within this twelvemonth, or turne thou no more

To feake a liuing in our Terrorie.

Thy Lands and all things that thou doft call thine,

Worth feiture, do we felse into our hands,

Till thou canst quit thee by thy brothers mouth,

Of what we thinkie against thee.

Ol. Oh that your Highneffe knew my heart in this:

I never lou'd my brother in my life.

Duke. More vllaine thou. We'll push him out of dores

And let my officers of such a nature

Make an extent vpon his house and Lands:

Do this expediently, and turne him going. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Hang there my verse, in witniffi of my love,

And thou thrice crowned Queene of night furcey

With thy chaffe eye, from thy pale sphere aboue

Thy Hunteffe name, that my full life doth iway.

O Royalfid, thefe Trees shal be my Bookes,

And in their barkes my thoughts Ie character,

That euerie eye, which in this Forreffe lookes,

Shall fee thy vertue witnife every where.

Run, run Orlando, carue on every Tree,

The faire, the chaffe, and vnexpressiffe thee.

Exit.

Enter Corin & Ciaune.

Cia. And how like you this shepherds life Mr Touchstone?

Clo.
As you like it.

Cleon. Truely Shepheard, in respect of it selue, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepheardes life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it verie well: but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleafeth mee well: but in respect it is not in the Court, it is tedious. As it is a sparse life (lookes you) it fits my humor well: but as there is no more plente in it, it goes much against my stomacke. Hast any Philosophie in thee shepheard?

Cyr. No more, but that I know the more one flockens, the worse at eafe he is: and that hee that wants money, meane, and content, is without three good friends. That the prosperity of raine is to wet, and fire to burne: That good puifure makes fat theapes: and that a great caufe of the night, is lacke of the Sunne: That hee that hath learned no wit by Nature, nor Art, may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Clo. Such a one is a natural Philofopher:

Was't euer in Court, Shepheard?

Cyr. No truly.

Clo. Then thou art dann'd.

Cyr. Nay, I hope.

Clo. Truly thou art dann'd, like an ill roasted Egge, all on one fide.

Cyr. For not being at Court? your refon.

Clo. Why, if thou neuer was't at Court, thou neuer faw'd good manners: if thou neuer faw'd good manners, then thy manners must be wicked, and wickednes is fin, and finne is damnation: Thou art in a parlous flate shepheard.

Cyr. Not a whil Touchstone, those that are good manners at the Court, are as ridiculous in the Countrie, as the behaviour of the Countrie is most mockable at the Court. You told me, you late not at the Court, but you killde your handg that courtefie would be vncaufie if Courtiers were shepheardes.

Clo. Infance, brieflye: come, infance.

Cyr. Why we are still handling our Eues, and their Feis you know are greafe.

Clo. Why do not your Courtiers hands sweate? and is not the greafe of a Mutton, as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shalowy, shallow: A better infance I fay: Come.

Cyr. Refides, our hands are hard.

Clo. Your lips will feele them the sooner. Shalowy agen: a more founder infance, come.

Cyr. And they are often tardy over, with the surgery of our shephe: and would you have vs kiffe Tarre? The Courtiers hands are perfumed with Clouet.

Cyr. Most Shallow men: Thou wormes meate in respect of a good piece of flesh indeed: leerne the wife and pend: Cluet is of a bafer birth then Tarre, the verie vncaufelye fluxe of a Cat. Mend the infance Shepheard.

Clo. You have too Courty a wit, for me, He reft.

Cyr. Sir, I am a true Labourer, I earne that I eate: get that I ware: owe no man hate, emtree no mans happe: glad of other mens good content with my harms: and the greatest of my pride, is to fee my Eues grave, & my Lames fircle.

Clo. That is another imple finne in you, to bring the Eues and the Rammes together, and to offe to get your lining, by the copulation of Cattell, to be bawd to a Bell-weather, and to betray a thee-Lambe of a twelvemoonth to a crooked-pated olde Cuckoldly Ramme, out of all reasonable match. If thou be not dann'd for this, the diuell himselfe will have no shepheardes, I cannot fee else how thou shouldst scape.

Cyr. Heere comes yong Mr Gaminde, my new Mithriffes Brother.

Enter Rosalinde.

Rof. From the caff to vifite the Ine, no iuel is like Rosalinde: Her worde being mounted on the winde, through all the world beares Rosalinde: No all the puiffures faireft Ine, are but blemche to Rosalinde: Let no face bee kept in mind, but the fairest of Rosalinde.

Clo. He reime you fo, eight yeares together; dinners, and supper, and sleepeth hours excepted; it is the right Butter-womens ranke to Market.

Rof. Out Fool.

Clo. For a tale.

If a Hart doe lacke a Linde, Let him feeke out Rosalinde: If the Cat will after kinde, So be faire will Rosalinde: Wintred garments must be linde: So must flender Rosalinde: They that reap most fience and bindes, then to carre with Rosalinde. Sweeft nut, hath fewret rinde, Such a nut is Rosalinde. He that sweeft rofe will finds, must finde Loues pricks, & Rosalinde.

This is the verie falle gallop of Verfes, why doe you infect your felte with them?

Rof. Peace you dull foolke, I found them on a tree.

Clo. Truely the tree yeelds bad fruits.

Rof. Ilke grafte it with you, and then I shall grafte it with a Mediter: then it will be the earliest fruit l'ch country: for you'll be rotten ere you bee halfe ripe, and that's the right vertue of the Mediter.

Clo. You haue fald: but whether wifelye or no, let the lyarde judge.

Enter Ceile with a whirling.

Rof. Peace, here comes my fitter reading, fland aside.

Cei. Why should this Defert bee, for it is not reproop'd? No: Tonges Ilke bang on euerie tree, that ftilill cryings flow. Some, how briefe the Life of man runs hit erring phylimag, That the stretching of a fpa, buckles in hit fumme of age. Some of oblated womes, twites the joyfult of friend, and friends But upon the faireft bowes, or at euerie fentence end; Will I Rosalinde write, teaching all that reade, to know The quainitence of euerie fruite, heaven would in little flow. Therefore heaven Nature charg'd, that one bodie should be fill'd With all Graces while enlarg'd, nature prefently difill'd.

Helens cheekes, but not his heart;
Cleopatra's Maitfle:
Attalanta's better part,
And Lucretia's Modesty
This Rosalinde of manie parts,
By Heavenly Synde was duid'd;
Of manie faces, eyes, and hearts,
to have the touched devoitt pre'd.
Heaven would that thee these gifts should have,
And to live and die her fiane.

Ref. O moft gentle Jupiter, what tedious homilie of Loue haue you wearied your parishioners withall, and neuer cri'd, haue patience good people.

Cel. How now backe friends I Shepheard, go off a little:
go with him Sirrah.

Cel. Come Shepheard, let vs make an honorable retert, though not with bagge and baggage, yet with scrit and scrippage.

Cel. Diddt thou heare these verfes?

Ref. O yes, I heared them all, and more too, for some of them had in them more feete then the Verfes would beare.

Cel. That's no matter: the feet might beare yet verfes.

Ref. I, but the feet were lame, and could not beare themselfes without the verfe, and therefore famely in the verfe.

Cel. But didst thou heare without wondering, how thy name should be hang'd and carued vpon thofe trees?

Ref. I was feuen of the nine daies out of the wonder, before you came: for looke heare what I found on a Palme tree: I was neuer fo bemind since Pythagoras time that I was an Ifh Rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Tro you, who hath done this?

Ref. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chaine that you once wore about his neck:
change you colour?

Ref. I pre'thee who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord, it is a hard matter for friends to meet: but Mountains may bee remoued with Earthquakes, and fo encounter.

Ref. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ref. Nay, I pre'thee now, with most pettitionary vhehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderfull, wonderfull, and most wonderfull and yet againe wonderfull, and after that out of
of all hopeing.

Ref. Good my compleifion, doft thou think though
I am caparifon'd like a man, I have a doublt and hofe in my disposition? One inch of delay more, is a South-fe of difcourfe. I pre'thee tell me, who is it quickly, and spake space: I would thou couldst flammer, that thou might't powre this conceald man out of thy mouth, as Wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle: either too much at once, or none at all. I pre'thee take the Corke out of thy mouth, that I may drinkke thy tydings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Ref. Is be of Gods making? What manner of man is is his head worth a hat? Or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ref. Why God will fende more, if the man will bee thankful: let me lay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowned ge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando's, that tript up the Wrafflers heeces, and your heart, both with an infallit.

Ref. Nay, but the dwuell take mocking: speake fadde brow, and true maid.

Cel. I'faith(Coz) is he.

Ref. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ref. Alas the day, what shall I do with my doublt & hope? What did he when thou saw'd him? What fayde he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes hee here? Did he aske for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? And when shalt thou fee him againe? Anfer me in one verde.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantuan mouth firft:
'tis a Word too great for any mouth of this Ages fize, to fay I and no, to thefe particulars, is more then to anfer
in a Catechisme.

Ref. But doth he know that I am in this Forrest, and in mans apparell? Looks he as freely, as he did the day he Wraffled?

Cel. It is as cafe to count Atomies as to refolute the propositions of a Louer: but take a taste of my finding him, and I will make it with good obfervance. I found him vnder a tree like a drop'd Acorne.

Ref. It may vveel be call'd Ioues tree, when it droppes forth fruitts.

Cel. Glue me audience, good Madam.

Ref. Proceed.

Cel. There lay bee ftreight'd along like a Wounded knight.

Ref. Though it be pittie to fee fuch a fight, it vwell becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry holloa, to the tongue, I pre'thee: it curuettes vnfeafonably. He was furnifh'd like a Hunter.

Ref. O ominous, he comes to kill my Hart.

Cel. I would fing my fong without a burthen, thou bring't me out of tune.

Ref. Do you not know I am a woman, when I thinke,
I mutt speake: sweet, fay on.

Enter Orlando & Iaques.

Cel. You bring me out. Sof't, comes he not here?

Ref. 'Tis he, flanke by, and note him.

Iaq. I thank ye for your company, but good faith I had as little have bene my felfe alone.

Ori. And fo had I: but yet for fashion fake
I thank ye too, for your focietie.

Iaq. God buy you, let's meet as little as we can.

Ori. I do defire we may be better frangeres.

Iaq. I pray you marre no more trees with Writing
Loue-fongs in their barkes.

Ori. I pray you marre no moe of my verfes with reading them ill-lauouredly.

Iaq. Rosalinde is your loues name? Ori. Yes, Iuft.

Iaq. I do not like her name.

Ori. There was no thought of pleasing when I was chidn't.

Iaq. What feature is fhe of?
Ori. Iuft as high as my heart.

Iaq. You are ful of prety anfwers: have you not bin acquainted with goldsmiths wises, & cond the out of rings
Ori. Not fo: but I anfer you right painted cloath, from whence you have studied your questions.

Iaq. You have a nimble wit; I thinkke 'twas made of Attalanta's heeces. Will you fitte downe with me, and see too, will raile againft our Miftris the world, and all our middlings.

Ori. I will chide no breather in the world but my felfe against
As you like it.

against whom I know no fault.

Lsq. The word fault you hate, is to be in love.

Orl. "Tis a fault I will not change, for your best virtue: I am ware of you.

Lsq. By my troth, I was seeking for a Fool, when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brooke, looke but in, and you shall see him.

Lsq. There I shall see mine owne figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool, or a Cipfer.

Lsq. Ile terrie no longer with you, farewell good signior

Orl. I am glad of your departure: Adieu good Monfieur Melancholly.

Rof. If I speake to him like a fawce Lacky, and vnder that habit play the knave with him, do you hear Forrester?

Verie wel, what would you? (reter.

Rof. I pray you, what fift a clocke?

Orl. You should only the time o'day there's no clocke in the Forreft.

Rof. Then there is no true Loner in the Forreft, elfe fighing euerie minute, and groaning euerie howelle wold detect the lazie foot of time, as well as a clocke.

Orl. And why not the swift foote of time? Had not that bin as proper?

Rof. By no meanes sir; Time travels in diuers paces, with diuers perfones: Ile tell you who Time ambles withall, who Time trots withall, who Time gallops withall, and who he fands still withall.

Orl. I prethee, who doth he trot withal?

Rof. Marry he trots hard with a yong maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemniz'd: if the interim be but a fennight, Times pace is fo hard, that it feemes the length of fouen yeares.

Orl. Who ambles Time withall?

Rof. With a Priest that lacks Latine, and a rich man that hath not the Govt: for the one sleepe easly because he cannot fudy, and the other lies merrily, because he feeth no paine: the one lacking the burden of leane and warfulfe Learning the other knowing no burden of heauie tedious penurie. These Time ambles withall.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withall?

Rof. With a theefe to the gallowes: for though hee go as fortly as foot can fall, he thinkez himselfe too soon there.

Orl. Who flues it still withall?

Rof. With Lawiers in the vocation: for they sleepe betweene Termes and Termes, and then they perceue not how time moves.

Orl. Where dwel you prettie youth?

Rof. With this Shepherdesse my father: heere in the skirts of the Forreft, like fringe vpon a petticote.

Orl. Are you nathie of this place?

Rof. As the Conie that you see dwell where hee is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer, then you could purchase in fo removed a dwelling.

Rof. I haue in mine told fo of many: but indeed, an old religious Vnckle of mine taught me to speake, who was in his youth an inland man, one that knew Courtship too well: for there he fell in loue. I haue heard him read many Lectures against it, and I thanke God, I am not a woman to be touch'd with fo many giddie offences as hee hath generally tax'd their whole sex withall.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principall eulls, that he laid to the charge of women?

Rof. There were none principal, they were all like one another, as halfe penes are, euerie one fault seeming monftrous, till his fellow-fault came to match it.

Orl. I prethee recount some of them.

Rof. No, I wil not caft away my phyfick, but on thofe that are ficke. There is a man haunts the Forreft, that abueth our yong plants with caruing Rosalinde on their backes, hanging Odess vpon Houtheames, and Elegies on brambles; all (forfooth) defying the name of Rosalinde. If I could meet that Fancie-monger, I would give him some good counef, for he feemes to have the Quotidian of Loune vpon him.

Orl. I am he that is so Loun-fak'd, I pray you tel me your remeide.

Rof. There is none of my Vnckles markez vpon you: he taught me how to know a man in loue: in which cage of rufhes, I am sure you art not prisoner.

Orl. What were his sayes?

Rof. A leane cheeke, which you have not: a blew eele and funken, which you have not: an unquesionable fpirit, which you have not: a beard neglected, which you have not (but I pardon you for that, for simplly your haung cry heard, is a younger brothers renewne) then your hope should be vnergarter'd, your bonnet vnbanded, your fieue vnbutton'd, your shoo vntilde, and euerie thing about you, demonstrating a careleffe defolation: but you are no fuch man; you are rather point deuide in your accoufrements, as loving your felle, then feeming the Louer of any other.

Orl. Fare youth, I would I could make thee beleue.

Rof. Me beleue it? You may affonne make her that you Loun beleue it, which I warrant she is apter to do, then to conject the do's: that is one of the points, in the which women fill glue the ile to their confences. But in good footh, are ye he that hangs the veris on the Trees, wherein Rosalinde is fo admired?

Orl. I swear to thee youth, by the white hand of Rosalinde, I am that he, that vnturne he.

Rof. But are you fo much in love, as your times speak?

Orl. Neither timr nor reason can expresse how much.

Rof. Loue is mearely a madneffe, and I tel you, deueres as wel a darke houfe, and a whip, as madmen do: and the reafon why they are not fo punifh'd and cured, is that the Lunacie is fo ordinarie, that the whippers are in loue too: yet I professe curing it by counef.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Rof. Yes one, and in this manner. Hee was to imagine me his Loun, his Midrift: and I fet him euerie day to woe me. At which time would I, being but a moonish youth, greeue, he effermitate, changeable, longing, and liking, proud, fantastical, aphid, shallow, inconstant, ful of tears, full of smiles; for euerie paflion something, and for no paflion truly any thing, as boyes and women are for the moft part, cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loath him; then entertaine him, then forswear him: now weare for him, then falen at him; that I drave my Sutor from his mad humor of loue, to a luing humor of madnes, was to forswear the full fiream of y world, and to live in a nooke meery Monifik: and thus I cur'd him, and this way wil I take vpon mee to wafh your Lorn as clean as a found dpees heart, that there shall not be one spot of Loun in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Rof. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalinde, and come euerie day to my Coat, and woe me.

Orl.
As you like it.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clavine, Audrey, & Iapges:

Clo. Come apace good Audrey, I will fetch vp your Goates, Audrey: and how Audrey am I the man yet? Dost my simple feature content you?

And. Your features, Lord warrant vs: what features?

Clo. I am here with them, and thy Goats, as the most capricious Poet honest Ovid was among the Gothes.

Iap. O knowledge ill inhabited, worse then Ioue in a thatch'd house.

Clo. When a mans verdes cannot be understanded, nor a mans good wit fetched with the forward child, understandings: it strikes a man more dead then a great reckoning in a little room: truly, I would the Gods hadde made me poetical.

And. I do not know what poetical is: is it honest in deed and word; is it a true thing?

Clo. No trule: for the truest poetrie is the most falling, and Louers are gluens to Poetic: and what they swears in Poetrie, may be fald as Louers, they do feigne.

And. Do you wish then that the Gods had made me poetical?

Gow. I do truly: for thou swear'st to me thou art honest: Now if thou wert a Poet, I might have some hope thou didst feigne.

And. Would you not haue me honest?

Clo. No truly, vnlesse thou wert hard fauour'd: for honestie coupled to beautie, is to haue Honie a fawce to Sugar.

Iap. A materall fool.

And. Well, I am not faire, and therefore I pray the Gods make me honest.

Clo. Truly, and to cast away honestie vppon a foule flut, were to put good meat into an vnkleane dish.

And. I am not a flut, though I thankye the Goddes I am foule.

Clo. Well, praisd be the Gods, for thy foulinefte;futtiethesse may come hereafter. But be it, as it may bee, I will marrie thee: and to that end, I haue bin with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the Vicar of the next village, who hath promis'd to meete in this place of the Forrest, and to couple vs.

Iap. I would faine see this meeting.

And威尔, the Gods glue vs loy.

Clo. Amen. A man may if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt: for here be no Temple but the wood, no assembly but horse-beasts. But what though? Courage. As horses are odious, they are necessarie. It is said, many a man knowes no end of his goods; right: Many a man has good Horses, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowrie of his wife, 'tis none of his owne getting; hornes, even to poore men alone:

Enter Rosalind & Celia.

Rof. Neuer talke to me, I wil wepe.

Ciel. Do I prethee, but yet haue the grace to consider, that tears do not become a man.

Rof. But haue I not cause to wepe?

Ciel. As good cause as one would desire, Therefore wepe.

Rof. His very haire

Is of the diffembling colour.

Ciel. Something browner then Judass: Marrie his kisles are Judasses owne children.

Rof. T'faith his haire is of a good colour.

Ciel. An excellent colour:

Your Cheffonut was ever the onely colour:

Rof. And his kisling is as full of luscions, As the touch of holy bread.

Ciel. 198
As you like it.

Cel. Hee hath bought a pair of caft lips of Diana: a Num of winters fitterhood kifles not more religioufle the very yce of chaflity is in them.

Bof. But why did hee fwear hee would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay certainly there is no truth in him.

Bof. Doe you thinke fo?

Cel. Yes, I thinke he is not a picke purf, nor a horfe cheater, but for his very in love, I doe thinke him as concave as a covered goblet, or a Worme-eaten nut.

Bof. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in, but I thinke he is not in.

Bof. You have heard him fwear downright he was.

Cel. Was, is not is: besides, the oath of Lour is no stronger then the word of a Tapfer, they are both the confrimer of false reckonings, he attends here in the forreft on the Duke your father.

Bof. I met the Duke yesterday, and had much quef tion with him: I askt me of what parentage I was; I told mee as good as he, to he laugh'd, and let mee goe.
But what tale wee of Fathers, when there is fuch a man as Orlando?

Cel. O that's a braue man, hee writes brue verses, speakes braue words, fweares braue oathes, and breaks them brauely, quite trauers ethwart the heart of his lo uer, as a paffy Tilter, he fparres his horfe but on one fide, breakes his fliffe like a noble gofe; but all's braue that young mountes, and foely guides: who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Corin. Misfrefte and Maifter, you have oft enquired
After the Shepherd that complain'd of louse,
Who you saw fitting by me on the Turph,
Praifing the proud difdainfull Shepherdesse
That was his Misfrefte.

Cel. Well: and what of him?

Cor. If you will fee a pageant truely plaid
Betwixte the pale compofition of true Louse,
And the red glowe of forne and proud difdainne,
Goe hence a little, and I shall conduct you
If you will mark it.

Bof. O come, let us remove,
The fight of Louters feedeth chofe in louse:
Bring vs to this fight, and you shall fay
I fpe a bufe actor in their play.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Silvia and Phoebe.

Sil. Sweet Phoebe doe not fcorne me, do not Phoebe
Say that you love me not, but fay not fo
In bitterneffe; the common executioner
Whofe heart th'account'm'd fight of death makes hard
Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck,
But firft begets pardon: will you fтренer be
Then he that dies and lies by bloody drops?

Enter Robinfe, Celia, and Corin.

Phoe. I would not be thy executioner,
I flye thee, for I would not injure thee:
Thou tellft me there is murder in mine eye,
'Tis pretty fure, and very probable,

That eyes that are the frailift, and softeft things,
Who fhit their coward gates on atomye,
Should be called tyrants, butchers, murtherers.
Now I doe frowne on thee with all my heart,
And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee:
Now counterfeit to fwood, why now fall downe,
Or if thou canft not, oh for shame, for fhamne,
Lye not, to fay mine eyes are murtherers:
Now fhew the wound mine eye hath made in thee,
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains
Some scarre of it: Leane vpon a rufh
The Cicatedre and capable impreffure
Thy palme some moment keeps: but now mine eyes
Which I haue darted at thee, hurt thee not,
Nor I am fure there is no force in eyes
That can doe hurt.

Sil. O deere Phoebe,
If ever (as that euer may be neere)
You meet in fome freth cheeke the power of fancie,
Then fhall you know the wounds infallible
That Loues keene arrows make.

Phoe. But till that time
Come not thou neere me: and when that time comes,
Affift me with thy mockes, pity me not,
As till that time I fhall not pity thee.

Bof. And why I pray you? who might be your mother
That you influft, exult, and all at once
Ouer the wretched? what though you hau no beauty
As by my faith, I fee no more in you
Then without Candle may goe darke to bed:
Muft you be therefore proud and pitifalfe?
Why what means this? why do you looke on me?
I fee no more in you then in the ordinary
Of Natures fale-worke? ods my little life,
I thinke the meanes to tangle my eies too:
No falh proud Misfrefte, hope not after it,
'Tis not your inkie browes, your blanke filke hair,
Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheeke of creame
That can entame my spirites to your worship:
You foolish Shephered, wherefore do you follow her
Like foggy South, paffing with winde and raine,
You are a thousand times a properer man
Then she a woman. 'Tis such foole as you
That makes the world full of ill-favour children:
'Tis not her glaffe, but you that flatters her,
And out of you she fees her felbe more proper
Then any of her lineaments can thow her.
But Misfrefte, know your selfe, downe on your knees
And thanke heavens, falling, for a good mans love;
For I must tell you friendly in your ear,
Sell when you can, you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy, lose him, take his offer,
Foule is moft Eoule, being foule to be a fofter.
So take her to thee Shephaed, fareyouwell.

Phoe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a yere together,
I had rather here you chide, then this man wooe.

Bof. Hees faine in loue with your foulneffe, & she'll Fall in loue with my anger. If it be fo, as full
As she the anwers thee with frowning lookees, ile sauce
Her with bitter words: why looke you fo upon me?

Phoe. For no ill will I beare you.

Bof. I pray you do not fall in loue with mee,
For I am fuller then vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not: if you will know my hous,
'Tis at the tuffit of Olives, here hard by:
Will you goe Sifer? Shephard ply her hard:

Come
Come Sister, Shepheardeffe, looke on him better
And be not proud, though all the world could see,
None could be so abus'd in fight as hee.
Come to our flocke,

Phe. Dead Shephearde, now I find thy fav of might,
Who ever lov'd, that lod'd not at first fight?
Sif. Sweet Phebe.
Phe. Hah! what faith thou Silvius?
Sif. Sweet Phebe pity me.
Phe. Why I am sorry for thee gentle Silvius.
Sif. Where ever sorrow is, reliefe would be:
If you doe sorrow at my grievance, in love,
By guing you your sorrow, and my griefe
Were both extrem'd:
Phe. Thou hast my love, is not that neighbourly?
Sif. I would have you.
Phe. Why that were courteouse:
Silvius; the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I beare thee love,
But since that thou canst talke of love so well,
Thy company, which erst was likeforme to me
I will endure; and Ile employ thee too:
But doe not looke for further recom pense
Then thine owne gladness, that thou art employed.
Sif. So holy, and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I fall think it a most plenteous crop
To glane the broken ears after the man
That the maine haruest reapesloose now and then
A fattred smile, and that Ile live upon, (while?)
Phe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to mee yere?
Sif. Not very well, but I have met him oft,
And he hath bought the Cottage and the bounds
That the old Carlet once was Matter of.
Phe. Thinke not I love him, though I ask for him,
'Tis but a peevish boy, yet he talkes well,
But what care I for words? yet words do well
When he that speakes them pleades those that hear:
It is a pretty youth, not very prettie,
But sure hee's proud, and yet his pride becomes him;
He'll make a proper man, the best thing in him
Is his complexion: and fatter then his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it vp:
He is not very tall, yet for his yeares hee's tall:
His leg is but fo, and yet 'tis well:
There was a pretty redderifie in his lip,
A little riper, and more lustie:
Then that mixt in his cheeckes 'twas luft the difference
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled Damaske.
There be some women Silvius, had they markt him
In parcell as I did, would have gone neere
To fall in loue with him: but for my part
I love him not, nor hate him not: and yet
Have more cause to hate him then to loue him,
For what had he to do to chide at me?
He fald mine eyes were black, and my haire blacke,
And now I am rememder'd, fcornd at me:
I maruell why I anwer'd not again,
But that's all one: omittance is no quitance:
Hee write to him a very tantiing Letter,
And thou shalt hear it, wilt thou Silvius?
Sif. Phebe, with all my heart.
Phe. Hee write it drait:
The matter's in my head, and in my heart,
I will be better with him, and passing short;
Goe with me Silvius.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rosalind, and Celia, and Jaques.

Jaq. I prethee, pretty youth, let me better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholick fellow.
Jaq. I am so: I doe loue it better then laughing.

Ros. Thoile that are in extremity of either, are abho missible fellows, and betray themselves to every mo derne censure, worse then drunkards.
Jaq. Why, 'tis good to be fid and say nothing.

Ros. Why then 'tis good to be a poete.

Jaq. I have neither the Schollers melancholickly, which is emulatative: nor the Mufflens, which is fantastical;
nor the Courtiers, which is proud: nor the Soularders, which is ambitious: nor the Lawiers, which is politicke:
nor the Ladies, which is nice: nor the Lovers, which is all thefe: but it is a melancholick of mine owne, com pounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the fundrie contemplation of my trauells, in which by often rumination, wrapps me in a most hu:
rodis sinnede.

Ros. A Traueller: by my faith you have great rea son to be fad: I feare you have fold your owne Lands, to fee other mens; then to have fene much, and to hau nothing, is to have rich eyes and poore hands.

Jaq. Yes, I haue gain'd my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Ros. And your experience makes you fad: I had ra ther have a foole to make me merrie, then experience to make me fad, and to trauaille for it too.

Orl. Good day, and happineffe, deere Rosalind.

Jaq. Nay then God buy you, and you talke in blanke verse.

Ros. Farewell Mounfieur Traueller: looke you lifpe, and weare strange futes: dible all the benefits of your owne Countrey: be out of loue with your natiuitie, and almoft chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will feare thinke you haue swam in a Gundello. Why how now Orlando, where haue you bin all this while? you a louer? and you ferue me fuch another tricke, never come in my fight more.

Orl. My faine Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Breake an hours promis in loue hee that will divide a minute into a thousand parts; and breake but a part of the thoufand part of a minute in the affairs of loue, it may be faid of him that Cupid hath clapt him oth' shouder, but Ile warrant him heart hole.

Orl. Pardon me deere Rosalind.

Jaq. Nay, and you be fo tardie, come no more in my fight, I had as liefe be woo'd of a Snaitle.

Orl. Of a Snaile?

Ros. I, of a Snaile: for though he comes flowly, hee carries his hauole on his head; a better Inynture I thinke then you make a woman: besides, he brings his define with him.

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why horses: w' such as you fare faire to be holding to your wifes for; but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the flander of his wife.

Orl. Vertue
I, but when?

Orl. Why now, as fast as she can marry vs.

Rey. Then you must say, I take thee Rosalind for wife.

Or. I take thee Rosalind for wife.

Rey. I might ask you for your Commission,

But I doe take thee Orlando for my husband: there's a girl goes before the Priest, and certainly a Womans thought runs before her actions.

Or. So do all thoughts, they are wing'd.

Rey. Now tell me how long you would have her, afer you have possess'd her?

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Rey. Say a day, without the euer, no, no Orlando, men are April when they were December when they wed. Maides are May when they are maides, but the sky changes when they are wises: I will bee more jealous of thee, then a Barbary cocke-pidgeon over his hen, more clamorous then a Parrot against mene, more new-fangled then an ape, more giddy in my deare, then a monopoly: I will wepe for nothing, like Diana in the Fountain, & I wil do that when you are dispost'd to be merry: I will laugh like a Cyren, and that when thou art inclin'd to sleepe.

Orl. But will my Rosalind doe so?

Rey. By my life she will doe as I doe.

Orl. O but she is wise.

Rey. Or else shee could not haue the wit to doe this: the wiser, the waywarder: make the doores upon a woman's wits, and it will out at the excrement: shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole: flop that, 'twill file with the smoke at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wittie, might say, withe willer wife?

Rey. Nay, you might keepe that checke for ls, till you meet your wives wit going to your neighbours bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have, to excufe that?

Rey. Marry to say, she came to seeke you there: you shall neuer take her without her answer, vnlesse you take her without her tongue: that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her neuer marie her childes selfe, for she will breed it like a foole.

Orl. For these two hours Rosalinda, I will leave thee.

Rey. Alas, deere loue, I cannot lacke thee two houres.

Orl. I must attend the Duke at dinner, by two a clock I will be with thee again.

Rey. Igoe your wales, goe your wales: I knew what you would prove, my friends told mee as much, and I thought no leffe: that flattering tongue of yours wonne me: 'tis but one caft away, and so come death: two o'clock is your houre.

Orl. I swee Rosalind.

Rey. By my troth, and in good earnest, and fo God mend mee, and by all pretty oathes that are not dangrous, if you breake one lot of your promisse, or come one minute behinde your houre, I will thinke you the most paterkall breake-promisse, and the most hollow loyer, and the most vaunworthy of her you call Rosalinde, that may bee chosen out of the grosse band of the vnauthourfull: therefore beware my cenjury, and keep your promisses.

Orl. With no leffe religion, then if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: fo adieu.

Rey. Well, Time is the olde Jusitice that examines all such offenders, and let time trye: adieu. Exit.

Orl. You have simply misl'd our fexe in your loue-prate:
As you like it.

prate: we must have your douter, and hope pluckt over your head, and flew the world what the bird hath done to her owne neath.

Ref. O coz, coz, coz: my pretty little coz, that thou didn't know how many fathom deep I am in love: but it cannot be counted: my affection hath an unknowne bottome, like the Bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather bottomless, that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ref. No, that fame wicked Bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceit's of spleene, and borne of madness, that blinde rashly boy, that abuses every one's eyes, because his owne are out, let him be judge, how deep I am in love: I'll tell thee Altho, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I'll goe finde a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll deepe.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Jaques and Lords, Forresters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the Deare?

Lords. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's pretend him to the Duke like a Romane Conquerour, and it would doe well to set the Deares horns upon his head, for a branch of victory: have you no long Forrester for this purpose?

Lords. Yes Sir.

Jaq. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it bee in tune, so it make noyse enough.

Mufcke, Song.

What swall be base that killed the Deare?
His Leather skin, and bornes to warre:
Then sing him home, the refle swall bear this burthen:
Take thou no forme to warre the borne, it was a craft ere thou wast borne,
Thy fathers father wore it,
And thy father bore it,
The borne, the horse, the luffy borne,
Is not a thing to laugh to forme.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ref. How say you now, is it not past two a clock?

And heere much Orlando.

Cel. I warrant you, with pure loue, & troubled brain,

Enter Silvius.

He hath t'ane his bow and arrows, and is gone forth to sleepe: looke who comes heere.

Sil. My errand is to you, faire youth, My gentle Phebe, did bid me glue you this:
I know not the contents, but as I passe By the sterne brow, and waspish action Which she did vse, as she was writing of it, It bears an angry tenure; pardon me, I am but as a guiltifie meffenger.

Ref. Patience her felie would flarte at this letter, And play the swaggerer, heare this, heare all: Shee siles I am not faire, that I lacke manners, She calls me proud, and that she could not love mee Were man as rare as Phenix: 'od's my will, Her loue is not the Hale that I doe hunt, Why writes he to me? well Shepheard, well, This is a Letter of your owne deuice.

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents, Phebes did write it.

Ref. Come, come, you are a fool, And turn'd into the extremity of louse. I saw her hand, she has a leatherne hand, A freemone coloured hand: I verily did thinke That her old gloues were on, but twas her hands: She has a hufwiais hand, but that's no matter: I say the nearer did inuent this letter, This is a man invention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure it is hers.

Ref. Why, 'tis a boysterous and cruel fiddle, A file for challengers: why, she defies me, Like Turke to Christian: vowmes gentle braine Could not drop forth fuch giant rude invention, Such Ethiope wordes, blacker in their effect Then in their countenance: wil you heare the letter?

Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet:
Yet heard too much of Phebes crotulie.

Ref. She Phebes me: marke how the tyrant vvrites.

Read. Art thou god, is Shepheard turn'd? That a maidens heart hath borne'd?

Can a woman raie thus?

Sil. Call you this raling?

Ref. Read. Why, thy godhead laid a part,

War'th thou vvrithe with a women's heart? Did you ever hear such raling?

Whiles the eye of man did wowe me,

That could do no wrongeance to me.

Meaning me a beast.

If the forme of your bright sone,

Have power to raise such love in mine,

Alacke, in me, what strange effect?

Would they workes in milde affect?

Whiles you chide me, I did loue,

How then might your prayers moue me?

He that brings this love to thee,

Little knowes this Loue in me:

And by him scale up thy mindes,

Whether that thy youth and kindes

Will the faithfull offer take

Of me, and all that I can make,

Or eie by him my love denie,

And then I'll finde how to die.

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas poore Shepheard.

Ref. Doe you pitty him? No, he deferes no pitty: wilt thou lone such a woman? what to make thee an instrument, and play false straines upon thee? not to be endur'd. Well, goo your way to her; (for I see Lone hath made thee a tame snake) and say this to her; That if the loue me, I charge her to love thee; if she will not, I will never hue her, unleffe thou intret for her: if you bee a true lover hence, and not a word; for here comes more company.

Exit Sil.

Enter Oliver.

Oliv. Good morrow, faire ones: pray you, (if you know) Where in the Purlews of this Forreth, bands

A
As you like it.

A sheep-coat, fenc'd about with Olue-trees.

Cf. Weit of this place, down in the neighbor bottom
The ranke of Oliue, by the murmuring freames
Left on your right hand, brings you to the place:
But at this howre, the house doth keepe it felfe,
There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description,
Such garnisht, and such yeares: the boy is faire,
Of femail favour, and behoves him felfe.

Like a ripe fifter: the woman low
And browner then her brother: are not you
The owner of the house I did enquire for?

Cel. If it be no boafe, being ask'd, to fay we are.

Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both,
And to that youth hee calls his Rosalind,
This hee fends this bloody napkin; are you hee?

Ref. I am: what must we vnderfand by this?

Oli. Some of my flame, if you will know of me.

What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was flain'd.

Cel. I pray you tell it.

Oli. When left the yong Orlando parted from you,
He left me promife to returne againe,
Within an houre, and pacing through the Forrest,
Chewing the fweete of fweet, and bitter fancie,
Loo what befell: he threw his eye about,
And marke what object did priuent it flufe
Vnder an old Oak, whose bows were moft'd with age
And high top, bale with drie antiquitie:
A wreathed ragged man, one-grown with haire,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his necke
A greene and guilded fnaile had wreath'd it flufe,
Who with her head, nimble in threats approach'd
The opening of his mouth: but fuddenly
Seeing Orlando, it vnlit's it flufe,
And with indenter fides, did flip away.

Into a bush, vnder which burthen fhaide
A Lyonnesse, with vlders all drawne drie,
Lay couching heaue on ground, with catlike watch
When that the sleeping man fhoule flirre; for 'tis
The royall difposition of that beafe
To prey on noting, that doth fume as dead:
This fene, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O I haue heard him speake of that fame brother,
And he did render him the moft vnaatural
That liu'd among men:

Oli. And well he might fo doe,
For well I know he was vnaatural.

Ref. But to Orlando: did he leave him there
Food to the fuck'd and hungry Lyonnesse?

Oli. Twice did he turne his backe, and purpof'd fo:
But kindnesse, nobler euer then renueenge,
And Nature stronger then his luft occasion,
Made him gave battell to the Lyonnesse:
Who quickly fell before him, in which hurtling
From miferable flumber I awaked.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ref. Was't you he refau'd?

Cel. Was't you that did fo oft continue to kill him?

Oli. 'Twas I: but 'tis not I: I do not flame
To tell you what I was, since my confervion
So sweetly taffes, being the thing I am.

Ref. But for the bloody napkin?

Oli. By and by.

When from the firft to laft betwixt vs two,
Tears our recountements had moft kindly bath'd,
As how I came into that Defert place.
I briefly, he led me to the gentle Duke,
Who gave me fresh aray, and entertainment,
Committing me into my brothers lace,
Who led me infancy into his Case,
There shir'd himfelfe, and heere upon his arme
The Lyonnesse had torne fome flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And crede in fainting upon Rosalinde.
Briefly, I recouer'd him, bound vp his wound,
And after fome small pace, being strong at hart,
He fent me hither, stranger as I am
To tell this story, that you might excufe
His broken promife, and to glue this napkin
Died in this blood, vnto the Shepheard youth,
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

Cel. Why how now Ganined, sweet Ganined.

Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on blood.

Cel. There is more in it; Cofen Ganined.

Oli. Lookes, he recouers.

Ref. I would I were at home.

Cel. We'll lead you thither:
I pray you will you take him by the arme.

Oli. Be of good cheere youth: you a man?
You lacke a mans heart.

Ref. I doe fo, I confesse it.

Ah, lira, a body would thinke this was well counterfeited,
I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited: helpho.

Oli. This was not counterfeit, there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a passion of earnest.

Ref. Counterfeit, I affure you.

Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.

Ref. So I doe: but yfaith, I should have beene a woman by right.

Cel. Come, you looke paler and paler: pray you draw homewards: good sir, goe with vs.

Oli. That will I: for I must brecr anfwer becke
How you excufe my brother, Rosalinde.

Ref. I shall deuide something: but I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him: will you goe?

Exeunt.

Enter Clowne and Awdrie.

Clove. We shall finde a time Awdrie, patience gentle Awdrie.

Awd. Faith the Priest was good enough, for all the old gentlemen saying.

Clove. A moft wicked Sir Oliver, Awdrie, a moft vile Emart-court. But Awdrie, there is a youth heere in the Forrest layes claimes to you.

Awd. I, I know who 'tis: he hath no interest in mee in the world: here comes the man you meanes.

Enter William.

Will. Good eu'n Audry.

Aud. God ye good eu'n William.

Will. And good eu'n to you Sir.

Clo. Good eu'n gentle friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head: Nay prethee bee couerd. How old are ye Friend?

Will. Fieue and twenty Sir.

Clo. A rape age: Is thy name William?

Will. William, sir.

Clo. A faire name. Was't borne i' th Forrest heere?

Will. I sir, I thank God.

Clo. Thanke God: A good anfwer:

Art rich?

Will. 'Faith sir, fo, fo.

Clo. So, fo, is good, very good, very excellent good: and it is not, it is but fo, fo.

Art thou wife?

Will. I sir, I have a prettie wit.

Clo. Why, thou faiest well. I do now remember a saying: The Foole doth thinke he is wise, but the wileman knowes him elfe to be a Foole. The Heathen Philofopher, when he had a deare to eate a Grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that Grapes were made to eate, and lippes to open.

You do love this maid?

Will. I do fit.

Clo. Glue me your hand: Art thou Learned?

Will. No fir.

Clo. Then learne this of me, To haue, is to haue. For it is a figure in Rhetoricke, that drink being pow'd out of a cup into a glaffe, by filling the one, doth empty the other. For all your Writters do confent, that ife is hee: now you are not ife, for I am he.

Will. Which he fir?

Clo. He fir, that muft marrie this woman: Therefore you Cloane, abonnde: which is in the vulgar,leave the focietie: which in the booirth, is companie, of this female: which in the common, is woman: which together, is, abandon the society of this Female, or Cloane thou perfitheft: or to thy better understanding, dyeft: or (to wit) I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy libeity into bondage: I will deal in payson with thee, or in baffina, or in fcre: I will bring with thee in faction, I will one-run thee with a polcie: I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways, therefore tremble and depart.

Aud. Do good William.

Will. God rett you merry fir. Exit

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our Mafter and Milfterre feekes you: come away, away.

Aud. Trip Audry, trip Audry, I attend, I attend.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando & Oliver.

Orl. Is't poiffible, that on fo little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her?

And louing wo? and wothing, the shoul graunt? And will you perfceiver to enjoy her?

Orl. Neither call the giddinesse of it in question: the povertie of her, the small acquaintance, my fodyae woing, nor fodyaine confenting: but fay with mee, I loue Aletna: I lay with her, that she loues mee; content with both, that we may enjoy each other: It shall be to your good: for my fathers houfe, and all the reuennue, that was old Sir Rovells will I eflate vpon you, and here liue and die a Shepherd.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You haue my content.

Let your Wedding be to morrow: thisher will I Inuite the Duke, and all his contented followers: Go you, and prepare Aletnas for Rookes you.

Here enters my Rosalinde.

Rof. God faue you brother.

Orl. And you faire fifter.

Rof. Oh my deere Orlando, how it greues me to fee thee weare thy heart in a fcarfe.

Orl. It is my arme.

Rof. I thought thy heart had beene wounded with the claws of a Lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a Lady.

Rof. Did your brother tell you how I counterfetyed to found, when he shew'd me your handkercher?

Orl. I, and greater wonder then that.

Rof. O, I know where you are: nay, tis true: there was neuer any thing fo fodya, but the fight of two Rammes, and Cefars Thraffonian bragge of I came, law, and overcomne. For your brother, and my fifter, no fooner met, but they fay'd: no fooner look'd, but they lou'd: no fooner lou'd, but they fight'd: no fooner figh'd: but they ask'd one another the reafon: no fooner knew the reafon, but they fought the remedie: and in thefe degrees, haue they made a paire of fhareis to marry: which they will clime incontinent, or fele be incontinent before marriage; they are in the verry wrath of loue, and they will together. Clubbes cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to morrow: and I will be the Duke to the Nupiai. But O, how bitter a thing it is, to beke into HAPPINES through another mans eies! by fo much the more shall I to morrow be at the height of heart hauinesse, by how much I thinke my brother happier, in hauing what he wishes for.

Rof. Why then to morrow, I cannot ferue your turne for Rosalinde?

Orl. I can lie no longer by thinking.

Rof. I will weare you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then (for now I speake to fome purpole) that I know you are a Gentleman of good conceit: I speake not this, that you should beare a good opinion of my knowledge: infomuch (I fay) I know you areneither do I labor for a greater efence then may in feome little meafure drow a belief from you, to do your felfe good, and not to grace me. Beleue then, if you pleaffe, that I can do strange things: I haue since I was three yeares olde conuerse with a Magelian, much profound in his Art, and yet not damnable. If you do loue Rosalinde, I yet one to the harte, as your gefibre cries it out: when your brother marries Aletna, shall you marrie her. I know in to what straights of Fortune she is driven, and it is not impollible to me, if it appeare not inconuenient to you, to to set her before your eyes to morrow, humane as she is, and without any danger. Let Speak't thou in sober meanings? Ref. By my life I do, which I tender dearly, though I say I am a Magician: Therefore put you in your beft aray, bid your friends for; if you will be married to morrow, you shall: and to Rosalind if you will.

Look, here comes a Lovers of mine, and a lover of hers.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much vengefulness, To shew the letter that I writ to you.
Ref. I care not if I have: it is my studie To seeme delightfull and vengeant to you: you are there followed by a faithful shepheard, Looke vpon him, loose him: he worships you. Phe. Good shepheard, tell this youth what 'tis to looke Sil. It is to be all made of fights and tears, And so am I for Pheebe. Phe. And so am I for Ganymede. Ref. And so am I for Rosalind. Ref. And so am I for no woman. Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service, And so am I for Pheebe. Phe. And so am I for Ganymede. Ref. And so am I for Rosalind. Ref. And so am I for no woman. Sil. It is to be all made of fantastie, All made of pallion, and all made of wishes, All adoration, dute, and obseruance, All humblenesse, all patience, and Impatience, All puri'tie, all triall, all obseruance; And so am I for Pheebe. Phe. And so am I for Ganymede. Ref. And so am I for Rosalind. Ref. And so am I for no woman. Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you? Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you? Ref. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you? Ref. Why do you speake too, Why blame you mee to loue you. Ref. To her, that is not here, nor doth not here.
Ref. Pray you no more of this: 'tis like the howling of Inrid Woluse against the Moore: I will help you if I can: I would loue you if I could: To morrow meet me altogether: I will marrie you, If ever I marrie Woman, and Ie be married to morrow: I will lustie you, if I ever lustied man, and you shall be married to morrow. I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to morrow: As you love Rosalind meet, as you loue Pheebe meet, and as I loue no woman, He meet: so far ye wle: I have left you commands.
Sil. Ife not faile, if I like. Phe. Nor I. Ref. Nor I. Exeunt.

Keepe your word Silvia, that you'll marrie her
If she refuse me, and from hence I go
To make these doubts all even.

Exit Ref. and Celia.

Du. Sen. I do remember in this shepheard boy,
Some lively touches of my daughters favour.
Orl. My Lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
I thought he was a brother to your daughter:
But my good Lord, this Boy is Forrester borne,
And hath bin tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies, by his vaule,
Whom he reports to be a great Magitian.

Enter Clown and Audrey.

Obscured in the circle of this Forrester.

Sy. There is sure another flood toward, and these couples are comming to the Arke.
Here comes a payre of vertue strange beasts, which in all tongues, are call'd Fools.

Clown. Salutation and greeting to you all.
Sy. Good my Lord, bid him welcome: This is the Motley-minded Gentleman, that I have so often met in the Forrester he hath bin a Courtier he fware.

Clown. If any man doubt that, let him put mee to my purgation, I have trod a measure, I have flatted a Lady, I have bin politick with my friend, smooth with mine enemie, I have vndone three Tallors, I have had foure quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Sy. And how was that tane vp?

Clown. 'Faith we met, and found the quarrel was vp:
On the feuenth cause.

Sy. How feuenth cause? Good my Lord, like this fellow.

Du. Sen. I like him very well.

Clown. God'lld you sir, I defire you of the like: I preffe in heere fir, amongst the rest of the Country copulatives to fware, and to forswear, according as mariage binds and blood breaks: a poore virgin fir, an il-fauour'd thing fir, but mine owne, a poore humour of mine fir, to take that that no enemie will: rich homedde dwells as a merer fir, in a poore house, as your Pearl in your foule yfert.

Du. Sen. By my faith, he is very swift, and pententious

Clown. According to the foules bolr fir, and fuch dulce difciples.

Sy. But for the feuenth cause. How did you finde the quarrell upon the feuenth cause?

Clown. Upon a lyce, feuen times removed: (bear your bodie more feeming Audry) as thus fir: I did dilike the cut of a certaine Courtiers beard: he fent me word, if I fald his beard was not cut well, hee was in the minde it was: this is call'd the retort courteous. If I fent him word againe, it was not well cut, he wold fende me word he cut it to pleafe himfelfe: this is call'd the quip modest. If againe, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgment: this is called, the reply curfifh. If againe it was not well cut, he would anfwer I spake not true: this is call'd the reproves valiant. If againe, it was not well cut, he wold fay, I lie: this is call'd the counter-checke quarrelsome: and fo ro lye circumstantial, and the lye direct.

Sy. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Clown. I durft go no further then the lye circumstantial;

nor he durft not give me the lye direct: and so wee measure ars, and parted.

Sy. Can you nominate in order now, the degrees of the lye.

Clown. O fir, we quarel in print, by the booke: as you haue booke for good manners: I will name you the degrees.
The firft, the Retort courteous: the second, the Quip-modest: the third, the reply Churlifh: the fourth, the Reproves valiant: the fift, the Counter-checke quarrelsome: the fift, the Lye with circumstance: the feuenth, the Lye direct: all these you may asway, but the Lye direct: and you may advise that too, with an If. I knew when euens luffices could not take vp a Quarrell, but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If; as if you falde fo, then I falde fo: and they fhowke hands, and fwear brothers. Your If, is the onely peace-maker: much vertue in if.

Sy. Is not this a rare fellow my Lord? He's as good at any thing, and yet a foole.

Du. Sen. He vies his folly like a flalking-horse, and vnder the prefentation of that he flouts his wit.

Enter Hymen, Rosalind, and Celia.

Still Mufick.

Hymen. Then is there merit in heaven,
When earthly things made even Attire together.

Good Duke receive thy daughter,
Hymen from Heaven brought her,
'Tis brought her brother,
That thou mightst lose his hand with his,
Whole heart within his bosom is.

Ref. To you I giue my felic, for I am yours.

To you I giue my felic, for I am yours.

Du. & Sr. If there be truth in fight, you are my daughter.
Orl. If there be truth in fight, you are my Rosalind.

Pie. If fight & shape be true, why then my louse arie

Ref. Ile have no Father, if you be not he:
Ile have no Husband, if you be not he:
Nor ne're wed woman, if you be not thee.

By. Peace hoa! I barre confusion,
'Tis I must make conclusion

Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To loyne in Hymens bands,
If truth holds true contents.
You and you, no croffe shall part;
You and you, are hart in hart:
You, to his louse must accord,
Or have a Woman to your Lord.
You and you, are sure together,

As the Winter to fowle Weather:
Whiles a Wedlock Hymen we fing,
Feede your felues with quifition:
That reafon, wonder may diminish

How thus we met, and these things finife.

Song.

Wedding is great tunes creeme;
O bilged bond of board and bed:
'Tis Hymen peoples euerie town;
High wedlock then he bowed:
 Honor, high honor and renome
To Hymen, God of euerie Towne.

Du. Sen. O my deere Niecee, welcome thou ar to me,
Euen daughter welcome, in no leffe degree.

Pie.
As you like it.

Act One, Scene Three

Enter Second Brother.

2.Bro. Let me have audience for a word or two: I am the second sonne of old Sir Rowland, and bring thee tidings to this faire assemby.

Duke Frederick hearing how that euerie day Men of great worth reforted to this forreft, added a mightie power, which were on foot In his owne conduct, purposely to take his brother heere, and put him to the sword: And to the skirts of this wilde wood he came; Where, meeting with an old Religious man, after some question with him, was converted Both from his enterprize, and from the world: His crowne bequeathing to his banish'd Brother, and all their Lands refour'd to him againe. That were with him exil'd. This to be true, I do engage my life.

Du.Sc. Welcome young men: Thou offer'st fairely to thy brothers wedding: To one his lands with-held, and to the other A land it felte at large, a potent Dukedom.

First, in this forreft, let us do those ends That beere vvere well begun, and well begot: And after, every of this happie number That haue endur'd threwe daies, and nights with vs, Shall sharke the good of our returned fortune, According to the measure of their fates. Meane time, forget this new-saine dignitate, And fall into our Rustickke Resolutie: Play Musick, and you Brides and Bride-groomes all, With measure heasp'd in joy, to'th Measures fall.

Lay. Sir, by your patience: if I heard you rightly, The Duke hath put on a Religious life, And throwne into neglect the pomposse Court.

2.Bro. He hath.

Lay. To him will I: out of these concertes, There is much matter to be heard, and learn'd: You to your former Honors, I bequeath your patience, and your vertue, well defersues it. You to a loue, that your true faith doth merit: You to your land, and loue, and great allies: You to a long, and well-defersued bed: And you to wrangling, for thy louting voyage Is but for two moneths vifual'd: So to your pleasures, I am for other, then for dancing measure.

Lay. To see no pastime, 1: what you would have, Ile stay to know, at your abandon'd cause.

Du.Sc. Proceed, proceed: we'll begin these rights, As we do trueth, they'll end in true delights.

Exit.

Raf. It is not the fashion to see the Lady the Epilogue: but it is no more vhandsome, then to see the Lord the Prologue. If it be true, that good wine needs no buff, 'tis true, that a good play needs no Epilogue. Yet to good wine they do vfe good busses: and good players prove the better by the helpe of good Epilogues: What a cafe am I in then, that am neither a good Epilogue, nor cannot infraine with you in the behalfe of a good play? I am not furnish'd like a Begger, therefore to begge will not become me. My way is to conuert you, and Ile begin with the Women. I charge you (O women) for the loue you beare to men, to like as much of this Play, as please you: And I charge you (O men) for the loue you beare to women (as I perceiue by your simpering, none of you hates them) that betweene you, and the women, the play may please. If I were a Woman, I would kisse as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexions that lik'd me, and breath that I def'de not: And I am sure, as many as haue good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will for my kind offer, when I make curt'ly, bid me farewell. Exit.
THE
Taming of the Shrew.

Actus primus: Scæna Prima.

Enter Beggar and Hoftes, Christopher Sly.

Beggar.

Le pheeze you in faith.

Hoftes. A pair of stocks you rogue.

Beg. Y’are a baggage, the Sith are no Rogues. Louce in the Chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror: therefore Pauca pallabris, let the world flide: Sefia.

He. You shall not pay for the glassies you have burnit?

Beg. No, not a deniere i go by S. Jeronimus, goe to thy cold bed, and warme thee.

He. I know my remedie, I must go fetch the Hordborough.

Beg. Third, or fourth, or fight Borough, Ile anfwere him by Law. Ile not budge an inch boy: Let him come, and kindly.

Follies.

Wnde bornes. Enter a Lord from hunting, with his trains.

Lo. Huntsman I charge thee, tender wet my hounds, Brach Meriman, the poore Curre is imboff,

And couple Clouder with the deepe-mouth’d brach, Saw it thou not boy how Silver made it good

At the hedge corner, in the coudell fault,

I would not lose the dogge for twentie pound.

Hunts. Why Balman is as good as he my Lord,

He cried upon it at the mereeff loffe,

And twice to day pick’d out the duldef fent,

Truft mee, I take him for the better dogge.

Lord. Thou art a Foole, if Ecco were as Steele,

I would extemee him worth a dozen fuch:

But if they well, and looke vnto them all,

To morrow I intend to hunt againe.

Hunts. I will my Lord.

Lord. What’s here? One dead, or drunk? See doth he breath?

Hunts. He breath’s my Lord. Were he not warm’d withAle, this were a bed but cold to sleep so foundly.

Lord. Oh monftrous heath, how like a twinke he lyes, Grim death, how foule and loathfome is thine image: Sirs, I will praffife on this drunken man.

What thinke you, if he were conuey’d to bed, Wrap’d in tme clothes: Rings put vpon his fingers:

A most delicious banquet by his bed,

And brave attendants neere him when he wakes,

Would not the beggar then forget himself?

Hunts. Beleeue me Lord, I thinke he cannot choofe.

H. It would seem strange vnto him when he wake’

Lord. Even as a flatt’reng dreame, or worthless fancie.

Then take him vp, and manage well the left:

Carrie him gently to my faireft Chamber,

And hang it round with all my vvantion pictures:

Balm he foule head in warme defilled waters,

And burne sweet Wood to make the Lodging sweeter:

Procure me Muficke ready when he vlakes,

To make a dulce and a heavenly found:

And if he chance to speake, be readie straight

(And with a lowe submiffue reverence)

Say, what is it your Honor vvil command:

Let one attend him with a flifer Saffen

Full of Rofe-water, and befrew’d with Flowers,

Another beare the Ewer: the third a Diaper,

And fay wilt pleafe your Lordship coole your hands.

Some one be readie with a coffly fuite,

And ask him what apparel he will ware:

Another tell him of his Hounds and Hare,

And that his Ladie mournes at his difafe,

Perfiade him that he hath bin Lunaticke,

And when he fayes he is, fay that he dreams,

For he is nothing but a mightie Lord:

This do, and do it kindly, gentle firs,

It will be palme puffing excellent,

If it be handefed with modefte.

1. Hunts. My Lord I warrant you we will play our part

As he fhall thinke by our true diligence

He is no leffe then what we fay he is.

Lord. Take him vp gently, and to bed with him,

And each one to his office when he wake.

Sound trumpets.

Sirrah, go fee what Trumpet ’tis that founds,

Belfke fome Noble Gentleman that means

(Travelling fome journey) to repofe him heere.

Enter Servants.

How now? who is it?

Ser. An’t pleafe your Honor, Players

That offer fervice to your Lordhip.

Enter Players.

Lord. Bid them come neere:

Now fellowes, you are welcome.

Players. We thanke your Honor.

Lord. Do you intend to ftay with me to night?

2. Player. So pleafe your Lordship to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember,

Since once he plaid a Farmers elfe fonne,

‘Twas where you woud the Gentlewoman fo well:

I have forgot your name: but fure that part

Was
Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.

Sickke. I think 'twas Sirs that your honor means.

Lord. 'Tis verie true, thou didst it excellent;
Well you are come to me in happie time,
The rather for I hau e some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can adust me much,
There is a Lord will heare you play to night;
But I am doubtfull of your modesties,
Least (over-eying of thise odd behaviour,
For yet his honor never heard a play)
You brake into some marrie passion,
And so offend him: for I tell you fin,
If you should smile, he grows impatient.

Plat. Fear not my Lord, we can contain our selues,
Were he the vertest anticke in the world.

Lord. Go sirra, take them to the Butterie,
And glue them friendly welcome euerie one,
Let them want nothing that my houfe affords.

Sirra go you to Bartholomew my Pay.
And fee him dret in all futes like a Ladie:
That done, conduce him to the drunkards chamber,
And call him Madam, do him obeisance:
Tell him from me (as he will win my love)
He bear himselfe with honourable action,
Such as he hath obier'd in noble Ladies
Vnto their Lords, by them accomplishe,
Such dutie to the drunkard let him do:
With softe lowe tongue, and lowly carifie,
And say: What is't your Honor will command,
Wherein your Ladie, and your humble wife,
May shew her dutie, and make knowne her love.
And then with kinde embracements, tempting kisies,
And with declining head into his bofore
Bild him shed tears, as being ouer-loyed
To fee her noble Lord refur'd to health,
Who for this feene yeares hath extreame him.
No better then a poore and loathsome begger
And if the boy have not a womeans guift
To raine a flower of commended tears,
An Onion wil do well for such a chift,
Which in a Napkin (being clofe coun'd)
Shall in difpight enforse a watterie eie:
See this dispatch'd with all the haft thou canst,
Anon Ile glue thee more instructions.

Exit a servingman.

I know the boy will we Westminster grace,
Vocks, gate, and action of a Gentelwoman:
I long to hauare him call the drunkard husband,
And how my men will flay themselfes from laughter,
When they do homage to this simple pesant,
Ie in to counsell them: haply my preference
May well abate the over-metrue belongence,
Which otherwise would grow into extrarems.

Enter shet the drunkard with attendants, some with apparel,
Bayen and Euer, & other apperentiments, & Lord.

Beg. For Gods sake a pot of small Ale.

1. Sir. Wilt please your Lord drink a cup of fackes?
2. Sir. Wilt please your Honor taste of these Conomes?

3. Sir. What raiment will your honor wear to day.

Beg. I am Christopher Sit, call not mee Honour nor Lordsip: I ne're drank fackes in my life: and if you give me any Conerves, glue me conerves of Beeret nere ask me what raiment Ile weare, for I haue no more doub-lets then backes: no more flockings then legges: nor no more fhooses then feet, ney sometimse more fete then fhooses, or fuch fhooses as my toes looke through the ouer-leather.

Lord. Heauen cease this idle humor in your Honor.
Oh that a mightie man of such diftent,
Of fuch possifions, and fo hight exteme
Should be infus'd with fo foule a spirit.

Beg. What would you make one mad? Am not I Christopher Sit, old Sirs Ionne of Burton-beath, by byth a Pedler, by education a Cardmaker, by transmutacion a Bearer-heard, and now by present profission a Tinker.

Aske Marrian Hacket the fat Alewife of Wincot, if she know me not if I the fye I am not xill'd on the store for these Ale, score me vp for the lyking knave in Chritien dome. What I am not betraught : here's

3. Man. Oh this it is that makes your Ladie mourn.
2. Man. Oh this is it that makes your feruants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it, that your kindred flans your
As beaten hence by your tyronge Lanace.

(houfe)
Oh Noble Lord, bethinke thee of thy birth,
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,
And banish hence these abated lowlie dreams:
Looke how thy feruants do attend on thee,
Each in his office readie at thy becke.
Wilt thou haue Mischief? Harke Apollo plaies,
Myck
And twentie eaged Nightingales do fange.
Or wilt thou sleep? We'll have thee to a Couch,
Sofer and sweeter then the luftfull bed
On purpose trim'd vp for Semarimis.
Say thou wilt walke: we will before the ground,
Or wilt thou ride? Thy horses shall be trap'd,
Their harnesse studied all with Gold and Pearle.
Doft thou loue hawking? Thou haue hautes will foare Aboue the morning Larke. Or wilt thou hunt,
Thy hounds shall make the Welkin answer them
And fetch thrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1. Man. Say thou wilt courtes, thy grey-houndes are as
As breathed Stage: I fletcher then the Roe, (fivft)
2. M. Dost thou loue pictures? we will fetch thee strait
Adonis painted by a running brooke,
And Circea all in fidges hid,
Which feeme to move and wanton with her breath,
Euen as the wauing fedges play with winde.

Lord. Wee'l hau thee fo, as she was a Maid,
And how she was beguil'd and perfut'd,
As listle painted, as the deede was done.

3. Man. Or Daphne roming through a thornie wood,
Scratching her legs, that one shal swere the bleeds,
And at that fight shal lad Apollo wepe,
So workmanlie the blood and teares are drawne.

Lord. Thou art a Lord, and nothing but a Lord:
Thou haue a Ladie farre more beauteful,
Then any woman in this waining age.

1. Man. And cll the teares that the hath fhed for thee,
Like cruoule floods ore-run her lovely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world,
And yet thee is inferior in fides hid.

Beg. Am I a Lord, and haue I such a Ladie?
Or do I dream? Or haue I dream'd till now?
I do not sleepe: I fee, I heare, I speake:
I finet sweete favours, and I feel soft things:
Vpon my life I am a Lord indeede,
And not a Tinker, nor Christopher Sitse.
Well, bring our Ladie hither to our sight,
And once againe a pot'oth smallest Ale.
The Taming of the Shrew.

2. Man. Wilt please your mightiness to wash your hands:
Oh how we joy to see your wit refort'd,
Oh that once more you knew but what you are:
The next fifteen yeares you have bin in a dreame,
Or when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Beg. These fifteen yeares, by my fay, a goodly nap,
But did I ever speake of all that time.

1. Man. Oh yes my Lord, but verie idle words,
For though you lay here in this goodlie chamber,
Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of doore,
And ralle upon the Hofffe of the houfe,
And say you would prefer it at the Leete,
Because the brought stone-Jugs, and no feal'd quarts:
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Beg. I, the womans maide of the house.

3. Man. Why sir you know no houfe, nor no such maid
Nor no such men as you have reckone'd vp,
As Stephen Sil, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turch, and Henry Pimpennel,
And twente more such names and men as these,
Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Beg. Now Lord be thanked for my good amends.

All. Amen.

Enter Lady with Attendants.

Beg. I thanke thee, thou fain't not loofe by it.

Lady. How faires my noble Lord?

Beg. Marrie I faine well, for here is cheere enough.

Where is my wife?

La. Here be noble Lords, what is thy will with her?

Beg. Are you my wife, and will not cal me husband?

My men should call me Lord, I am your good-man.

La. My husband and my Lord, my Lord and husband
I am your wife in all obedience.

Beg. I know it well, what mutt I call her?

Lord. Madam.

Beg. Alice Madam, or None Madam?

Lord. Madam, and nothing else, so Lords cal Ladies
Beg. Madame wife, they fay that I have dream'd,
And kept above fome fifteen yeares or more.

Lady. I, and the time feme's thirty unto me,
Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.

Beg. 'Tis much, fersants leave me and her alone:

Madam, I endure you, and come now to bed.

La. Thrice noble Lord, let me intreat of you
To pardon me yet for a night or two:
Or if not fo, unti the Sun be fet.

For your Phyfitians have exprefly charg'd,
In peril to injure your former malady,
That I should yet esteeme me from your bed:
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.

Beg. I, it stands fo that I may hardly tarry fo long:
But I would be loth to fall into my dreams againe:
I will therefore tarrie in delight of the fleith & the blood

Enter a Messinger.

Mes. Your Honours Players hearing your amendement,
Are come to play a pleasant Comedie,
For in your doctors hold it very mccc.

Seeing too much faineffe hath congeald your blood,
And melancholy is the Nurse of irenality,
Therefore they thought it good you hear a play,
And frame your minde to mirth and merriment,
Which barres a thousand harms, and lengthens life.

Beg. Marrie I will let them play, it is not a Comon-tie, a Christmas gambold, or a tumbling tricklet

Lady. No my good Lord, it is more pleaing ifliffe.

Beg. What, howfull ifliffe.

Lady. It is a a kind of histry.

Beg. Well, I'll feet:

Come Madam wife by my fide,
And let the world flip, we shall here be younger.

Flourish. Enter Lucanto, and his man Triano.

Luc. Triano, fince for the great defire I had
To see faire Padua, nurterie of Arts,
I am arri'd for fruitfull Lombardie,
The pleasant garden of great Italy,
And by my fathers loue and leave am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good companie,
My trullfe fersant well appoind in all,
Here let vs breath, and haply influifie
A course of Learning, and ingenious studies.
Pifa renouned for grace Citizens
Gave me my being, and my father firft
A Merchant of great Trafficke through the world:

Vincentio's come of the Benturch,
Vincentio's fonne, brougt vp in Florence,
It fhall become to ferne all hopes conceiv'd
To decke his fortune with his vertuous decede:
And therefore Triano, for the time I fitude,
Vertue and that part of Philofophie
Will I appilie, that treats of Happineffe,
By vertue specially to be attch'd.
Tell me thy minde, for I have Pifa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A fhalow plafe, to plunge him in the deepe,
And with ficiete feeke to quench his thrist.

Trea. Signor Triano, gentle matter mine:
I am in all affected as your felfe,
Glad that you thus continue your refolve,
To fucke the fweets of sweete Philofophie.

Onely (good matter) while we do admire
This vertue, and this morall discipline,
Let's be no Strickes, nor no flockes I pray,
Or fo devote to Ariftocrates checks
As Ovidy be an out-cast quite aburr'd:
Balke Lodgicke with acquaintance that you have,
And prattifie Rhetorick in your common talke,
Musickke and Poeticke fee, to quicken you,

The Mathematickes, and the Metaphyfickes
Fall to them as you finde your fomacke ferues you:
No profit growes, where is no pleure tane:
In briefes frit, fitude what you f hovering.

Luc. Gramercies Triano, well doft thou advice,
If Biondello thou were come ahere,
We could at once put vs in readiness,
And take a Lodging fit to entertaine
Such friends (as time) in Padua Ball beget.

But fay a little, what companie is this?

Tra. Matter some fhow to welcome vs to Towne.

Enter Baptifh with his two daughters, Katervina & Bianca,

Gremio a Pantelouwes, Hortensio filier to Bianca.

Luc. Triano, fainde by.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am relou'd you know:
That is, not to befow my youngest daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder:

If either of you both love Katherine,

Because
The Taming of the Shrew

Because I know you well, and love you well,
Loue shall you have to court you at your pleasure.

Gre. To cart her rather. She's to rough for me,
There, there Hortensio, will you any Wife?
Kate. I pray you sir, is it your will
To make a faile of me amongst these mates?
Hor. Mates maid, how meane you that?
No mates for you,
Vnleffe you were of gentler milder mould.
Kate. I'faith sir, you shall never neede to fear,
I-wis it is not halfe way to her heart:
But if it were, doubt not, her care should be,
To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd floole,
And paint your face, and vve you like a fiole.
Hor. From all flesh diuel, good Lord deliuer us.
Gre. And me too, good Lord.

Tra. Huish matter, heres some good pastime toward;
That wench is flanke mad, or wonderful froward.
Kate. But in the others silence do I fee,
Maid's milde behaviour and fubjeftice.

Peace Tranio.

Tra. Well said Mr. mum, and gazz your fill.
Bap. Gentleman, that I may foon make good
What I have faid, Bianca get you in,
And let it not difpleafe thee good Bianca,
For I will loue thee nere thee lefts my fefte.
Kate. A pretty face, it is bef put finger in the eye,
And the knew why.

Bian. Sifter content you, in my difcontent,
Sir, to your pleafure humble I Subcribe:
My booke and instruments shall be my compaines,
On them to looke, and praflice by my felfe.
Luc. Harke Tranio, thou maift here Minerva speake.
Hor. Signior Baptifia, will you be fo frange,
Sorrie am I that our good will effects
Bianca's greene.

Gre. Why will you mew her vp (Signior Baptifia) for this fien of hell,
And make her beare the penance of her tongue.

Bap. Gentleman content ye; I am refoud:
Go in Bianca.
And for I know she taketh moft delight
In Musicke, Infruments, and Poetry,
Schoolmasteres will I keepe within my hous,
Fit to inftruct her youth. If you Hortensio,
Or signior Gremio you know any fuch,
Preferre them hither: for to cunning men,
I will be very kinde and libera'll,
To mine owne children, in good bringing vp,
And fo farewell: Katherine you may lay,
For I have more to commune with Bianca.

Kate. Why, and tru' I may go too, I may not.
What shal I be appointed houres, as though (Belike) I knew not what to take,
And what to leave? Ha!

Exit Gre.

You may go to the diuel dam; your guilty are So honest men willomite you: Their loue is not fo great Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and faith it fairely out. Our cakes douch on both sieds.

Kate. I pray you sir, is it your will,
To make a faile of me amongst these mates?

Hor. So will I dignour Gremio: but a word I pray:
Though the nature of our quarrell yet never brook'd parle, know now your advice, it toucheth vs both that we yet again have accesse to our faire Militris, and be happie rivals in Bianca's loue, to labour and effect one thing specially.

Gre. What's that I pray?
Hor. Marrife sir to get a husband for her Sifter.
Gre. A husband; a diuell.
Hor. I say a husband.
Gre. I say, a diuell: Think it thou Hortensio, though her father be verie rich, any man is to verie a diuell to be married to hell?

Hor. Tsifh Gremio: though it paff your patience & mine to endure her lowd alarums, why man there bee good fellows in the world, and a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and mony enough.
Gre. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowrie with this condition; To be whipt at the hi croffe euerie morning.

Hor. Faith (as you say) there's small choife in rotten apples: but come, since this bar in law makes vs friends, it shall be fo farre. For in Padua to begin his woinge that would thoroughly woe her, wed her, and bed her, and ridde the houfe of her. Come on.

Exeunt amb. Manet Tranio and Lucuccio

Tra. I pray sir tel me, is it poiffible
That loue should of a fad lone take fuch hold.

Luc. Oh Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I neuer thought it poiffible or likely.
But fice, while idely I ftood looking on,
I found the effect of Loue in idlenesse,
And now in plainnesse do confulte to thee.
That art to me as secret and as deere
As Anna to the Queene of Carthage was:
Tranio I burne, I pine, I perieth Tranio,
If I atheicie not this young moddeft gybele:
Couratifice me Tranio, for I know thou canft:
Affift me Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now,
Affection is not ratered from the heart:
If loue haue touch'd you, naught remains but fo,
Redime to captiam quam queam minime.

Luc. Gramercies Lad: Go forward, this contents,
The reit will comfort, for thy counsels found.

Tra. Master, you lookd fo longly on the maid
Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pich of all.
Luc. Oh yes, I faw sweet beautie in her face,
Such as the daughter of Aguerre had,
That made great loue to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kifit the Cretan fronds.

Tra. Saw you no more? Mark'd you not how her fitter
Began to fcol'd, and raife vp such a formes,
That mortal cares might hardly indure the din.

Luc. Tranio, I faw her earelips to moue,
And with her breath she did perfume the ayre,
Sacred and sweet was all I faw in her.

Tra. Nay, then 'tis time to firre him from his trance:
I pray awakke sir: if you loue the Malde,
Band thoughts and wits to atcheue her. Thus it flands:
Her elder fitter is fo curft and threwd,
That til the Father rid his hands of her,
Master, your Loue must live a maide at home,
And therefore has he clofely meud her vp,

Because
Because she will not be annoy’d with futes,

Luc. Ah Tranio, what a cruel Fathers he:

But art thou not adult’d, he tooke some care
To get her cunning Schoolemasters to instruct her.

Tra. I marry am I sir, and now ’tis plotted.

Luc. I have it Tranio.

Tra. Marker, for my hand,

Both our intenions meet and lump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tra. You will be Schoole-mater,

And undertake the teaching of the maid:

That’s your deuice.

Luc. It is: May it be done?

Tra. Not possible: for who shall bear your part,

And be in Padua here Vincetio’s sonne,

Keepe house, and ply his booke, welcome his friends,

Visit his Countrimen, and banquet them?

Luc. Biella, content thee: for I have it full.

We have not yet bin feme in any house,

Nor can we be distingui’d by our faces,

For man or matter: then it followeth thus;

Thou shalt be Marker, Tranio in my stead:

Keepe house, and port, and furnitures, as I should,

I will some other be, be some Florentines,

Some Neapolitans, or meaner man of Pisa.

’Tis hatch’d, and shall be so: Tranio at once

Vnafe thee: take my Conlord hat and cloake,

When Biendello comes, he waits on thee,

But I will charmme him first to keepe his tongue.

Tra. So had you neede:

In breefe Sir, fith it your pleasure is,

And I am tyed to be obedient,

For fo your father charg’d me at our parting:

Be servicable to my force (quebe he)

Although I thynke ’twas in another fence,

I am content to bee Lucentio,

Becauze fo well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio be fo, because Lucentio loves,

And let me be a flase, ’tis excelle that made,

Whooe fome fuch brutall thral’d my wounded eye.

Enter Biendello.

Heere comes the rogue. Sirra, where have you bin?

Biam. Where have you beene? Nay how now, where are you?

Walter, he’s my fellow Tranio holne your cloathes, or you holne his, or both? Pray what’s the newest?

Luc. Sirra come hither, ’tis no time to left,

And therefore frame your manners to the time

Your fellow Tranio heere to face my life,

Puts my apparell, and my count’nance on,

And I for my ecape hauie put on his:

For in a quarrell since I came a shore,

I kil’d a man, and feare I was defcribed:

Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes:

I make way from hence to face my life:

You understand me?

Biam. I fir, me’re a witt.

Luc. And not a lot of Tranio in your mouth,

Tranio is chang’d into Lucentio.

Biam. The better for him, would I were fo too.

Tra. So could I Urth boy, to have the next with af-ter, that Lucentio indeede had Bapstijus yongeft daugh-ter.

But Sirra, not for my sake, but your manners, I ad-define you vfe your manners differently in all kind of compa-nyes: When I am alone, why then am Tranio: but in all places elfe, you matter Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio let’s go:

One thing more refa, that thy felte execute,

To make one among these woowers: if thou ask me why,

Sufficeth my reasons are both good and weighty.

Enter Patronio, the Prefenters, and Tranio.

Hor. Petr. Foroona, for a while I take my leave,

To see my friends in Padua; but of all

My worke, I am fellow’d and approv’d friends.

Bion. & I trauell this is his houfe:

Here i knowe Grumio, knocke I say.

Gru. Knocke sir? whom should I knocke? Is there any man he’s rebu’d your worship?

Petr. Biondello I say, knocke me herehe foundly.

Gru. Knocke you herehe sir? Why sir, what am I sir, that I should knocke you heere sir?

Petr. Villaine I say, knocke me at this gate,

And rap me well, or lie knocke your knautes pate.

Gru. My M’ is growne quarrelsome:

I should knocke you first,

And then I know after who comes by the worft

Petr. Will it not be?

'Faith sirrah, and you’lt not knocke, Ile ring it,

Ile trie how you can sol, pill, and fing it.

Me rings him by the ears

Gru. Helpe militirs helpe, my matter is mad.

Petr. Now knocke when I bid you: sirrah Villaine,

Enter Hortenio.

Hor. How now, what’s the matter? My olde friend

Grumio, and my good friend Petruchio? How do you all at Pernia?

Petr. Signior Hortenio, come you to part the fray

Consutt i’ core bene trobato, may I say.

Hor. Allia nostra caja bene venueto multo hortarita signor mio Petruchio.

Rifti Grumio rile, we will compound this quarrell.

If this be not a lawfull caufe for me to leave his feruice, looke you sir: He bid me knocke him, & rap him found-ly sir,

Well, was it fit for a seruant to vfe his matter fo, being perhaps (for ought I see) two and thirty, a peepe out? Whom would to God I had well knocked at first, then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Petr. A fencelie fenntrine: good Hortenio,

I bad the raftcall knocke upon your gate,

And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knocke at the gate? O heauen: fcape you not these words plaines? Sirra, Knocke me heere: rape me heere I knocke me well, and knocke me soundly? And come you now with knocking at the gate?

Petr. Sirra be gone, or talke not I adulle you.

Hor. Petruchio patience, I am Grumio’s pledge:

Why this a heauie chance twar him and you,

You ancient trufle?fentor virtuous Grumio?

And tell me now (sweet friend) what happie gale

Blows eu to Padua heere, from old Petruchio?

Petr. Such wind as fatters yongmen through thy world, To
To seeke their fortunes farther then at home,
Where small experience growes but in a few.
Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me,
Antonio my father is deceas'd,
And I haue thrust my selfe into this maze,
Happily to wize and thrive, as best I may:
Crownes in my purse I haue, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruccio, shall I then come roundly to thee,
And with thee to a shrew'd ill-favour'd wife?
Thou'lt thanke me but a little for my counsell:
And yet I promise thee the shall be rich,
And verie rich; but that'rt too much my friend,
And Ie not with thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as wee,
Few words suffice: and therefore, if thou know
One rich enough to be Petruccio's wife:
(As wealt h is burthen of my woing dance)
Gremio as foule as was Florentius virtuous,
As old as Sibell, and as curst and throw'd
As Scutara Zentippe, or a worser:
She moves me not, or not remoues at least
Affections edge in me. Were she is as rough
As are the dwelling Aduackes seas,
I come to wize it wealthily in Padua:
If wealtihly, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay looke you fir, her tells you flatly what his minde is: why give him Gold enough, and marrie him to A Puppet or an Aglet babe, or an old trot with ne're a thooth in her head, though the haue as manie difaices as two and fiftie horfes. Why nothing comes amisse, if monie comes withall.

Hor. Petruccio, since we are ftept thus farre in,
I will continue that I broach'd in left,
I can Petruccio helpe thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and yong and beaumous,
Brought vp as beft becomes a Gentilwoman.
Her onely fault, and that is faultous,
Is, that she is intolerable curst,
And throw'd, and broward, fo beyond all measure,
That were my flatte foare worther then it is,
I would not wead her for a mine of Gold.

Pet. Hortensio peace: thou knowest not golds effect,
Tell me her fathers name, and 'tis enough:
For I will boord her, though the cheide as loud
As thunder, when the clouds in Autumnne cracke.

Hor. Her father is Baptijtas Minola,
An affible and courteous Gentleman,
Her name is Katherine Minola,
Renowned in Padua for her fcolding tongue.

Petr. I know her father, though I know not her;
And he knew my deceas'd father well:
I will not sleepe Hortensio til I see her,
And therefore let me be thos bold with you,
To give you ouer at this firft encounter,
Valeffe you will accomapnifie me thither.

Hor. I pray you Sir, let him go while the humor lift.
A my word, and she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would doe little good vpun her.
She may perhaps call him halfe a florfe Knaves, or fo:
That's nothing; and he begin once, he'r ralle in his rope trick. He tell you what fir, and she and him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and do disurb or with it, that shee shall haue no moare eies to see withall than a Cat: you know him not fir.

Hor. Tarrie Petruccio, I must go with thee,

For in Baptijtas keepe my treasure is:
He hath the jewel of my life in hold,
His yongest daughter, beautifull Bianca,
And her with-holds from me. Other more
Sutes to her, and rivals in my Loue:
Supposing it a thing impoffible,
For thole defects I haue before rehearset,
That euer Katherine will be woo'd:
Therefore this order hath Baptijtas tace,
That none shall have access into Bianca,
Til Katherine the Curi, haue got a husband.

Gru. Katherine the cuir,
A title for a maide, of all titles the worst.

Hor. Now thall my friend Petruccio do me grace,
And offer me disguid'd in fober robes,
To old Baptijtas as a schooole-maister
Well feene in Moficke, to infract Bianca,
That fo I may by this deuce at leafe
Hawe leene and leisure to make lether to her,
And unafpepted court her by her felle.

Enter Gremio and Lucentio disguised.

Gru. Heere's no knauerie. See, to beguile the old-folkes, how the young folkes lay their heads together.
Maister, maister, looke about you: Who goes there? he.

Hor. Peace Gremios, it is the riual of my Loue.
Petruccio stand by a while.

Gremio. A proper stripling, and an amorous.

Gremio. O very well, I haue perus'd the note:
Hearkne you fir, Ie haue them verie fairly bound,
All bookes of Loue, fee that at any hand,
And fee you reade no other Lectures to her:
You vnderstande me. Ouer and beside Signior Baptijtas liberalitie,
Ie mend it with a Large fee. Take your paper too,
And let me haue them verie well perfum'd
For the is sweeter then perfume it selfe
To whom they go to: what will you reade to her.

Luc. What ere I reade to her, I Ie please for you,
As for my patron, Iand you fo affur'd,
As firmly as your felle were fill in place,
Yea and perhaps with more successfull words
Then you: valeffe you were a scholler fir.

Gru. Oh this learning, what a thing it is.

Gru. Oh this Woodcocke, what an Affe it is.

Petruccio. Peace sir.

Hor. Gremios man: God fave you signior Gremio.

Gru. And you are wel met, Signior Hortensio.

Trow you whither I am going? To Baptijtas Minola,
I promitt to enquire carefully
About a schoolmaister for the faire Bianca,
And by good fortune I haue lighted well
On this yong man: For learning and behavioir
Fit for her turne, well read in poetrie
And other bookes, good ones, I warrant ye.

Hor. 'Th well and I have met a Gentleman
Hath promitt me to helpe one to another,
A fine Multian to infruct the Multia,
So shall I no w hite be behinde in dutie
To faire Biancas fo beloved of me.

Gru. Beloved of me, and that my deeds shall proue.

Gru. And that his bags shall proue.

Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our loue,
Lisent to me, and if you speake me faire,
Ie tel you newes indifferent good for either.
Heere is a Gentleman whom by chance I met
Vpon
Vpon agreement from vs to his liking,
Will vndertake to woo curf Katherine,
Yes, and to marrie her, if her dowrie pleafe.

Gre. So said, so done, is well :—
Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

Pet. I know she is an irksome brawling scold ;
If that be all Matters, I heare no harme.
Gre. No, butt me fo, friend ? What Countreyman ?

Pet. Borne in Perusa, old Biondello fonne ;
My father dead, my fortune liue for me,
And I do hope, good days and long, to fee:

Gre. Oh, sir, fuch a life with fuch a wife, were strange ;
But if you have a fomacke, too 'tis a Gods name,
You shall have me affidying you in all.

But will you woo this Wilde-cat ?

Pet. Will I flue ?

Gru. Will he woo her? I or Ile hang her.

Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent?
Think you, a little dinner can daunt mine cares ?
Haue I not in my time heare Lions rore ?
Haue I not heard the fca, pufp vp with windes,
Rage like an angry Boare, chafed with fweat ?
Haue I not heard great Ordnance in the field?
And heauens Artilerie thunder in the skies ?
Haue I not in a pitched battell heard
Loud laurnes, neighing fleades, & trumpets clangue ?
And do you tell me of a womans tongue ?
That glies not halfe fo great a blow to heare,
As wil a Cheefe-nut in a Farmers fire.

Tulh, tulh, fearie boxes with bugs.

Gru. For he feares none.

Grem. Hortensio heurke :
This Gentleman is happily arriu'd,
My minde prefumes for his owne good, and yours.

Hor. I promit we would be Contributors,
And heare his charge of wooling whatfoere.

Gremio. And fo we wil, promitied that he win her.

Gru. I would I were as fure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio brave, and Biondello.

Tran. Gentleman God fave you. If I may be bold
Tell me I beeche you, which is the readie way
To the house of Signior Baptifia Minda ?

Bion. He that ha's the two faire daughters: if he you mane ?

Tran. Heue he Biondello.

Gre. Harkee you firr, you mane not her to——

Tran. Perhaps him and her firr, what haue you to do?

Pet. Not her that chides firr, at any hand I pray.

Tranio. I loue no chiders firr : Biondello, let's away.

Luc. Well begun Tranio.

Tran. Sir, a word ere you goy.

Are you a futor to the Maid you talke of, yeas or no?

Tran. And if I be firr, is it any offence ?

Gremio. No : if without more words you will get you hence.

Tran. Why firr, I pray are not the freads as free
For me, as for you?

Gre. But fo is not the.

Tran. For what reafon I beeche you.

Gre. For this reafon if you'll kno,
That she's the cholie love of Signior Gremio.

Hor. That she's the chofen of Signior Hortensio.

Tran. Softly my Masters : If you be Gentlemen
Do me this right : heare me with patience.

Baptifia is a noble Gentleman,

To whom my Father is not all vnknowne,
And were his daughter faire then she is,
She may more futors haue, and me for one.

Faire Ladys daughter had a thousand wooms,
Then well one more may faire Biance haue ;
And fo the fhall : Lucienio thal make one,
Though Parth came, in hope to speed alone.

Gre. What, this Gentleman will out-talke vs all.

Luc. Sir hee him head, I know hee'proue a Jade.

Pet. Hortensio, to what end are all thes words?

Hor. Sir, let me be fo bold as ask you,
Did you yet euer fee Baptifia daughter ?

Tran. No firr, but here I do that he hath two :
The one, as famous for a folding tongue,
As is the other, for beanteous modellie.

Petr. Sir, firr, the firr's for me, let her go by.

Gre. Yes, leave that labour to great Hercules,
And let it be more then Medea twelve.

Petr. Sir vnderstand you this or looke not to,
The yongeft daughter whom you hearken for,
Her father keepes from all accesse of futors,
And will not promit her to any man,
Vntill the elder fifter firft be wed.

The yonger then is free, and not before.

Tran. It if be fo, firr, that you are the man
Must feeke vs all, and me amongst the refi:
And if you break the ice, and do this feeke,
Artchiue the elder : let the yonger free,
For our accesse, whole hap shall be to haue her,
Will not fo graceleff be, to be ingrate.

Hor. Sir you fay well, and weel you do conceiue,
And since you do proffes to be a futor,
You muft as we do, gratifie this Gentleman,
To whom we all refett generally beholding.

Tranio. Sir, if hal not be flacke, inigne whereof,
Please ye we may continue this afternoone,
And quaffe carowies to our Miffbreff health,
And do all aduerfaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eate and drink as friends.

Gru. Bion. Oh excellent motions fellowes be's gon.

Hor. The motions good indeed, and be it fit,
Petruchio, I thall be your Bon equivale.

Exeunt.

Enter Katherine and Bianca.

Bian. Good fifter wrong me not, nor wrong your felf,
To make a bondmaid and a flime of me,
That I defaine : but for thefe other goods,
Vnbindie my hands, Ile pull them off my felfe,
Yee all my raintment, to my peticote,
Or what you will command me, I wil do,
So well I know my dutie to my elders.

Kate. Of all thy futors heere I charge tel
Whom thou lou'lt bell : fee thou dillery ble.

Biance. Bleeuce me fifter, of all the men aliue,
I neuer yet beheld that special face,
Which I could fandle, more then any other.

Kate. Minion thou leue : let not Hortensio?

Bian. If you affec/th him fifter, here I fware
Ile pleade for you my felle, but you hal fmue him.

Kate. Oh then beilee you fandle riches more,
You will haue Gremio to keepe you faire.

Bian. Is it for him you do enuie me fo ?

Kate. Nay then you leue, and now I wil perceiue
You haue but lefte with me all this while :—
I prethee fifter Kate, vntie my hands.

Ka. If that be lefte, then all the refc was fo.

Stikes her
Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why, how now Daine, whence growes this insolence?

Daine stand aside, poor gryle she weepes:
Go ply thy Needle, maddle not with her.
For shame thou Hailing of a dulcill spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her, that did nere wrong thee?
When did she croffe thee with a bitter word?
Kate. Her flence floats me, and Ilc be resoung'd.

Flies after Bap. and Daine

Kate. What will you not suffer me: Nay now I fee
She is your treasure, she muft have a husband,
I muft dance bare-foot on her wedding day,
And for your love to her, leade Apes in hell.
Talk not to me, I will go fit and weepes,
Till I can finde occasion of reuenge.
Bap. Was cue Gentleman thus green'd as I?
But who comes here.

Enter Gremio, Lucentio, in the habit of a means man, Petruchio with Tranio, with his boy bearing a Lute and Bookes.

Gre. Good morrow neighbour Baptista.
Bap. Good morrow neighbour Gremio: God flue you Gentlemen.

Pet. And you good sir: pray have you not a daughter, call'd Katerina, faire and vertuous.
Bap. I have a daughter cif, call'd Katerina.
Gre. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.
Pet. You wrong me signior Gremio, give me leave.
I am a Gentleman of Verona sir,
That hearing of her beautifull, and her wit,
Her affability and bathfull modeffe;
Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,
Am bold to throw my felfe a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witneffe
Of that report, which I fo oft haue heard,
And for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do pretend you with a man of mine
Cunning in Muicke, and the Mathematiques,
To infruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant,
Accept of him, or elle you do me wrong.
His name is Lucentio, Liffes in Latine.
Bap. Y'are welcome sir, and he for your good fake.
But for my daughter Katerina, this I know,
She is not for your tune, the more my greffe.
Pet. I fee you do not meane to part with her,
Or else you like not of my compaine.
Bap. Mithake me not, I speake but as I finde,
Whence are you sir? What may I call your name.
Pet. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's fonne,
A man well Knowne throughout all Italy.
Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his fake.

Petruchio, I pray let vs that are
For some petitioners speake too? Biance, you are meruyous forward.
Pet. Oh, Pardon me signior Gremio, I would faine be doing.

Gre. I doubt it not sir. But you will curfe
Your wooling neighbors: this is a guilt
Very grateful, I am sure of it, to express
The like kindnesse my selfe, that have bene
More kindly beholding to you then any:

Freely give unto this yong Scholler, that hath Beene long studying at Rome, as cunning
In Greece, Latine, and other Languages,
As the other in Muicke and Mathematiques:
His name is Cambio: pray accept his feruice.

Bap. A thousand thanks signior Gremio:
Welcome good Cambio. But gentle sir,
Me thinke you walke like a strangre,
May I be so bold, to know the caus of your comming?

Fra. Pardon me sir, the boldnesse is mine owne,
That being a strangre in this Civte heere,
Do make my felle aff otor to your daughter,
Vnto Biance faire and vertuous:
Nor is your firme refolute unknowne to me,
In the preferment of the eldft fitter.
This liberty is all that I requet,
That ypon knowledge of my Parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongst the reft that wo,
And free accord and favour as the reft.
And toward the education of your daughters:
I heere beftow a simple instrumint,
And this small packet of Greecke and Latine bookes:
If you accept them, then their worth is great:
Bap. Lucentio is your name, of whence I pray.

Tra. Of Pila firs, bonne to Pictures.
Bap. A mightie man of Pila by report,
I know him well: you are very welcome sir:
Take you the Lute, and you the set of bookes,
You shall goe for your Pupils presently.
Holla, within.

Enter a Servant.
Sirrah, leadhe thee Gentlemen
To my daughters, and tell them both
Thefe are their 'Tutors, bid them vfe them well,
We will go walke a little in the Orchard,
And then to dinner: you are paffing welcome,
And fo I prye you all to thinke of your felues.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my businesse asketh haife,
And euerie day I cannot come to wo,
You knew my father well, and in him me,
Left folle heire to all his Lands and goods,
Which I have bettered rather then decrease,
Then tell me, if I get your daughters love,
What dowre shall I haue with her to wife.

Bap. After my death, the one halfe of my Lands,
And in poffession twenty thousand Crownes.
Pet. And for that dowre, I doe affure her of Her widower-hood, be it that the furvice me
In all my Lands and Leaffes whatsoever,
Let specialties be therefore drawne betweene vs,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. I, when the speciall thing is well obtain'd,
That is her love: for that is all in all.

Pet. Why that is nothing: for I tell you father,
I am as peremptorie as the proud minded:
And where two raging fires meete together,
They do confume the thing that freed their furie.
Though little fire grows great with little winde, yet extreme guls will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yeelds to me,
For I am rough, and woo not like a bab.

Bap. Well maith thou woo, and happy be thy speed,
But be thou arm'd for some voluntarie words.

Pet. I to the proofs, as Mountains are for winde,
That flashes not, though they blow perpetually.

Enter Hortensio with his head broke.

Bpa.
The Taming of the Shrew.

Bap. How now my friend, why doft thou looke so pale?
Her. For feare I promife you, if I looke pale.
Bap. What, will my daughter prooue a good Mufitian?
Her. I thinke she'll sooner prooue a fouldier,
Iron may hold with her, but neuer Lutes.
Bap. Why then thou canft not break her to the Lute?
Her. Why no, for the hath broke the Lute to me:
I did but tell her the mbiooke her freets,
And how'd her hand to teach her fingering,
When (with a moft impatient duellifh spirit)
Frets call you thefe? (quoth thefe) Hee fume with them:
And with that word the Stroke me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way,
And there I flound amaz'd for a while,
As on a Pillorie, looking through the Lute,
While she did call me Raffcall, Raffler,
And twangling Iacke, with twentie thru'd vilearms,
As had the fludied to misfivfe me fo.
Pet. Now by the world, it is a luffifh Wench,
I lose her ten times more then ere I did,
Oh how I long to have fome chat with her.
Bap. We'll go with me, and be not fo difcomfited.
Proceed in prudence with thy younger daughter,
She's apt to learne, and thankfull for good tunes:
Signor Petruchio, will you go with vs,
Or shall I fend my daughter Kate to you.
Exit. M fon Petruchio.
Pet. I pray you do, Ile attend her hearth,
And woo her with fome spirit when the cometh,
Say that the nalle, why then Ile tell her plaine,
She fings as sweetly as a Nightingale:
Say that the frowne, Ile fay the lookes as cleere
As morning Roses newly wafht with dew:
Say the he mate, and will not fpeak a word,
Then Ile commend her volubility,
And fay the viterleh pride eloquenc e:
If the do bid me packe, Ile gue her thankes,
As though the bid me fay by her a week,
If the denie to wed, Ile craue the day,
When I shall ake the bannes, and when be married.
But heere she comes, and now Petruchio fpeaketh.
Enter Katerina.
Good morrow Kate, for thatts your name I heare.
Kate. Well have you heard, but nothing hard of hearing:
They call me Katerine, that do talk of me.
Pet. You lye infinth, for you are call'd plaine Kate,
And bony Kate, and sometimes Kate the curft:
But Kate, the prettie Kate in Chriftendome,
Kate of Kate-hall, my fupper-dinante Kate,
For dainties are all Kate's, and therefore Kate
Take this of me, Kate of my conflation,
Hearing thy mildneffe prais'd in ev'ry Towne,
Thy virtues fpoke of, and thy beautie founded,
Yet not fo deeply as to thee belongs,
My tille am mov'd to wow thee for my wife.
Kate. Mou'd, in good time, let him that mou'd you hether
Remoue you hence: I knew you at the first
You were a mousable.
Pet. Why, what's a mousable?
Kate. A loyn'd fleede.
Pet. Thou haft hit it: come fit on me.
Kate. Affes are made to bearre, and fo are you.
Pet. Women are made to bearre, and fo are you.
Kate. No fuch Iode as you, if me me moan.
Pet. Alas good Kate, I will not burneth thee,
For knowing thee to be but yong and light.
Kate. Too light for fuch a fwayne as you to catch,
And yet as heauie as my weight shoulde be.
Pet. Shold be, should : buze.
Kate. Well tangle, and like a buzzard.
Pet. Oh flow-wing'd Turtle, thel a buzzard take thee?
Pet. I for a Turtle, as he takes a buzzard.
Pet. Come, come you Wafpe, y'faith you are too angrie.
Kate. If I be wafplifi, but beware my fting.
Pet. My remedy is then to plucke it out.
Kate. I, if the foolle could finde it where it lies.
Pet. Who knowes not where a Wafpe does weare his fting? In his talle.
Kate. In his tongue?
Pet. Whole tongue.
Kate. Yours if you talke of tales, and fo farewell.
Pet. What with my tongue in your talle.
Nay, come againe, good Kate, I am a Gentleman,
Kate. That Ile trie.
Pet. I fwear Ile cuft you, if you ftrike againe.
Kate. So may you looke your armes,
If you ftrikey me, you are no Gentleman,
And if no Gentleman, why then no armes.
Pet. A Herald Kate? Oh put me in thy booke.
Kate. What is your Creft, a Coxcombe?
Pet. A combiffe, Cocke, to Kate will be my Hen.
Kate. No Cocke of mine, you crow too like a cruwen
Pet. Nay come Kate, come; you must not looke fo fowre.
Kate. It is my fashion when I see a Crab.
Pet. Why heere's no crab, and therefore looke not fowre.
Kate. There Is, there Is.
Pet. Then fhow it me.
Kate. Had I a glaffe, I would.
Pet. What, you meane my face.
Kate. Well sym'd of fuch a yong one.
Pet. Now by S. George I am too yong for you.
Kate. Yet you are wither'd.
Pet. 'Tis with cares.
Kate. I care not.
Pet. Nay heere you Kate. Infowth you fcape not fo.
Kate. I chaffe you if I fartie. Let me go.
Pet. No, not a whit, I finde you paffing gentle:
'Twas told me you were rough, and coy, and full'en,
And now I finde report a very lier:
For thou art pleasent, gamefome, paffing courtofeus,
But flow in (peech) yet fweet as fpring-time flowers.
Thou canft not frowne, thou canft not looke a fceene,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will,
Nor haft thou pleafure to be croffe in talke:
But thou with mildneffe entourn't thy wooper,
With gentle conference, foft, and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limpe?
Oh fland'iour world: Kate like the hazel twig
Is straight, and flender, and as browne in hue
As hazel nuts, and fweeter then the kernels:
Oh let me fee thee walke: thou doft not halt.
Kate. Go foole, and whom thou keeph command.
Pet. Did ever Dian fo become a Groou
As Kate this chamber with her princely gate
O be thou Dian, and let her be Kate,
The Taming of the Shrew.

And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportfull.
Kate. Where did you flay all this godly speech?
Petr. It is extemporary, from my mother wit.
Kate. A witty mother, witless else her fonna.
Petr. Am I not wife?
Kate. Yes, keepe you warme.
Petr. Marry to I meant sweet Katherine in thy bed:
And therefore letting this chat aside,
Thus in plaine terms; your father hath confented
That you fhall be my wife; your downy' greed on,
And will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now Kate, I am a husband for your tune,
For by this light, whereby I fee thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,
Thou muft be married to no man but me,

Enter Baptifla, Gremio, Trayno.

For I am he am borne to tame you Kate,
And bring you from a wilde Kate to a Kate
Conformable as other houfhold Kate:
Here comes your father, never make delay,
I must, and will have Katherine to my wife. (daughter?
Bap. Now Signior Petruchio, how fpee'd you with my Petr. How but well fa?how but well?
It were impoffible I should fpee'd amife. (dumps?
Bap. Why how now daughter Katherine, in your Kate. Call you me daughter? now I promise you
You have foew a tender fatherly regard,
To with me wed to one halfe Lunaticke,
A mad-cap ruffian, and a fwearine lache,
That thinks with eftates to face the matter out.

Petr. Father, 'tis thus, your elfe and all the world
That talk'd of her, have talk'd amife of her :
If she be curft, it is for pollicle,
For fhee is not froward, but model as the Doe,
Shee is not hot, but temperate as the morne,
For patience theee will prove a second Griffill,
And Romane Lucrece for her charifie:
And to conclude, we have'greed fo well together,
That vpon fonday is the wedding day.
Kate. Ile fee thee hang'd on fonday first. (first Grec. Harke Petruchio, the fies thee'll fee thee hang'd Tray. Is this your fpee'ding?by this godinight our part.
Bap. Be patient gentlemen, I choofe her for my elfe,
If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd'twixt vs twaine being alone,
That the fhall be curft in company.
I tell you 'th incredible to believe
How much he loves me: oh the kindeft Kate,
Shee hang about my necke, and kiffe on kiffe
Shee vid fa fixt, protefing oath on oath,
That in a twince she won me to her love.
Oh you are noizes, 'ts a world to fee
How tame when men and women are alone,
A masecoke wretch can make the curft feu:
Give me thy hand Kate, I will vnto Venice
To buy apparell gainst the wedding day;
Prouide the featt father, and bid the geues,
I will be sure my Katherine fhall be fine.

Bap. I know not what to fay, but gife you my hilds,
God fende you joy, Petruchio, 'tis a match.
Grec. Tra. Amen fay we, we will be witneffes.
Petr. Father, and wife, and gentlemen adieu,
I will to Venice, fonday comes space,
We have no rings, and things, and fine array.
And kiffe me Kate, we will be married a fonday.

Exit Petruchio and Katherine.

Grec. Was ever match clapt vp fo foonely?
Bap. Faith Gentlemen now I play a marchants part,
And venture madly on a deprave Mart.
Tra. Twas a commodity lay fretting by you,
'Twill bring you gaines, or paffeth on the tea.
Bap. The gaine I feek, is quiet me the match.
Grec. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch:
But now Baptiffa, to your younger daughter,
Now is the day we long have looked for,
I am your neighbour, and was fitter fir.
Tra. And I am one that love Silence more
Then words can witneff, or your thoughts can gueffe.
Grec. Yongling thou canst not love fo deare as I.
Tra. Gray-heard thy love doth freeze.
Grec. But thine doth fixe,
Skipper fland backe, 'tis age that nourifheth.
Bap. Content you gentlemen, I will coudp this strife
'Tis deeds muft win the price, and he of both
That can affore my daughter greatest dowre,
Shall have my Biances bowre.
Say signior Gremio, what can you affore her?
Grec. Firft, as you know, my houfe within the City
Is richly furnifhed with plate and gold,
Bafons and ewers to hae her dainty hands:
My hangings all of tirian tapery
In Ivory coles I have fhaft my crownes:
In Cypres chefs my arras counterpoints,
Coftly apparell, tents, and Canopikes,
Fine Linnen, Turky cufhions bolf with pearle,
Valens of Venice gold, in needle works:
Pewter and braffe, and all things that belongs
To houfe or houfe-keeping: then at my farme
I have a hundred milch-kine to the pale,
Sixe-foure fat Oxen flanding in my flalls,
And all things answereable to this portion.
My fife am froke in yeares I must conffece,
And if I die to morrow this is her,
If whilft I live shee will be onely mine.
Tra. That only came well in: fir, lift to me,
I am my fathers heyre and onely fonna,
If I may have your daughter to my wife,
Ile leave her houfes three or foure as good
Within rich Pifa walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua,
Befides, two thousand Duckets by the yeare.
Of fruitfull land, all which fhall be her luyer.
What have I gianct you Signior Gremio?
Grec. Two thousand Duckets by the yeare of land,
My Land amounts not to fo much in all:
That the fhall have, besides an Argofe
That now is lying in Marcellus roode:
What, have I chooft you with an Argofe?
Tra. Gremio, 'tis knowne my father hath no leffe
Then three great Argofest, besides two Gallififes
And twelve tite Gallies, thefe I will affore her,
And twice as much what ere thou ofret next.
Grec. Nay, I have offred all, I have no more,
And the can have no more then all I have,
If you like me, the fhall have me and mine.
Tra. Why then the maid is mine from all the world
By your firme promife, Gremio is out-vied.
Bap. I must conffece your offer is the biff,
And let your father make her the affurance,
The Taming of the Shrew.

218

Shée is your owne, else you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where’s her dower?

Tra. That’s but a caull: he is old, I young.

Gre. And may not yong men die as well as old?

Bap. Well gentlemen, I am thus refresh’d,

On fonday next, you know
My daughter Katherine is to be married:
Now on the fonday following, shall Bianca
Be bride to you, if you make this assurance.
If not, to Signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thank you both. Exit.

Gre. A chief good neighbour: now I fear thee not:
Sirra, yong gameter, your father were a foolo
To glue thee all, and in his wakening age
Set foot under thy table: tut, a toy,
An old Italian foxe is not so kinde my boy.

Tra. A vengeance on your caiterly withered hide,
Yet I have fac’d it with a card of ten:
’Tis in my head to doe my master good:
I see no reason but Lucentio
Must get a father, Pratellus Lucentio,
And that’s a wonder: fathers commonly
Doe get their children: but in this case of woing,
A childe shall get a fire, if I faile not of my cunning. Exit.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fidler forbeare, you grow too for ward Sir,
Hau ye so foone forgot the entertainment
Her fitter Katherine welcom’d you withall.

Hort. But wrangling pedant, this is
The patronelle of heavenly harmony;
Then give me leave to haue propagatio,
And when in Musicke we haue spent an houre,
Your Lechere shall haue leiuie for as much.

Luc. Preposterous Aife that never read fo farre,
To know the cause why Musick was ordinn’d:
Was it not to refresh the minde of man
After his studies, or his vicious paint?
Then give me leuie to read Philosophy,
And while I pauie, fervue in your harmony.

Hort. Sirra, I will not heare these braues of thine.

Bian. Why gentlemens, you doe me double wrong,
To firme for that which refresheth in my choice:
I am no breeching schoiller in the schooles,
Ike not to be tied to howres, nor pointed times,
But learne my Leffons as I please my selfe,
And to cut off all thrice: heere fit we downe,
Take your instruments, play you the whiles,
His Lechere will be done ere you have run’d.

Hort. You’ll leue his Lechere when I am in tune?

Luc. That shall be newer, tune your instrument.

Bian. Where left we left?

Luc. Heere Madam; His Iob Simili, his eff Sigiera tellus, his fretaret Pratellus regia Celfa feeta.

Bian. Confer them.

Luc. His Iob, as I told you before, Simili, I am Lucentio, his eff, sonne vnto Vincentio of Pifia, Sigiera tellus. difguised thus to get your lone, his fretaret, and that Lucentio that comes a voicing Pratellus, is my man Tranio, regia, bearing my port, Celfa feeta that we might beguile the old Pantalowne.

Hort. Madam, my Instrument in tune.

Bian. Let’s heare, oh fie, the treble irraes,

Luc. Split in the hole man, and tune againe.

Bian. Now let mee fee if I can confent it. He that fido, I know you not, his eff, Sigiera tellus, I truft you not, his fretaret Pratellus, take heede he heare vs not, regia presume not, Celfa feeta, despaire not.

Hort. Madam, this in tune in.

Luc. All bath the base.

Hort. The base is right, ’tis the base knaue that las.

Luc. How fiery and forward our Pedant is,
Now for my life the knaue doth mount my lone,

Pedal. He watch you better yet:
In time I may beleue, yet I mistrust.

Bian. Mistrust it not, for sure advices
Was Acru cald fo from his grandfather.

Hort. I must beleue my master, else I promise you,
I should be arguing all pon that doubt,
But let it rest, now Latio to you:
Good master take it not vkindly pray
That I have beene thus pleasan with you both.

Hort. You may goe walk, and glue me leauie a while,
My Leffons make no muzick in three parts.

Luc. Are you so formal farr, will I must waite
And watch withall, for but I be decedul’d,
Our fine Muttian growth amorous.

Hort. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To leare the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of Art,
To teach you gamoth in a briefer foot,
More pleasant, pithe, and effectuall,
Then hath beene taught by any of my trade,
And there it is in writing fairely drawn.

Bian. Why, I am past my gamoth long agoe.

Hort. Ye yet read the gamoth of Lucentio.

Bian. Gamoth, I am, the ground of all accord:
Are to plead Hortensio’s pleasion:
Beene, Bianca take him for thy Lord
Captive, that loves with all affections:
Do fare, one Cliffe, two notes haue I,
Elami, thou pity or I die.

Call you this gamoth? but I like it not,
Old fusions pleaze me best, I am not so nice
To charge true roles for old inventions.

Enter a Messenger.

Nikis, Milkrefire, your father prays you leave your
And help to dresse your fitter chamber vp,
(books, You know to morrow is the wedding day.

Bian. Farewell sweet masters both, I must be gone.

Luc. Father Milkrefire then I have no caufe to stay.

Hort. But I have caufe to pry into this pedant,
Methinks he looks as though he were in loute:
Yet if thy thoughts Bianca be so humble
To cau thy wandering eyes on every side:
Seize thee that Lift, if once I finde thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changeing.

Exit.

Enter Baptisfia, Cremia, Tranio, Katherine, Bianca, and others attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, this is the pointed day
That Katherine and Petrucho should be married,
And yet we heare not of our fonne in Lawe:
What will be said, what mockery will it be?
To want the Bride-grome where the Priest attends
To take the ceremonial rites of marriage?
What fale Lucentio to this flame of ours?

No
Kate. No flame but mine, I must forsooth be forst,
To give my hand oppos'd against my heart
Vnto a mad-brain'd rudoose, full of spirit,
Who word'd in haste, and means to wed at leyfure:
I told you I, he was a franticke fool,
Hiding his bitter lefts in blunt behaviour,
And to be noted for a merry man;
He'll woe a thousand, point the day of marriage,
Make friends, invite, and proclaime the lanes,
Yet never means to wed where he hath wodd:
Now muft the world point at poore Katherine,
And say, loe, there is mad Petruchio's wife
If it would please him come and marry her.

Trs. Patience good Katherine and Bepifla too, vypon my life Petruchio means but well,
What euery fortune flies him from his word,
Though he be blunt, I know him paffing wife,
Though he be merry, yet withall he's honest.
Kate. Would Katherine had euuer seen him though.

Bap. Goe girls, I cannot blame thee now to weepes,
For such an injurie would vexe a very faint,
Much more a shrew of impatient humour.

Exit Blandills.

Bln. Mather, mather, newses, and such newses as you never heard of.
Bap. Is it new and olde too? how may that be?
Bln. Why, is it not newes to heard of Petruchio's
Bap. Is he come?
Bln. Why no fir.
Bap. What then?
Bln. He is comming.
Bap. When will he be here?
Bln. When he be stands where I am, and fees you there.

Trs. But say, what to thinke olde newses?
Bln. Why Petruchio is comming, in a new hat and an old kerkin, a pair of olde breeches three turn'd;
a pair of bootes that haue beene candle-canes, one buckled, another l'c'd: an olde ruffy sword tane out of the Towne Armony, with a broken hilt, and chapelleff: with two broken points: his horse hip'd with an olde mothy saddle, and firlops of no kindred: before posset with the glanders, and like to moke in the chine, troubled with the Lampaffe, infected with the fashions, full of Windegallia, sped with Spaulins, riled with the Yellowes, past cure of the Flues, starke spoil'd with the Starlings: beginneth with the Bote, start in the backe, and shoulder-shottene, neere leg'd before, and with a half-cheket Butte, & a headtill of sheepe leather, which being refrain'd to keepe him from thumbling, hath beene often burtl, and now repaired with knots: one girtt fire times peep'd, & a woman Crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and heere and there peggies with packthread.

Bap. Who comes with him?
Bln. Oh fir, his Lackey, for all the world Caparison'd like the horfe: with a linnen stock on one leg, and a kerfey boote-hose on the other, garttten with a red and blew liftan old hat, & the humor of forty fancies prickt in't for a feather: a monfer, a very monfer in apparell, & not like a Christian foot-boy, or a gentlemen Lackey.
Trs. 'Ts some olf humor pricks him to this fashion,
Yet oftentimes he goes bet with meanes appear'd.
Bap. I am glad he's come, howsoever he comes.
Bln. Why fir, he comes not.
Bln. Didst thou not say he comes?
And watch our vantage in this businesse,

We'll overreach the grey-beard Gremion,
The narrow prying father Muficke,
The quaint Musician, amorous Lute,
All for my Matters fake Lucentio.

Enter Gremion.

Signior Gremion, came you from the Church?

Grem. As willingly as ere I came from schoole.

Tra. And is the Bride & Bridegroom coming home?

Grem. A bridegroom fay you! 'Tis a groom indeed,

A grumbling groom, & that the girls shall finde.

Tra. Curter then he, why 'ts impossible.

Grem. Why he's a deuill, a deuill, a very fiend.

Tra. Why he's a deuill, a deuill, the deuils damme.

Grem. Tut, she's a Lambe, a Douc, a fool to him:

Ie tell you fir Lucentio; when the Prieft

Should ask if Katherine should be his wife,

I, by yoggs wooes quoth he, and swore so loud,

That all amaz'd the Prieft let fall the booke,

And as he floop'd againe to take it vp,

This mad brain'd bridgroom took him such a cuffe,

That downe fell Prieft and booke, and booke and Prieft,

Now take them vp quoth he, if any lift.

Tra. What fayd the wench when he rofe againe?

Grem. Trembled & shokee : for why, he flap't & fwoare,

As if the Vicar meant to cozen him : but after many ceremonies done, bee calls for wine, a health quoth he, as if he had beene abroad carowing to his Mates after a formes, quaff out the Mufcadell, and threw the fops all in the Sextons face : hauing no other reason, but that his beard grew thinne and hungryer, & feem'd to ask him fops as hee was drinking : This done, hee tooke the Bride about the neckes, and kifh her lips with such a clumorous smacke, that at the parting all the Church did echoc: and I seeing this, came thence for very terme, and after mee I know the route is comming, such a mad marryage neuer was before : harke, harke, I heare the mindfires play.

Enter Petrucchio, Kate, Bianca, Hortensio, Bapfista.

Petr. Gentlemen & friends, I thank you for your pains,

I know you thinke to dine with me to day,

And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheere,

But so it is, my haffe doth call me hence,

And therefore here I meane to take my leaue.

Bap. It's poiffeible you will away to night?

Petr. I maue away to day before night come,

Make it no wonder, my lady here you bide me:

You would intreat me rather gone then stay:

And honest company, I thank you all,

That have beheld me give away my selfe

To this most patient, sweet, and vertuous wife,

Dine with my father, drink a health to me,

For I much hence, and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let vs intreat you stay till after dinner.

Petr. It may not be.

Grem. Let me intreat you.

Petr. It cannot be.

Kate. Let me intreat you.

Petr. I am content.

Kate. Are you content to stay?

Petr. I am content you shall entertain me stay,

But yet not stay,entreat me how you can.

Kat. Now if you love me stay.

Petr. Gremio, my horse.

Gru. I fir, they be ready, the Oates haue eaten the horfes.

Kate. Nay then,

Doe what thou canst, I will not goe to day,

No, nor to morrow, not till I pleafe my selfe,

The done is open fir, there lies your way,

You may be loging whiles your boots are greene:

For me, Ile not be gone till I pleafe my selfe,

'Tis like you'll proue a foole fiurly groome,

That take it on you at the firft fo roundly.

Pet. O Kate content thee, prethee be not angry.

Kat. I will be angry, what haft thou to doe?

Father, be quiet, he shall play my leifure.

Grem. I marry fir, now it begins to worke,

Kate. Gentlemen, forward to the bridall dinner,

I see a woman may be made a foole

If she had not a spirit to refi.

Pet. They fhall goe forward Kate at thy command,

Obey the Bride you that attend on her.

Goe to the feaft, reuell and domineere,

Carowfe full measure to her maiden-head,

Be madde and merry, or goe hang your felves:

But for my bonny Kate, the muff with me:

Nay, looke not big, nor fample, nor flare, nor fret,

I will be madera of what is mine owne,

Shee is my goods, my chattells, she is my house,

My houhold-stuffe, my field, my barnes

My horses, my oxes, my wife, my any thing.

And heere the flands, touch her who euer dare,

He bring mine action on the proudle he

That flops my way in Padua: Grumio

Draw forth thy weapon, we bee fet with theues,

Refuce thy Mitreffe if thou be a man:

Fear not sweet vench, they shall not thick the Kate,

Ile buckler thee against a Million.

Exeunt P. Kates.

Bap. Nay, let them goe, a couple of quiet ones, (ing.

Grem. Went they not quicke, I shold die with laugh.

Tra. Of all mad matches newer was the like.

Luc. Mitreffe, what's your opinion of your fifter?

Bian. That being mad her felles, she's madly mated.

Grem. I warrant him Petruchio is Kated.

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though Bride & Bride

For to supply the places at the table,

Groom want no more at the bray:

Lucentio, you shall supply the Bridgrooms place,

And let Bianca take her fifters roome.

Tra. Shall sweet Bianca prafifie how to bride it?

Bap. She shall Lucentio: come gentlemen lets goe.

Enter Grumio.

Exeunt.

Gru. Filie, fie on all tird ladies, on all mad Matters, & all foule waies: was euer man fo beaten? was euer man fo ride? was euer man so weary? I am fent before to make a fire, and they are comming after to warme them: now were not I a little pot, &a fome hot; my very lippes might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roofe of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me, but I with burning the fire shall warme my felle: for considering the weather, a taller man then I will take cold: Holis, hoa Curtil.

Enter Cortili.

Curt. Who is that calls fo coldly?

Gru. A piece of ice: if thou doubt it, thou maue flide from my shouder to my heele, with no greater greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire good
Cur. Is my mather and his wife comming Grumio?
Grumio. Oh I Curie, and therefore fire, fire, cast on no water.
Cur. Is the fire hot a throw as she's reported.
Grumio. She was good Curie before this froth but thou know'st winter tames man, woman, and beast: for it hath tam'd my old mather, and my new misthirs, and my selfe fellow Curie.
Grumio. Away you three inch fool, I am no beast.
Grumio. Am I but three inches? Why thy horse is a foot and so long am I at the leat. But wili thou make a fire, or thall I complaine on thee to our misthirs, whole hand
(the being now at hand) thou shalt foonse feelse, to thy cold comfort, for being flow in thy hot office.
Cur. I prethee good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?
Cur. A cold world Curie in every office but thine, & therefore fire: do thy dutie, and have thy dutie, for my Mather and misthirs are almost frozen to death.
Cur. There's fire readie, and therefore good Grumio the newes.
Grumio. Why Jacke boy, ho boy, and as much newes as wilt thou.
Cur. Come, you are so full of conicatching.
Grumio. Why therefore fire, for I haue caught extreme cold. Where's the Cooke, is fupper ready, the house trim'd, rushes strew'd, cobwebs swept, the seruingmen in their new fustian, the white flockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the Jackes faire within, the Gils faire without, the Carpen laide, and euerie thing in order?
Cur. All readie: and therefore I prye thee newes.
Grumio. First know my horfe is tired, my mater & miistros faile out. Cur. How?
Grumio. Out of their faddles into the durt, and thereby hangs a tale.
Cur. Let's ha't good Grumio.
Grumio. Lead thine care.
Cur. Heere.
Grumio. There.
Cur. This 'tis to feele a tale, not to heare a tale.
Grumio. And therefore 'tis cal'd a fenible tale: and this Coffe was but to knocke at your eare, and befeech fiftning: now I begin, Inprimis wee came downe a fowle hill, my Mather riding behinde my Miftris.
Cur. Both of one horfe?
Grumio. What's that to thee?
Cur. Why a horfe.
Grumio. Tell thou the tale: but halfe thou not croft me, thou shoulde haue heard how her horfe fel, and the under her horfe: thou shoulde haue heard in how miery a place, how she was bemold'd, how she left her with the horfe upon her, how he beat me because her horfe stumbled, how the waide through the durt to plucke him off me: how he swore, how the praf'd, that never praf'd before: how I cried, how the horfes ranne away, how her bride was burnt: how I loft my crupper, with mane things of worthy memory, which now shall die in obliion, and thou returne unexperienc'd to thy grave.
Cur. By this reckning he is more shrew than thine.
Grumio. I, and that thou and the prouedt of you all shall finne when he comes home. But what talke I of this?

Peter. 'Tis burnt, and so is all the meat: What dogges are these? Where is the rascal Cooke? How durst you villains bring it from the dreffer And ferue it thus to me that love it not? Another way I have to man my Haggar, To make her come, and know her Keepers call: That is, to watch her, as we watch these Kites, That baits, and beates, and will not be obedient: She eate no meate to day, nor none shall eate. Last night she slept not, nor to night she slept not: As with the menste, some vndierfered fault He finds about the making of the bed, And here Ile flie the pillow, there the bolster, This way the Courlet, another way the fletes: I, and amid this hurlie I intend, That all is done in reuerend care of her, And in conclusion, the flal watch all night, And if the chance to nod, Ile raile and brawl, And with the clamer keep her filt awake: This is a way to kill a Wife with kindneffe, And thus Ile curbe her mad and headstrong humor: He that knows better how to tame a shrew, Now let him speake, 'tis charity to shew. And come to Padua catelesse of your life,

Tran. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua, know you not the cause?
Your ships are fliad at Venice, and the Duke
For private quarrel twixt your Duke and him,
Flash publish'd and proclaim'd it openly:
'Tis mensullae, but that you are but newly come,
you might have heard it else proclaim'd about.

Ped. Alas fir, it is worfe for me then so,
For I haue bills for monie by exchange
From Florence, and much heere deliver them,
Tran. Wel fir, to do you courtese,
This I will do, and this I will aduise you,

A Merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tran. He is my father fir, and footh to fay,
In countenance somewhat doth refemble you.

Ped. As much as an apple doth an oyster, & all one.
Tran. To fawe your life in this extremitie,
This favor wil I do you for his fake,
And thinkne it not the worth of all your fortunes,
That you are like to Sir Vincenzo,
His name and credite shal you vndertake,
And in my houfe you that be friendly lodg'd,

_A Knacke, a toy, a tricke, a babies cap:_

Away with it, come let me haue a bigger.

_Kate._ Ie have no bigger, this doth fit the time,

And Gentlewomen wear such caps as thefe.

_Pet._ When you are gentle, you shall have one too,

And not till then.

_Hor._ That will not be in haft.

_Kate._ Why sir if I trufl I may haue leaue to speake,

And speake I will : I am no childie, no babe,

My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,

Or els my heart concealing it will breake,

And rather then it fhall, I will be free.

_Tail._ This is true that I fay, and I had thee in place

And as the Sunne breake through the darkeft clouds,

So honor pezeth in the meanest habitt.

What is the Lye more precious then the Lark?

_Because his feathers are more beautiful._

Or if the Adder better then the Eel,

_Because his painted skin contains the eye._

Oh no good Kate neither art thou the worfe

For this proue furniture, and meane array.

If thou accounted it blame, lay it on me,

And therefore frollick, we will hence forthwith,

To feast and fport vs at thy fathers houfe,

Go call my men, and let vs ftraitly to him,

And bring our horfes vnto Long-lane end,

Grc. State officer, he shall not go to prisson.

Bpt. Talk not signior Gremio: I fale he shall goe to prisson.

Grc. Take heede signior Bapia, leaft you be con-catcht in this business: I dare fware this is the right Vincenio.

Ped. Sware if thou darst.

Grc. Naile, I dare not fware it.

Trs. Then thou wert then fale that I am not Lucienio.

Grc. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucienio.

Bpt. Awaie with the dotard, to the Ialle with him.

Enter Bapia, Lucienio and Bianca.

Vnc. Thus strangers may be hald and abysd: oh mon-fterous villain.

Bia. Oh we are spoil'd, and yonder he is, denie him, forweare him, or else we are all vndone.

Exit Bapia, Tranio and Pedant as fast as may be.

Luc. Pardon sone fether.

Kne.

Vnc. Lies my sone fonne?

Bia. Pardon deere fether.

Bpt. How haft thou offended, where is Lucienio?

Luc. Here's Lucienio, right sone to the right Vincenio,

That have by marriage made thy daughter mine,
While counterfeit supposes bleare's chine ene.

Grc. Here's packing with a witnesse to deceive vs all.

Vnc. Where is that damned villain Lucienio?

That fac'd and braued me in this matter so?

Brp. Why, tell me is not this me Cambiio?

Bian. Cambiio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Loue wrought thefe miracles. Biancas loue
Made me exchange my grate with Tranio,
While he did bare my countenance in the towne,
And happilie I have arrived at the last
Vnto the wifed hauen of my bliffe:

Vnc. What Tranio did, my felle enfort him to;

Then pardon him sweete Father for myfake.

Vnc. Ile flit the villains note that would have fent me to the Ialle.

Bpt. But doe you heare sir, have you married my daughter without asking my good will?

Vnc. Fear not Bapia, we will content you, goe to;
but I will in to be reuing'd for this villain.

Grc. And to I found the depth of this knaueerie. Vnc.

Luc. Loue not pale Bianca, thy father will not frown.

Exit.

Grc. My cake is doug, but Ie in among the rest,
Out of hope of all, but my flare of the foal.

Kate. Husband let's follow, to fee the end of this ado.

Petr. First kiffe me Kate, and we will.

Kate. What in the midit of the freeete?

Petr. What art thou asham'd of me?

Kate. Mo fir, God forbid, but asham'd to kiffe.

Petr. Why then let's home againe: Come Sirra let's awhaie.

Kate. Nay, I will give thee a kiffe, now praze thee Loue faire.

Petr. Is not this well? come my sone Kate.

Better once then euere, for euere to late.

Exit.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Bapia, Vincenio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucienio, and Bianca. Tranio, Bapia, Biumello Grumio, and Widows; The Seruicemen with Tranio bringing in a Banquett.

Luc. At last, though long, our arring notes agree,
And time it when raging warre is come,
To familie at scapes and perils overbowne:
My sone Bianca bid my father welcome,
While I with selfesame kindness welcome thine:
Brother Petruchio, father Katerina,
And thou Horsenio with thy louing Widows,
Feast with the bef, and welcome to our houfe,
My Banket is to clofe our froomes up.
After our great good cheer: praze you sit downe,
For now we fit to chat as well as eate.

Petr. Nothing but fit and fit, and eate and eate.

Bpt. Padua affords this kindnesse, donne Petruchio.

Petr. Padua affords nothing but what is kinde.

Her. For both our fakes I would that word were true.

Petr. Now for my life Horsenio fears his Widow.

Wid. Then euere truе me if I be affaide.

Petr. You are verie fondeable, and yet you misse my fence:

I meane Horsenio is afeard of you.

Wid. He
The Taming of the Shrew.

Wid. He that is giddle thinks the world turns round.

Petr. Roundlie replied.

Kate. Misthiss howe meane you that?

Wid. Thus I conccise by him.

Petr. Conceivs by me, howlike Horntemio that?

Hor. My Widow fallcs, thus he conceivs her tale.

Petr. Verie well mended: kifte him for that good Widow.

Kate. He that is giddle thinkes the world turnes round,
I praise you tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband being troubled with a shrew,
Meaures my husbands sorrow by his woe:
And now you know my meaning.

Kate. A verie meane meaning.

Wid. Rightly, I meane you.

Kate. And I am meane indeede, respencing you.

Petr. To her Kate.

Hor. To her Widow.

Petr. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.

Hor. That's my office.

Petr. Spoke like an Officer: ha to the lad,

Drinke to Horntemio.

Bap. How likes Greymis these quicke witted olks?

Gre. Belsue me fir, they But together well.

Bian. Head, and bat an halfe witted bodie,

Would lay your Head and Bat were head and horne.

Vnto. I Miftris Brides, that hath awakened you?

Bian. I, but not frighted me, therefore I sleepe again.

Petr. Nay that you shall not since you have begun:

Haue at you for a better left or too.

Bian. Am I your Bird, I meane to shift my buch,

And then pursue me as you draw your Bow.

You are welcome all.

Exit Bianca.

Petr. She hath prevented me, here signior Tranio,

This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not,

Therefore a health to all that shot and mift.

'Fri. Oh fir, Lucetio flipp me like his Gray-hound,

Which runs himselfe, and catches for his Master.

Petr. A good wvit fitte simile, but something curfif.

Tra. 'Tis well fir that you hunted for your sake:

'Tis thought your Deere does hold you at a baie.

Bap. Oh, oh Petrucho, Tranio hits you now.

Luc. I thanke thee for that gird good Tranio.

Hor. Confeffe, confesfe, hath he not hit you here?

Petr. A has a little gald me I confesse:

And as the left did glansse unaware from me,

'Tis ten to one it maim'd you too out right.

'Bap. Now in good sadnesse sonne Petruchio,

I thinkke thou haft the verleft threw of all.

Petr. Well, I fay no t and therefore fir affurance,

Let's each one fend vnto his wife,

And he whose wife is most obedient,

To come at first when he doth fend for her,

Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hort. Content, what's the wager?

Luc. Twente crownes.

Petr. Twente crownes,

Ie venture so much of my Hawke or Hound,

But twente times so much upon my Wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Hor. Content.

Petr. A match, 'ts is done.

Hor. Who shall begin?

Luc. That will I.

Goe Biondello, bid your Miftris come to me.

Bac. Igoe.

Bap. Sonne, Ile be your halfe, Bianca comes,

Luc. Ie haue no halues: Ie beare it all my selfe.

Enter Biondello.

How now, what newes?

Bac. Sir, my Miftris fends you word

That she is bufe, and she cannot come.

Pet. How? she's bufe, and she cannot come? is that an answere?

Gre. I, and a kinde one too:

Praie God fir your wife fend you not a worfe.

Petr. I hope better.

Hor. Sirra Biondello, goe and intreate my wife to come to me forthwith.

Exit. Biana.

Pet. Oh ho, intreate her, nay then fee mutt needs come.

Hor. I am afraid fir, doe what can

Enter Biondello.

Yours will not be entreated: Now, where's my wife?

Biana. She faies you have some goodly left in hand,

She will not come: she bids you come to her.

Petr. Worfe and worfe, she will not come:

Oh idle, intolerable, not to be indu'd:

Sirra Greamo, goe to your Miftris,

Say I commend her come to me.

Hor. I know her answere.

Pet. What?

Hor. She will not.

Petr. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Kateina.

'Bap. Now by my honliam here comes Katrina.

Kat. What is your will fir, that you fend for me?

Pet. Where is your father, and Horntemio wife?

Kate. They fit conferring by the Parler fire.

Petr. Goe fetch them hicher, if they deny to come,

Singe me them foundly forth vnto their husbands:

Away I fay, and bring them hither straight.

Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talke of a wonder.

Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it boasts.

Petr. Marrie peace it boasts, and louse, and quiet life,

An awfull rule, and right supremitie:

And to be short, what not, that's sweete and happie.

'Bap. Now faire befall thee good Petruchio:

The wager thou haft won, and I will add

Vnto their Joys twente thousand crownes,

Another dowrie to another daughter,

For she is chang'd as she had never bin.

Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,

And show moreigne of her obedience,

Her new built vertue and obedience.

Enter Kate, Bianca, and Widow.

See where she comes, and brings your froward Wives
As prifoners to her womanlie perfuasion:

Katerina, that Cap of yours becomes you not,

Of that bable, throw it vnderfoot.

Wid. Lord me neuer have a caufe to fighe,

Till I be brought to such a fillie passe.

'Bian. Fie what a foolish dutie call ye this?

Luc. I would your dutie were as foolish too:

The wifdome of your dutie faire Bianca,

Hath cost me five hundred crownes since supper time.

Bian. The more fool ye for laying on my dutie.

Pet. Katherine I charge thee tell these head-frong women,

What dutie they doe owe their Lords and husbandes.

Wid. Come,
The Taming of the Shrew.

Wid. Come, come, your mocking: we will have no telling.

Pet. Come on I say, and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall, and first begin with her.

Kate. Fee, fee, vnknit that threating vnkinde brow,
And dart not scornfull glances from thofe eyes,
To wound thy Lord, thy King, thy Governour.
It blest thy beautie, as froths doe bite the Meads,
Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake faire budds,
And in no fence is meete or amiable .
A woman mou'd, is like a fountaine troubled,
Muddie, ill feeming, thicke, bereft of beautie,
And while it is so, none so dry or thistle
Will daigne to tipp, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy Lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy soueraigne : One that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance. Commits his body
To painfull labour, both by sea and land :
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilest thou ly'st warme at home, secure and safe,
And caues no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, faire lookes, and true obedience ;
Too little payment for fo great a debt.
Such dutie as the subject owes the Prince,
Esen such a woman oweth to her husband:
And when she is froward, peevish, fullen, fowre,
And not obedient to his honeft will,
What is she but a foule contending Rebell,
And graceleffe Traitor to her loving Lord?
I am afham'd that women are fo fimple,

To offer warre, where they should kneele for peace:
Or feeke for rule, supremacy, and fway,
When they are bound to ferve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weake, and smooth,
Vnapt to toyle and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions, and our harts,
Should well agree with our externall parts?
Come, come, you froward and vnable wormes,
My minde hath bin as bigge as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reaften haplie more,
To handle word for word, and frowne for frowne ;
But now I fee our Launces are but frawes:
Our ftrenght as weake, our weakenesfe paft compare,
That feeming to be moiff, which we indeed leaff are.
Then vale your flomackes, for it is no boote,
And place your hands below your husbands feette:
In token of which dutie, if he pleafe,
My hand is readie, may it do him eafe.

Pet. Why there's a wench: Come on, and kiffe mee Kate.
Luc. Well go thy wales olde Lad for thou haft ha't.
Vin. Tis a good hearing, when children are toward.
Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are froward,
Pet. Come Kate, weare'te to bed,
We three are married, but you two are fed.
'Twas I wonne the wager, though you hit the white,
And being a winner, God giue you good night.

Exit Petruchio

Horten. Now goe thy waies, thou haft tam'd a curt Shrow.

Luc. Tis a wonder, by your leaue, she will be tam'd so.

FINIS.
ALL'S
Well, that Ends Well.

Actus primus. Scena Prima.

Enter young Bertram Count of Rossilien, his Mother, and Helena, Lord Lafew, all in black.

Mother.

N delivering my sonne from me, I burie a second husband.

Rof. And I in going Madam, weep oer my father's death anew but I must attend his maisters command, to whom I am now in Ward, euermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the King a husband Madame, you sir a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessitie hold his vertue to you, whose worthi-ness would sire it vp where it wanted rather then lack it where there is such abundance.

Mo. What hope is there of his Malefices amendment?

Laf. He hath abandon'd his Phibilitations Madam, vnder whose praclifies he hath percutted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the proceffe, but onely the loosing of hope by time.

Mo. This yong Gentlewoman had a father, O that had, howfad a paassage tis, whose skill was almost as great as his honifie, had it stretch'd so far, would haue made nature immortall, and death should have play for lackle of worke. Would for the Kings fake hee were liuing, I think it would be the death of the Kings dislike.

Laf. How call'd you the man you speake of Madam?

Mo. He was famous sir in his profession, and it was his great right to bee so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed Madam, the King very late spake of him admiringly, and mourningly: hee was skilful enough to haue liu'd fill, if knowledge could be fet vp against mortalitie.

Re. What is it (my good Lord) the King lawlishes of?

Laf. A Fidusa my Lord.

Re. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this Gentlewoman the Daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Mo. His sole childe my Lord, and bequested to my ouer looking. I haue those hopes of her good, that her education promises her dispositions thee inherits, which makes faire gifts fairer: for where an vnclene mind carries vertuous qualities, there commendations go with pitty, they arc vertues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simplenesse; she derives her honifie, and atcheues her goodnisse.

Lafew. Your commendations Madam get from her teares.

Mo. 'Tis the beft brine a Maiden can feaon her prayse in. The remembrance of her father neuer approches her heart, but the tirany of her sorrowes takes all liuellihood from her cheeke. No more of this Helena, go too, no more leafe it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, then to hauere—

Re. I doe affect a sorrow indeed, but I haue it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, exceellic greefe the enemie to the liuing.

Mo. If the liuine be enemie to the greefe, the excelle makes it done mortall.

Re. Madam I defire your holie wishes.

Laf. How vnderstand we that?

Mo. Be thou blest Bertram, and suceed thy father in manners as in shape: thy blood and vertue Contend for Empire in thee, and thy goodnise Share with thy birth-right. Love all, truth a few, Doe wrong to none: be able for thine enemie Rather in power then vs: and keep thy friend Vnder thy owne life key. Be checkt for silence, But neuer tax't for speech. What heauen more wil, That thee may furnish, and my prayers plucke downe, Fall on thy head. Farewell my Lord,

'Tis an vnseason'd Courtier, good my Lord Adieu him.

Laf. He cannot want the best

That shall attend his looke,

Mo. Heaven blefe him: Farewell Bertram.

Re. The best wishes that can be forg'd in your thoughts be feruants to you; be comfortable to my mother, your Mifris, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell prettie Lady, you must hold the credit of your father.

Re. O were that all, I thinke not on my father, And these great teares grace his remembrance more. Then thofe I shed for him. What was he like? I haue forgott him. My imagination Carries no fauour in't but Bertram. I am vnclene, there is no living, none, If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one, That I should lose a bright particular faire, And think to wed it, he is so aboue me In his bright radience and solatterall light,
All's Well, that Ends Well.

231

Mutl I be comforted, not in his sphere: Th'ambition in my love thus plagues it self: The hind that would be mated by the Lion Mutl die for loose. 'Twas prettie, though a plague To see him everie houre to fit and draw His archd bowes, his hawking eie, his curles In our hearts table: heart too capable Of everie line and tricke of his sweet favour. But now he's gone, and is my idolatrous fiance Mutl fanfifie his Reliques. Who comes heree?

Enter Parroll.

One that goes with him: I love him for his face, And yet I know him a notorious Liar, Thinke him a great way foole, folic a coward, Yet thee fixt euls li fit to fit in him, Thine Poynt, that is a Vertues freely bones Lookes bleske I'th cold wind; withfull, full ote we see Cold lusome wighting on superfluous solie.

Par. Saue you faire Queene.

Hel. And you Monarch.

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Is it you have some faine of fouldier in you: Let mee aske you a queftion. Man is enemie to virginity, how may we barracado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he affilles, and our virginity though valiant, in the defence yet is weak: vnfold to vs some warlike refittance.

Par. There is none: Man fettin done before you, will vndermine you, and blow you vp.

Hel. Blewe our poore Virginity from vnderminers and blowers vp. Is there no Military policy how Virgins might blow vp men?

Par. Virginity being blowne done, Man will quickier be blowne vp: marry in blowing him done againe, with the breath your felues made, you lofe your Gitty. It is not politick, in the Common-wealth of Nature, to preferve virginity. Loffe of Virginity, is rationally encrease, and there was never Virgin goe, till virginity was first loft. That you were made of, is metal to make Virgins. Virginity, by being once loft, may be ten times found; by being ever kept, it is ever loft: 'tis too cold a companion: Away with't.

Hel. I will stand fort a little, though therefore I die a Virgin.

Par. There's little can bee faide in't, 'tis againft the rule of Nature. To speake on the part of virginity, is to accuse your Mothers; which is most infallable diuobedience. He that hangs himfelfe is a Virgin; Virginity murthereth it felfe, and should be buried in highways out of all fancified limit, as a deprafe Offendedreffe agaft Nay, take Virginity breathes mines, much like a Cheefe, confume it felfe to the very paying, and foles with feeding his owne tromace. Befides, Virginity is peecuill, proud, ydle, made of felle-loue, which is the moft infolent of nue the Cannon. Keepe it not, you cannot choose but loofe by't. Out with't: within ten yeare it will make it felle two, which is a poudly increas, and the principall it felle not much the worfe. Away with't.

Hel. How might one do ftr, to loofe it to her owne liking?
Get thee a good husband, and vse him as he vse thee;
So farewell.

_Hel._ Our remedies oft in our selves do lye,
Which we ascribe to heaven; the fated skye
Gives vs free scope, onely doth backward pull
Our flow designes, when we our selves are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my loue to heye,
That makes me fce, and cannot feede mine eye?
The mightieft space in fortune, Nature brings
To lyone like, likes; and knife like natue things.
Impoible be strange attempts to tho'
That weigh their pains in fience, and do suppoze
What hath beene, cannot be. Who euer froue
To fwe her merit, that did milfe her loue?
(The Kings diſcife) my proiect may deceuie me,
But my intents are fixt, and will not leave me.

_Exit._

_Flourib._ Cornets.

Enter the King of France with Letters, and divers Attendants.

_King._ The Florentines and Semy are by th'ears,
Have fought with equall fortune, and continue
A brauing warre.

1._Lo.G._ So tis reported fir.

_King._ Nay tis moft credible, we heere receive it,
A certeynite wou'd from our Coin of _Aſphria_,
With caution, that the Florentine will moue vs
For speede ayde: wherein our dearest friend
Preludicates the bufineffe, and would feme
To haue vs make deniall.

1._Lo.G._ His loue and wifedom
Approoud fo to your Maiesty, may pleade
For ampleft credence.

_King._ He hath arm'd our anwer,
And _Florence_ is deni'd before he comes:
Yet for our Gentlemen that meane to fee
The _Tofcan_ feruice, freely haue they leaue
To fland on either part.

2._Lo.E._ It well may ferve
A nurferie to our Gentlie, who are fickle
For breathing, and exploit.

_King._ What's he comes here.

Enter Bertram, Lafbe, and Parolles.

1._Lo.G._ It is the Count _Roffignoll_ my good Lord, Yong Bertram.

_King._ Youth, thou be'st thy Fathers face,
Franke Nature rather curious then in haft
Hath well compoſd thee: Thy Fathers morall parts
Maiſt thou inherit too: Welcome to _Paris._

_Ber._ My thankes and duties are your Maiesties.

_Kin._ I would I had that corporall soundnesse now,
As when thy father, and my felfe, in friendship
First trie our fouldierh ft: he did looke farre
Into the feruice of the time, and was Disipled of the bract. He lafted long,
But vs both did haggil Age fleale on,
And wore vs out of act: It much requireth me
To talke of your good father: in his youth
He had the wit, which I can well obferue
To day in our yong Lords: but they may leaft
Till their owne owne returne to them vnoUted
Ere they can hide their leuitie in honour:
So like a Courter, contempn or bitternesse

Were in his pride, or sharpneffe; if they were,
His equall had awk'd them, and his honour
Clocke to it felfe, knew the true minute when Exception bid him fpeare; and at this time
His tongue obey'd his hand. Who were below him,
He wold as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low rances,
Making them proud of his humilitie,
In their poor praffe he humbled: Such a man
Might be a copie to these yonger times;
Which followed well, would demonstrate them now
But goes backward.

_Ber._ His good remembrance fir
Lies richer in your thoughts, then on his tombe:
So in approfe lies not his Epitaph,
As in your royall speech.

_Kin._ Would I were with him he would alwaies fay,
(Me thinks I heare him now) his plaueus words
He fatter'd not in eares, but grafed them
To grow there and to beare: Let me not lie,
This his good melancholy oft began
On the Cataftrophe and heele of paltine
When it was out: Let me not lie (quothhee)
After my flame lacks oyle, to be the fhuflle
Of yonger spirits, whole approbe fentces
All but new things difdaine; whole judgements are Meere fathers of their garments: whole conſances
Expire before their fulotions: this he would,
I after him, do after him with too:
Since I nor wax nor honie can bring home,
I quickly were diffolued from my hue
To glue some Labourers roome.

_L.Æ._ You'r loued Sir,
They that least lend it you, full lacke you firft.
_Kin._ I fill a place I know't how long ift Count
Since the Phyſitian at your fathers died?
He was much fam'd.

_Ber._ Some fix moneths since my Lord.
_Kin._ If he were living, I would try him yet.
Lend me an arme: the ret haue worne me out
With feuerall applications: Nature and fickneffe Debate it at their leifure. Welcome Count,
My fonne's no deereer.

_Ber._ Thanke your Maiestye.

_Flourib._

Enter Counteffe, Steward, and Cloune.

_Coun._ I will now heare, what fay you of this gentlewoman.

_Ste._ Madam the care I haue had to euen your content, I with might be found in the Kalender of my palf edauerous, for then we wound our Modeſtie, and make foule the clearneffe of our defirings, whenof our felves we puſh publish them.

_Coun._ What doe's this knaue heere? Get you gone sirra: the complaints I haue heard of you I do not all believe, 'tis my flawneffe that I doe not: For I know you lacke not folly to commit them, & haue abilitie enough to make fuch knaures yours.

_Clo._ 'Tis not vnown to you Madam, I am a poore follell.

_Coun._ Well fir.

_Clo._ No maddam,
'Tis not fo well that I am poore, though manie of of the rich are damn'd, but if I may have your Ladisships good will to goe to the world, Isbell the woman and w will doe as we may.

Cau. Will thou needs be a begger?

Clo. I doe beg your good will in this cafe.

Cau. In what cafe?

Clo. In Isbells cafe and mine owne; for ulce is no heritage, and I thinke I shall never have the blesing of God, till I have issue of a body; for they say barren are blesfings.

Cau. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marrie?

Clo. My poore bodie Madam requires it, I am druen only the fleth, and her mutt needs goe that the dull liedures.

Clo. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith Madam I have other holie reasons, such as they are.

Cau. May the world know them?

Cau. I have bene Madam a wicked creature, as you and all fleth and blood are, and indeed I doe marrie that I may repent.

Cau. Thy marriage sooner then thy wickedneffe.

Clo. I am out a friends Madam, and I hope to have friends for my wives fake.

Cau. Such Friends are thine enemies knowe.

Clo. Y'are shallow Madam in great friends, for the knaeus come to doe that for me which I am a wareie of: he thateres my Land, spares my teeme, and gues mee leave to Inne the crop: if I be his cuckold hee's my drudge; he that comforts my wife, is the cherisher of my fleth and blood; hee that cherishes my fleth and blood, loves my fleth and blood; he that loves my fleth and blood is my friend,he that kiffles my wife is my friend: if men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage, for young Charbon the Puritan, and old Paylam the Papift, how fomere their hearts are feuer'd in Religion, their heads are both one, they may loue horns together like any Deare i'th Herd.

Cau. Wilt thou ever be a foule mouth'd and calumnious knaue?

Clo. A Prophet I Madam, and I speake the truth the next waie, for I the Ballad will repeate, which men full true shall finde, your marriage comes by deflinie, your Cuckow fings by kinde.

Cau. Get you gone sir, He telle with you more anon.

Sere. May it please you Madam, that hee bid Helen come to you, of her I am to speake.

Clo. Sirra tell my gentlewoman I would speake with her, Helen I mean.

Clo. Was this faire face the cause,quoth she,

Why the Greclans fetched Troy,

Fond done,done, fond was this King Priam's joy,

With that she fledg'd as she fould,bid

And gave this sentence then, among nine bad if one be good, among nine bad if one be good, there's yet one good in ten.

What,one good in tenner you corrupt the fong farr.

Clo. One good woman in ten Madam,which is a purifying ath'fong: would God would ferue the world so all the yeere, weed finde no fault with the tithc woman if I were the Parfon,one in ten quoth aI and we tvight have a good woman borne but ore euerie blazine thare, or at an earthquake, would mend the Lorreliever, a man may draw his heart out ere a plucke one.

Clo. Youle begone fir knaue,and doe as I command you.

Clo. That man should be at womans command, and yet no hurt done, though honeste be no Puritan, yet it will doe no hurt, it will weare the Surpils of humbletie over the blacke-Gowne of a bigger heart: I am going forthoore, the buinsesse is for Helen to come hither.

Exit.

Cau. Well now.

Sere. I know Madam you lose your Gentlewoman inter-yr.

Cau. Faith I doe; her Father bequesth'd her to mee, and she her selfe without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much louse as thee finishe, there is more owning her then is paid, and more shall be paid her then sheele demand.

Sere. Madam, I was very late more neere her then I think thee wift me, alone she was, and did communicate to her selfe her owne words to her owne ears, thee thought, I dare vowe for her, they toucht not anie stranger fence, her matter was, thee loved your Sonne; Fortune thee bled was no goddefe, that had put such difference betwixt their two efates: Loue no god, that would not extend his might onelie, where qualities were leuell, Queen of Vir-gins, that would suffr her poore Knight furpria's without refuse in the first affult or randome afterward: This thee deliver'd in the most bitter touch of sorrow that ere I heard Virgin exclaime in, which I held my dutie speedily to acquaint you withall, fitthenes in the lossse that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.

Cau. You have dicharg'd this honeste, keepe it to thy selfe, manie likelihoods inform'd mee of this before, which hung so totting in the ballance, that I could neither beleue nor middoubt: prie you leave mee, sollv this in thy bosome, and I thanke you for your honest care: I will speake with you further anon.

Exit Servaard.

Enter Helen.

Old.Cau. Even so it was with me when I was yong: If ever yeve are natures, there are ours, this thorne Doth to our Rose of youth righlie belong Our blood to vs, this to our blood is borne, It is the show, and feele of natures truth, Where loues strong passion is impreft in youth, By our remembrances of dacies forgon, Such were our faults, or then we thought them none, Her eie is fickne on't, I obferue her now. Helen. What is your pleasur Madam?

Old.Cau. Nay a mother, why not a mother? when I fed a mother

Me thought you saw a serpant, what's in mother, That you start at it? I say I am your mother, And put you in the Catalogue of those That were enthombe mine, 'tis often seen Adoption friues vvith nature, and choise breedes A natue slip to vs from forraine feeders: You were oppreft me with a mothers groane, Yet I expefte to you a mothers care, (Gods merrie maiden) dos it curd thy blood To say I am thy mother? what's the matter, That this ditempered messenger of wet?
All's Well that ends Well.

The manie colour'd iris rounds thine eye?

——Why, that you are my daughter?

Hell. That I am not.

Old. Cou. I say I am your Mother.

Hell. Pardon Madam.

The Count Ruffell cannot be my brother:

I am from humbe, he from honored name:

No note upon my Parents, his all noble,

My Mather, my deere Lord he is, and I

His fervant live, and will his vifhill die:

He must not be my brother.

Of Cou. Nor I your Mother.

Hell. You are my mother Madam, would you were

So that my Lord your fonne were not my brother,

Indeed my mother, or were you both our mothers,

I care no more for, than I doe for heaven,

So were not his father, that no other,

But your daughter, he must be my brother.

Old. Cou. Yes Helen, you might be my daughter in law,

God shal I you mean it not, daughter and mother

So frite upon your pulse; what pale ajen?

My fere hath catch my fondnesse! now I fee

The miefte of your loselineffe, and finde

Your falt tears head, now to all fente 'tis greffe:

You love my fonne, invention is afham'd

Against the proclamacon of thy paffion

To fay thou dost not I therefore tell me true,

But tell me then 'tis fo, for looke, thy cheekes

Confefle it 'ton tooth to th'other, and thine cies

See it fo grofely thowne in thy behauiors,

That in their kinde they speake it, onely fonne

And hellish obstinacie eie thy tongue

That truth fhould be fuppeched, speake, let fo?

If it be fo,you have wound a goodly cleawe:

If it be not, forwarne't how ere I charge thee,

As heaven fhall worke in me for thine ausie

To tell me truele.

Hell. Good Madam pardon me.

Cou. Do you love my fonne?

Hell. Your pardon noble Milfris.

Cou. Love you my fonne?

Hell. Doe not you love him Madam?

Cou. Go not about my love hath in't a bond

Whence your world takes note: Come, come, difclose:

The fate of your affeccon, for your paffions

Have to the full approach'd.

Hell. Then I confefle

Here on my knere, before high heaven and you,

That before you, and next anto high heaven, I love your

Sonne:

My friends were poore but honfeit, fo's my love:

Be not offended, for it hurts not him

That he is lou'd of me; I follow him not

By any token of prefumptuous fute,

Nor would I hate him, till I doe defire him,

Yet never know how that defert should be:

I know I love in vaine, ftrue againft hope:

Yet in this captious, and intemible Suen.

I till pour in the waters of my loue

And lacke not to looe till; thus Indias like

Religious in mine error, I adore

The Sunne that looks upon his worshippe,

But knowes of him no more. My deereft Madam,

Let not your hate encounter with my loue,

For loong where you doe; but if your fete,

Whofe aged honor cites a vertuous youth,

Did euer, in fo true a fame of liking,

With chalkly, and loue dearely, that your Dian

Was both her felle and loue, O then glue pitie

To her whole flate is fuch, that cannot choose

But lend and gule where she is fure to looe:

That fette not to finde that, her fearch implies,

But ride like, lies sweetly where she dies.

Cou. Had you not lately an intent, speake truely,

To goe to Paris?

Hell. Madam I had.

Cou. Whereforetrul true.

Hell. I will tell truth, by grace it fete I sweare:

You know my Father left me fome preceptions

Of rare and prou'd effeclly, fuch as his reading

And manifeft experience, had collected

For generall fouveraignete: and that he wil'd me

In heelefull'te refervation to bebow them,

As notes, whose fafeties incluiffe were

More then they were in note: Amongft the ref,

There is a remedie, approu'd, fet downe,

To cure the defperate languishings whereof

The King's caufa'd you looke.

Cou. This was your motuie for Paris, was it, speake?

Hell. My Lord, your fonne, made me to think of this;

Elte Paris, and the medicine, and the King,

Had from the conversation of my thoughts,

Haply beene abente then.

Cou. But thinkes you Helen,

If you shou'd tender your fuppofed aide,

He would receive it? He and his Phifitions

Are of a minde, he, that they cannot helpe him:

They, that they cannot helpe, how shall they credit

A poore vnlearned Virgin, when the Schooles

Embowel'd of their doctrine, hau left off

The danger to it felle.

Hell. There's &omething in't

More then my Fathers skill, which was the great's

Of his profeflion, that his good recibs,

Shall for my legacie be fannedfified

By th'efkift fars in heaven, and would your honor

But glue me leu to trie fuccesse, I'd venture

The weel'ft life of mine, on his Graces cure,

By fuch a day, an houre.

Cou. Don't thou believe'st?

Hell. I Madam knowingly.

Cou. Why Helen thou shalt have my loue and loue,

Meanes and attendaung, and my lousing greetings

To toche of mine in Court, Ie flate at home

And prale Gods bleffing into thy attempt:

Begun to narrow, and be fure of this,

What I can helpe thee to, thou shalt not miufe.

Exeunt.

Actus Secondus.

Enter the King with divours yong Lords,taking leaue for the Florentine warre: Count, Ruffell, and Parrelles. Floref Cohets.

King. Farewel yong Lords, these warlike principlies
Doe not throw from you, and you my Lords farewell:
Share the advice betwixt you, if both gaine, all
The guitt doth stretch it felle as 'tis receiv'd,
And is enoughior both.

Lord.C. 'Tis our hope sir,
All's Well, that Ends Well.

After well entred foolards, to returne
And finde your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not conffe toe owes the malady
That doth my life befiege: firewell yong Lords, Whether I liue or die, be you the fones
Of worthy French men; let higher Italy
(That boate that inherit but the full
Of the laft Monarchy) fee that you come
Not to woce honour, but to wed it, when
The braueft queantn shrinks: finde what you beeke,
That fame may cry you loud: I fay firewell.

L.G. Health at your bidding fervce your Maiesty. King. Thofe graces of Italy, take heed of them,
They lay our French, lacke language to deny
If they demand: beware of being Captues
Before you ferue.

Be. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell, come hether to me.

1. Lo. O. My sweet Lord on fay behind vs.

Parr. 'Tis not his fault the spark.

2. Lo.E. Oh 'tis braue warres.

Parr. Most admirable, I have feene those warres.

Roffill. I am commanded here, and kept a coule with,
Too young, and the next yeere, and 'tis too early.

Parr. And thy minde fand too't boy,
Steale away brauely.

Roffill. I fhall lay here the for-horfe to a smocke,
Cloathing my fhoes on the plain Malony,
Till honour be brought vp, and no fword worn.
But one to dance with: by heauen, lie fteale away.

1. Lo. G. There's honour in the theft.

Parr. Commit it Count.

2. Lo. E. I am your accoryf, and fo farewelle.

Roffill. I grow to you, & our parting is a tortuer body.

1. Lo. G. Farewell Captaine.

2. Lo. E. Sweet Monifier Parolles.

Parr. Noble Heros; my fword and yours are klene, good fparkes and luftrous, a word good mettals.
You fhall finde in the Regiment of the Spindj, one Captaine Sparis his ficatrice, with an Embleme of ware heere on his finifter cheeke; it was this very fword entrontch'd it:
fay to him I live, and obferve his reports for me.

Lo. G. We fhall noble Captaine.

Parr. Mors doate on you for his nouices, what will you do?

Roffill. Stay the King.

Parr. Vive a more fpacious ceromony to the Noble Lords, you have restrained your felfe within the Lint of too cold an adieu: be more expressfull to them; for they were themfelves in the cap of the time, there do multer true gate: eat, fpake, and moove vnder the influence of the moft recec'd flare, and though the defill leade the meafure, fuch are to be followed after them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ruffill. And I will doe fo.

Parr. Worthye fellowes, and like to prooue moft finewye fword-men.

Enter Laffew.

L.Laf. Pardon my Lord for mee and for my tidings.

King. Itt fee thee to fhand vp. (pardon, L Laf. Then heres a man fands that hath brought his
I would you had kneel'd my Lord to ask me mercy,
And that at my bidding you could fo fhand vp.

King. I would I had, fo I had broke thy pate

And ask thee mercy for't.

Laf. Goodfayth a-croffe, but my good Lord 'tis thus,
Will you be cur'd of your infmitke?

King. No.

Laf. O will you eat no grapes my royal faxe?
Yes but you will, my noble grapes, and if
My royal faxe could reich them: I have feen a medicine
That's able to breath life into a fone,
Quickene a rocke, and make you dance Canari
With fpriightly fire and motion, whose fimpfe touch
Is powerfull to aryfe King Ippen, nay
To glue great Chearckaine a pen in's hand
And write to her a loue-line.

King. What her is this?

Laf. Why doth she: my Lord, there's one arru'd,
If you will fee her: now by my faith and honour,
If feriouly I may convey my thoughts
In this my light delverence, I have fpoke
With one, that in her fixe, her yeeres, proffifion,
Wifdom and confancy, hath amaz'd mee more
Then I dare blame my weakeneffe: will you fee her?
For that is her demand, and know her busineffe?
That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now good Laffew,
Bring in the admiration, that we with thee
May spend our wonder too, or take off thine
By wondering how thou tookit it.

Laf. Nay, I fee you,
And not be all day neither.

King. Thus he his fpeccall nothing cure prologues.

Laf. Nay, come your waies.

Enter Hellen.

King. This haffe hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your waies,
This is his Maielie, fy your minde to him,
A Traitor you doe looke like, but fuch traitors
His Maielie feldom feares, I am Creffeds Uncle,
That dare leafe two together, far you well.

Exit. King. Now faire one, do's your busines follow vs?

Hel. My good Lord, Gerard de Nature was my father, in what he did profefse, well found.

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I fpare my praires towards him,
Knowing him is enough: on's bed of death,
Many receiues he gave me, chiefe one,
Which as the dearest ifue of his prudence
And of his olde experience, th'omile darling;
He bad me fteke vp, as a triple cyle,
Safer then mine owne two: more deare I have fo,
And hearing your high Maielie is toucht
With that malignant caufe, wherein the honour
Of my deare fathers gift, fands cheefe in power,
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humblenefe.

King. We thankne you maiden,
But may not be fo credulous of cure,
When our moft learned Doctors leave vs, and
The congregated Colledge have concluded,
That labrouing Art can newer ranfome nature
From her impofible effate: I fay we must not
So flaine our judgement, or corrupt our hope,
To prooue our paft cure malladice
To empericks, or to difeuer fo
Our great fele and our credit, to edeeme
A feneceffe helps, when helpe paft fence we deeme.

Hel. My
Hell. My dutie then shall pay me for my pains:
I will no more enforce mine office on you,
Humbly intreating from your royall thoughts,
A modest one to beare me backe againe.
King. I cannot glue thee leefe to be call'd grateful
Thou thoughtst to helpe me, and fuch thankes I glue,
As one neere to death to those with whom I live.
But what at full I know, thou knowest no part,
I knowing all my perill, thou no Art.
Hell. What I can doe, can doe no hard to try,
Since you set vp your reft 'gainst remedy:
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft doth them by the weakest minister:
So holy Wri, in babes had judgement flowne,
When ludes haue bin babes, great foulds haue flowne
From fimple sources: and great Seas haue dried
When Miracles haue by the great't heene denied.
Oft expectation failles, and must oft there
Where must it promises: and oft it hits.
Where hope is coldset, and defpaire most shits.
King. I must not heare thee, fure thou art well made,
Thy pains not v'd, muft by thy felfe be paid,
Proffers not tooke, reape thanks for their reward.
Hell. Inspired Merit fo by breath is bard,
It is not fo with him that all things knowes
As 'tis with vs, that fquare our gueffe by Showes:
But mod is prefumption in us, when
The help of heauen we count the act of men.
Deare fri, to my endeavours glue confent,
Of heauen, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an Impoftrue, that proclaime:
My felle against the leuell of mine aime,
But know I thinke, and thinke I know moft sure,
My Art is not paft power, nor you paft cure.
King. Art thou fo confident? Within what space
Hop'lt thou my cure?
Hell. The greatest grace lending grace,
Ere twice the hordes of the funne shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnall ring,
Erc twice in murke and occidentall dampe
Moift Heberus hath quench'd her fliepy Lampe:
Or foure and twenty times the Pylos glaffe
Hath told the threehundreth minutes, how they paffe:
What is infirme, from your found parts flall flie,
Health shall lice free, and fickennesse freely dye.
King. Vpon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'lt thou venter?
Hell. Take of impudence,
A trumpets boldneffe, a diviuged flame
Traduc'd by odious ballads: my maidens name
Seard otherwife, ne worfe of worft extended
With vildete torture, let my life be ended.
Kim. Methinks in thefe fome bleffed Spirit doth speak
His powerfull founds, within an organ weake:
And what impoffibility would fay
In common fence, fence fayes another way:
Thy life is deere, for all that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath eminate:
Youth, beauty, wifdom, courage, all
That happens and prime, can happy call:
Thou this to hazard, needs muft intimate
Skill infinite, or montrous desperate,
Sweet praficher, thy Phyficke I will try,
That minifters thine owne death if I die.
Hell. If I breake time, or flinch in property
Of what I poole, vnpitied let me die,
And well deferu'd: not helping, death's my fee,
But if I helpe, what doe you promife me.
King. Make thy demand.
Hell. But will you make it eu'n?
Kim. I by my Scepter, and my hopes of helpe.
Hell. Then thall thou give me with thy kyndly hand
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royall blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy flate:
But fuch a one thy valli, whom I know
Is free for me to aske, thee to bellow.
Kim. Here is my hand, the premises offer'd,
Thy why by my performance shall be feru'd:
So make the choice of thy owne time, for I
Thy refolv'd Patient, on thee flill relye:
More should I question thee, and more I muft,
Though more to know, could not be more to truft:
From whence thou canst it, how tended on, but reft
Vnquestion'd weare, and undoubted blest.
Give me some helpe here heere hou, if thou proceed,
As high as word, my deed fhall match thy deed.

Enter Clowne and Clowne.

Lady. Come on fr, I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clown. I will fhow my felfe highly fed, and lowly taught, I know my busineffe is but to the Court.

Lady. To the Court, why what place make you special, when you put off that with fuch contempt, but to the Court?

Clo. Truly Madam, if God haue lent a man any manner, hee may cafe it put off at Court: hee that cannot make a legge, put off's cap, kiffe his hand, and lay noth, ing has neither legge, hands, lippe, nor cap 3, and indeed such a fellow, to lay precife, were not for the Court, but for me, I have an anfwere will ferue all men.

Lady. Marry that's a bountiff ful anfwere that fits all queftions.

Clo. It is like a Barbers chare that fits all buttrockes, the pin buttrocke, the quatch-buttrocke, the brawn buttrocke, or any buttrocke.

Lady. Will your anfwere ferue fitt to all queftions?

Clo. As fit as ten groates is for the hand of an Attrurney, as your French Crowne for your taffety punce, as the ruff for Tom's furinger, as a pancake for Shrines tuesday, a Morris for May-day, as the naile to his hole, the Cuckold to his horse, as a foulding quene to a wrangling knaue, as the Nuns lip to the Friers mouth, may as the pudding to his skyn.

Lady. Have you, I fay, an anfwere of fuch fitnffe for all queftions?

Clo. From below your Duke, to beneath your Conftable, it will fit any queftion.

Lady. It muft be an anfwere of moft monftrous fize, that muft fit all demands.

Clo. But a triflue neither in good faith, if the learned should fpeake truth of it: here he is, and all that belongs to't. Ask mee if I am a Courtier, I shall doe you no harme to learn.

Lady. To be young againe if we could: I will bee a foole in queftion, hoping to bee the wifer by your anfwere.

Lady.
Enter King, Helen, and attendants.

Par. I would have said it, you say well: here cometh the King.

Old L. Luftique, as the Dutchman falest: Ie like a maide the Better whil't I have a tooth in my head: why he's able to lead her a Carranto.

Par. Mer du viager, is not this Helen?

Old L. Fore God I think she is.

King. God call before mee all the Lords in Court, Sit my preferuer by thy patients fide, And with this healthfull hand whose banliht fence Thou haft repeald, a second time receyue The confirmation of my promis'd guilt, Which but attends thy naming.

Enter 3 or 4 Lords.

Faire Maide fend forth thinke eye, this youthfull parcell Of Noble Batchellors, fland at my befoeing, Ore whom both Soueraigne power, and fathers voice I haue to vfe; thy franke election make, Thou haft power to choofe, and they none to forfaie.

Hel. To each of you, one faire and veruous Militris; Fall when loute pleafe, marry to each but one.

Old L. I'de glue bay curtall, and his furniture My mouth no more were broken then thefe boyes, And write as little heard.

King. Perufe them well: Not one of thofe, but had a Noble father.

She addresses her to a Lord.

Hel. Gentlemen, heauen hath through me, reftor'd the king to health.

All. We vnderstand it, and thanke heauen for you.

Hel. I am a fimple Maide, and therein wealthi: That I protest, I fimpily am a Maide:

Pleafe it your Malefie, I have done already:
The blusses in my cheekes thus whifher mee, We blus that thou ſhooldt chooſe, but be refuelt;
Let the white death fit on thy cheeke for ever,
We' re noe come there again.

King. Make choife and fee,
Who blus thy leue, thuns all his loute in mee.

Hel. Now Diam from thy Altar do I fly,
And to imperiali loute, that God moft high
Do my fighes frame: Sir, wilt thou hearre my fuite?

1. Lo. And graunt it.

Hel. Thankes fay, all the reft is mute.

Old L. I had rather be in this choife, then throw
Amof-acce for my life.

Hel. The honor fir that frames in your faire eyes,
Before I fpeake too threatnningly replies:
Loue make your fortunes twentie times above
Her that fo viueth, and her humble loute.

2. Lo. No better if you pleafe.

Hel. My with receuys,
Which great loue grant, and fo I take my leue.

Old L. Do all they denle her? And they were fons of mine, I'de have them whip'd, or I would ſend them to' th Turke to make Eunuches of.

Hel. Be not afraid that I your hande should take,
Ie neuer do you wrong for your owne fake:
Blefing vpon your vowes, and in your bed
Finde fierer fortune, if you ever wed.

Old L. Thefe boyes are boyes of Ice, they're none have have here : sure they are bards to the English, the French nere got em.

Lu. You are too young, too haply, and too good
To make your felle a faune out of my blood.
A. Lord. Faire one, I thinke not fo.
Of Lord. There's one grape yet, I am sure thy father drunkne wine. But if thou be't not an affe, I am a youth of fourteenne : I haue knowne thee already.
Hel. I dare not say I take you, but I gue
Me and my surue, ever whilst I live
Deboth your guiding power : This is the man.
King. Why then young Bertram take her fhee's thy wife.
Ber. My wife my Leige I' thal befeech your highnes
In such a busines, give me leave to vf
The helpe of mine owne elys.
King. Know'lt thou not Bertram what thee ha's done for mee?
Ber. Yes my good Lord, but neuer hope to know why I should marrie her.
King. Thou know'lt thee ha's rain'd me from my sickly bed.
Ber. But follows it my Lord, to bring me downe
Muit anfwer for your raifing? I knowe her well : shee had her breeding at my fathers charge:
A poore Phyfians daughter my wife? Diseaine
Rather corrupt me ever.
King. This onely title thou diffiin'th in her, the which I can build vp : strange is it that our bloods
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound differences yet stands of
In differences fo mightie. If the bee
All that is vertuous (save what thou diffiik't)'
A poore Phyfians daughter, thou diffiik't
Of vertue for the name : but doe not fo : From loweft place, whence vertuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by th' doers deed.
Where great additions fwell's, and vertue none,
It is a dropped honour. Good a lone,
Is good without a name? Vilenesse is fo : The propietie by what is, should go,
Not by the title. Shee is young, wife, faire,
In her, to Nature shee's immediate herit : And threfe breed honour : that is honours fcorne,
Which challenges it felle as honoures borne,
And is not like the fire : Honours thriue,
When rather from our afs we them derive
Then our fore-goers : the meere words, a true
Deboth on euerie tombe, on euerie greaue : A lying Trophee, and as oft is dumbe,
Where due', and damn'd oblivion is the Tombe.
Of honour'd bones indeed, what should be fide?
If thou canst like this creature, as a male,
I can creat the red : Vertue, and fhe
Is her owne dowuer : Honour and wealth, from mee.
Ber. I cannot love her, nor will thriue to doo't.
King. Thou wrong'r thy felle, if thou shold'rt thriue to choode.
Hel. That you are well reford' my Lord, I'me glad:
Let the red go.
King. My Honor's at the flake, which to defeate
I must produce my power. Here, take her hand,
 Proud cornfull boy, vnworthy this good gif,
That dot in vile milpifion shackle vp
My Lord, and her deare: that can't not dreame,
We paling vs in her defpicable fcale.

Shall weigh thee to the bame : That wilt not know,
It is in Vs to plant thine Honour, where
We pleafe to have it grow. Checke thy contempt :
Obey Our will, which trauailes in thy good:
Believe not thy difdaine, but pretentifie
Do thine owne fortunes that obelident right
Which both thy dutie owes, and Our power claims,
Or I will owne thee from my care for euer
Into the flaggers, and the carelesse lapfe
Of youth and ignorance: both my reconnue and hate
Looking vpon thee, in the name of justice,
Without all terms of pitie. Speakes, thine anfwer.
Ber. Pardon my gracious Lord : I for submit
My fancie to your eyes, when I confider
What great creation, and what dote of honour
Flies where you bid it : I finde that the which late
Was in my Nobler thoughts, moft late: is now
The praid of the King, who fo ennobled,
Is as twere borne fo.
King. Take her by the hand,
And tell her she is thinner to whom I promife
A counterpoize: If not to thy eftates,
A ballance more replacte.
Ber. I take her hand.
Kin. Good fortune, and the favour of the King
Smile vpon this Contraâ : whole Ceremonie
Shall (come expedient on the now borne briefe,
And be port'ed to night : the Solemn Feast
Shall more attend vpon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lou'st her,
Thy loue's to me Religious : elle, do'ts erre.
Exeunt
Paralle and Laffew flay behind, commen-
ing of this wedding.

Laf. Do you heare Monfieur? A word with you.
Par. Your pleasure sir.
Laf. Your Lord and Master did well to make his recantation.
Par. Recantation? My Lord? my Master?
Laf. I: is it not a Language I speake?
Par. A moft harsh one, and not to bee vnderfode without bloudie succeeding My Master?
Laf. Are you Companion to the Count Ruffien?
Par. To any Count, to all Counts ; to what is man.
Laf. To what is Counts man : Counts master is of another fille.
Par. You are too old sir : Let it fatifie you, you are too old.
Laf. I must tell thee Sirrah, I write Man : to which title age cannot bring thee.
Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.
Laf. I did thinke thee for two ordinears : to bee a prettie wife fellow, thou didt make tolerable vent of thy trueli, it might paffe : yet the scarfees and the ban-erets about thee, did manifolde diffwaide me from beleeuing thee a vessell of too great a burthen. I have now found thee, when I looke thee againe, I care not yet art thou good for nothing but taking vp, and that th' our fearce worth.
Par. Hadst thou not the pruileged of Antiquity vp-on thee?
Laf. Do not plande thy felle to farre in anger, least thou haften thy triall: which if, Lord haue mercie on thee for a hen, fo my good window of Letteice fare thee well, thy calemate I neede not open, for I look through then. Glue me thy hand.
Par. My Lord, you give me molt egregious indignity.

Laf.
All's Well, that Ends Well.

Laf. I with all my heart, and thou art worthy of it.
Par. I have not my Lord dervier'd it.

Laf. Ye good faith, every drame of it, and I will not hate thee a scruple.
Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. But as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a simacke a' th'contrariety. If ever thou be'lt bound in thy scorne and beaten, thou shall finde what it is to be proud of thy bondage; I have a desire to hold my acquittance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in the default, he is a man I know.
Par. My Lord you do me most inumpetuous vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell paines for thy fake, and my poore doing eternal: for doing I am paft, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave.
Exit.

Par. Well, thou hast a simon shall take this disgrace off me: scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy Lord: Well, I must be patient, there is no better of authority. I thee him (by my life) if I can meet thee with any convenience, and he were double and double a Lord. Ie have no more pittie of his age then I would hauve of—He beate him, and if I could but meet him agen.

Enter Lafew.

Laf. Sirra, your Lord and masters married, there's newes for you: you have a new Militis.
Par. I most vnfrandly befetch your Lordshipp to make some refutation of your wrongs. He is my good Lord, whom I serve above is my master.
Laf. Who? God.
Par. I fir.
Laf. The deuill it is, that's thy master. Why doest thou garter vp thy armes a this fashion? Doft make holte of thy fleues? Do other servants fo? Thouwert bent fet thy lower part where thy nofe stands. By mine Honor, if I were but two hours younger, I'd beate thee: mee-think't thou art a general offence, and every man shall beate thee: I thinke thou wait created for men to breach themselues vpon thee.
Par. This is hard and vndeferred measure my Lord.
Laf. Go too fir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernell out of a Pomgranat, you are a vagabond, and no true traueller: you are more favore with Lords and honourable personages, then the Commission of your birth and vertue gives you Heradly. You are not worth another word, else I'de call you knaue. I leve you. Exit.

Enter Count Ruffillon.

Par. Good, very good, it is so then: good, very good, let it be conceal'd awhile.
Ref. Vndone, and forfeited to cares for euer.
Par. What's the matter sweet-heart?
Ruffillon. Although before the solemn Priest I have sworn that I will not bed her.
Par. What? what sweet heart?
Ref. O my Paroles, they have married me: Ile to the Tuscan warres, and never bed her.
Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits, The tread of a mans foot: too'th wares.
Ref. There's letters from my mother: What ch'import is, I know not yet.
Par. I that would be knowne: too'th wares my boy, too'th wares:

He weares his honor in a boxe vnsoleene,
That hugges his kickle wickle heare at home,
Spending his manlie marrow in her arms
Which should subside the bound and high curnet
Of Maries sickle fleced: to other Regions,
France is a stable, wee that dwell in't lades,
Therefore too' th wares.

Ref. It shall be fo, Ile send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled: Write to the King
That which I durft not speake. His prefent gift
Shall furnishe me to thole Italian fields
Where noble fellows strike: Warres is no stroke
To the darke house, and the detred wife.

Par. Will this Caprichio hold in thee, art sure?
Ref. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me.
Ile send her straighth away: To morrow,
Ile to the warres, the she to her finge forrow.

Par. Why these haly bound, ther is noife in it. Tis hard
A young man married, is a man that's mad:
Therefore away, and leave her bracyly: go,
The King ha's done you wrong: but huffs 'tis so. Exit.

Enter Helena and Cloane.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly, is she well?
Clo. She is not well, but yet she has her health, she's very merrie, but yet she is not well: thankest be given she's very well, and wants nothing I' th world: but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be verie well, what do's she ayle, that she's not verie well?
Clo. Truly she's very well indeed, but for two things
Hel. What two things?
Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whether God fend her quickly: the other, that she's in earth, from whence God fend her quickly.

Enter Paralles.

Par. Bleffe you my fortunate Ladie.
Hel. I hope sir I have your good will to have mine owne good fortune.
Par. You had my prayers to leade them on, and to keepe them on, haue them full. O my knaue, how do's my old Ladie?
Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.
Par. Why I say nothing.
Clo. Marry you are the wiser man: for many a mans tongue shakes out his masters vndoings: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a verie little of nothing.
Par. A way, th'art a knaue.
Clo. You should have fait fir before a knaue, th'art a knaue, that's before me th'art a knaue: this had beene truth fir.
Par. Go too, thou art a witte foole, I haue found thee.

Clo. Did you finde me in your felte fir, or were you taught to finde me?
Clo. The search fir was profitable, and much Foole may you find in you, even to the worlds pleasure, and the encrease of laughter.

Par. A good knaue faith, and well fed.
Madam, my Lord will go awaie to night,

A
A verie ferious businesse call's on him:
The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which as your due time claims, he do's acknowledge,
But puts it off to a compell'd restraint:
Whole want, and whole delay, is dreev'd with sweets
Which they dipple now in the curbed time,
To make the comming houre oreflow with joy,
And pleasure drowne the brim.

Hel. What's his will elie? Par. That you will take your infant leave a' th' king,
And make this haft as your owne good proceeding,
Strengthned with what Apologie you thinkke
May make it probable neede.
Hel. What more commands hee? Par. That having this obtain'd, you pretendle Attend his further pleafure.
Hel. In every thing I waite vpon his will.
Par. I shall report it fo. Exit Par.
Hell. I pray you come Sirrah. Exit

Enter Lafenius and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your Lordshippe thinkes not him a fouldier.
Ber. Yes my Lord and of verie valiant approoche.
Laf. You haue it from his owne delierance.
Ber. And by other warranted testimonie.
Laf. Then my Diall goes not true, I tookke this Larke for a banting.
Ber. I do affure you my Lord he is very great in knowledge, and accordinglie valiant.

Laf. I haue then finn'd against his experience, and tranfeght against his valours, and my flate that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent:
Here he comes, I pray you make vs freinds, I will pur-faue the amitie.

Enter Parolles.
Par. Thefe things shall be done fir.
Laf. Pray you fir whose his Tailor?
Par. Sir?
Laf. O I know him well, I fir, hee firs a good worke-man, a verie good Tailor.
Ber. Is he gone to the king?
Par. Shee is.
Ber. Will shee away to night?
Par. As you haue her.
Ber. I haue writ my letters, casketed my treafeure,
Given order for our horses, and to night,
When I should take poffeffion of the Bride,
And ere I doe begin.
Laf. A good Travailier is something at the latter end of a dinner, but on that lies three thirds, and vfeas
a known truth to paffe a thousand things without, shold bee once hard, and thince beaten. God faue you Captaine.
Ber. Is there any vnkindeenes betweene my Lord and you Monfieur?
Par. I know not how I haue defuered to run into my Lords difpleaure.
Laf. You haue made shift to run into't, bootes and spurres and all: like him that leapt into the Culfard, and out of it you're runne againe, rather then fuffer question for your refidence.
Ber. It may be you haue miftaken him my Lord.
Laf. And I shall doe fo euery, though I tooke him at's prayers.
Fare you well my Lord, and beleue this of me, there can be no kernell in this light Nut: the foule of this man is his cloathes: Truftr him not in matter of heauie confequence: I haue kept of them tyme, & know their natures. Farewell Monfieur, I have spoken better of you then you haue or will to d Eve at my hand, but we muft do good against euill.

Par. An idle Lord, I fware.
Ber. I thinke fo.
Par. Why do you not know him?
Ber. Yes, I do know him well, and common fpeech
Gives him a worthy paffe. Heree comes my clog.

Enter Helena.

Hel. I haue fir as I was commanded from you
Spoke with the King, and haue procurred his leave
For prefent parting, onely hee defires
Some priuate fpeech with you.
Ber. I fhall obey his will.
You muft not meruallie Hide at my fource,
Which holds not colour with the tyme, nor does
The miniftration, and required office
On my particular. Prepard I was not
For such a businesse, therefore am I found
So much vn fetled: This drivies me to intreate you,
That prefently you take your way for home,
And rather mufe then ask why I intreate you,
For my respectes are better then they feme,
And my appointments have in them a neede
Greater then thenews it felle in the firft view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother,
'Fwill be two daies ere I fhall fee you, fo
I leave you to your wifedome.
Hel. Sir, I can nothing fay,
But that I am your moft obedient fervant.
Ber. Come, come, no more of that.
Hel. And euer fhall
With true obreuerence feake to eke out that Wherein toward me my homely harres haue fald
To equal my great fortune.
Ber. Let that goe: my haft is verie great. Farewell:
Hie home.
Hel. Pray fir your pardon.
Ber. Well, what would you fay?
Hel. I am not worthie of the wealth I owe,
Nor dare I fay 'tis mine: and yet it is,
But like a timorous thefte, mom faine would fteale
What law does vouch mine owne.
Ber. What would you have?
Hel. Something, and fcarfe fo much: nothing indeed,
I would not tell you what I would my Lord: Faith yes,
Strangers and foes do funder, and not kiffe.
Ber. I pray you fay not, but in haft to horfe.
Hel. I fhall not brake your bidding, good my Lord:
Where are my other men? Monfieur, farewell.
Exit Ber. Go thou toward home, where I wil never come,
Whilft I can fhape my fword, or heare the drumme:
Away, and for our flight.
Par. Brauely, Coragio.

Actus Tertius.

Flourifhe. Enter the Duke of Florence, the two Frenche men, with a troup of Souldiers.
Duke. So that from point to point, now haue you heard

The
The fundamental reasons of this warre,
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth
And more troubles after.

_Lord._ Holy Helene, the quarrel
Upon your Graces part: blacke and fearfull
On the opposer.

_Duke._ Therefore we murrale much our Cofin France
Would in so loft a businesse, that his bosome
Against our borrowing prayers.

_French E._ Good my Lord,
The reasons of our flate I cannot yeeld,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a Counfale frames,
By felfe wable motion, therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found
My felle in my incertaine grounds to faile
As often as I guete.

_Duke._ Be it his pleasure.

_Fren.G._ But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That forget on their cafe, will day by day
Come here for Physickke.

_Duke._ Welcome shall they bee:
And all the honors that can flye from vs,
Shall on them fettle: you know your places well,
When better fall, for your auxilies they fell,
To morrow to'th the field.

Enter Counteffe, and Cloine.

_Count._ It hath happen'd all, as I would have had it, suae that he comes not along with her.

_Clo._ By my troth I take my young Lord to be a verie melancholy man.

_Count._ By what obseruance I pray you.

_Clo._ Why he will looke vppon his boote, and finge:
mand the Ruffe and finge, aske queftions and finge, pickle his teeth, and finge: I know a man that had this tricke of melancholy hold a goodly Mannor for a fong.

_Lad._ Let me fee what he writes, and when he means to come.

_Clo._ I have no minde to Lieble fince I was at Court.
Our old Lings, and our Lieble a'th Country, are nothing like your old Ling and your Lieble a'th Court: the brains of my Cupid's knock'd out, and I beginne to love, as an old man loues money, with no fomacke.

_Lad._ What hauë we here?

_Clo._ In that you have there.

_Exit._

A LETTER.

_I have sent you a daughter-in-Law, that hath recovered the King, and ondame me: I have wedded her, not bedded her, and fowrne to make the not {eternal. You fould hear I am rumma away, know it before the report come. If there bee breath enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.
Your unfortunat foone,
Bertram.

This is not well raff and vnbridled boy,
To flye the favours of fo good a King,
To plucke his indignation on thy head,
By the misfiring of a Malde too vertuous
For the contempt of Empire.

Enter Cloine.

_Clo._ O Madam, yonder is hauie newes within betwene two fouldiers, and my yong Ladie.

_Lad._ What is the matter.

_Clo._ Nay there is some comfort in the newes, some comfort, your foone will not be kild fo soone as I thought he would.

La._ Why should he be kild?

_Clo._ So say I Madam, if he runne away, as I heare he does, the danger is in flanding tooe', that's the loffe of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more. For my part I onely heare your fonne was run away.

Enter Helen and two Gentlemen.

_French E._ Saue you good Madam.

_Hel._ Madam, my Lord is gone, for ever gone.

_French G._ Do not say fo.

_La._ Thinke vpon patience, pray you Gentlemen,
I have felt fo many quirkes of joy and griefe,
That the first face of neither on the flart
Can woman me vnto't. Where is my fonne I pray you?

_Fren.G._ Madam he's gone to ferue the Duke of Florence,

_We met him thitherward, for thence we came:
And after some dispatch in hand at Court,
Thither we bend againe.

_Hel._ Lookke on his Letter Madam, here's my Pasport.

_When thou canst get the Ring vpon my finger, which never shall come off, and fowe was a child begotten of tiny bode, that I am fatter too, then call me buckane but in fuch action
I write a Neuer.
This is a dreadfull sentence.

_La._ Brought you this Letter Gentleman?
_1.G._ I Madam, and for the Contents fake are forrece for our paines.

_Old La._ I prethee Ladie have a better cheere,
If thou engrofleth, all the greefes are thine,
Thou robft me of a moity: He was my fonne,
But I do wafe his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my childe. Towards Florence is he?

_Fren.G 1 Madam.

_La._ And to be a fouldier.

_Fren.G._ Such is his noble purpofe, and beleu't
The Duke will lay vpon him all the honor
That good conuenience claieme.

_La._ Returne you thither.

_Fren.E._ I Masam, with the swifteft wing of speed.

_Hel._ Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France,
'Tis bitter.

_La._ Find you that there?

_Hel._ I Madame.

_Fren.E.'Tis but the boldneffe of his hand hapy, which his heart was not contenoting too.

_Lad._ Nothing in France, vntil he have no wife:
There's nothing heere that is too good for him
But onely tho, and the deferves a Lord
That twenty fuch rude boyes might tend vpon,
And call her hourly Miftris. Who was with him?

_Fren.E._ A femant onely, and a Gentelman: which I have sometime knowne.

_La._ Parrelles was it not?

_Fren.E._ I my good Ladie, hee.

_La._ A verie tainted fellow, and full of wickednesse,
My fonne corrupts a well derived nature
With his inducement.

_Fren.E._ Indeed good Ladie the fellow has a deal of that, too much, which holds him much to hauue.

_La._ Y'are welcome Gentlemen, I will intreate you when you see my fonne, to tell him that his sword can never winne the honor that he looes: more Ie intreate you
you written to bearalong.

Fren. G. We ferue you Madam in that and all your worstleft affaires.

La. Not so, but as we change our courtesie,
Will you draw near?

Exit.

Hel. Till I have no wife I have nothing in France.

Nothing in France vntill he has no wife:
Thou shalt have none Repillon, none in France,
Then hast thou all againe : poor Lord, is't I
That chafe thee from thy Countrey, and expose
Thoue tender limbes of chine, to the event
Of the none-sparing warre? And is it I,
That drue thee from the sportive Court, where thou
Wast shot at with faire eyes, to be the marke
Of smakie Muskets? O you leaden meffengers,
That ride upon the violent speade of fire,
Fly with false ayme, moue the still-peering aire
That rings with piercing, do not touch my Lord:
Who euer shoot at him, I fet him there.
Who euer charges on his forward breft
I am the Chaffe that do hold him too's;
And though I kill him not, I am the caufe
His death was so effected : Better twere
I met the rauine Lyon when he roa'd
With sharpe confraint of hunger : better twere,
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No come thou home Repillon,
Whence honor but of danger wins a scare;
As oft it lookes all. I will be gone :
My being heere it is, that holds thee hence,
Shall I say heere to do't? No, no, although
The ayre of Paradise did fan the house,
And Angells offe'd all: I will be gone,
That pitifull rumour may report my flight
To confolate thine eare. Come night, end day,
For with the darke (poore thefe) I leaue away. Exit.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Repillon, drum and trumpets, soldiours, Parrolles.

Duke. The General of our horfe thou art, and we Great in our hope, lay our biclt loue and credence
Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir it is
A charge too heayy for my strength, but yet
We'l affume to beeke it for your worthy fake,
To th'eextreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then goe thou forth,
And force me play vpon thy prosperous helme
As thy auspicious misfits.

Ber. This very day
Great Mars I put my selfe into thy file,
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove
A louer of thy drumme, hater of loue. Exeunt omnes

Enter Countesse & Steward.

La. Alas! and would you take the letter of her:
Might you not know she would do, as she has done,
By sending me a Letter. Reade it agen.

Letter.

I am S. Legat Pilgrim, thither gone:
Ambitious to bee borne: but in me offended,
That here-for I lay I the cold ground upon
With saufed count I my faults to have amended.

Write, write, that from the bloody cours of warre,
My dereft Emperour thy dearse face, may bee,
Blesse him at home in peace. Whilist I from farre,
His name with wacal fame favour sanctifie:
His taken labours bid him me forgive:
I bid & shillfull woe do sent him forth,
From Contraire friends, with Captain feue to line,
Where death and danger dogges the booke of warre.
He is too good and faire for death, and mee,
When my self embrac'd, to let him free.

Ah what sharpe flings are in her mildest words?
Rynald, you did neuer lacke advice so much,
As letting her paffe fo: had I spokke with her,
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus the hath preventeed.
Ste. Pardon me Madam,
If I had givne you this at ouer-night,
She might have beene ore-tane: and yet the writes
Purifie would be but vain.

La. What Angell shal
Blesse this vnworthy husband, he cannot thrue,
Vnleave her prayers, whom heaven delights to heare
And loues to grant, represeem him from the wrath
Of greatest Justice. Write, write Rynald,
To this vnworthy husbands of his wife,
Let esterle word weigh heausie of her warke,
That he doe weigh too light: my greatest greefe,
Though little he doe feel, let downe sharpe-
Dispatch the moft convenient meffenger,
When haply he shall heare that she is gone,
He will returne, and hope I may that thee
Hearing so much, will speede her foote againe,
Led hither by pure loue: which of them both
Is deereft to me, I have no skill in fience
To make diffinition: prouide this Meffenger:
My heart is honee, and mine age is weake,
Greewe would have tearcs, and sorrow bids me speake.

A Tucket safter off.

Enter old Widdow of Florence, her daughter, Violanta and Mariana, with other Citizens.

Widdow. Nay come,
For if they do approach the Citty,

How you have beene solicited by a Gentleman
His Companion.

Maria
All's Well that ends Well.

A Man. I know that knaue, hang him, one Parolles, a filthy Officer he is in those suggestions for the young Earle, beware of them Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all their engines of lust, are not the things they go vnder: many a maide hath beene induc'd by them, and the miflike is example, that so terrible frowns in the wracke of maiden-hood, cannot for all that diffuade fuccesion, but that they are limer with the twiggis that threatens them. I hope I neede not to adjure you further, but I hope your owne grace will keepe you where you are, though there were no further danger knowne, but the modefile which is so loft.

Dian. Als poore Ladie,

'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife Of a deteiling Lord. Wid. I write good creature, wherefore she is, Her hart waighes fadely: this yong maid might do her A shrewd turne if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you meane? May be the amorous Count follicites her In the vnlawfull purpofe.

Wid. He does indeed.

Di."Tis pity he is not honest-yonds that fame knaue That leades him to these places: were I his Ladie, I would poison that vile Ruffcall.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That Iacke an-apes with scarfses. Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt in his battale.

Par. Loose our drum? Well.

Mar. He's shrvely vext at something. Look he has fpied vs. Wid. Marrie hang you.

Mar. And your cortiell, for a ring-carrier. Exit.

Wid. The troope is past: Come pilgrim, I will bring you, Where you shall hoit: Of infamy'd penitents There's foure or fice, to great S. Iagoes bound, Atreadle at my houfe.

Hel. I humbly thank you: Please it this Matron, and this gentle Maide To eate with vs to night, the charge and thanking Shall be for me. and to require you further, I will bellow some precepts of this Virgin, Worthy the note.

Bath. Wee'll take your offer kindly. Exeunt.

Enter Count Ruffillon and the Frenchman, As at fett.

Cap.E. Nay good my Lord put him too: let him haue his way.

Cap.G. If your Lordshippe finde him not a Hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

Cap.E. On my life my Lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you thinkke I am to farre Deceiued in him?

Cap.E. Beleue it my Lord, in mine owne direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speake of him as my kinman, hee's a moit notable Coward, an infinite and endlefe Lyre, an hourly promife-breaker, the owner of no one good qualitie, worthy your Lordships entertainment.

Cap.G. It were fit you knew him, least repofing too farre in his vertue which he hath not, he might at some great and trulfe buffenife, in a mane daunger, toyle you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

Cap.G. None better then to let him fetch off his drumme, which you heare him so confidentely undersart to do.

C.E. I with a troop of Florentines will sodaily fur-prize him; such I will have whom I am sure he knowes not from the enemy: wee will binde and hoodwinkle him so, that he shall fupposo no other but that he is carri ried into the Leger of the adueraries, when we bring him to our owne tents: be your Lordship prentat at his examination, if he do not for the promis of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base feare, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the diuine forfeite of his foule vpon oath, never truit my judgmen in anie ting.

Cap. G. O for the loye of laughter, let him fetch his drumme, he syes he has a stratagem for': when your Lordship fees the bottome of this fuccesse in't, and to what mettle this counterfeft lump of ours will be melted if you glue him not Iohn drummes entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter Parrelles.

Cap. E. O for the loye of laughter hinder not the honor of his defigne, let him fetch off his drumme in any hand.

Bur. How now Monfieur? This drumme sticks fore-ly in your disposition.

Cap. G. A poc on't, let it go, 'tis but a drumme.
Par. But a drumme: 'ft but a drumme? A drum fo loth. There was excellent command, to charge in with our horfe vpon our owne winges, and to rend our owne fouldiers.

Cap. G. That was not to be blam'd in the command of the seruice: it was a disalter of warre that Caesar him selfe could not have prevented, if he had beene there to command.

Bur. Well, wee cannot greatly commend our fucceffe: some difhonor wee had in the loffe of that drum, but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have beene recovered.

Bur. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered, but that the merit of sersice is fdomaine attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drumme or another, or be latet.

Bur. Why if you have a dramacke, too Monfieur: if you thinke your mysterie in stratagem, can bring this instrumen of honour againe into his natuie quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise and go on, I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speeke well in it, the Duke shall both ipeake of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatnesse, even to the vnoit fylable of your worthinesse.

Par. By the hand of a fouldier I will undertake it.

Bur. But you must not now flumber in it.

Par. Ile about it this evening, and I will pretend pen downe my dilemma's, encourage my felle in my cer taine, put my felle into my mortall preparation: and by midnight looke to heare further from me.

Bur. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it.

Par. I know not what the successe will be my Lord, but the attempt I vow.

Bur. I know ch'art valiant, And to the possibility of thy fouldiership,
Will subscrib for thee: Farewell.

Par. I love not many words.

Cap. E. No more then a fishe louses water. Is not this a strange fellow my Lord, that fo confidently femeas to undertake this businesse, which he knowes is not to be done, dammes himselfe to do, & dare betters be damned then to do't.

Cap. G. You do not know him my Lord as we doe, certaine it is that he will desiere himselfe into a muns fa-avour, and for a weeke escape a great deale of difcou-eries, but when you finde him out, you have him ever af-

Bur. Why do you thinke he will make no deede at all of this that fo feriouly he does address himselfe vote?

Cap. E. None in the world, but returne with an in-venction, and clap vpon you two or three probable lies: but we have almost imbott him, you shall fee his fall to night; for indeede he is not for your Lordshippes repect.

Cap. G. Weele make you some sport with the Foxe ere we cafe him. He was first smock'd by the old Lord Lofuse, when his difguife and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall finde him, which you shall fee this ve-erie night.

Cap. E. I must go looke my twigges, He shall be caught.

Bur. Your brother he shall go along with me.

Cap. G. As'st please your Lordship, Ile leave you.

Bur. Now will I lead you to the house, and vew you
The Laffe I spoke of.

Cap. E. But you say she's honest.

Bur. That's all the fault: I spoke with hir but ofte, And found her wondrous cold, but I sent to her
By this fame Coxcombe that we have i'th winde
Tokens and Letters, which she did refend,
And this is all I have done: She's a faire creature, Will you go fee her?

Cap. E. With all my heart my Lord.

Exeunt

Enter Hellen, and Widdow.

Hel. If you mid doubt me that I am not thee, I know not how I shall affure you further,
But I shall looke the grounds I worke vpon.

Wid. Though my effate be faile, I was well borne,
Nothing acquainted with these businesse,
And would not put my reputation now
In any flainng aot.

Hel. Nor would I wish you.
First give me truf, the Count he is my husband,
And what to your sworne couensie I haue spoken,
Is fo from word to word; and then you cannot
By the good ayde that I of you shall borrow,
Erre in befowling it.

Wid. I should believe you,
For you have the'd me that which well approves
Y'are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purfe of Gold,
And let me buy your friendly helpe thus farre,
Which I will ouer-pay, and pay againe
When I haue found it. The Count he woes your daughter,
Layes downe his wanton fledge before her beautie,
Refolute to carrie her: let her in fine content
As weel direcd her how 'tis best to beare it:
Now his important blood will naught denie,
That thfe'd demand: a ring the Countie weares,
That downward hath succedceed in his houe
All's Well, that Ends Well.

From fonde to fonde, some foure or five decents, Since the firth father wore it. This Ring he holds In moft rich choice: yet in his idle fire, To buy his will, it would not feme too deere, How ere repented after.

Wid. Now I fee the bottome of your purpose. Hal. You fee it lawfull then, it is no more, But that your daughter ere the femeas as wonne, Defires this Ring; appoints him an encounter; In fine, deliers me to fill the time, Her felle moft chaftly aident: after To marry her, I le addde three thouand Crownes To what is paft already.

Wid. I have yeelded: Infruct my daughter how she shall perfeuer, That time and place with this deceite fo lawfull May prove coherent. Every night he comes With Muficks of all forts, and fongs compos'd To her vnworthinesse: If nothing needes vs To chide him from our eues, for he perfuits As if his life lay on't. Wid. Why then to night Let vs aflay our plot, which if it speed, Is wicked meaning in a lawfull deede; And lawfull meaning in a lawfull act, Where both not finne, and yet a finfull faet. But let's about it.

Ae almost Quartus.

Enter one of the Frenchmen, with fius or fice other soldiers in ambuf.

1 Lord E. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner: when you fellie upon him, speake what terible Language you will: though you understand it not your selues, no matter: for we muft not feeme to vnderland him, vnleffe some one among vs, whom wee muft pro-duce for an Interpreter.

2 Sir. Good Captaine, let me be th' Interpreter. Lor. E. Art not acquainted with him? knowes he not thy voice?

1 Sir. No fir I warrant you. Lor. E. But what finle wofly hath thou to speake to vs againe.

1 Sir. En fuch as you speake to me. Lor. E. He muft thinke vs some band of Strangers, i'th aduersaries entertainment. Now he hath a f马克 of all neighbouring Languages: therefore we muft every one be a man of his owne fince, not to know what we speake one to another:fo we feeme to know, is to know straight our purpofe: Chougs language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you interpreter, you muft feeme very politike. But couch hoa, heere hee comes, to be-giue two houres in a fpeece, and then to returne & fwear the lies he forges.

Enter Parrots.

Par. Ten a clocke: Within thefe three houres 'twill be time enouf: to goe home. What allah I lay I have done? It muft be a very plauifhe inuenion that carries it. They becomm to fmake mee, and difgraces haue of late, knock'd too often at my doore: I finde my tongue is too foole-hardie, but my heart hath the feare of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

Lo. E. This is the firth truth that ere thine own tongue was gullite of.

Par. What the duell shold move mee to vndertake the recoverie of this drumme, being not ignorant of the impollibility, and knoweing I had no fuch purpofe? I muft glue my felle some hurts, and fay I got them in ex-ploit: yet flight ones will not carrie it. They will fay, came you off with fo little? And great ones I dare not gue, wherefore what's the inffance. Tongue, I muft put you into a Butter-womans mouth, and buy my felle another of Baimerths Mule, if you prattle mee into thefe perilles.

Lo. E. Is it poiffible he should know what hee is, and be that he is.

Par. I would the cutting of my garments wold ferue the turnes, or the breaking of my Spanifh fword.

Lo. E. We cannot affoord you fo.

Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to fay it was in stratagem.

Lo. E. 'Twould not do.

Par. Or to drowne my clothes, and fay I was fripit.

Lo. E. Hardy ferue.

Par. Though I fware I leapt from the window of the Cladell.

Lo. E. How depee?

Par. Thirty fadome.

Lo. E. Three great oathes would scarce make that be beleuued.

Par. I would I had any drumme of the enemies, I would fware I recouer'd it.

Lo. E. You shall heare one anon.

Par. A drumme now of the enemies.

Alarum within.

Lo. E. Then goe to mouns, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, willinde par corbe, cargo.

Par. O ranfone, ranfone, Do not hide mine eyes.

Inter. Bokes thronmadt bakes.

Par. I know you are the Musk Boot Regiment, And I shall looke my life for want of language. If there be heere German or Dane, Low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him fpeake to me, Ile difcouer that, which shal vnde the Florentine.

Inter. Bokes wamned, I vnderland thee, & can fpeake thy tongue: Keryebome firs, betake thee to thy thay firs, for feuenteene ponyards are at thy bofome.

Par. Oh.

Inter. Oh pray, pray, pray, Musk raunia dache.

Lo. E. Oforbidakeb callunere.

Int. The General is content to fpere thee yet, And hoodwinkt as thou art, will leade thee on To gather from thee. Haply thou mayft informe Something to faue thy life.

Par. O let me file,

And all the secrets of our campe Ile fwear,

Their force, their purpufe: Nay, Ile speake that, Which you will wonder at.

Inter. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damn me.

Inter. Aeole lintus.

Come on, thou art granted fpace.

A fhort Alarum within.

Lo. E.
All’s Well that ends Well.

L.E. Go tell the Count Ruffilia and my brother, We have caught the woodcocke, and will keepe him Till we do heare from them. (mufled Sol. Captain I will. L.E. A will betray vs all vnto our felowe, Informe on that. Sol. So I will fir. L.E. Till then Ile keepe him darke and safely lockt. Enter Bertram, and the Moide called Diana.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fantybell.

Dia. No my good Lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled Goddeff, And worth it with addition: but faire soule, In your fine frame hath loue no qualitie? If the quicke fire of youth light not your minde, You are no Maiden but a monument When you are dead you should be such a one As you are now; for you are cold and sterne, An image thou shouldest be as your mother was When your sweete felie was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No.

My mother did but dutie, such(my Lord) As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more a’that; I prethee do not strive against my vows: I was compell’d to her, but I loue thee.

By loues owne sweete constraint, and will for ever Do thee all rights of felowe.

Dia. I so you seuer vs

Till we ferue you: But when you have our Roifes, You barely leave our thornes to pricke our felows, And makke vs with our baroneffe.

Ber. How haue I owne.

Dia. Tis not the many oates that makes the truth, But the plaine finge vow, that is vow’d true: What is not holle, that we sweare not by, But take the high’t wit witneffe: then pray you tell me, If I should sweare by loues great attributes, I should ye deerefully, would you beleue my oaths, When I did loue you ill? This ha’s no holding To sweare by him whom I protest to loue That I will worke against him. Therefore your oaths Are words and poor conditions, but vsefull’d At leat in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it: Be not so holy cruel: Loue is holle, And my integrite ne’re knew the crafts That you do charge men with: Stand no more off, But glue thy felie vnto my fcke defies, Who then reconuer. Say thou art mine, and ever My love as it begins, shal not peruerse, Dia. I fee that men make rope’s in such a furrre, That we’ll forlacke our felows. Give me that Ring.

Ber. Ile lend it thee my dearer; but haue no power To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not my Lord?

Ber. It is an honour longings to our houfe, Bequeathed downe from manie Anceffors, Which were the greateff obliquie i’ts world, In mee to looke. Thus your owne proper wifedome Brings in the Champion honor on my part, Against your vaine assault.

Ber. Here, take my Ring, My houfe, mine honor, yea my life be thine, And Ile be bid by thee.

Dia. When midnight comes, knocke at my chamber window:

Ile order take, my mother shall not haere, Now will I charge you in the band of truth, When you have conquerd my yet maiden-bed, Remaine there but an houre, not speake to mee: My reafons are moft strong, and you shall know them, When backe against this Ring shall be deluer’d:

And on your finger in the night, Ile put Another Ring, that what in time proceeds, May token to the future, our paff deeds.

Adieu till then, then faile not: you ha’t wone A wife of me, though there may be done.

Ber. A heauen on earth I haue won by wooye thee.

Di. For which,lie long to thank both heauen & me, You may lo to in the end.

My mother told me full how he would woo, As if the fite in’s heart. She fayes, all men Have the like oates: He had fwearne to marie me When his wife’s dead: therfore Ile lye with him When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are fo braid, Marry that will, I lye and die a Maid:

Onely in this difguife, I think’t not faffe, To efon him that would vnlytly winne.

Enter the two French Captaine, and some two or three Souldiers.

Cap.G. You haue not gien him his mothers letter.

Cap.E. I haue delin’d it an houre since, ther is fomthing in’t that flings his nature: for on the reading it, he chang’d almoft into another man.

Cap.G. He hath much worthy blame laided vpon him, for flaking off fo good a wife, and fo fweet a Lady.

Cap.E. Especiallee, hee hath incured the everlafting difpaife of the King, who had even tau’d his bounty to finge fappife to him. I will tell you a thing, and you shall let it dwell darkly with you.

Cap.G. When you have spoken it is dead, and I am the graue of it.

Cap.E. Hee hath peruered a young Gentlewoman heere in Florence, of a moft chaife renown, & this night he fleshis his will in the fpoyle of her honour: hee hath gien her his monumentall Ring, and thinkes himfelfe made in the vnchaife comphition.

Cap.G. Now God delay our rebellion as we are our felues, what things are we.

Cap.E. Meereely our owne traitours. And as in the common courfe of all treafons, we fiell fee them reeuale themselves, till they attaine to their abhor’d ends: fo he that in this action continues against his owne Nobili- lity in his proper freeome, one-flows himfelfe.

Cap.G. Is it not meant damnable in vs, to be Trum- peters of our vnlawfull intents? We shall not then have his company to night?

Cap.E. Not till after midnight: for hee is dieted to his houfe.

Cap.G. That approaches space: I would gladly haue him fee his company anathomized, that hee might take a measure of his own judgements, wherein so curiously he had fet this counterfeiter.

_Cap._ E. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

_Cap._ G. In the meantime, what hear ye of these Wars?

_Cap._ E. I hear there is an outwore of peace.

_Cap._ G. Nay, I assure you a peace concluded.

_Cap._ E. What will Count _Ruffliam_ do then? Will he trauaille higher, or returne againe into France?

_Cap._ G. I perceive by this demand, you are not al_together of his councill.

_Cap._ E. Let it be forbid, so should I bee a great deal of his saft.

_Cap._ G. Sir, his wife some two months since fled from _his house, her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Laguen le grand; which holy vndertaking, with most au-

_fere Laclomanie the accomplisht: and there reuding, _the tenderness of her Nature, became as a prey to her griece; in fine, made a groane of her last breath, & now _the fings in heaven.

_Cap._ E. How is this iustified?

_Cap._ G. The stronger part of it by her owne Letters, _which makes her storie true, even to the point of her _death; her death it selfe, which could not be her office _to say; is come: was faithfully confirmd by the Rector _of the place.

_Cap._ E. Hath the Count all this intelligence?

_Cap._ G. And the particular confirmanions, point _from point, to the full arming of the verite.

_Cap._ E. I am heartily forrie that here I bee gladde of _this.

_Cap._ G. How mighty sometimes, we make vs comforts of our loffe.

_Cap._ E. And how mightily some other times, wee _drownne our gaine in teares, the great dignite that _his valour hath here acquird for him, shall at home be _encountred with a flame as amble.

_Cap._ G. The webbe of our life, is of a mingled yarne, _good and ill togeth: our vertues would bee proud, if _our faults whipt them not, and our crimes would di_paire if they were not cheriifh'd by our vertues.

_Enter a Missinger.

_How now? Where's your master?_

_Sir._ He met the Duke in the street fir, of whom hee _hath taken a Solemn measure; his Lordship will next _morning for France._ The Duke hath offered him Let_ters of commendations to the King.

_Cap._ E. They shall bee no more then needfully there, _if they were more then they can commend.

_Enter Count _Ruffliam_.

_Ber._ They cannot be too sweete for the Kings tart-_neffe, here's his Lordship now. How now my Lord, _i't not after midnight?

_Ber._ I have to night dispatch'd fixtenee businesse

_a moneth length a peace, by an abstract of succeffe: I _have conglided with the Duke, done my adieu with his _neceff; buried a wife, mourn'd for her, writ to my La_die mother, I am returning, entertain'd my Conuoys, & _betweene these maine parcels of dispatch, afficted ma_ny nicer needs: the last was the grefteft, but that I have _not ended yet.

_Cap._ E. If the businesse bee of any difficulity, and this _morning your departure hence, it requires haft of your Lordship.

_Ber._ I mean the businesse is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter: but shall we have this dialogue _betweene the Foole and the Soldiour. Come, bring _forth this counterfeiter moduio, has decieved me, like a double-meaning Prophets.

_Cap._ E. Bring him forth, he's farte i'th flockes all night _poor gallant knaue.

_Ber._ No matter, his heele haue desfer'd it, in vfling _his spurre fo long. How does he carry himselfe?

_Cap._ E. I have told your Lordship already: The _flockes carry him. But to anwer you as you would be _vnderfood, hee weepes like a wench that had flied her _milke, he hath confed himfelfe to _Morgan_, whom hee _suppose to be a Friar, fro the time of his remembrance to this very infant diftiffer of his fettin i'th flockes:

_and what thinke ye he hath confed?

_Ber._ Nothing of me, he's a?

_Cap._ E. His confedion is taken, and it shall bee read to his face, if your Lordship be in't, as I beleue you _are, you must haue the patience to heare it.

_Enter _Parroh_ with his _Interpeter._

_Ber._ A plague vpon him, muftife, he can fay nothing _of me: huh, huh.

_Cap._ G. _Hoodman_ comes: _Portatararifia._

_Inter._ He calles for the tortures, what will you fay _without em.

_Par._ I will confede what I know without contraint, _if ye pinch me like a Pafty, I can fay no more.

_Int._ _Bake_ _Chinucho._

_Int._ _Bubibinde eciuwurmac._

_Int._ You are a mercifull Generall: Our Generall _bids you anwer to what I fhall take you out of a Note.

_Par._ And truly, as I hope to live.

_Int._ First demand of him, how many horfe the Duke _is strong. What fay you to that?

_Par._ Five or fix thoufand, but very weake and un_ capaceable: the troops are all scattered, and the Commanders verie poore rogue, vpon my reputation and _credit, and as I hope to live.

_Int._ Shall I fet downe your anwer fo?

_Par._ Do, Ile take the Sacrament on't, how & which _way will you i't all's one to him.

_Ber._ What a paffing flauke is this?

_Cap._ G. Y'are decied up my Lord, this is _Mounfeur

_Parrof_, the gallant militair, that was his owne phrase _that had the whole theorieke of warre in the knot of his _fear, and the proclime in the shape of his dagger.

_E._ I will never truft a man againe, for keeping his _fword cleene, nor beleue he can haue euerie thing in _him, by wearing his apparel neatly.

_Int._ Well, that's fet downe.

_Par._ Fine or fix thousand horfe I fde, I will fay true, _or thereabouts fett downe, for Ile speake truth.

_Cap._ G. He's very neere the truth in this.

_Ber._ But I con him no thankes for't in the nature he _delivers it.

_Par._ Poore rogue, I praye you fay.

_Int._ Well, that's fet downe.

_Par._ I humbly thank you fir, a truth's a truth, the _Rogues are maruisous poore.

_Interp._ Demauad of him of what strength they are a _foot. What fay you to that?

_Par._ By my troth fir, if I were to live this preuent _houre, I wil tell true. Let me fee, _Sparo_ a hundred & _fifty,

All's Well that ends Well.

and, Sebastian so many, Carambus so many, Jacques so many: Guttius, Cofma, Lodowickes, and Gratia, two hundred fifty each: Mine owne Company, Chippper, Chummond, Beny, two hundred fifty each: so that the matter file, rotten and found, youpon my life amounts not to five thousand pole, halie of the which, dare not akke the snow from off their Caffeckes, leaff they thake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shal be done to him?

Caph. Nothing but let him lane thankes, Demand of him my condition: and what credite I have with the Duke.

Int. Well that's fet downe: you shall demand of him, whether one Captaine Domeaine bee I't Campe, a Frenchman: what its reputation is with the Duke, what its value, honeftele, and expertneffe in warres: or whether he thinkes it was not possible with well-waighing summes of gold to corrupt him to a recoolt. What say you to this? What do you know of it?

Par. I bethoch you let me anfwere to the particular of the interrogatories. Demand them fingly.

Int. Do you know this Captaine Domeaine?

Par. I know him, a was a Botchers Prentize in Paris, from whence he was whipp for getting the Shriues fool with childes, a dumbe innocent that could not fay him nay.

Ber. Nay, by your leave hold your hands, though I know his braines are forfeitie to the next tile that fals.

Int. Well, is this Captaine in the Duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lowe.

Caph. Nay look not to upon me: we shall heare of your Lord anon.

Int. What is his reputation with the Duke?

Par. The Duke knows him for no other, but a poore Officer of mine, and writ to mee this other day, to turne him out a'th band. I thinke I have his Letter in my pocket.

Int. Marry we'll search.

Par. In good faith I do not know, either it is there, or it is upon a file with the Dukes other Letters, in my Tent.

Int. Heere 'tis, heere's a paper, shall I reade it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. Our Interpreter do's it well.

Caph. Excellently.

Int. Dias, the Counts a fool, and full of gold.

Par. That is not the Dukes letter fir: that is an advertisement to a proper maffe in Florence, one Dia, to take heede of the allurement of one Count Rajassin, a foolish idle boy: but for all that very rutthil, I pray you fir put it vp againe.

Int. Nay, Ile reade it firft by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't I proteste was very honefte in the behalfe of the maid: for I knew the young Count to be a dangerous and lafciuious boy, who is a whale to Virginnity, and devours vp all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable both-sides rogue.

Int. Let. When he fowares oates, bid him drop gold, and take it: After be secres, be never payes the foare: Have woon to match well made, match and well make it, He were paper after-dates, take it before: And say a fouldier (Dias) told thee this: Men are to well write, boys are not to his.

Par. Count of this, the Counts a fool I know it, Who payes before, but not when he does owe it.

Thine as he vow'd to thee in thine care, Parolle.

Ber. He shall be whipp through the Armie with this rime in his forehead.

Caph. This is your devoted friend sir, the manifold Linguist, and the army-potent fouldier.

Ber. I could endure any thing before but a Cat, and now he's a Cat to me.

Int. I perceive fir by your Generals looks, wee shall be faine to hang you.

Par. My life sir in any case: Not that I am afraid to dye, but that my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of Nature. Let me live sir in a dungeen, I'd flocks, or any where, so I may live.

Int. Wee'le fe what may bee done, so you confesse freely: therefore once more to this Captaine Domeaine: you have anfwerd to his reputation with the Duke, and to his vour. What is his honefte?

Par. He will thele fir an Egge out of a Clofiter for rapes and rauihements he paralels Neffe. He professes not keeping of oaths, in breaking em he is stronger then Hercules. He will lye fir, with such volubillitie, that you would thinke truth were a toole: drunkenesse is his bett verve, for he will be twine-drunken, and in his sleep he does little harme, save to his bed-though about him: but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I hauve but little more to say fir of his honefte, he's curie thing that an honest man should not hauve: what an honest man shoule hauve, he has nothing.

Caph. I begin to loue him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honefte? A pox upon him for me, he's more and more a Cat.

Int. What say you to his expertneffe in warre?

Par. Faith fir, he's led the drumme before the English Tragedians: to belye him I will not, and more of his fouldiery I know not, except in that Country, he had the honour to be the Officer at a place there called Messen, to infructe for the doubling of files. I would doe the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certaine.

Caph. He hau'h out-villain's fancellor to farr, that the raritie redeemes him.

Ber. A pox on him, he's a Cat fill.

Int. His qualities being at this poore price, I neede not to ake you, if Gold will corrupt him to recoolt.

Par. Sir, for a Cardcuce he will fell the fee-simile of his folution, the inheritance of it, and cut th'letteralle from all remaunders, and a perpetuall fucceffion for it perpetually.

Int. What's his Brother, the other Captain Domeaine?

Caph. Why do's he askes him of me?

Int. What's he?

Par. E's a Crow a'th fame neft: not altogether so great as the firft in goodneff, but greater a great deal in effe. He excels his Brother for a coward, yet his Brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreated hee out-runes any Lackey, marrie in comming on, hee ha's the Crampe.

Int. If your life be faied, will you undertake to betray the Florentine.

Par. 1, and the Captain of his horfe, Count Rajfillion.

Int. Ile whisper with the Generall, and knowe his pleasure.

Par. Ile no more drumming, a plague of all drummes, oneely to fennce to defuer well, and to beguille the supposition.
Al's Well, that Ends Well.

sition of that lascivious yong boy the Count, haue I run into this danger: yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?

Int. There is no remedy sir, but you must dye: the Generall fayes, you that haue fo traitorously discouerd the secrets of your army, and made such pestiliferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest vfe: therefore you must dye. Come heafe- man, off with his head.

Par. O Lord sir let me live, or let me fe my death.

Int. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends:

So, looke about you, know you any here?

Count. Good morrow noble Captain.

Lo.E. God bleffe you Captain Parolles.

Cap.G. God save you noble Captain.

Lo.E. Captain, the greeting will you to my Lord

Lafeu. I am for France.

Cap.G. Good Captain will you give me a Copy of the sonet you wrat to Diana in behalfe of the Count

Ruffian, and I were not a verie Coward, I'de compel it on you, but I dye you well.

Int. You are vnforme Captain all but your scarfe, that has a knot on yet.

Par. Who cannot be crush'd with a plot?

Inter. If you could finde out a Countrie where but women were that had receiued so much shame, you might begin an impedent Nation. Fare yee well sir, I am for France too, we shall speake of you there.

Exit.

Par. Yet am I thankfull: if my heart were great

'Twould burst at this: Captain Ile be no more,

But I will eate, and drinkke, and sleepe as soffe

As Captaine shull. Simply the thing I am

Shall make me liue: who knowes him selfe a bragget

Let him feare this: for it will come to passe,

That every bragget shall be found an Affe.

Ruff sword, coole breathes, and Parolles liue

Safe in flame: being fool'd, by fool'rie thruue;

There's place and meane for every man alive.

Ile after them.

Exit.

Enter Helen, Widdow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,

One of the greatest in the Christian world

Shall be my furetie: for whole throne 'tis needfull

Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneele.

Time was, I did him a defired office

Deere almoft as his life, which gratefull

Through flintie Tartars bosome would peep forth,

And answere thankes. I duly am inform'd,

His grace is at Marcella, to which place

We have convenient comoy: you must know

I am appoved dead, the Army breaking.

My husband lies him home, where heaven ayying,

And by the leasure of my good Lord the King,

We'll be before our welcome.

Wide, Gentle Madam,

You never had a credit to whose trueth

Your busines was more welcome.

Hel. Nor your Miftris

Euer a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour

To recompose your love: Doubt not but heauen

Hath brought me vp to be your daughters dower,

As it hath fared her to be my modieu

And helper to a husband. But O strange men,

That can such sweet vfe make of what they hate,

When fawcie trufting of the coyn'd thoughts

Defiles the pitchy night, so luft doth play

With what it loathes, for that which is away,

But more of this hereafter: you Diana,

Vnder my poore instructions yet muft suffer

Something in my behalfe.

Dia. Let death and honesltie

Go with your impositions, I am yours

Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet I pray you:

But with the word the time will bring on summer,

When Briars shall haue leaves as well as thornes,

And be as sweet as sharpe: we muft away,

Our Wagon is prepar'd, and time reunies vs,

All's well that ends well, fill the fences the Crowne;

What ere the course, the end is the renowne.

Exeunt.

Enter Cleone, old Lady, and Lafeue.

Laf. No, no, no, your sonne was milled with a snipt taftta fellow there, whose villainous sullen wold haue made all the vnblace'd and dowy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had bene alieue at this hourse, and your sonne heere at home, more aduanc'd by the King, then by that red-tail'd humble Bee I speake of.

Lo. I would I had not knowne him, it was the death of the most vertuous gentlewoman, that euer Nature had praffe for creating. If he had partaken of my flesh and part mee the deepest groanes of a mother, I could not have owde her a more rootted lone.

Laf. Twas a good Lady, 'twas a good Lady. Woe may picke a thousand fillets ere wee light on such another hearbe.

Cb. Indeed sir she was the sweete Margerom of the sillets, or rather the hearbe of grace.

Laf. They are not hearbe you knaue, they are noe hearbese.

Cleone. I am no great Nabuchadnesar sir, I have not much skill in grace.

Laf. Whether doest thou professe thy selfe, a knaue or a looel.

Cb. A foole sir at a womans servise, and a knaue at a mans.

Laf. Your distinction.

Cb. I would confen the man of his wife, and do his servise.

Laf. So you were a knaue at his servise indeed.

Cb. And I would giue his wife my bauble sir to doe her servise.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knaue and foole.

Cb. At your servise.

Laf. No, no, no.

Cb. Why sir, if I cannot servue you, I can servue as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Whose that, a Frenchman?

Cb. Faith sir a has an English mane, but his sfinome is more hotter in France then there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Cb. The blacke prince sir, alias the prince of darke-ness, alias the disuell.

Laf. Hold thee there's my purfe, I glue thee not this to suggest thee from thy matter thou talk'it off, servue him still.

Close.
Alsat Quintus.

Enter Hellen, Widow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding polling day and night,
Must wear your spirits low, we cannot help it:
But since you have made the daies and nights as one,
To weare your gentle limbs in my affyres,
Be bold you do lo to grow in my requital,
As nothing can vnroot you. In happy time,
Enter a gentle Affringer.

This man may helpe me to his Maifteies ear,
If he would spend his power. God fave you Sir.

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have fexe you in the Court of France.
Gent. I have beene fometime there.

Hel. I do prefume Sir, that you are not faine
From the report that goes upon your goodniffe,
And therefore gaoed with mofl fharpe occasions,
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to
The vie of your owne vertues, for the which
I shall continue thankfull.

Gent. What’s your will?

Hel. That it will pleafe you
To give this poore petition to the King,
And ayle me with that flour of power you haue
To come into his prefence.

Gent. The Kings not heere.

Hel. Not heere Sir?

Gent. Not indeed,
He hence remou’d laft night, and with more haft
Then is his vie.

Ed. Lord how we looke our paines.

Hel. All’s well that ends well yet,
Though time feme fo aduerfe, and meanes vnfit:
I do befeech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marrie as I take it to Refullion,
Whither I am going.

Hel. I do befeech you Sir,
Since you are like to fee the King before me,
Comuened the paper to his gracieus hand,
Which I prefume hall render you no blame,
But rather make you thanke your paines for it,
I will come after you with what good fpeede
Our meanes will make vs meanes.

Gent. This Ile do for you.

Hel. And you fhall finde your felfe to be well thankt what e’re falles more. We muft to horfe againe, Go, go, prouide.

Enter Clo impe and Parraleet.

Par. Good Mr. Lawatch glue my Lord Laffw this letter,
I haue ere now fir beene better knowne to you, when I haue held familiaritie with frether cloathes: but I am now fir muddied in fortunes mood, and smell somewhat frong of her ftrong defpine.

Cla. Truly, Fortunes defpine is but fluttif if it smell fo strongly as thou fpakeft of: I will henceforth eate no Fift of Fortunes butting. Pre thee allow the wonde.

Par. Nay you neede not to ftopp your nofe fir: I fpake but by a Metaphor.

Cla. Indeed fir, if your Metaphor flanke, I will stop my nofe, or againfit any mans Metaphor.Prette get thee further.

Par.
All's Well that ends Well.

Par. Pray you sir deliver me this paper.
Cla. Foh, prethee stand away: a paper from fortunes close-stool, to glue to a Nobleman. Looke heere he comes himselfe.

Enter Lafew.

Cla. Heere is a purre of Fortunes fir, or of Fortunes Cat, but not a Mufcat, that ha's faile into the vncleane fift-pond of her difpleaure, and as he fayes is muddied withal. Pray you fir, we the Carpe as you may, for he lookes like a poore decayed, ingenuous, foolifh, rafely knaue. I doe pitie his diftreffe in my smoles of comfort, and lease him to your Lordship.
Par. My Lord I am a man whom fortune hath cruel-ly scratched.
Laf. And what would you have me to doe? 'Tis too late topare her nails now. Wherein haue you the knaue with fortune that the should scratch you, who of her felfe is a good Lady, and would not have knaues thriue long vnder? There's a Carducce for you: Let the Lufkes make you and fortune friends; I am for other buffete.
Par. I beseech your honour to heare mee one fingle word.
Laf. you begge a fingle penye more? Come you shall ha', faue your word.
Par. My name my good Lord is Parnalles.
Laf. You begge more then word then. Cox my passion, give me your hand: How does your drumme?
Par. O my good Lord, you were the first that found mee.
Laf. Was I insothe? And I was the first that left thee. Par. It lies in your my Lord to bring me in some grace for you did bring mee out.
Laf. Out upon thee knaue, doeft thou put upon mee at once both the office of God and the diuell: one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. The Kings comming I know by his Trumpets. Sirrah, inquire further after me, I had tale of you last night, though you are a foule and a knaue, you shall eate, go too, follow.
Par. I praffe God for you.

Flourish. Enter King,old Lady, Laffew, the two French Lords,with attendants.
Kin. We loft a Jewell of her, and our effetemne Was made much poorer by it: but your sonne, As mad in folly, lack'd the fence to know Her estimation home.
Old L. 'Tis paff my Liege,
And I beseech your Maiestie to make it Naturall rebellion, done I'th blade of youth, When oyle and fire, too strong for reafons force, Ore-bears it, and burns on.
Kin. My honour'd Lady, I haue forgiven and forgotten all, Though my revenues were high bent vpon him, And watch'd the time to shooe.
Laff. This I must say,
But firft I begge my pardon: the yong Lord Did to his Maiestie, his Mother, and his Lady, Offence of mighty note; but to himselfe
The greatest wrong of all. He loft a wife, Whole beauty did aboue the furuey Of richest els: whose words all eares tooke captiuie, Whole deere perfeccion, hearts that scorn'd to ftrue, Humbly call'd Miftiris.
Kin. Praifing what is loft,
Makes the remembrance deere. Well, call him hither,
We are reconcl'fd, and the firft view shall kill
All repetition: Let him not take our pardon,
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper then oblivion, we do bury Th'incenfing reliques of it. Let him approach
A stranger, no offender; and informe him
So 'tis our will he should.
Gen. I shall my Liege.
Kin. What faies he to your daughter,
Have you spoke?
Laf. All that he is, hath reference to your Highnes.
Kin. Then shall we have a match. I haue letters fent me, that lets him high in fame.

Enter Count Bertram.
Laf. He looks well on't.
Kin. I am not a day of seafon,
For thou haile fay a fun-string, and a haile
In me at once: But to thebrightest bemes
Dilbracked clouds glue wayes, to fland thou forth,
The time is faire againe.
Ber. My high repented blame
Deere Soueraigne pardon to me.
Kin. All is whole,
Not one word more of the conformed time,
Let's take the infant by the forward top:
For we are old, and on our quick't decrees
Thinaudible, and noifelesse foot of time
Steeles, ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this Lord?
Ber. Admiringly my Liege, at firft
I fuckle my choice vpon her, ere my heart
Darft make too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the imprifion of mine eye enfuing,
Contempt his scornfull Peripetide did lend mee,
Which warrt the line, of euerie other favour,
Scorn'd a faire colour, or expret it fholne,
Extended or contracted all proportions
To a moit hideous obiect. Thence it came,
That fhe whom all men prai'd, and whom my selfe,
Since I haue loft, haue lou'd was in mine eye
The duft that did offend it.
Kin. Well excu's: That thou dift love her, strikes fome scores away
From the great compt: but loue that comes too late,
Like a remorfefull pardon flowly carried
To the great tender, turns a fowre offence,
Crying, that good's that gone: Our rath faults,
Make trueilall price of ferior things we haue,
Not knowing them, vntill we know their graue.
Oft our difpleaures to our felues vnbelt,
Destroy our friends, and efter wepe their duft:
Our owne loue waking, cries to fee what's don,e
While flamefull hate fleepes out the afternoone.
Be this sweet Helena knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for faire Maudlin,
The malne contents are had, and heere wee'l Rey
To fee our widowers fecound marriage day:
Which better then the firft, O deere heavens bleffe,
Or, ere they meete in me, O Nature ceffe.
Laf. Come on my fonne, in whom my houses name
Must be digget: give a favoure from you
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,
That she may quickly come. By my old beard, And eu'r'ie haire that's on't, Helen that's dead Was a sweet creature: such a ring as this, The laft that ere I tooke her leave at Court, I faw upon her finger.

Ber. Her it was not.

King. Now pray you let me fee it. For mine eye, While I was speaking, oft was fatten'd too't: This Ring was mine, and when I gave it Helen, I had her if her fortunes ever ftood Neceffitated to help, that by this token I would releafe her. Had you that craft to raife her Of what fhould fear her moit?

Ber. My gracious Soueraigne, How ere it pleases you to take it fo, The ring was never hers.

Old La. Sonne, on my life I have feene her weare it, and the reckond it At her fures rate.

Laf. I am sure I faw her weare it,

Ber. You are deceiv'd my Lord, the neuer faw it: In Florence it was from a caufement throwne mee, Wrap'd in a paper, which contain'd the name Of her that throw'd it: Noble she was, and thought I fould ingag'd: but when I had fubcerib'd To mine owne fortune, and inform'd her fully, I could not anfwier in that courfe of Honour As the had made the oueriere, the caeft In heauie faftidence, and would neuer Recelue the Ring againe.

Kin. Prates himfelf, That knowes the uncf and multiplying med'cine, Hath not in natures myfterie more fience, Then I have in this Ring. "Twas mine, "twa Helen's, Who euer gaue it you: then if you know That you are well acquainted with your felfes, Confeife 'twas here, and by what rough enforcement You got it from her. She call'd the Saints to furetie, That fhe neuer put it from her finger, Vnleffe the gaue it to your felfe in bed, Where you have neuer come: or fent it vs Upon her great diliffer.

Ber. She neuer faw it.

Kin. Thou fpier'st it falfeley: as I love mine Honor, And make't connetturall feares to come into me, Which I would faine that out, if it fhould prove That thou art fo imaftone, 'twill not prove fo: And yet I know not, thou didft hate her deadly, And she is dead, which nothing but to clofe Her eyes my felle, could win me to beleuee, More then to fee this Ring. Take him away, My fore-paff proofs, how ere the matter fall Shall taze my feares of little vanitie, Having vainly fear'd too little. Away with him, We'll lift this matter further.

Ber. If thou fhall proue This Ring was eu'r hers, you fhall eafe eafe

You that I had fubfter'd her bed in Florence, Where yet the neuer was.

Enter a Gentleman.

King. I am wrap'd in difmiffal thinking.

Gen. Gracious Soueraigne.

Whether I have beene too blame or no, I know not, Here's a petition from a Florence, Who hath for oure or flee remoymes come flor, To tender it her felle. I vndertook it, Vanquifh'd thereto by the faire grace and speech Of the poore fulplicant, who by this I know Is here attending: her baflneffe lookes in her With an importinge vilage, and the told me In a sweet verball breves, it did conceerne Your Highneffe with her felle.

A Letter.

Upon his many pretentions to married mee when his wife was dead, I vblift to fay it, he ronne me.Now is the Count Roff- fillian a Widdower, his wives are forfited to mee, and my boners payed to him. Her fide from Florence, taking no leaves, and I follow him to his Countrie for Juflitce: Grant it me, O King, in you it left lies, otherwise my feeft, and a poore Maid's wondres.

Diana Capilet.

Laf. I will buy me a fonne in Law in a faire, and toule for this. Hee none of him.

Kin. The heavenes have thought well on thee Laffeu, To bring forth this difcou'rie, feke thee futors: Go speedily, and bring againe the Count.

Enter Bertram.

I am a-feard the life of Helen (Ladie) Was fowly snatcht.

Old La. Now fuffice on the dons.

King. I wonder fit, fit, whies are monfetors to you, And that you fley them as you fware them Lordship, Yet you defire to marry. What woman's that?

Enter Widdowe, Diana, and Parrelle.

Dia. I am my Lord a wretched Florentine, Derided from the ancient Capilet, My fuite as I do vnderfand you know, And therefore know how farre I may be pittied.

Wid. I am her Mother fit, whole age and honour Both fuffer vnder this complaint we bring, And both fhall ceafe, without your remeide.

King. Come hether Count, do you know thefe Wo men?

Ber. My Lord, I neither can nor will denie, But that I know them, do they charge me further ?

Dia. Why do you looke fo ftrange upon your wife ?

Ber. She's none of mine my Lord.

Dia. If you fhall marrie

You give away this hand, and that is mine, You give away heauens vows, and thofe are mine: You give away my felle, which is knowne mine:

For I by you am fo embodi'd you, That the which marrie you, must marrie me, Either both or none.

Laf. Your reputation comes too fhort for my daught er, you are no husband for her.

Ber. My Lord, this is a fond and defperate creature, Whom sometime I have laugh'd with: Let your highnes Lay a more noble thought vpon mine honour, Then for to thinke that I would finke it heere.

Kin. Sir for my thoughts, you haue them il to friend, Till your deeds gaine them fairer: prove your honor, Then in my thought it lies.

Dia. Good my Lord,

Aske him upon his oath, if hee doe think
He had not my virginity.

Kin. What lafit thou to her ?

Ber. She's impudent my Lord,

And was a common gamefter to the Campe.

Dia. He do's me wrong my Lord: If I were fo, He might have bought me at a common price.

Do
Do not believe him. O behold this Ring, Whose high respect and rich validity Did lack a Parallel; yet for all that He gave it to a Commoner a'th Campe If it be one.

Cow. He blushes, and 'tis hid:
Of fice preceding Ancestors, that lemmem Conferr'd by testament to'th frequent iufe Hath it beene owne and worene. This is his wife, That Ring's a thousand proofs,

Kin. Me thought you false
You saw one heere in Court could witnesse it.

Dis. I did my Lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument, his names Parolas.

Laf. I faw the man to day, if man he bee.

Kin. Find him, and bring him hether.

Rej. What of him?
He's quoted for a moft pe fidious flaus
With all the spots a'th world, tuxt and debo'd,
Whoe nature lickens: but to ipeak a truth,
Am I, or that or this for what he'lt vitter,
That will ipeak any thing.

Kin. She hath that Ring of yours.

Rej. I think she has; certaine it is I lyk'd her,
And boorded her i'th wanton way of youth:
She knew her difance, and did angle for mee,
Madding my eugerneffe with her reftraint,
As all impediments in fancies coure.
Are motuies of more fancie, and in fine,
Her inuite comming with her moderne grace,
Subdue'd me to her rate, she got the Ring,
And I had that which any inferior might
At Market price have bought.

Dis. I must be patient:
You that haue turn'd off a first fo noble wife,
May luftly dyet me. I pray you yet,
(Since you lacke vertue, I will loofe a husband)
Send for your Ring, I will returne it home,
And give me mine againe.

Rej. I haue it not.

Kin. What Ring was yours I pray you?

Dis. Sir much like the fame upon your finger.

Kin. I know you this Ring, this Ring was his of late.

Dis. And this was it I gave him being a bed.

Kin. Thestory then goes falls, you threw it him
Out of a Cafeinent.

Dis. I haue ipeak the truth. Enter Parolas.

Rej. My Lord, I do confesse the ring was hers.

Kin. You boggle thereby, every feather flars you:
Is this the man you speake of?

Dis. I, my Lord.

Kin. Tell me firrah, but tell me true I charge you,
Not fearing the difpleasure of your master:
Which on your iuft proceeding, Ile keepe off,
By him and by this woman heere, what know you?

Par. So pleafe your Maffefty, my master hath bin an honourable Gentleman. Trickes hee hath had in him, which Gentlemen haue.

Kin. Come, come, to'th purpofe: Did hee love this woman?

Par. Faith fir he did loue her, but how.

Kin. How I prays you?

Par. He did loue her fir, as a Gent. loues a Woman.

Kin. How is that?

Par. He lou'd her fir, and lou'd her not.

Kin. As thou art a knaue and no knaue, what an equiuall Companion is this?

Par. I am a poore man, and at your Maleficies comman'd.

Laf. He's a good drumme my Lord, but a naughtie Oxeter.

Dis. Do you know he promitt me marriage?

Par. Faith I know more then lie ipeak.

Kin. But wilt thou not ipeak all thou know'ft?

Par. Yes fo plae ye your Malefity: I did goe betwixheen them as I said, but more then that he loved her, for in deede he was made for her, and talk'd of Sathan, and of Limbo, and of Furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knewe of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promizing her marriage, and things which would derue mee ill will to ipeak of, therefore I will not ipeak what I know.

Kin. Thou haft spoken all already, vnaileth thou canst say they are mariet, but thou art too fine in thy eudence, therefore stand aside. This Ring you fay was yours.

Dis. I my good Lord.

Kin. Where did you buy it? Or who gaued it you?

Dis. It was not gauen me, nor I did not buy it.

Kin. Who lent it you?

Dis. It was not lent me neither.

Kin. Where did you finde it then?

Dis. I found it not.

Kin. If it were yours by none of all these ways,

How could you gie it him?

Dis. I never gaued it him.

Laf. This womans an eafe gloue my Lord, she goes off and on at pleasure.

Kin. This Ring was mine, I gaued it his firft wife.

Dis. It might be yours or hers for ought I know,

Kin. Take her away, I do not like her now,

To prizon with her: and away with him,

Vnaileth thou tellt me where thou hadit this Ring,

Thou dieft within this houre.

Dis. Ile never tell you.

Kin. Take her away.

Dis. Ile put in baile my lidge.

Kin. I think thee now some common Customer.

Dis. By lofe if ever I knew man 'twas you.

Kin. Wherefore haft thou accufed him at this while.

Dis. Because he's gullie, and he is not guilty:

He knowes I am no Maid, and he'll iware too:

He iware I am a Maid, and he knowes not.

Great King I am no bern ppt, by my life, .
I am either Maid, or else this old mans wife.

Kin. She does abuse our ears, to prizon with her.

Dis. Good mother fetch my bayle. Stay Royall fir,

The jeweller that owes the Ring is fent for,
And he shall furtey me. But for this Lord,

Who hath abus'd me as he knowes himselfe,
Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him.

He knowes himselfe my bed he hath defil'd,

And at that time he got his wife with childe:

Dead though the be, she feales her yong one kicke:
So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quicke,

And now behold the meaning.

Enter Hellen and Widower.

Kin. Is there no exorclit?

Beguiles the truer Office of mine eyes?

It's realt that I fee?

Hel. No my good Lord,
‘Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,
The name, and not the thing.

Ref. Both, both, O pardon.

Hel. Oh my good Lord, when I was like this Maid,
I found you wondrous kind, there is your Ring,
And looke you, here is your letter: this it fayes,
When from my finger you can get this Ring,
And is by me with childe, &c. This is done,
Will you be mine now you are doubly wonne?

Ref. If she my Liege can make me know this clearly,
I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appeareth not plaine, and profe vtrue,
Deadly divorce step betweene me and you.
O my deere mother do I see you living?

Laf. Mine eyes smell Onions, I shall wepe anon:
Good Tom Drumme lend me a handkercher.
So I thanke thee, waite on me home, I'll make sport with thee:
Let thy curtifies alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let vs from point to point this storie know,
To make the euen truth in pleasure flow:
If thou beeft yet a fresh vnropped flower,
Choose thou thy husband, and Ile pay thy dower.
For I can guffe, that by thy honest aye,
Thou keipt a wife her selfe, thy selfe a Maide.
Of that and all the progresse more and leffe,
Refolduly more leasure shall expresse:
All yet seemes well, and if it end fo meece,
The bitter paue, more welcome is the sweet.

Flourish.

He Kings a Beggar, now the Play is done,
All is well ended, if this suite be vone
That you expresse Content: which we will pay,
With drif to please you, day exceeding day:
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts,
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts. Exeunt omn.
Twelfth Night, Or What You Will.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Enter Orsino Duke of Illyria, Curio, and other Lords.

Duke.
An F Musicke be the food of Loure, play on, Glue me excelle of it: that surfeiting, The appetite may sicken, and so dye. That gladne aser, it had a dying fall: O, it came on my care, like the sweet found That breathes upon a bank of Violets; Steling, and gulling Odour. Enough, no more, 'Tis not so sweet now, as it was before. O spirit of Loure, how quicke and fresh art thou, That notwithstanding thy capacite, Receiveth as the Sea. Nought enters there, Of what validity, and pitch so ere, But falls into abatement, and low price Even in a minute; so full of shapes is fancie, That it alone, is high fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt my Lord?

Du. What Curio?

Cur. The Hart.

Du. Why so I do, the Noblest that I have: O when mine eyes did fee Oliue first, Me thought the purd 'tis the syre of peffilence; That infant was I turn'd into a Hart, And my desires like fell and cruel hounds, Ere since pursu me. How now what newes from her?

Enter Valentine.

Val. So pleafe my Lord, I might not be admitted, But from her handmaid do returne this answer: The Element it selfe, till feuen yeares heste, Shall not behold her face at ample view: But like a Cloytreff she will vailed walke, And water once a day her Chamber round With eye-offending brine: all this to feafon A brothers dead lour, which she would keep to preh And laffing, in her fad remembrance.

Du. O fhe that hath a heart of that fine frame To pay this debt of loue but to a brother, How wil the loue, when the rich golden shaft Hath kill'd the flocke of all affections elfe That liue in her. When Luer, Braine, and Heart, These foueraine thrones, are all supply'd and fill'd Her sweete perfessions with one felfe King: Away before me, to sweet beds of Flowers, Lost-thoughts lye rich, when canopy'd with bowers.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola, a Captaine, and Saylers.

Vio. What Country (Friends) is this?

Cap. This is Illyria Ladie.

Vio. And what Should I do in Illyria?

Cap. My brother he is in Elflum, Perchance he is not drown'd: What think you saylors?

Cap. It is perchance that you your felde were faued.

Vio. O my poor brother, and so perchance may he be.

Cap. True Madam, and to comfort you with chance, Affure your felde, after our ship did split, When you, and those poor number faued with you, Hung on our diuing boates: I saw your brother

Mott prouident in perill, binde himselfe, (Courage and hope both teaching him the practive) To a fittong Maife, that liu'd upon the fca: Where like Orien on the Dolphins backe, I faw him hold acquaintance with the waues,

So long as I could fee.

Vio. For saying fo, there's Gold:

Mine owne eftape vnfoldeth to my hope, Whereto thy fpeech ferves for authority The like of him. Know'st thou this Countrie?

Cap. I Madam well, for I was-bred and borne Not three hours trauailing from this very place:

Vio. Who gouernes here?

Cap. A noble Duke in nature, as in name.

Vio. What is his name?

Cap. Orsino.

Vio. Orsino: I have heard my father name him.

He was a Batcheller then.

Cap. And fo is now, or was fo very late:

For but a month ago I went from hence, And then 'twas fresh in murmure (as you know What great ones do, the leffe will prattle of,) That he did fecke the loue of fair Oliue.

Vio. What's theee?

Cap. A vertuous maid, the daughter of a Count That didl some twelvemonth since, then leaving her In the protection of his fonne, her brother, Who shortly alfo died: for whose deere loue (They fay) she hath abjur'd the light

And company of men.

Vio. O that I faw'd that Lady, And might not be deliered to the world
Till I had made mine owne occasion mellow
What my estate is.

C. That were hard to compare,
Because she will adm't no kind of suite,
No, not the Dukes.

P. There is a faire behavioir in thee Captaine,
And though that nature, with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution: yet of thee
I will believe thou hast a minde that suits
With this thy faire and outward character.
I prethee (and I Ie pay thee bounteously)
Conceale me what I am, and be my aye,
For such disguife as happy shall become
The forme of my intent. Ilke heres this Duke,
Thou shalt present me as an Eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy pains: for I can sing,
And speake to him in many forts of Musick,
That will allow me very worth his seruice.
What else but hap, to time I will commit,
Only shewe thou thy silence to my wit.

C. Be you his Eunuch, and your Mute Ile bee,
When my tongue blags, then let mine eyes not see.
Oh. I thankke thee: Lead me on.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague meanes my Neece to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure cares an enemie to life.

Mar. By my troth Sir Toby, you must come in earlier a night: your Cofin, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

To. Why let her except, before excepted.

Mar. I, but you must confine your selfe within the modest limits of order.

To. Confine? Ile confine my selfe no finer then I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in, and so bee their boots coon: and they be not, let them hang themselues in their owne fraps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will vndoe you: I heard my Lady talce of it yesterday: and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here, to be hir woer.

To. Who, Sir Andrew Ague-cheke?

Mar. I he.

To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to th' purposes?

To. Why he ha's three thousand ducates a yeare.

Mar. I, but he'll have but a yeare in all these ducates: He's a very fool, and a prodigall.

To. Fle, that you say so: he plays o'th Viol-de-gamboys, and speakes three or four languages word for word without bookes, & hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath indeed, almost naturall: for besides that he's a foole, he's a great quarreller: and but that he hath the gift of a Coward, to alay the guft he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent, he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

To. By this hand they are scoundrels and subfra-thers that say fo of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add moreau, he's drunke nightly in your company.

To. With drinking healths to my Neece: Ile drinke to her as long as there is a passage in my throat, & drinke in Illyria: he's a Coward and a Coytrill that will not drinke to my Neece. till his brestes turne o'th too, like a parish top. What wench? Castiliano waggeth here comes Sir Andrew Agueface.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. Sir Toby Belch. How now sir Toby Belch?

To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

And. Bleffe you faire Shrew.

Mar. And you too Sir.

To. Acquost Sir Andrew, acquost.

And. What's that?

To. My Neces Chamber-maid.

Mar. My name is Mary Sir.

And. Good Milthias Mary, acquost.

To. You militeake knight: Acquost, is front her, boord her, woe her, affyle her.

And. By my troth I would not undertake her in this company, Is that the meaning of Acquost?

Mar. Far you well Gentlemen.

To. And thou let part so Sir Andrew, would thou mightest never draw sword agen.

And. And you parti milthias, I would I might never draw sword agen: Faire Lady, do you think you have foole in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you by'h hand.

An. Marry but you shall have, and heeres my hand.

Mar. Now sir, thought is free: I pray you bring your hand to the Bottrye barre, and let it drinke.

An. Wherefore (sweet-heart) What's your Metaphor?

Mar. It's dry sir.

And. Why I thinke fo: I am not such an affe, but I can keepe my hand dry. But what's your left?

Mar. A dry left Sir.

And. Are you full of them?

Mar. I Sir, I have them at my fingers ends: marry now I let you go your hand, I am barren.

Exit Maria.

To. O knyght, thou lack't a cup of Camariewhen did I fee thee fo put downe?

An. Neuer in your life I thinke, vnlffe you see Caarie put me downe: mee thinkes sometyme I have no more wit then a Christian, or an ordinary man ha's: but I am a great eater of beeves, and I beleue that does harme to my wit.

To. No question.

An. And I thought that I'd forswear it. Ile ride home to morrow Sir Toby.

To. Pur-say my deere knyght?

An. What is pur-say? Do, or not do I would I had belowe that time in the tongwes, that I hauie in fencing dancing, and bear-quatting: O had I but followed the Arts.

To. Then hadst thou an excellent head of haires.

An. Why, would that hauie mended my hairis?

To. Pait question, for thou feell wilt it not coole my An. But it becomes we wel enoue, dott not (nature

To. Excellent, it hangs like flax on a diffise: & I hope to see a hwufwe take thee between her legs, & spin it off.

An. Faith Ile home to morrow Sir Toby, your niece wil not be ferre, or if she be it's four to one, the I'one of me: the Count himselfe here hard by, woces her.

To. She's! none o'th Count, she's! not mauch above his degree, neither in eftate, years, nor wit: I hauie heard her feear't. Tut there's life in man.

And.
And. I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow o'th strangest minde, I think; I delight in Mists and Resoms time[some]t[s] altogether.
Te. Art thou good at thefe kicke-chawes Knight?
And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, vnder the degree of my betters, & yet I will not compare with an old man.
To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?
And. Faith, I can cut a caper.
To. And I can cut the Mutton too't.
And. And I think he have the backe-trike, simply as strong as any man in Illyria.
To. Wherefore are these things bid? Wherefore have these gifts a Curtaine before 'em? Are they like to take dult, like miffis Maf's picture? Why dost thou not go to Church in a Galliard, and come home in a Carranto?
My verie walke shold be a ligge; I would not go so much as make water but in a Sinke-a-space: What doest thou meanes? Is it a world to hide virtues in? I did thinke by the excellent constitution of thy legge, it was form'd under the share of a Galliard.
And. I, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a dam'd colour'd stocke. Shall we fit about some Reuels?
To. What shal we do else: we were not borne under Taurus?
And. Taurus! That fides and heart.
To. No fir, it is legs and thighs: let me see thee caper. Ha, higher ha, ha, excellent.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, and Viola in masque attire.
Val. If the Duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be more aduan'de, he hath known you but three dayes, and already you are no stranger.
Vis. You either feare his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Is he inconfiant fir, in his favours, Val. No beleue me.
Enter Duke, Caro, and Attendants.
Vis. I thank you, sir, a pretty youth. Cesario,
Thou knowest no leffe, but all: I haue vnaclad'd
To thee the booke even of my secret foule.
Therefore good youth, address thy gate unto her,
Be not demie accesse, stand at her doores,
And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow
Till thou have audience.
Val. Sure my Noble Lord,
If the be fo abandon'd to her sorrow
As it is sloppy, the newer will admit me.
Duc. Be damorous, and leape all ciull bounds,
Rather then make unprofited returnes.
Vis. Say I do speake with her (my Lord) what then?
Duc. Or then, unfold the passion of my love,
Surprize her with discourse of my deere faith;
It shall become thee well to act my woes:
She will attend it better in thy youth,
Then in a Nunbo's of more graue affect.
Vis. I thinke not so, my Lord.
Duc. Dierre Lady, beleue it;
As there is no true Cockold but calamy, so beauties a flower; The Lady bad take away the foole, therefore I say againe, take her away.

Ol. Sir, I bad them take away you.

Cl. Mifprifion in the highest degree. Lady, CaluIus non facit monachum: that’s as much to say, as I were not motley in my braine: good Madona, give mee leave to prooue you a foole.

Ol. Can you do it?

Cl. Dexteroosly, good Madona.

Ol. Make your proofs.

Cl. I must catechize you for it Madona, Good my Moule of vertue anwer mee.

Ol. Well sir, for want of other idlenefs, I bide your paffe.

Cl. Good Madona, why mournft thou?

Ol. Good foole, for my brothers death.

Cl. I think his foole is in hell, Madona.

Ol. I know his foole is in heauen, foole.

Cl. The more foole (Madona) to mourne for your brothre foole, being in heauen. Take away the Foole, Gentlemen.

Ol. What thinke you of this foole Maluolio, doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes, and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: Infirmity that daeces the wife, doth ever make the better foole.

Clow. God fend you sir, a speadie Incrinfity, for the better increaing your folly: Sir Tody will be Iworn that I am no Fox, but he will not parfe his word for two pence that you are no Foole.

Ol. How fay you to that Maluolio?

Mal. I maruell your Ladyship takes delight in fuch a barren refall: I faw him put down the other day, with an ordinar foole, that has no more braine then a flone. Looke you now, he’s out of his gard already: ymles you laugh and minifter occafion to him, he is gag’d. I profeft I take their Witjemen, that crow fo at these let kindes of fooles, no better then the fooles Zanies.

Ol. O you are fickes of felfe-love Maluolio, and taife with a diftemper’d appetit. To be generous, guitleffe, and of free difpofition, is to take thofe things for Bird-bolts, that you demean Cannon bullets: There is no flander in an allow’d foole, though he do nothing but rayle; nor no rayling, in a knowne diffcruet man, though hee do nothing but reprooue.

Cl. Now Mercury induc thee with leafeing, for thou fpeak’st well of foole.

Enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate, a young Gentleman, much defires to speake with you.

Ol. From the Count Orfeno, is it?

Mal. I know not (Madam) ‘tis a faire young man, and well attended.

Ol. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Mrs. Sir Tody Madam, your kinffman.

Ol. Fetch him off I pray you, he spoakes nothing but madman: Fie on him. Go you Maluolio: If it be a fuit from the Count, I am fick, or not at home. What you will, to difminife it.

Exit Maluolio. Now you fee fir, how your fouling growes old, & people diflike it.

Cl. Thou haft spoke for vs (Madona) as if thy eldeft fonne should be a foole who fea fcul, loose cramme with braines, for heere he comes. Enter Sir Tody.

One of thy kin has a moft weake Pin-mater.

Ol. By mine honor halfe drunke. What is he at the gate Cosin?

To. A Gentleman.

Ol. A Gentleman? What Gentleman?

To. ’Tis a Gentleman here. A plaige o’thefe pickle herring: How now Sot.

Cl. Good Sir Toby.

Ol. Cosin, Cosin, how haue you come fo early by this Lethargy?

To. Letcherie, I defe Letchery: there’s one at the gate.

Ol. I marry, what is he?

To. Let him be the diuell and he will, I care not: give me faith fy I. Well, it’s all one.

Ol. What’s a drunken man like, foole?

Cl. Like a drown’d man, a foole, and a madde man: One draught abowe hette, makes him a foole, the second maddes him, and a third drownes him.

Ol. Go thou and fecke the Crownr, and let him fitte o’my Coze: for he’s in the third degree of drinke: hee’s drown’d! Go looke after him.

Cl. He is but mad yet Madona, and the foole shall looke to the madman.

Enter Maluolio.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow sweares hee will speake with you. I told him you were fickes, he takes on him to vnderfand fo much, and therefore comes to speake with you. I told him you were afleepe, he seems to haue a fore knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speake with you. What is to be fald to him Ladie, hee’s fortified against any deniall.

Ol. Tell him, he shall not speake with me.

Mal. Ha’s beene told fo: and hee fayes hee’ll fland at your doore like a Sheriffs poit, and be the supporter to a bench, but hee’ll speake with you.

Ol. What kinde o’man is he?

Mal. Why of mankinde.

Ol. What manner of man?

Mal. Of verie ill manner: hee’ll speake with you, will you, or no.

Ol. Of what perfonage, and yeare is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy: as a speach is before th’ a peepid, o’r a Cordling when tis almoft an Apple: ’Tis with him in flanding wa- ter, betwene boy and man. He is verie well-fauour’d, and he speakes verie freewlfith: One would think his mothers milke were scarce out of him.

Ol. Let him approach: Call in my Gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my Lady calle.

Enter.

Ol. Glue me my valle: come throw it o’re my face, Wee’l once more heare Ofrino Embaffle.

Enter Violenta.

Vio. The honorable Ladie of the house, which is he?

Ol. Speake to me, I shall anwer for her: you will.

Vio. Most radiant, exquifite, and vnmatchable beau- tie. I pray you tell me if this bee the Lady of the house, for I never faw her. I would bee loath to caf away my speech: for botides that it is excellently well pend, I have taken great pains to con it. Good Beauties, let mee ftaiine no foonre; I am very compable, even to the leaft finifter vigne.

Ol. Whence came you sir?

Vio. I can fay little more then I have ftedied, & that question’s out of my part. Good gentle one, glue mee modell affurance, if you be the Ladie of the house, that may proceed in my speech.
Twelfth Night, or, What you will.

Ol. Are you a Comedian?

Vi. No my profound heart: and yet (by the very phanges of malice, I swear) I am not that I play. Are you the Ladie of the howe?

Ol. If I do not vforcer my selfe, I am.

Un. Most certain, if you are the, you do vsr your selfe: for what is yours to bostowe, is, not yours to reverse. But this is from my Commissiow I will on with my speech in your praise, and then shew you the heart of my meffage.

Ol. Come to what is important In't : I forgive you the praife.

Vi. Alas, I take great pains to fludie it, and 'tis Poeticall.

Ol. It is the more like to be feigned, I pray you keep it in. I heard you were fawcet at my gates, & allowed your approach rather to wonder at you, then to heare you. If you be not mad, be gone: if you have reason, be briefe:
'tis not that time of Moone with me, to make one in fo
skipping a Dialogue.

Ol. Will you hony fayle sir, here lies your way.

Vi. No good fawker, I am to hall here a little lon-
er. Some mollification for your Giant, sweete Ladie; tell me your minde, I am a meffenger.

Ol. Sure you have some hidusus matter to deliver, when the cuterfe of it is fo faare: Speake your office.

Vi. It alone concerns your care: I bring no overture of warre, no taxation of homage; I hold the Olyfe in my hand: my words are as full of peace, as matter.

Ol. Yet you began rudey. What are you?

What would you?

Vi. The rudenesse that hath appear'd in mee, haue I learn'd from my entretaiment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maiden-head : to your cares, Di-unity to any others, prophanation.

Ol. Glue vs the place alone,
We will hear this dijninite. Now fir, what is your text?

Vi. Moll sweet Ladie.

Ol. A comfortable doctrine, and much may bee fai'de of it. Where lies your Text?

Vi. In Offenses bosome.

Ol. In his bosome? In what chapter of his bosome?

Vi. To anwer by the method, in the fift of his hart.

Ol. O, I have read it: it is hereffe. Have you no more to fay?

Vi. Good Madam, let me fee your face.

Ol. Have you any Commiffion from your Lord, to negotiate with my face: you are now out of your Text: but we will draw the Curtain, and fiew you the picture.
Looke you fir, fuch a one I was this prefent: Ift not well done?

Un. Excellently done, if God did all.

Vi. 'Tis in graine fir, 'twill endure winde and weather.

Vi. 'Tis beauty truly bient, whose red and white,
Natures owne sweet, and cunning hand laid on:
Lady, you are the cruell'th flee aliae,
If you will leade thefes grace to the graue,
And leave the world no cope.

Ol. O fir, I will not be fo hard-hearted: I will give ouer divours ffeules of my beautie. It flable Incornered every particle and vftenile label'd to my will: As, item two lippes indiffer'dl different, Item two grey eyes,
with lid's to them: Item, one nocke, one chin, & forth.
Were you sent hither to praife me?

Vi. I fee you what you are, you are too proud:
But if you were the diuell, you are faire:
My Lord, and mafter loues you: O fuch loue
Could be but recompenc'd, though you were crown'd
The non-parell of beautie.

Ol. How does he loove me?

Vi. With adorations, fertiell teares,
With groanes that thundre loue, with fighes of fire.

Ol. Your Lord does know my mind, I cannot loove him
Yet I fuppose him vertuous, know him noble,
Of great estate, of fresh and staintiffe youth;
In voyces well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant,
And in dimension, and the shape of nature,
A graculous perfon: But yet I cannot loove him:
He might have tooke his anfwver long ago.

Vi. If I did loove you in my masters flame,
With fuch a fuddling, fuch a deadly life:
In your denail, I would finde no fence,
I would not vnderfand it.

Ol. Why, what would you?

Vi. Make me a willow Cabine at your gate,
And call vpon my foule within the howe,
Write loyall Cantons of contermined love,
And fing them lowd even in the dead of night:
Hallow your name to the reverberate hilles,
And make the babbling Gofsip of the aire,
Cry out Oladia: O you should not reft
Between the elements of ayre, and earth,
But you should pitice me.

Ol. You might do much:

What is your Parentage?

Vi. Above my fortunes, yet my fate is well:
I am a Gentleman.

Ol. Get you to your Lord:
I cannot loove him: let him fend no more,
Vnleffe (perchance) you come to me again,
To tell me how he takes it: Fare you well:
I thanke you for your pains: fend this for mee.

Vi. I am no feede pouf, Ladie; keepe your purf,
My Mafter, not my felfe, lacks recompence.
Lowe make his heart of flint, that you fhall love,
And let your tourer like my mafter be,
Plac'd in contempt: Farwell Fayre crueltie.

Ol. What is your Parentage?

Above my fortunes, yet my fate is well;
I am a Gentleman. Ile be fworne thou art,
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limhes, actions, and spirit,
Do glue thee fce-fold blazon: not too falt: soft, soft,
Vnleffe the Mafter were the man. How now?
Even fow quickely may one catch the plague?
Me thinkes I feele this youtha perfecions
With an infufible, and fubtle health.
To creepe in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.
What hoa, Malvolio.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Heere Madam, at your fervice.

Ol. Run after that fame peulish Meffenger
The Countes man: he let this Ring behinde him
Would I, or not: tell him, Ile none of it.
Defire him not to fatter with his Lord,
Nor hold him vp with hopes, I am not for him:
If that the youth will come this way to morrow,
Ile giue him reafons for't: hee thef Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will.

Ol. I do know not what, and feare to finde
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my minde.
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

Fate, shew thy force, our felues we do not owe,
What is decreed, must be: and this fo.
Find, Actus primus.

Actus Secundus, Scena prima.

Enter Antonio & Sebastian.

Ant. Will you stay no longer: nor will you not that I go with you.
Seb. By your patience, no: my flares shine darkely ouer me; the malignance of my fate, might perhaps distemper yours: therefore I shall crave of you your lease, that I may bear my eues alone. It were a bad recompence for your love, to lay any of them on you.
Ant. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.
Seb. No foot fir: my determinate voyage is meer crassasangan. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modestie, that you will not extort from me, what I am willing to keepe in: therefore it charges me in manners, the rather to express my selfe: you must know of mee then Antonio, my name is Sebastian (which I call'd Rodo-rigo) my father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom I know you have heard of. He left behind him, my felo's, and a fitter, both borne in an houre: if the Heavens had beene pleas'd, would we had so ended. But you fir, alter'd that, for some houre before you tooke me from the breath of the fea, was my fitter drown'd.
Ant. Alas the day.
Seb. A Lady fir, though it was fald fece much remem-bled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: but thogh
I could not with such eflimable wonder ouer-farre beleeue that, yet thus farre I will boldly publie her, fece bore a minde that enoy could not but call faire: Shoe is drown'd already fir with falt water, though I feeme to drowne her remembrance againe with more.
Ant. Pardon me fir, your bad entertainement.
Seb. O good Antonio, forgiue me your trouble.
Ant. If you will not murther me for my love, let me be your fermanant.
Seb. If you will not vnde what you have done, that is kill him, whom you have recouer'd, defire it not. Fare ye well at once, my boforme is full of kindnesse, and I am yet fo neere the manners of my mother, that vpon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me: I am bound to the Count Orinno's Court, farewell.
Exit.
Ant. The gentlenesse of all the gods go with thee:
I have many enemies in Orinno's Court,
Elfe would I very shortly fee thee there:
But come what may, I do adore thee fo.
That danger shall feeme sport, and I will go.
Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola and Malvolio, at several doors.
Mal. Were not you eu'n now, with the Countesse Olivia?
Vio. Even now fir, on a moderate pace, I have since arrived but hither.
Mal. She returns this Ring to you (fir) you might have faued mee my paines, to haue taken it away your felle. She adds moreover, that you should put your Lord to into a desperat affurance, she will none of him. And one thing more, that you be never so hardie to come againe in his affaires, vnlesse it bee to report your Lords taking of this: recieve it fo.
Vio. She tooke the Ring of me, Ile none of it.
Mal. Come fir, you peculiarly threw it to her: and her will is, it should be fo return'd: If it bee worth roo-ping for, there it lies, in your eye: if not, bee it his that finds it.
Exit.
Vio. I left no Ring with her: what means this Lady?
Fortune forbid my out-side haue not charmed her:
She made good view of me, indeed so much,
That me thought her eyes had loft her tongue,
For she did speake in startes distractedly.
She loues me sure, the cunning of her paffion invites me in this churlish messenger:
None of my Lord's Ring? Why he sent her none;
I am the man, if it be fo, as tis,
Poore Lady, she were better loue a dreame:
Diligile, I fee thou art a wickedneffe,
Wherein the present enemie does much.
How eafe is It, for the proper fals.
In womans waxen hearts to fet their formes:
Alas, O fruittie is the caufe, not wee,
For such as we are made, if fuch we bee:
How will this fudge? My mater loues her dearely,
And I (poore moniter) fond affmuch on him:
And the (mistaken) seemes to dote on me:
What will become of this? As I am man,
My fute is desperat for my malters loue:
What thristie fighes fell poore Olive breath?
O time, thou must vsntangle this, not I,
It is too hard a knot for me vntnyt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.
To. Approach Sir Andrew: not to bee a bedde after night, is to be vp betimes, and Delicous sufferers, thou know't.
And. Nay by my troth I know not: but I know, to be vp late, is to be vp late.
To. A faire conclusion: I hate it as an vnkind Canne.
To be vp after midnight, and to goe to bed then is early:
fo that to goe to bed after midnight, Is to goe to bed betimes. Does not our liues conclus of the foure Elements?
And. Faith so they say, but I thinke it rather comitts of eating and drinking.
To. Th'art a scholler; let vs therefore eate and drinke.
Marian I say, a floupe of wine.
Enter Cleora.
And. Here comes the foole yfaith.
Cla. How now my harris: Did you never see the Picture of we three?
To. Welcome affe, now let's have a catch.
And. By my troth the foole has an excellent breath. I had rather then forty shillinges I had such a legge, and fo sweet a breath to finge, as the foole has. Inforth thou wau in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spok'ft of Firuggomius, of the Ugians paling the Equinoctial of Laubus: twas very good yfaith: I lent thee fixed pence for 260

Twelve Night, or What you will.

for thy Lemon, hadst it?
Clo. I did impetico thy gratillity: for Malvolio nose is no Whiptocke. My Lady has a white hand, and the Meridmons are no bottle-ale houses.
An. Excellent: Why is this the best footing, when all is done. Now a song.
To. Come on, there is five pence for you. Let's have a song.
An. There's a tearful of me too: if one knight give a Clo. Would you have a lone-song, or a song of good life?
To. A lone song, a lone song.
An. I, I. I care not for good life.
Clowne sings.
O Miftris mine wherebe are you roning?
O flay and breers, your true loues coming,
That can fang both high and low.
Trip no further prettie sweetening:
Journeys end in hours meeting,
Every wife mans some doe know.
An. Excellent good, if faith.
To. Good, good.
Clo. What is loue, to not hereafter,
Prefent mirth, bath prefent laughter:
What's to come, be fill enmore.
In delay there lies no plated,
Then come kift me most and twirse:
Tender a fluff will not endure.
An. A mellifluous voyce, as I am true knight.
To. A contagious breath.
An. Very sweet, and contagious ifath.
To. To hear by the noyce, it is dolcot in contagion.
But shall we make the Walkin dance indeed? Shall we rowe the night Oswale in a Catch, that will drawe three foules out of one Wesuer? Shall we do that?
And. And you love me, let's do't: I am dogge at a Catch.
Clo. Byralady fir, and some dogs will catch well.
An. Most ceresane: Let our Catch be, Thou Knaue.
Clo. Hold thy peace, thou Knaue knight. I shall be constrein'd in't, to call thee knaue, Knight.
An. 'Ts not the first time I have constrained one to call me knaue. Begin foote: it begins hold thy peace.
Clo. I shall neuer begin if I hold my peace.
An. Good ifath: Come begin. Catch Sing Enter Mars.
Mar. What a catterwalling doe you keepe here? If my Lady had not call'd vp her Steward Malvolio, and bid him turne you out of dooors, neuer trust me.
To. My Lady's a Catayan, we are politicians, Malvolio a Pea-ga-name, and These merry men be vee. Am not I confanguinious? Am I not of her blood: tilly vally. Lady, There dwelt a man in Babylon, Babyon, Lady. Clo. Behrow me, the knights in admirable footing.
An. I, he deue me enough if he be fippo'd, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.
To. O the twelfe day of December.
Mar. For the lone O God peace.
Enter Malvolio.
"Mal. My matters are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gibble like tinkers at this time of night? Do you make an Alehouse of my Ladies house, that ye squeak out your Cooziers Catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?"

To. We did keepe time fir in our Catches. Snecke vp.
Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My Lady bad me tell you, that though the harbors you as her kinbman, she's nothing ally'd to your disorders. If you can separate your sale and your midlemenors, you are welcome to the house: if not, and it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.
To. Farewell deere heart, since I must needs be gone.
Mar. Nay good Sir Toby.
Clo. His eyes do thow his days are almost done.
Mal. Is't even so?
To. But I will neuer dye.
Clo. Sir Toby there you lye.
Mal. This is much credit to you.
To. Shall I bid him go.
Clo. What and if you do?
To. Shall I bid him go, and spare not?
Clo. O no, no, no, you dare not.
To. Out o'tune fir, ye lye: Art any more then a Steward? Doft thou think because thou art vertuous, there shall be no more Cakea and Ale?
Clo. Yes by S.Anne, and Ginger shall bee hotte y'th mouth too.
To. Th'art 'th right. Goe fir, rub your Chains with crums. A flope of Wine Maria.
Mal. Mifrils Mary, if you prizd my Ladies fav'or at any thing more then contempt, you would not give meenas for this vnviill rule; she shall know of it by this hand.
Exit Mar. Go make your eares.
An. 'Twere as good a decide as to drink when a mans a hunge, to challenge him the field, and then to breake promife with him, and make a fool of him.
To. Don't knight, Ile write them a Challenge: or Ile delier thy indignation to him by word of mouth.
Mar. Sweet Sir Toby be patient for to night: Since the youth of the Countes was to day with my Lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monseur Malvolio, let me alone with him: If I do not gull him into an ayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have witte e-nough to lye freight in my bed: I know I can do it.
To. Poffiefe vs, poffiefe vs, tell vs something of him.
Mar. Marrie fir, sometimes he is a Kind of Puritane.
An. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dogge.
To. What for being a Puritan, thy exquisite reason, deere knight.
An. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.
Mar. The divell a Puritan that hee is, or any thing constantly but a time-pleaser, an affection'd Afe, that cons State without booke, and vters it by great swarts.
The best perfwaded of himselfe: fo cram'd(as he thinkes) with excellencies, that it is his grounds of faith, that all that looke on him, love him: and on that vice in him, will my reygne finde notable caufe to worke.
To. What wilt thou do?
Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure Epiftles of louse, wherein by the colour of his beard, the shape of his legge, the manner of his gate, the exprefure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall finde himselfe most feelingly perforated. I can write very like my Lady your Neece, on a forgotten matter wee can hardly make diftinction of our hands.
To. Excellent, I fellem a device.
An. I ha't in my nofe too.
To. He shall thinke by the Letters that thou wilt drop thia, that they come from my Neece, and that file's in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is indeed a horse of that colour.
An. And your horse now would make him an Afe;
An. O twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royall I warrant you: I know my Phylicker will worke with him, I will plant you two, and let the Fool make a third, where he shall finde the Letter:
observe his construccion of it: For this night to bed, and dream on the event: Farewell. Exit.

To. Good night Pentjifila.

An. Before me he's a good wench.
To. She's a beaglie true bred, and one that adores me:
what o'that?
An. I was ador'd once too.
To. Let's to bed knight: Thou hadst neede send for more money.
An. If I cannot recover your Neece, I am a foule way off.
To. Send for money knight, if thou haft her not 'tth call, me Cut.
An. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.
To. Come, come, Ite go burne some Sacke, its too late to go to bed now: Come knight, come knight. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke, Viola, Carius, and others.

Du. Give me some Mufick; Now good morow frends.
Now good Cefario, but that peecie of fong,
That old and Antickie fong we heard last night;
Me thought it did release my passion much,
More then light syres, and recollected terms
Of thefe moft brisk and giddy-paced terms.
Come, but on e vere.

Car. He is not here (so plese your Lordshippe) that should fing it?
Du. Who was it?

Car. Fellow the Ieather my Lord, a fool that the Ladie Olivias Father tooke much delight in. He is about the houfe.

Du. Seeke him out, and play the tune the while.

Mufick plays.

Come hither Boy, if euuer thou fhalte loue
In the sweet pangs of it, remember me:
For fuch as I am, all true Louers are,
From all their paines, and shades of darknes; the Soul in the confunct image of the creature
That is bellow'd. How doft thou like this tune?

viso. It gives a very echo to the eate
Where loue is thron'd.

Du. Thou doft speake matterly,
My life upon, young though thou art, thinne eye
Hath flid upon some favour that it loues:
Hath it not boy?

viso. A little, by your favour.

Du. What kind of woman ift?

Car. Of your compliection.

Du. She is not worth thee then, what yeares if faith?

viso. About your yeeres my Lord.

Du. Too old by heauen: Let still the woman take

An elder then her felfe, so weares fhe to him;
So faways the leuell in her husbands heart:
For boy, however we do prale our felues,
Our fancies are more giddle and unforme,
More longing, wauering, fooner loft and worn,
Then womens are.

viso. I think it well my Lord.

Du. Then let thy Loue be yonder then thy felfe,
Or thy affeclion cannot hold the bent: For women are as Roffa, whofe faire bowre
Being once defpill'd, doth fall that verie howre.

viso. And fo they are: alas, that they are fo:
To die, euene when they to perfection grow.

Enter Carius & Chorus.

Du. O fellow come, the fong we had laft night:
Markie it Cefario, it is old and plaines;
The Spinifiers and the Knitters in the Sun,
And the free maides that waste their thread with bones,
Do wee to caunt it: it is filly footh,
And dallies with the innocence of loue,
Like the old age.

Ch. Are you ready Sir?

Duke. I prethee fing.

The Song.

Come away, come away death,
And in fad cyprefle let me be laide.
Eye away, fie away breath,
I am faine by a faire cruel maide.
My forefawd white, fluck all with Eeu, O preparit me.
My part of death no one fo true did fhare it.

Not a flower, not a fower sweete.
On my blacke cofin, let there be firemaus.
Not a friend, not a friend greet.
My poore cares, where my bones fhalbe thrown.
A thousand thousand f refreshed by, hey me & where Sad true louer never find his grave, to wepe there.

Du. There's for thy paines.

Ch. No paines fir, I take pleafure in finging fir.

viso. Ile pay thy pleafure then.

viso. Truely fir, and pleafure will be pale one time, or another.

Du. Give me now leave, to leaue thee.

viso. Now the melancholly God protect thee, and the Tailor make thy doublet of changeable Taffata, for thy mind is a very Opall. I would have men of fuch confantie purpofe, that their hufbandles might be every thing, and their intent exerice where, for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. Exit.

Du. Let all the reft give place: Once more Cefario,
Get thee to yond fame loueraigne cruellie:
Tell her my loue, more noble then the world
Prides not quantitie of dircle lands,
The parts that fortune hath beftow'd upon her:
Tell her I hold as giddily as Fortune:
But 'tis that miracle, and Queene of Ifmans
That nature prances her in, attacts my foule.

viso. But if the cannot loue you fir.

viso. It cannot be fo anfwer'd.

viso. Sooth but you maft.

Say that some Lady, as perhaps there is,
Hath for your loue as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivias: you cannot loue her:
You tel her fo: Muf she not then be anfwer'd?

viso. There is no womans fides
Twelfth Night, or, What you will. 263

Can bide the beating of so strong a passion,
As love doth glue my heart: no woman's heart
So bigge, to hold so much, they lacke retention.
Alias, their love may be call'd appetite.
No motion of the Liver, but the Pallat,
That suff'ri fur'ts, clomoy, and resuelt,
But mine is all as hungry as the Sea,
And can digest as much, make no compare
Betweene what love a woman can bare me,
And that I owe Oussia.
'Uvs. I but I know.
Du. What dost thou knowe?
'Uvs. Too well what love women to men may owe:
In faith they are as true of heart, as we.
My Father had a daughter lou'd a man
As it might be perhaps, were I a woman
I should your Lordship.
Du. And what's her history?
'Uvs. A blanke my Lord: the neuer told her love,
But let concealment like a worme I' th bude
Feeds on her damake checke: she pin'd in thought,
And with a greene and yellow melancholy,
She sate like Patience on a Monument,
Smiling at greefe. Was not this love indeeide?
We men may say more, swear more, but indeed
Our shewes are more then will: for still we prove
Much in our woves, but little in our love.
Du. But did'st thy fitter of her loue my Boy?
'Uvs. I am all the daughters of my Fathers house,
And all the brothers too: and yet I know not.
Sir, shal I to this Lady?
Du. I that's the Thename,
To hit in hafe: glue her this Jewell: say,
My loue can glue no place, bide no deny,

Scena Quinta.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.
To. Come thy wayes Signior Fabian.
Fab. Nay lie come: if I looke a frupule of this sport,
Let me be houre I'd to death with Melancholy.
To. Wouldst thou not be glad to have the niggardly Rafially theepe-bitter, come by some notable thame?
'Uvs. I would exult man: you know he brought me out
To favour with my Lady, about a Bear-baiting here.
To. To anger him we'll have the Bear againe, and
We will foole him blacke and broun, shall we not sir Andrew?
An. And we do not, it is prite of our lives.
Enter Maria.
To. Heere comes the little villainne: How now my Mette of India?
Mar. Get ye all three into the box tree: Maluliis's comming downe this walke, he has beene yonder I'the Sunne praffiding behauiour to his own shadow this halfe houre: obserue him for the loue of Mockerie: for I know this Letter will make a contemplative Ideot of him. Close in the name of lealit, lye thou there: for heere comes the Trowy, that mutt be caught with tickling.
Exit Enter Maluilio.

Mal. 'Tis but Fortune, all is fortune. Maria once told me she did afffect me, and I have heard her self come thus near, that should thee fancie, it should be one of my complection. Befides the vfits me with a more exalted respect, then any one else that follows her. What should I thynke on't?
To. Heere's an ouer-weening rogue.
Fa. Oh peace: Contemplation makes a rare Turkey
Cocke of him, how he lets vnder his advanc'd plumes.
And. Sliht I could fo bate the Rogue.
To. Peace I say.
Mal. To be Count Maluilio.
To. Ah Rogue.
An. Fitroll him, pitroll him.
To. Peace, peace.
Mal. There is example for't: The Lady of the Strea-chey, married the yeoman of the wardrobe.
An. Fic on him Iezabel.
Fa. O peace, now he's deeply in: looke how imagination blowes him.
Mal. Hauing beene three moneths married to her, fitting in my flate.
To. O for a flone-bow to hit him in the eye.
Mal. Calling my Officers about me, in my branch'd Vebet gowne: hauing come from a day bedde, where I have left Oussia sleeping.
To. Fire and Brimstone,
Fa. O peace, peace.
Mal. And then to haue the humor of flate: and after a damare trauaile of regard: telling them I knowe my place, as I would they should doe theirs: to sake for my kinman Toby.
To. Boltes and sheakles.
Fa. Oh peace, peace, peace, now, now.
Mal. Seauen of my people with an obedience start, mak out for him: I frowne the while, and perchance winder vp my watch, or play with my some rich Irewell:
Toby approacheth; curtesies there to me.
To. Shal I this fellow slue?
Fa. Though our flence be drawne from vs with cars, yet peace.
Mal. I extend my hand to him thus: quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of controll.
To. And do's not Toby take you a blow o'the lippes, th'em?
Mal. Saying, Coine Toby, my Fortunes hauing caft me on your Neres, glue me this prerogatiue of Speech.
To. What, what?
Mal. You muft amend your drunkenneffe.
To. Out fceab.
Fab. Nay patience, or we breake the finewes of our plot?
Mal. Befides you waffe the treasure of your time, with a foolish knight.
And. That's mee I warrant you.
Mal. One fir Andrew.
And. I knew twas I, for many do call mee foole.
Mal. What employment have we heere?
Fa. Now is the Woodcooke neere the gin.
To. Oh peace, and the spirit of humors intimate reading aloud to him.
Mal. By my life this is my Ladies hand: theebe bee her very C's, her V's, and her T's, and thus makes thee het great P's. It is in contempt of question her hand.
An. Her C's, her V's, and her T's: why that?
Mal. To the unknowne belo'd, this, and my good Wybes:
Her very Phraes: By your leaue wax. Soft, and the in-pressure her Laurets, with which the vfits to seale: tis my Lady: To whom should this be?
Fab. This winnes him, Luiter and all.
Mal.
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

Mal. I love knowes I love, but who, Lias do not knowe, no man must know. No man must know. What followes? The numbers alter'd: No man must know, If this should be thee Malvolio? To. Martin hang thee brooks.

Mal. I may command where I adore, but silence like a Lucr craft knife: With bloodstiffe stroke my heart dotb gore, M. O. A. I. dotb

Oui by my life.

To. A fulldan riddle.

To. Excellent Wench, say I. Mal. M. O. A. I. doth fry my life. Nay but first let me fee, let me see, let me see.

Fab. What dill a poyson have the dret him? To. And with what wing the fhalion checks at it? Mal. I may command, where I adore: Why thee may command me: I ferue her, she is my Ladie. This is cxudient to any formal capacitie. There is no obstretion in this, and the end: What should that Alphabetical poffi tion portend, if I could make that refemblle something in the See. M. O. A. I. To. O, I. make vp that, he is now at a cold fent.

Fab. Sowter will cry vonp for all this, though it be as ranke as a Fox.

Mal. M. Malvolio, M. why that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say he would worke it out, the Curre is excellent at faults.

Mal. M. But then there is no connonym in the fquell that suffen under probation: A. should follow, but O. does.

To. And O. shall end, I hope.

To. I, or Ie cudgel him, and make cry O.

Mal. And then I comes behind.

To. I, and you had any eye behinde you, you might fee more detraction at your heele, then Fortunes before you.

Mal. M. O. A. I. This fimulation is not as the formers: and yet to cruith this a little, it bowd to mee, for e-every one of thefe Letters are in my name. Soft, here follows profe: If the fall into thy band, resolue. In my heart I am aboe thee, but be not afraid of greatnelfe: Some are become great, some areheeme greatniffe, and some have greatniffe thrue vpnon em. Thy fates open the hands, let thy blood and spirit embrace them, and to in-vre thy felfe to what thou art like to be: caft thy humble fough, and appeare frith. Be opposite with a kinfman, furly with feruants: Let thy tongue tang arguments of flate: put thy felfe into the trikes of singularitie. Shee thus adulfes thee, that fitges for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow flockings, and wish'd to fee thee euer croffe gar'd: I fay remember, goo too, thou art made if thou deffir to be fo: If not, let me thee a fte

ward fell, the fellow of feruants, and not woorthie to touch Fortunes fngers Farewell, Shee that would alter feruices with thee, tht fortunate vnhappy daylight and champaign difcouers not more: This is open, we bee proud, I will reade polittie Authors, I will baffe Sir Tobe, I will walk with open acquaintance, I will be point deufe, the very man. I do not now foole my felfe, to let imagination lade mee: for every reafon excites to this, that my Lady loves me. She did commend my yellow flockings of late, ftee did praife my legge being croffe-gar'd, and in this the manifests her felle to my loue, & with a kinde of inclination drives mee to these habites of her: for I mke mine iffe, I am happy: I will be strange, fweet, in yellow flockings, and croffe Gar'd,

Twelve Night, or, What you will.

Clo. Truth sir, I can yield you none without wordes, and wordes are grown to faile, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and can't for nothing.

Clo. Not so sir, I do care for something: but in my confidence sir, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's fool?

Clo. No indeed sir, the Lady Oliua has no folly, thee will keep no fool for thee, till she be married, and fools are as like husbands, as Pilchers are to Herrings, the Husband's the bigger, I am indeed not her fool, but his corruptions of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery sir, does walk about the Orbe like the Sun, it shines every where. I would be foffy sir, but the fool should be as oft with your Mother, as with my Mistres: I think I saw your wifedome there.

Vio. Nay, and thou passe upon me, Ile no more with thee. Hold there's expences for thee.

Clo. Now in heeue in his next commodity of hayre, send thee a beard.

Vio. By my troth Ile tell thee, I am almoft fickle for one, though I would not have it grow on my chinne. Is thy Lady within?

Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred sir?

Vio. Do you keep together, and yet to live.

Clo. I would play Lord Pandarus of Polygamy sir, to bring a Creffida to this Troylus.

Vio. I vnderstand you sir, tis well begg'd.

Clo. The matter I hope is not great sir; begged, but a beggar: Creffida was a begger. My Lady is within sir. I will confer to them whences you come, who you are, and what you would are out of my wellkin, I may fay element, but the word is over-worne.

Vio. This fellow is wife enough to play the fool, And to do that well, cranes a kind of wit: He must obvserve their mood on whom he leats, The quality of persons, and the time: And like the Haggard, checke at every Feather. That comes before his eye. This is practive, As full of labour as a Wife-man Art: For folly that he wifefully theves, is fit; But widerness folly, quite that is their wit.

Enter Sir Toby and Andrews.

To. Saue you Gentleman.

Vio. And you sir.

And. Dieu vous guard Monfieur.

Vio. Et vouz oisie oifrez.

To. I hope fir, you are, and I am yours.

To. Will you encounter the housey, my neece is dennisous you shoule enter, if your trade be to her.

To. I am bound to your Neece fir, I meane she is the list of your voyage.

To. Take your legges fir, put them to motion.

To. My legges do better vnderstand me fir, then I understand what you meane by bidding me take my leggs.

To. I meane to go fir, to enter.

To. I will anfwer you with gate and entrance, but we are prevented.

Enter Oliva, and Gentlewomen.

Most excellent accompli'd Lady, the heavens raine O-dours on you.

And. That youth's a rare Courtier, raine odours, wel.

Vio. My matter hath no voice Lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchfaded care.

And. Oudours, pregnant, and vouchfaded: Ile get 'em all three already.

Os. Let the Garden door be shut, and leave mee to my hearing. Glue me your hand fir.

Os. My dutie Madam, and most humble servuce

Vio. What is your name?

Vio. Cefario is your feruants name, faire Princeillo.

Os. My feruant fir? It was never merry world,

Vio. Since lowly feigning was call'd complement:

you're feruant to the Count Orsino youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his much needs be yours: your feruants feruant, is your feruant Madam.

Os. For him, I thinke not on him: for his thoughts, Would they were blankes, rather then fill'd with me.

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts

On his behalfe.

Os. O by your leave I pray you,

I bad you neuer speake againe of him;

But would you vndertake another fuite

I had rather heare you, to folicit that,

Then Muficke from the fiiheares.

Vio. Deere Lady.

Os. Glue me leave, befeech you: I did fende,

After the laft enchantment you did heare,

A Ring in chace of you. So did I abufe

My felle, my feruant, and I feare me you:

Vnder your hard constrution muff I fit, To force that on you in a flamefull cunning.

Which you knew none of yours. What might you think?

Have you not ftet mine Honor at the stake,

And baited it with all thy dumnsed thoughts

That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your receiving

Enough is thewes, a Cipreffe, not a bofome,

Hides my heart: so let me heare you speake.

Vio. I pittie you.

Os. That's a degree to loue.

Vio. No not a grize: for is a vulgar prove

That verie off we pitty enemies.

Os. Why then me thinkes 'tis time to smile agen:

O world, how apt the poore are to be proud!

If one should be a prey, how much the better

To fall before the Lion, then the Wolfe?

Cliche strikes.

The clocke upbraides me with the waffe of time:

Be not afraid good youth, I will not haue you,

And yet when vic and youth is come to harueft, your wife is like to reap a proper man:

There lies your way, due Wett.

Vio. Then Wettward hoe:

Grace and good disposition attend your Ladyship:

you'l nothing Madam to my Lord, by me:

Os. Stay: I prethee tell me what thou thinkeft of me?

Vio. That you do thinke you are not what you are.

Os. If I think ffo, I thinke the fame of you.

Vio. Then thinke you right: I am not what I am.

Os. I would you were, as I would have you be,

Vio. Would it be better Madam, then I am?

I wish it might, for now I am your foole.

Os. O what a deale of loose, looke's beautfull?

In the contempt and anger of his lip,

A murderous guilt thewes not it felt more foone.

Then loue that would feeeme hild: Lous night is noone.

Cefario, by the Roses of the Spring,

By maids-hood, honor, truth, and every thing,

I loue thee fo, that maugre all thy pride,
Nor wit, nor reason, can my pallion hide:
Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,
For that I wou'd, though therefore ha'ft no cause:
But rather reason thus, with reason fitter:
Loose sought, is good: but given vnfought, is better.
\(\text{Viv.}\) By innocence I sware, and by my youth,
I have one heart, one bosome, and one truth,
And that no woman has, nor never none
Shall mis'rs be of it, fay I alone.
And so adieu good Madam, never more,
Will I my Maffers tears to you deplor.
\(\text{Ol.}\) Yet come againe: for thou perhaps mayst move
That heart which now abhorres, to like his love. \textit{Exeunt.}

\textit{Scæna Secunda.}

\textbf{Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.}

\textit{And.} No faith, Ile not stay a lot longer:
\textit{To.} Thy reason deere venom, glue thy reason.
\textit{Fab.} You must needs yeeld ye reason, Sir \textit{Andrew}?
\textit{And.} Marry I swear your Neece do more favours to the Counts Sering-man, then ever she bioke'd upon mee:
I saw't i'th Orchard.
\textit{To.} Did shee the while, old boy, tell me that.
\textit{And.} As plain as I see you now.
\textit{Fab.} This was a great argument of love in her toward you.
\textit{And.} Slight; will you make an Affe' o'me.
\textit{Fab.} I will prove it legitimate sir, upon the Oathes of judgement, and reason.
\textit{To.} And they have beene grand Jurie men, since before \textit{Nowas} was a Saylor.
\textit{Fab.} Shee did shew favour to the youth in your fayth, onely to exasperate you, to awake your dormoufe valoure, and put fire in your Heart, and brimstone in your Liuer:
you should then have accouted her, and with some excel\textit{\footnotesize lent} tefts, fire-new from the mint, you should have bangued the youth into dumbenesse; this was look'd for at your hand, and this was baultt: the double gilt of this opportu-tinite you let time wafh off, and you are now fayled into the North of my Ladys opinion, where you will hang like a yfickel on a Dutchmans beard, vaile ye do re-deam it, by some laudable attempt, either of valoure or police.
\textit{And.} And't be any way, it must be with Valoure, for police I hate: I had as like be a Browniff, as a Politcian.
\textit{To.} Why then build me thy fortunes vpon the baft of valoure.Challenge me the Counts youth to fight with him hurt him in ecleun places, my Neece shall take note of it, and affure thy selfe, there is no louse-Broker in the world, can more preuize in mannes commendation with woman,
then report of valoure.
\textit{Fab.} There is no way but this sir \textit{Andrew}.
\textit{An.} Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?
\textit{To.} Go, write it in a martial hand, be curt and briefe:
it is no matter how wite, so it bee eloquent, and full of inuention: taunt him with the licene of Inke: if thou thous'lt him some thrice, it shall not amisse, and as many Lyes, as will lye in thy fletee of paper, although the fletee were bigge enough for the bedde of \textit{Ware} in Eng-

\textit{Scæna Tertia.}

\textbf{Enter Schoflian and Antonia.}

\textit{Seb.} I would not by my will have troubled you,
But since you make your pleafure of your paines,
I will no further chide you.
\textit{Ant.} I could not stay behind you: my desire
(More harpe then fled hrose) did pufle me forth,
And not all love to fee you (though so much
As might have drawne one to a longer voyage)
But ieauflie, what might befal your ruell,
Being skilleffe in these parts: which to a stranger,
Vaguiled, and unfriendd, often prous
Rough, and vnhospitable. My willing loue,
The rather by these arguments of fear
Set forth in your pursuite.
\textit{Seb.} \textit{My kinde Antonia,}
I can no other anfwer make, but thankes,
And thankes; and cover off good turners,
Are fuffel'd off with fuch vncurrant pay:
But were my worth, as is my confience firme,
You should finde better dealing: what's to do?
Shall we go see the religes of this Towne?
Ant. To morrow first, first first go see your Lodging?
Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night
I pray you let us fasting our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame
That do renowne this City.
Ant. Would you't pardon me?
I do not without danger walke these freetees.
Once in a sea-fight 'gainst the Count his gallsies,
I did some service, of such note indeed,
That were I tane heere, it would scarce be answer'd.
Seb. Belleke you saw great number of his people.
Ant. Th' offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of the time, and quarrell
Might well have gluen vs bloody argument:
It might have beene answer'd in repaying
What we tooke from them, which for Tragiques sake
Most of our City did.
Onely my felfe flood out,
For which if I be lapped in this place
I shall pay deere.
Seb. Do not then walke too open.
Ant. It doth not fit me: hold fir, here's my purfe,
In the South Suburbes at the Elephant
Is set to lodge: I will befeake our dyet,
While you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the Towne, there shall you have me,
Seb. Why your purfe?
Ant. Haply your eye shall light vpon some toy
You have desire to purchase: and your store
I think is not for idle Markets, fir.
Seb. Ile be your purfe-bearer, and leave you
For an houre.
Ant. To th'Elephant.
Seb. I do remember.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Oliula and Maria.

Ol. I haue sent after him, he fayes hee'el come:
How shall I feaft him? What bellow of him?
For youth is bought more oft, then begg'd, or borrow'd.
I speake too loud: Where's Maluolio, he is sad, and ciuill,
And suiteth well for a fervant with my fortunes,
Where is Maluolio?
Mar. He's comming Madame:
But in very strang manner. He is fere pooffet Madam.
Ol. Why what's the matter, does he raue?
Mar. No Madam, he does nothing but flime: your Ladyship were best to have some guard about you, if hee cometh for the man is tainted in's wits.
Ol. Go call him hither.

Enter Maluolio.

I am as made as hee,
If sad and meary madneffe euall bee.
How now Maluolio?
Mal. Sweet Lady, ho, ho.
Ol. Smilt thou? I fent for thee vpone a sad occasion.
Mal. Sad Lady, I could be sad:
This does make some obstruction in the blood:
This croffe-gartering, but what of that?

If it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true
Sonnet is: Please one, and please all.
Mal. Why dooth thou man?
What is the matter with thee?
Mal. Not blacke in my minde, though yellow in my legges: It did come to his hands, and Commandes shall be executed. I thinke we doe know the sweet Romane hand.
Ol. Wilt thou go to bed Maluolio?
Mal. To bed? I sweet heart, and hee come to thee.
Ol. God comfort thee! Why doft thou smile so, and kiffe thy hand so oft?
Mar. How do you Maluolio?
Malu. At your request:
Yes Nightingales anfwer Dawes.
Mar. Why appare you with this ridiculous boldneffe before my Lady?
Mal. Be not afraid of greatneffe: 'twas well writ:
Ol. What meanes thou by that Maluilio?
Mal. Some are borne great.
Ol. Ha?
Mal. Some atcheue greatneffe.
Ol. What fay'st thou?
Mal. And some have greatneffe thrust vpon them.
Ol. Heauen reforfe thee.
Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings?
Ol. Thy yellow stockings?
Mal. And with'd to fee thee croffe garter'd.
Ol. Croffe garter'd?
Mal. Go too, thou art made, if thou defir'lt to be fo.
Ol. Am I made?
Mal. If not, let me fee thee a fervant still.
Ol. Why this is verie Midsummer madneffe.

Enter Servant.

Sv. Madame, the young Gentleman of the Count Orfino's is return'd, I could hardly entreat him becke: he attends your Ladyships pleasure.
Ol. He come to him.
Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd too. Where's my Coine Toby, let some of my people have a special car of him: he would not have him millcarie for the halfe of my Dowry.

Mal. Oh ho, do you come neere me now: no worfe man then fir Toby to looke to me. This concures diretly with the Letter, the fends him on purpofe, that I may appeare fluborne to him: for he incites me to that in the Letter. Caff thy humble fough fayes the: be oppofite with a Kinimian, furiy with fervants, let thy tongue langer with arguments of flate, put thy felfe into the tricke of fingularity: and confequently fetts downe the manner how: as a sad face, a reverend carriage, a flow tongue, in the habite of some Sir of note, and to forth. I haue lynde her, but it is Ioues doing, and Ioue make me thankefull. And when she went away now, let this Fellow be look'd too: Fellow? not Maluolio, nor after my degree, but Fellow. Why every thing adheres togither, that no drunke of a spruce, no spruce of a spruce, no obstacle, no incredulous or vnfafe circumstance: What can be faide? Nothing that can be, can come betweene me, and the full profpect of my hopes. Well Ioue, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Enter Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

Z. 2 To.

Te. Which way is hee in the name of sanctity. If all the devils of hell be drawne in little, and Legion himselfe poffeft him, yet lye speake to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is: how fit with you far? How fit with you man?

Mal. Go off, I dard you: let me enjoy my priuate go off.

Mar. Lo, how hallow the fiend speakes within him; did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my Lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah ha, does she so?

To. Go too, go too: peace, peace, wee must deale gently with him: Let me alone. How do you Malvolio? How fit with you? What man,deite the devill: consider, he is an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. Li you, and you speake ill of the devill, how he takes it at heart. Pray God he be not bewitch'd.

Fab. Carry his water to th wile woman.

Mar. May it be done to morrow morning if I live. My Lady would not loose him for more then lye say.

Mal. How now mistri?

Mar. Oh Lord.

Te. Prethee hold thy peace, this is not the way: Doe you not fee you mouse him? Let me alone with him.

Fa. No way but gentleness, gently, gently: the Fiend is rough, and will not be roughly vs'd.

To. Why how now my bawcock? how dost thou chuck?

Mal. Sir,

To. I biddy, come with me. What man, tis not for gravity to play at cherrie-pit with sathan. Hang him foul Colliar.

Mar. Get him to say his prayers, good sir Toby gette him to pray.

Mal. My prayers Minax.

Mar. No I warrant you, he will not heare of godlyneffe.

Mal. Go hang your felches all: you are yde shallow things, I am not of your element, you shall know more hereafter. Exit Te. Itt poffible?

Fa. If this were plaide vpone a flage now, I could condemne it as an improbable fiction.

To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the deane man.

Mar. Nay pursue him now, leafe the deacon take ayre, and taint.

Fa. Why we shall make him mad indece.

Mar. The howle will be the quieter.

To. Come, wee' ll have him in a darke room & bound. My Neece is already in the beleev that he's mad: we may carry it thus for our pleafure, and his penance, till we very pale time tyred out of breath, prompt vs to have mercy on him at which time, we will bring the deacon to the bar and crowne thee for a finder of madmen: but fee, but fee.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Fa. More matter for a May morning.

An. Here's the Challenge, read it: I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Ift so fancy?

And. I, if it? I warrant him: do but read.

To. Give me.

Youth, take no sooner than art, than art but a scrawny fellow.

Fa. Good, and valiant.

To. Wonder not, nor admire not in thy minde why I doe call thee so, for I will fowe thee no reason for't.

(Law

Fa. A good note, that keeps you from the blow of '

To. Thou confi the Lady Olivia, and in my sight the es that kindly: but thou lyeft in thy throat, that is not the matter. I challenge thee for.

Fa. Very breve, and to exceeding good fence-leffe.

To. I will way-lay thee going hence, where if in thy chance to kill me.

Fa. Good.

To. Thou kill me like a rogue and a villaine.

Fa. Still you keep it' th windle fide of the Lawgood.

Feb. Furtzwerell, and God have mercie upon one of our foes.

He may have mercie upon mine, but my hope it better, for hee makes to my selfe. Thy friend as thou woffit him. And thy enemies, Andrew Auye-checkers.

To. If this Letter move him not, his legs cannot: Ile giue't him.

Mar. You may have verie fit occasion fott: he is now in some commerce with my Ladie, and will be and by depart.

Te. Go for Andrew: stout mee for him at the corner of the Orchard like a bann-Bayle: so soone as euer thou fee't him, draw, and as thou draw'ft, sweare horrible: for t comes to paffe off, that a terrible oath, with a fwayne-Singlery accent sharply twangs'd off, glues manbooke more approbation, then ever proove it selfe youe would care'nd him. Away.

And. Nay let me alone for swearing. Exit To. Now will not I deliver his Letter: for the behauiour of the yong Gentleman, giues him out to be of good capacity, and breeding: his employment betweene his Lord and my Neece, confirmes no leef. Therefore, this Letter being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will finde it comes from a Clodde-pole. But fit, I will deliver his Challenge by word of mouth: let vpone Auye-checker a notable report of valor, and drive the Gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receive it) into a moft hideous opinion of his rage, skill, furie, and impetuousifie. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the looke, like Cockatrices.

Enter Olivia and Viola.

Fab. Here he comes with your Neece, glue them way dill he take leave, and presently after him.

To. I will meditate the while vpone some horrid meffage for a Challenge.

Ol. I have fayd too much onto a hart of stone, and laid mine honour too vnharty on't:

There's something in me that reproves my fault:

But such a head-strong potent fault it is,

That it but mocks reproofe.

Vien. With the fame hauour that your passion beares,

Goes on my Mothers greenes checkers.

Ol. Heere, were this Jewell for me, tis my picture:

Refuse it not, it hath no tongue, to vexe you:

And I beleev you come againe to morrow.

What shall you ask of me that I cle deny,

That honour (so'd) may vpone asking give.

Vien. Nothing but this, your true love for my master.

Ol. How with my honor may I giue him that,

Which I have gluen to you.

Vien. I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come againe to morrow: far-th'weel,

A Fiend like thee might beare my foole to bell.

Enter Toby and Fabian.

To. Gentleman, God saue thee.
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

And you see.
To. That defence thou hast, take the too't : of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not: but thy intercepter full of deslight, bloody as the Hunter, attends thee at the Orchard end: dimish thy tucke, be yare in thy preparation, for thy affaylant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

You mistake sir I am sure, no man hath any quarrell to me: my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.
To. You'll finde it otherwise I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your gard: for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man withall.

I pray you sir what is he?
To. He's knight double with vnhand'd Rapier, and on carpet consideration, but he is a duellist in private brall, foules and bodies hath he duore'd three, and his incencement at this moment is so implacable, that fatisfaclion can be none, but by pangs of death and sepulcher: Hob, nob, is his word: go't or take't.

I will returne against the house, and desire some conduct of the Lady. I am no fighter, I have heard of some kines of men, that put quarrells purposely on others, to taste their valour: belike this is a man of that quirk:

Sir, no: his indignation derives it selfe out of a very compeint inure, therefore get you on, and examine his designe. Barke you shall not to the house, vnlesse you vndertake that with me, which with as much safficiet you might answer him: therefore on, or slippe your sword stark naked: for meddle you must that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

This is as vnhall as strange. I beseach you doe me this courteous office, as to know of the Knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.
To. I will doe fo. Signour Fabian, say you this Gentleman, till my returne.

Pray you sir, do you know of this matter?
Fab. I know the knight is incentif against you, even to a mortall arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

I beseach you what manner of man is he?
Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promise to read him by his forme, as you are like to finde him in the prooff of his valour. He is indeed skilful, the most skilfull, bloody, & fataly opposite that you could possibily have found in anie part of Llyria: will you walke towards him, I will make your peace with him, if I can.

I shall bee much bound to you for't: I am one, that had rather go with sir Priel, then sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my mettle.

Why man hee a verie duell, I have not seen such a frago: I had a passe with him, rapier, feaboard, and all: and he gives me the fracke in with such a mortal motion that it is insuteable: and on the answre, he payes you as furely, as your feetes hits the ground they flapp on. They say, he has bin Fencer to the Sophy.

Pox on't, Ile not meddle with him.
To. But he will not now be pacified
Fabian can scarfe hold him yonder.

Plague on't, and I thought he had beene villain, and so cunning in Fencer, I'de have seen him damn'd er I'de have finished him. Let him let the matter slip, and Ile give him my horse, gray Caplet.

To. Ile make the motion: stand here, make a good shew on't, this shall end without the perdition of foules, marry Ile ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Enter Fabian and Viola.

I have his horse to take vp the quarrell, I have perfwaded him the youths a duell.
To. He is as horribly conceited of him: and pants, & lookes pale, as if a Bear were at his heele.
To. There's no remedie sir, he will fight with you for's oath fake: marrie hee hath better bethowth him of his quarrell, and hee findes that now scarce to bee worth talcing of: therefore draw for the suportance of his vowe, he protests he will not hurt you.

Pray God defend me: a little thing would make me tell them how much I lacke of a man.
Fab. Glue ground if you see him furious.
To. Come sir Andrew, there's no remedie, the Gentleman will for his honors fake have one bowt with you: he cannot by the Duello auoide it: but he has promis'd me, as he is a Gentleman and a Soldiour, he will not hurt you.

You come on, to't.

Pray God he keeps his oath.

Enter Antonio.

Do affure you this against my will.
Ant. Put vp your scowre: if this yong Gentleman have done ofence, I take the fault on me:
To. If you offend him, I for him deifie you.
To. You sir? Why, what are you?
Ant. One fir, that for his loue dures yet do more
Then you have heard brag to you will.
To. Nay, if you be an vnderaker, I am for you.

Enter Officers.

O good sir Toby hold: here come the Officers.
To. Ile be with you anon.

Pray sir, put your sword vp if you please.

Marry will I sir: and for that I promis'd you Ile be as good as my word. Hee will bearre you easly, and raines well.

This is the man, do thy Office.

Put vp your sword vp if you please.

You do mistake me sir.

No sir, no lot: I know your favour well:
Though now you have no Sea-cap on your head:
Take him away, he knowes I know him well.

I must obey. This comes with seeking you:
But there's no remedie, I shall answre it:
What will you do: now my necessity
Makes me to sike you for my purfe. It greeues me much more, for what I cannot do for you,
Then what befts my fel: you fland amaz'd,
But be of comfort.

Come sir away.

I must entertaine of you some of that money.

What money sir?
For the faire kindnesse you have show'd me heere,
And part being prompted by your present trouble,
Out of my leane and low ability
Ile lend you something: my hauing is not much,
Ile make division of my present with you:
Hold, there's halfe my Coffe.

Will you deny me now,
It possible that my deserts to you
Can lacke perfusion. Do not tempt my misery,
Ile that it make me fo unfound a man
As to vphraid you with those kindnesse

That
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

That I have done for you.

V.

I know of none,

Nor know I you by name, or any feature:

I hate ingratitude more in a man,

Then lying, vainness, and drinking drunkenness,

Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption

Inhabits our frail blood.

Ant. Oh heavens themelves.

V. Come sir, I pray you go.

Ant. Let me speake a little. This youth that you see

I snatch'd one halfe out of the lawes of death, (here,

Releeu'd him with such fanfitle of loue;

And to his image, which me thought did promisse

Most venerable worth, did I deuotion.

1. Off. What's that to vs, the time goes by: Away.

Ant. But oh, how wilde an idlour proves this God:

Thou haft Schafian done good feature, shame.

In Nature, there's no blemish but the minde:

None can be call'd deform'd, but the vnkinde.

Vertue is beauty, but the beautuous eueil

Are drunkend out foureth by the deuell.

1. Off. The man growes mad, away with him:

Come, come sir.

Ant. Leade me on.

V.

Me thinkes his words do from such passion flye

That he believes himselfe, so do I not; I

Prove true imagination, oh proue true,

That I deere brother, be now tane for you.

To. Come hither Knight, come hithet Fabian: Weel whilper ore a couplet or two of mott fage fawes.

V.

He nam'd Schafian: I my brother know

Yet living in my glaide's even fuch, and so

In favour was my Brother, and he went

Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,

For him I imitate: Oh if it proue,

Tempets are kinde, and falt waues freh in loue.

To. A very dinnishet paltry boy, and more a coward then a Hare, his dinnishety appears, in leading his friend here in neceflity, and denying him: and for his coward-ship ask Fabian.

Fab. A Coward, a most deouet Coward, religious in it.

And. Sild lie after him againe, and beate him.

To. Do, couffe him foundly, but never draw thy sword

And. And I do not.

Fab. Come, let's fee the event.

To. I dare lay any money, 'twill be nothing yet.

Exit

Aulus Quartus, Scæna prima.

Enter Schafian and Cloane.

Clo. Will you make me beleue, that I am not sent for you?

Sch. Go too, go too, thou art a foolish fellow,

Let me be cleare of thee.

Clo. Well held out yfaith: No, I do not know you, nor I am not sent to you by my Lady, to bid you come speake with her: nor your name is not Mafter Cefarion, nor this is not my nofe neyther: Nothing that is so, is so.

Sch. I prethee vent thy folly some-where else, thou know'ld not me.

Clo. Vent my folly: He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a foole. Vent my folly: I am afraid this great lubber the World will prove a

Cockney: I prethee now neglig thy stranges, and tell me what I shall vent to my Lady? Shall I vent to hire that thou art comming?

Sch. I prethee foolish greeke depart from me, there's money for thee, if thou tarry longer, I shall give worne paimeant.

men that glue fodes money, get themfelves a good report, after foureteene yeares purchafe.

And. Now sir, haue I met you again: ther's for you.

Are all the people mad?

To. Hold fir, or Ile throw your dagger ore the houfe.

Clo. This Will I tell my Lady straight, I would not be in fome of your costs for two pence.

To. Come on fir, hold.

And. Nay let him alone, Ile go another way to worke with him: Ile have an action of Battery againft him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I broke him firft, yet

it's no matter for that.

Sch. Let go thy hand.

To. Come fir, I will not let you go. Come my yong foolier put vp your yron: you are well ftreng'th

Come on.

Sch. I will be free from thee. What would it now?

If thou darst tempe me further, draw thy fword.

To. What, what? Nay then I must haue an Ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Enter Olivia.

Ol. Hold Toby, on thy life I charge thee hold.

To. Madam.

Ol. Will it be euer thus? *Vngracious wretch,

Fit for the Mountaines, and the barbarous Caues,

Where manners were preach'd out of my light.

Be not offended, deere Cefario:

Rudesbye be gone. I prethee gentle friend,

Let thy faire wifedome, not thy passion fway

In this vnchull, and vnint extent

Againft thy peace. Go with me to my houfe,

And haere thou there how many fteinlesse pranks

This Ruffian hath botch'd vp, that thou thereby

Mayft smile atthis: Thou shalt not choofe but goe:

Do not deny, behew his foule for me,

He started one poor heart of mine, in thee.

Sch. What relifh is in this? How turns the dreame?

Or I am mad, or clese this is a dreame:

Let fancie fill my fenfe in Lethe fleep,

If it be thus to dreame, fill let me fleep.

Ol. Nay come I prethee, would thou'dt be rul'd by me

Sch. Madam, I will.

Ol. O by th, and fo be.

Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Maria and Cloane.

Mar. Nay, I prethee put on this gown, & this beard, make him beleue thou art fir Tops the Curate, doe it quickly. He call for Toby the whiflet.

Clo. Well, He put it on, and I will difsemble my felfe in't, and I would I were the firft that euer difembled in such in such a gowne. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to bee thought a good Student: but to be fald an honest man and a good houfkeeper goes as fairely, as to fay, a carefull man, & a great fchooler. The Competitors enter.

Enter Toby.

To. Jowe bleffe thee M. Parfon.

Cl. Bona dies fi Toby: for as the old hermit of Prage that neuer faw pen and inke, very wittily fayd to a Neece of King Carobodaches, that that is, is: fo I being M. Parfon, am M. Parfon, for what is that, but that? and is, but is?
To. To him fi Toby.

Cl. What hoa, I fay, Peace in this prison.

To. The knafe counterfets well: a good knafe.

Mal. Who calls there?

Cl. Sir Toby the Curate, who comes to visit Malwde the Lunaticke.

Mal. Sir Toby, fir Toby, good sir Toby goe to my Ladie.

Cl. Out hyperbolicall fayd, how vexet thoo this man?
Thatkeft thou nothing but of Ladis? Tor.
Fell fald M. Parfon.

Mal. Sir Toby, neuer man was thus wronged, good fir
Toby do not thinke I am mad: they haue layde mee here in hideous darkneffe.

Cl. Fye, thou diuhenot fathen: I call thee by the mofl modest termes, fo for one am of those gentle ones, that will vfe the diuell himfelfe with curtefe: fayf thoo that house is darke?

Mal. As hell fir Toby.

Cl. Why it hath bay Windows tranfparant as bari-cades, and the cleere flutes toward the South north, as fubfus as Ebony: and yet complaintef thou of ob-trufion?

Mal. I am not mad fir Toby, I fay to you this house is darke.

Cl. Madman thou erreft: I fay there is no darkneffe but ignorance, in which thou art more puell'd then the Egyptians in their fogge.

Mal. I fay this house is as darke as Ignorance, thogh Ignorance were as darke as hell: and I fay there was neuer man thus abus'd, I am no more madde then you are,
make the triall of it in any confant queftion.

Cl. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning Wilde-fowle?

Mal. That the foule of our grandsman, might happily inhabit a bird.

Cl. What thinkft thou of his opinion?

Mal. I thinke nobly of the foule: and no way aproue his opinion.

Cl. Fare thee well: remaine thou still in darkneffe, thou fhal hold th'o pinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and feare to kill a Woodcocke, left thou dif-pollffe the foule of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Toby, fir Toby.

Tob. My moft exquitte fir Toby.

Mal. Nay I am for all waters.

Mar. Thou mightt have done this without thy berr and goune, he fees thee not.

To. To him in thine owne voyce, and bring me word how thou findft him: I would we were well ridde of this knauery. If he may bee conueniently deliver'd, I would he were, for I am now fo farre in office with my Niece, that I cannot puruie with any fafety this fport the vpe-footh. Come by and by to my Chamber.

Cl. Hey Robin, jolly Robin, tell me how thy Lady does.

Mal. Foole.

Cl. My Lady is vnkind, perfit.

Mal. Foole.

Cl. Alas why is the fo?

Mal. Foole, I fay.

Cl. She loseth another. Who calles, ha?

Mal. Good foole, as euer thou wilt deferue well at my hande, helpe me to a Candle, and pen, inke, and paper:
as I am a Gentleman, I will liue to bee thankefull to thee for't.

Cl. M. Malwino?

Mal. I good Foole.

Cl. Alas fir, how fell you besides your fue witts?

Mal. Foole, there was neuer man fo notoriouly a-bus'd: I am as well in my wits (foole) as thou art.

Cl. But as well then you are mad indeede, if you be no better in your wits then a foole.

Mal. They have heere propirieted me: keape mee in darkneffe, fend Ministers to me, Affes, and doe all they can to face me out of my wits.

Cl. Advife you what you fay: the Miniiter is heere.

Malwino, Malwino, thy wittes the heavens restore: endeavour thy selfe to sleepe, and leave thy vaine bibble babble.

Mal. Sir Toby.

Cl. Maintain as words with him good follow.

Who I fir, not I fir. God buy you good fir Toby: Marry Amen. I will fir, I will.

Mal. Foole, foole, foole I fay.

Cl. Alas fir be patient. What fay you fir, I am shent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good foole, helpe me to some light, and some paper, I tell thee I am as well in my wittes, as any man in Illyria.

Cl. Well-a-day, that you were fir.

Mal. By this hand I am: good foole, some inke,papers, and light: and conuyen what I will fed downe to my Lady: it shall advantage thee more, then euer the bea-ing of Letter did.

Cl. I will help you too's. But tel me true, are you not mad indeed, or do you but counterfeit.

Mal. Believe me I am not, I tell thee true.

Cl. Nay, fie were believe a madman till I fee his brains
I will fetch you light, and paper, and inke.

Mal. Foole, Ile requite it in the highest degree:
I prethie be goue.

Cl. I am gone fir, and anon fir,
Ile be with you againe:

In a trice, like to the old vice,
your neede to fufiane.

Who with dagger of lath, in his rage and his wrath,
cries ah ha, to the diuell:
Like a mad lad, paitre thy mayles dad,
Adieu good man diuell.

Scaena Tertia.

Enter Schafian.

This is the ayre, that is the glorious Sunne,
This peçaile she gave me, I do jec't, and fee't,
And though't wonder that envraps me thus,

Yet
Yet 'tis not madneffe. Where's Antionio then,
I could not finde him at the Kneate,
Yet tere he was, and there I found this credite,
That he did range the town to fecke me out,
His counsell now might do me golden service,
For though my soule dyptes well with my fence,
That this may be some error, but no madneffe,
Yet doth this accident and flood of Fortune,
So farre exceed all in trance, all discord,
That I am readie to diffcruit mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason that pervades me
To any other truth, but that I am mad,
Or els the Ladies mad; yet if 'twere so,
She could not fway her houfe, command her followers,
Take, and glue backe affayres, and their dispatch,
With such a smooth, diffciret, and fizable bearing
As I perceiue the do's: there's something in't
That is deceleuate. But here the Lady comes.

Enter Oliva, and Priit.

Ol. Blame not this hafte of mine: if you meane well
Now go with me, and with this holy man
Into the Chantry by tere before him,
And underneath that confecrated roofe,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith,
That my most fealefull, and too doubtfull soule
May live at peace. He shall conclude it,
While you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keepe
According to my birth, what do you say?
Sd. Ie follow this good man, and go with you,
And having fware true, eater will be true.

Ol. Then lead the way good father, & heavens so shine,
That they may fairely note this acte of mine. Exit.

Finis Actus Quartvs.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Cleone and Fabian.

Fab. Now as thou lou'st me, let me fee his Letter.

Cl. Good M. Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Any thing.

Cl. Do not desire to fee this Letter.

Fab. This is to glaue a dogge, and in recompence desire my dogge againe.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Lords.

Duke. Belong you to the Lady Oliva, friends?

Cl. I fir, we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well: how doe'st thou my good Fellow?

Cl. Truely fir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Du. fuft the contrary: the better for thy friends.

Cl. No fir, the worfe.

Du. How can that be?

Cl. Marry fir, they praise me, and make an affe of me, now my foes tell me plainly, I am an Aife: to that by my fasses fir, I profit in the knowledge of my selfe, and by my friends I am abuted: to that conclusions to be as knifes, if your foule negatives make your two affirmatives, why then the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Du. Why this is excellent.

Cl. By my troth fir, no: though it pleafe you to be one of my friends.

Du. Thou shalt not be the worfe for me, there's gold.

Cl. But that it would be double dealing fir, I would you could make it another.

Du. O you give me ill counsell.

Cl. Put your grace in your pocket fir, for this once, and let your flefh and blood obey it.

Du. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer: there's another.

Cl. Prima, secunda, tertia, is a good play, and the olde saying is, the third pays for all: the triplex fir, is a good tripping measure, or the belles of S. Bennet fir, may put you in minde, one, two, three.

Du. You can folee no more money out of mee at this throw: if you will let your Lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Cl. Marry fir, hallooby to your bounty till I come a-
gen. I go fir, but I would not have you to thinke, that my deffe of hauing is the finner of constouninge: but as you say fir, let your bounty take a nappe, I will awake it anon.

Exit.

Enter Antionio and Officers.

Fin. Here comes the man fir, that did relieve mee.

Du. That face of his I do remember well, yet when I faw it laft, it was befmer'd
As blake as Vulcan, in the fmoake of warre:
A bawbling Vefiell was he Captaine of,
For fhanke draught and bulke unpriuizable,
With which fuch fcatfull grapple did he make,
With the moft noble bottome of our Fleete,
That very enuy, and the tongue of loffe
Crude fame and honor on him: What's the matter?

Offi. Orfana, this is that Antionio
That tookke the Pheonix, and her fraught from Candy,
And this is he that did the Tiger boord,
When your yong Nephew Titus loft his legge;
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and flate,
In prinate bramble did we apprehend him.

Ulo. He did me kindneffe fir, drew on my fide,
But in conclusion put strange speech upon me,
I know not what twas, but diffraction.

Du. Notable Pyrate, thou salt-water Theefe,
What foolish boldneffe brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou in termes fo bloudie, and so deere
Haft made thine enemies?

Ant. Orfana: Noble fir,
Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give mee:
Antionio nearer yet was Theeke, or Pyrate,
Though I confesse, on base and ground enough
Orfana's enemie. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That moft ingratefull boy there by your fide,
From the rude fees enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem: a wracke paff hope he was:
His life I gue before, and did thereto addde
My loue without retention, or refraining,
All his in dedication. For his fake,
Did I expose my felle (pure for his loue)
Into the danger of this aduerce Towne,
Drew to defend him, when he was beset:
Where being apprehended, his falle cunning
(Not maning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,

And
And grew a twente yeeres remoyed thing
While one would winke  i denie me mine owne purfe,
Which I had recommended to his vfe,
Not halfe an houre before.

Pis. How can this be?
Du. When came he to this Towne?
Ans. To day my Lord : and for three months before,
No intrin, not a minutes vacancie,
Both day and night did we keepe companie.

Enter Olivia and attendants.

Du. Here comes the Countesse, now heauen walkes on earth :
But for thee fellow, fellow thy words are madnesse,
Three moneths this youth hath tended vpon mee,
But more of that anon. Take him aside.
Ol. What would my Lord, but that he may not have,
What Olivia may forfeite me unnoticable?
Cefario, you do not keepe promife with me.

Pis. Madam:
Du. Gracious Olivia.
Ol. What do you say Cefario? Good my Lord.

U. My Lord would speake, my dutie hoppes me.
Ol. If it be ought to the old tune my Lord,
It is as fat and fulome to mine eare
As howling after Mufccke.

Du. What to peruerfeneffe? you vnciull Ladie
To whose ingrate, and vnauspicious Altars
My soule the faithfullit offerings have breath'd out
That ere devotion tender'd. What shall I do?
Ol. Even what it please my Lord, that shall become him.
Du. Why should I not (had I the heart to do it)
Like to th'Egyptian thefie, at point of death
Kill what I love: (a fauage jealousie,
That sometime fauours nobly) but heare me this:
Since you to non-regardance caft my faith,
And that I partly know the instrumen
That crewe me from my true place in your favour:
Llue you the Marble-breded Tirant fill,
But this your Minion, whom I know you love,
And whom, by heauen I swears, I tender dearly,
Hum I will tare out of that cruell eye,
Where he fits crowned in his masters fight,
Come boy with me, my thoughts are ripe in mischiefe:
Ile sacrifice the Lambe that I doe love,
To feight a Rauens heart within a Doue.

U. And I most locum, apd, and willinge,
To do you red, a thousand deaths would dye.

Ol. Where goes Cefario?

Pis. After him I love,
More then I love thefe eyes, more then my life,
More by all mores, then ere I shall love wife.

If I do feigne, you wittenesse abuse
Panish my life, for tainting of my love.

Ol. Aye me defteeted, how am I beguiled?

U. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?

Ol. Halt thou forgott thy felie? Is it fo long?

Call forth the holy Father.

Du. Come, away.
Du. Husband?
Ol. I Husband. Can he that deny?
Du. Her husband, firrah!

Pis. No my Lord, not I.
Ol. Alas, it is the baladelfe of thy feare,

That makes thee frangile thy propriety:
Fere not Cefario, take thy fortunes vp,
Be that thou know'lt thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear't.

Enter Prieff.

Ol. Welcome Father:
Father, I charge thee by thy reuerence
Heree to vnfold, though lately we intended
To keepe in darkenesse, what occasion now
Reveale before 'tis ripe: what thou dost know
Hath newly pist, between this youth, and me.

Prieff. A Contract of eternall bond of love,
Confirmed by mutuall loyned of your hands,
Attented by the holy clofe of lippes,
Strengtnd by enterchangement of your rings,
And all the Ceremonie of this compact?

Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my graue
I have travailed but two houres.

Du. O thou dissimbling Cub: what wilt thou be
When time hath bow'd a grizzle on thy cacke?
Or will not elles thy craft fo quickly grow,
That thine owne trip shall be thine ouerthrow:
Farewell, and take her, but direcly thy feete,
Where thou, and I (henceforth) may never meet.

Pis. My Lord, I do protest.
Ol. O do not swear,
Hold little faith, though thou haft too much feare.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. For the loue of God a Surgeon, send one presently to fir Toby.
Ol. What's the matter?

And. H'm brooke my head a-croffe, and has sign'd fir Toby a bloody Coxecombe too : for the loue of God your helpe, I had rather then forty pound I were at home.

Ol. Who has done this fir Andrew?

And. The Count Gentleman, we tooke him for a Coward, but he's the verie dizzell incardinate.

Du. My Gentleman Cefario?

And. Odd's lifelings heere is he : you broke my head for nothing, and that I did, I was fent on to do't by fir Toby.

Pis. Why do you speake to me, I never hurt you : you drew your sword vpon me without caufe,
But I beffcape you faire, and hurt you not.

Enter Toby and Clown.

And. If a bloody coxecombe be a hurt, you haue hurt me : I thinkke you fet nothing by a bloody Coxecombe.

Heree comes fir Toby halting, you shall haue more: but if he had not beene in drinke, hee would haue tickel'd you other gates then he did.

Du. How now Gentleman? how ist with you?

To. That's all one, his hurt me, and there's th'end on't; Sot, didst see Dicke Surgeon, eat?

Ol. O he's drinke fir Toby an houre agoe: his eyes were fet at eight i' the morning.

To. Then he's a Rogue, and a paffy measures panyn: I hate a drunken rogue.

Ol. Away with him? Who hath made this hauocke with them?

And. I le helpe you fir Toby, because we'll be dreffed together.

To. Will you helpe an Affe-head, and a coxecombe, & a knave: a thin fac'd knave, a gull?

Ol.
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

Os. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to too. Enter Sebastian.
Seb. I am sorry Madam I have hurt your kinman: But had it beene the brother of my blood, I must have done no leffe with wit and safety. You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you:

Pardon me (sweet one) even for the vowe.

We made each other, but so late ago.

Du. One face, one voice, one habit, and two person.

A natural Perfection, that is, and is not.

Seb. Antonio; O my deere Antonio,
How haue the hours rack'd, and tortur'd me,
Since I haue lost thee?

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that Antonio?

Ant. How haue you made diuision of your selfe,
An apple clef in two, is not more twin
Then these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Os. Mother, wonderfull.

Seb. Do you stand there? I never had a brother: Nor can there be that Dethy in my nature
Of heere, and every where. I had a sifter,
Whom the blinde waues and furies haue devour'd:
Of charity, what kinne are you to me?

What Countremen? What name? What Parentage?

Urs. Of Misfortune: Sebastian was my Father,
Such a Sebastian was my brother too:
So went he suited to his watery tombe:
If spirits can assume both forme and selfe,
You come to Right vs.

Seb. A Spirit I am indeed,
But am in that dimension grocely clad,
Which from the wombe I did participate.

Were you a woman, as the refl goes euene,
I should my tears let fall vpon your cheekes,
And say, thrice welcome drowned Viola.

Vio. My father had a moase vpon his brow.

Seb. And foe had mine.

Vio. And dide that day when Viola from her birth
Had numbered thirteene yeares.

Seb. O that record is lusty in my soule,
He finisht indeed his mortall soule
That day that made my sifer thirteene yeares.

Vio. If nothing lets to make vs happy both,
But this my faultfull wyfeth attyre:
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance,
Of fortune, time, fortune, do co-here and sume
That I am Viola, which to confirmme
Ile bring you to a Captaine in this Towne,
Where lye my maiden weeds: by whole gentle helpe,
I was prefer'd to ferue this Noble Count :
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath beene betweene this Lady, and this Lord.

Seb. So comes it Lady, you have bene mittooke:
But Nature to her bias diew in that,
You would have bin contracted to a Maid,
Nor are you therein (by my life) dec'd d'un,
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Du. Be not amas'd, right noble is his blood:
If this be foo, as yet the glaffe feemes true,
I shall have sharre in this most happy wracke,
Boy, thou hast faile to me a thousand times,
Thou neuer should'ye lose woman like me.

Vio. And all thosse sayings, will I ouer sweare,
And all thosse sweareings keepe as true in soule,
As doth that Orbed Continent, the fire,
That fevers day from night.

Du. Glue me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy womans weeds.

Urs. The Captaine that did bring me first on shore
Hath my Maides garments: he ypon some Action
Is now in durance, at Malvolio's suite,
A Gentleman, and follower of my Ladies.

Os. He shall inlarge him; fetch Malvolio hither,
And yet alse, now I remember me,
They say poore Gentleman, he's much disract.

Enter Cleone with a Letter, and Fabian.

A moost extraffing frensie of mine owne.
From my remembrance, clearly banlif his.
How does he fii rah?

Cl. Truely Madam, he holds Brineheuk at the flues end as well as a man in his cafe may do: has heere wit a letter to you, I should have gien't you to day morning. But as a madmans Epilites are no Goepeles, fo it skilles not much when they are deliver'd.

Os. Open't, and read it.

Cl. Looke then to be well edified, when the Foole delivers the Madman. By the Lord Madam.

Os. How now,art thou mad?

Cl. No Madam, I do but reade madneffe: and your Ladyship will haue it as it ought to bee, you must allow Vox.

Os. Prethee reade ithy right wits.

Cl. So I do Madama; but to reade his right winkis, is to reade thus: therefore, perpend my Princeef, and glue eare.

Os. Read it you, sippah.

Fab. Reads. By the Lord Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: Though you have put mee into darkneffe, and gien your drunken Coline rule over me, yet haue I the benefit of my senses as well as your Ladyship. I have your owne letter, that induced mee to the fime abundance I put on; with the which I doubt not, but to do my selfe much right, or you much shame: thinke of me as ye please. I leave my duty a little vntthought of, and speake out of my injury. The madly vs'd Malvolio.

Os. Did he write this?

Cl. Madam.

Du. This favours not much of distraction.

Os. See heer deliver'd Fabian, bring him hither: My Lord, fo pleafe you, these things further thought on, To thinke me as well a filter, as a wife,
One day shall crowne th'alliance only, fo pleafe you, Hereat my house, and at my proper coft.

Du. Madam, I am most apt b'carme your offer:
Your Mafter quits you: and for your feare done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So farre beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me Maffuer, fo long:
Here is my hand, you shall from this time bee your Maffuer Miftris.

Os. A fitter, you are the.

Enter Malvolio.

Du. Is this the Madman?

Os. I my Lord, this fame: How now Malvolio?

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,

Notorious wrong.

Os. Haue I Malvolio? No.

Mal. Lady you haue, pray you peruse that Letter. You must not now denie it is your hand,
Write ut if you can,in hand,or phraze.
Or say, tis not your scale, not your invention:
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me in the modestie of honor,
Why you have given me such clear light of savour,
Bad me come smiling, and crooke-garter'd to you,
To put on yellow stockings, and to frowne
Upon Sir Toby, and the lighter people:
And acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be impris'd,
Kept in a darke houfe, visited by the Priest,
And made the most notorious grecce and gull,
That ere invention plaid on? Tell me why?

Ol. Alas Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though I confesse much like the Charracter:
But out of quefion, tis eMaris hand.
And now I do bethinke me, it was thee
First told me thou waft mad; then cam't in smiling,
And in such formes, which here were pretifpo'd
Upon thee in the Letter: prethee be content,
This practice hath most fireely past upon thee:
But when we know the grounds, and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the Plaintiff and the Judge
Of thine owne caufe.

Fab. Good Madam hearce me speake,
And let no quarrel, nor no braise to come,
Taint the condition of this prefent hour,
Which I have wondred at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confesse my felfe, and Toby
Set this deuell against Malvolio here,
Upon fome rubborne and vncourteous parts
We have conceiv'd against him. Maria writ
The Letter, at fir Toffs great importence,
In remembrance whereof, he hath married her:
How with a sportfull malice it was follow'd,
May rather plucke on laughter then ruenge,
If that the injuries be fufficie weigh'd,
That hau'e on both fides past.

Ol. Alas poore Foolle, how haue they baffe'd thee?
Of. Why fome are borne great, fome achtieue greatneffe, and fome haue grentneffe throwne vpon them. I was one fir, in this Enterlude, one ftr Topas fir, but that's all one: By the Lord Foolle, I am not mad; but do you remember, Madam, why laugh you at fuch a barren rafcall, and you smile not he's gag'd: and thus the whirlegigge of time, brings in his ruenge.

Mal. He be reveng'd on the whole packe of you?
Ol. He hath bene moft notoriously abu'd.

Du. Pursue him, and entreate him to a peace:
He hath not told vs of the Captaine yet,
When that is knowne, and golden time conuents
A folemne Combination fhall be made
Of our deere foolles. Meane time sweet fitter,
We will not part from hence. Cefario come
(For fo you fhall be while you are a man:)
But when in other habites you are feene,
Otho's Miftris, and his fancies Queene.

Exeunt

Clowne fings.

When that I was and a little time boy,
With boy bo, the wind and the raine:
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the raine it raineth every day,
But when I came to man's estate,
With boy bo, &c.
GainstKnowes and Theues men float their gate,
For the raine, &c.

But when I came alas to wise,
With boy bo, &c.
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the raine, &c.

But when I came unto my bodys,
With boy bo, &c.
With roffettes still had drunken beades,
For the raine, &c.

A great rabble ago the world began,
Boy bo, &c.
But that's all one, our Play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.

FINIS.
The Winters Tale.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Arch. Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

If you shall chance (Camillo) to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on-foot, you shall fea (as I have taid) great difference between our Bohemia, and your Sicilia.

Cam. I thinke, this comming Summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the Visitation, which hee duly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our Entertainment shall flame vs: we will be jubilific in our Loues: for indeed—

Cam. 'Befeech you—

Arch. Verely I speake it in the freedome of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence— in so rare—I know not what to say— Wee will give you sleepy Drinks, that your Sences (vn-intelligent of our Insufficiency) may, though they cannot preyse vs, as little accufe vs.

Cam. You pay a great deale to deare, for what's given freely.

Arch. 'Beleeue me, I speake as my vnderstanding instructs me, and as mine honestie puts it to vterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot shew himselfe over-kind to Bohemia: They were traynd together in their Child-hoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot chufe but brachow now. Since their more Dignities, and Royall Necelilities, made seperation of their Societie, their Encounters (though not Personall) hath been Royally attorned with enter-change of Gifts, Letters, louing Embasures, that they have seem'd to be together, though absent:fooke hands, as over a Vast; and embrace'd as it were from the ends of oppoied Winds. The Heauens continue their Loues.

Arch. I thinke there is not in the World, either Malice or Matter, to alter it. You have an vnscarable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius: it is a Gentleman of the greatef Promtite, that euer came into my Note.

Cam. I very well agree with you, in the hopes of him: it is a gallant Child; one, that (indeed) Physicks the Subject, makes old hearts fresh: they that went on Crutches ere he was borne, desiere yet their life, to see him a Man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes: if there were no other excuse, why should desiere to live.

Arch. If the King had no Sonne, they would desiere to live on Crutches till he had one.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamillius, Polixenes, Camillo.

Pol. Nine Changes of the Watry-Starre hath been The Shepards Note, since we have left our Throne Without a Burthen: Time as long againe Would be fill'd vp (my Brother) with our Thanks, And yet we should, for perpetuitie, Goe hence in debt: And therefore,like a Cypher (Yet standing in rich place) I multiply With one we thankes you, many thousands moe, That goe before it.

Leo. Stay your Thanks a while, And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to morrow:

I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance, Or breed upon our abfence, that may blow No fneaping Winds at home, to make vs fly, This is put forth too truly: beside, I haue fay'd To tyre your Royaltie.

Leo. We are tougher (Brother) Then you can put vs to't.

Pol. No longer fay.

Leo. One Seeue'nighther longer.

Pol. Very ftooth, to morrow.

Leo. Wee 'le part the time betweene's themand in that Ie no gaine-saying.

Pol. Presse me not ('befeech you) fo:

There is no Tongue that moues;none i' th'World So foon as yours,could win me: fo it shoul now, Were there necel.Slice in your requet, although 'Twere needfull I deny'd it. My Affaires Doe even drag me home-ward: which to hinder, Were (in your Loue) a Whip to me; my fay, To you a Charge, and Trouble: to faue both, Farewell (our Brother).

Leo. Tongue-ty'd our Queene? speake you.

Her. I had thought (Sir) to have held my peace, vntill You had drawne Oithes from him, not to fay you(Sir) Charge him too coldly. Tell him,you are sure All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction, The by-gone-day proclaym'd, fay this to him, He's beat from his beft ward.

Leo. Well fayd, Hermione.

Her. To tell, he longs to fee his Sonne, were strong: But let him fay fo then, and let him goe; But let him fwear fo, and he shall not fay, We'll thwack him hence with Diuaffes. Yet of your Royall prudence, Ile adventure The borrow of a Weeke. When at Bohemia You take my Lord, Ile give him my Commiffion, To let him there a Moneth,behind the Geft Prefix't for parling: yet (good-deed) Leontes, I love thee not a larre oth' Clock, behind A a What What Lady the her Lord. You’re thy fay?
Pol. No, Madame.
Her. Nay, but you will?
Pol. I may not verely.
Her. Verely?
You put me off with limber Vowes: but I,
Though you would feek t’avenphere the Stars with Oaths,
Should yet fay, Sir, no going: Verely
You fhall not goe: a Ladies Verely is
As potent as a Lords. Will you goe yet?
Force me to keepe you as a Prifoner,
Not like a Guest: so you fhall pay your Fees
When you depart, and fake your Thanks. How fay you?
My Prifoner? or my Guest? by your dread Verely,
One of them you fhall be.
Pol. Your Guett then, Madame:
To be your Prifoner, shoudl import offending;
Which is for me, leffe eafe to commit,
Then you to punifh.
Her. Not your Gueter then,
But your kind Hosteffe. Come, Ile quefition you
Of my Lords Tricks, and yours, when you were Boyes:
You were prety Lordings then?
Pol. We were (faye Queene)
Two Lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But fuch a day to Morrow, as to day,
And to be Boy eternall.
Her. Was not my Lord
The verry Wag o’t two?
Pol. We were as twyn Lamba, that did frisk i’t Sun,
And bleat the one at th’other: what we chang’d,
Was Innocence, for Innocence we knew not
The Doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream’d
That any did: Had we purf’d that life,
And our weake Spirits ne’re been higher rear’d
With stronger blood, we should have anwers’d Heaven
Boldly, not guilty; the Impofition clear’d,
Hereditarie ours.
Her. By this we gather
You have tript fince.
Pol. O my moft sacred Lady,
Temptations have fince then been borne to’s: for
In those vnleg’d days, was my Wife a Girl;
Your precious felfe had then not crofs’d the eyes
Of my young Play-fellow.
Her. Grace to boot:
Of this make no conclusion, leaff you fay
Your Queene and I are Drylls; yet goe on,
Th’offences we have made you doe, wee’le anfwer,
If you fin’l anfwer’d with vs: and that with vs
You did continue fault; and that you flipt not
With any, but with vs.
Leo. Is he wouled yet?
Her. Hee’le fay (my Lord,)
Leo. At my requesl, he would not:
Hermione (my deareft) thou neuer fpoke’ft
To better purpofe.
Her. Neuer!
Leo. Neuer, but once.
Her. What have I twice faid well? when wasn’t before?
I prethee tell me: cram’s with prafes, and make’s
As fat as tame things: One good deed, dying tongueuleffe,
Slaughter a thoufand, wayting upon that.
Our prafes are our Wages. You may ride’s
With Dote soft Kiffe a thousand Furlongs, ere
With Spur we heat an Acre. But to th’ Goal:
My laft good deed, was to entreat his fay.
What was my firft? it ha’s an elder Sifter,
Or I mistake you O, would her Name were Grace.
But once before I fpoke to th’ purpofe: when?
Nay, let me have’t: I long.
Leo. Why, that was when
Three crabb’d Moneths had fow’d themfelves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white Hand;
A clap thy felle my Love: then didft thou utter,
I am yours for ever.
Her. ’Tis Grace indeed.
Why lo-you now! I have fpoke to th’ purpofe twice:
The one, for euer earn’d a Royall Husband;
Th’other, for some while a Friend.
Leo. Too hot, too hot:
To mingle friendship faire, is mingling bloods,
I have Tremor Cordis on me: my heart daunces,
But not for joy; not joy.
This Entertainment
May a free face put on: derive a Liberrle
From Heartineft, from Bonnite, fertile Bofome,
And well become the Agent ‘t may; I grant:
But to be pailing Palmes, and pinching Fingers,
As now they are, and making prais’d Smiles
As in a Looking-Glaife; and then to figh, as ‘twere
The Mort o’th Deere: oh, that is entertainment
My Bofome likes not, nor my Browne.
Mamillius,
Art thou my Boy?
Mam. I, my good Lord.
Leo. I’fecks:
Why that’s my Bawcock: what’s that smutch’d thy Nose?
They fay it is a Coppy out of mine. Come Captain,
We muft be neath; not neath, but cleanly, Captain:
And yet the Steere, the Heyfter, and the Calfe,
Are all call’d Neat. Still Virginia ling
Upon his Palme? How now (you want Calfe)
Art thou my Calfe?
Mam. Yes, if you will (my Lord.)
Leo. Thou want’st a rough path, & the foles that I have To be full, like me; yet they fay we are Almoft as like as Eggs; Women fay fo,
(That will fay any thing.) But were they falle
As o’re-ly’d Blacks, as Wind, as Watersfalle
As Dice are to be with’d, by one that fakes
No borne ‘twixt his and mine; yet were it true,
To fay this Boy were like me. Come(Sir Page)
Looke on me with your Welkin eye:weet Vilaine, Moft dear’t, my Collepo: Can thy Dam, may be
A Refidet in my Intention flats the Center.
Thou do’ft make poifible things not fo held,
Communicat’ with Dreamen(how can this be?)
With what’s vnsale: thou coa’dblue art,
And fellow’t nothing. Then ‘tis very credent,
Thou may’t co-loyne with something, and thou do’ft,
(And that beyond Commifion) and I find it,
(And that to the Infection of my Braines,
And harding of my Browes.)
Pol. What means Stellas?
Her. He fome thing femees vnwell’d.
Pol. How’s my Lord?
Leo. What cheere? how is’t with you, beft Brother?
Her. You look as if you held a Brow of much diftraction:
Are you mou’d (my Lord?)
Leo. No, in good earneft.
How sometimes Nature will betray it’s folly?
It’s orderneffe? and make it felle a Paftime
To harder bofomes? Looking on the Lynes
Of my Boyes face, me thoughtes I did requoyle
Twentie three yeares, and saw my feste vn-breech'd,
In my greene Velvet Coat; my Dagge muzzel'd,
Leaft it should bite it's Matter, and fo proue
(As Ornaments oft do) too dangerous:
How liker me thought I then was to this Kernell,
This Squabh, this Gentleman. Mine honest Friend,
Will you take Egges for Money?

Mam. No (my Lord) he fight.

Leo. You will: why happy man be's dole. My Brother
Are you fto fond of your young Prince, as we Doe seeme to be of ours?

Pol. If at home (Sir)
He's all my Exercise, my Mirth, my Matter;
Now my owne Friend, and then mine Enemy;
My Paralifie, my Soullier: State-man; all:
He makes a folyes dayshort as December,
And with the varying child-neffe, cure in me
Thoughts, that would thick my blood.

Leo. So stands this Squire
Off'd with me: We two will walke (my Lord)
And leave you to your gracer step:
Hermiones,
How thou lov'st vs, shew in your Brothers welcome;
Let what is desir in Sicily, be cheaper:
Next to thy felle, and my young Roer, he's Apparant to my heart.

Her. If you would fecke vs,
We are yours Th' Garden shall's attend you there?
Leo. To your owne bent dispose you'll be found,
Be you beneath the Sky: I am anging now,
(Though you perceive me not how I give Lyne)
Goe too, goe too.

How she holds vp the Neb? the Byll to him?
And armes her with the boldneffe of a Wife
To her allowing Husband. Gone already,
Ynch-thick, knee-deepere head and eares a fork'd one.
Goe play (Boy) play: thy Mother plays, and I
Play too, but do fradge'd a part, whole issue
Will hifie me to my Grazer Contempt, and Clamor
Will be my Knell. Goe play (Boy) play, there have been (Or I am much deceu'd) Cuckolds ere now,
And many a man there is (even at this present,
Now, while I speake this) holds his Wife by th' Arme,
That little thinkes she ha's been flay'd in's abscence,
And his Pond fimp'd by his next Neighbour (by Sir, my) Neighbor) nay, there's comfort in't,
While, others men have Gastes, and those Gastes open'd
(As mine) against their will. Should all despire
That have revoluted Wises, the tenth of Man kind
Would hang themselves. Physick for't, there's none:
It is a bawdy Planet, that will strike
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis pow'refull thinkes it:
From Eaf't, Wef't, North, and South, be it concluded,
No Barricado for a Beverly. Know by,
It will let in and out the Enemy,
With bag and baggage: many thousand on's
Have the Diseafe, and feel't not. How now Boy?

Mam. I am like you fay.

Leo. Why, that's some comfort.
What Camillo there?

Leo. Goe play (Mamillio) thou'ret an honest man:
Camillo, this great Sir will yet flay longer.

Cam. You had much ado to make his Anchor hold,
When you caft out, it fill came home.

Leo. Didst note it?

Cam. He would not stay at your Petitions, made
His Busineffe more material.

Leo. Didst perceiue it?

They're here with me already, whispering, rounding:
Sicilia is a fo-forth: 'tis farre gone,
When I shall guff it laft. How can't (Camilla)
That he did flay?

Cam. At the good Queens entretie.

Leo. At the Queens be't: Good should be pertinent,
But fo it is, it is not. Was this taken
By any vnderstanding Pate but thine?
For thy Conceit is soaking, will draw in
More then the common blockes. Not noted, is't,
But of the finer Nature? by some Severalls
Of Head-peece extraordinarie? Lower Messes
Perchance are to this Busineffe purblind? say.

Cam. Busineffe, my Lord? I thinke most vnderstand
Bukania playes here longer.

Leo. Ha?

Cam. Stayes here longer.

Leo. I, but why?

Cam. To satisfie your Highnesse, and the Entreties
Of our much gracios Mifrettie.

Leo. Satisfie?

Th'entreties of your Mifrettie? Satisfie?
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee (Camilla)
With all the neerest things to my heart, as well
My Chamber-Councells, wherein(Priest-like) thou
Haft clean'd my Bofome: I from thee departed
Thy Penitent reform'd: but we have beened
Deciud in thy Integrite, deciud
In that which fecmes fo.

Cam. Be it forbid (my Lord.)

Leo. To hide vpon't: thou art not honest or
If thou inclin't that way, thou art a Coward,
Which boxes honetie behind, refraying
From Courte requir'd: or else thou muft be counted
A Servant, graffed in my ferous Tru't,
And therein negligent: or else a Foole,
That feet a Game play'd home, the rich Stake drawne,
And tak't it all for leas.

Cam. My gracious Lord,
I may be negligent; foolill, and fearefull,
In every one of these, no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, feare,
Among the infinite doings of the World,
Sometime puts forth in your affairs (my Lord.)
If ever I was willfull-negligent,
It was my folly: if industriously
I play'd the Foole; it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end: if ever fearefull
To doe a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, twas a feare
Which oft infects the wifheit: these (my Lord)
Are fuch allow'd Infirmitiets, that honestie
Is never free of. But befeech your Grace
Be plainer with me, let me know my Trepas
By it's owne vifage; if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leo. Ha! not you feene Camillo?

(But that's paft doubt; you haue, or your eye-glasse
Is thicker then a Cuckolds Horne) or heard?
(For to a Vilion fo apparant, Rumor
Cannot be mute) or thought? (for Cognition Refides not in that man, that do's not think)

A 2 My
The Winters Tale.

My wife is slippering? If thou wilt confesse,
Or else be impudently negatie,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought, then say
My wife's a holy-horfe, deferves a Name
As ranke as any flax-wrench, that puts to Before her troth-plight: say't, and justify't.

Cam. I would not be a flander-by, to hear
My soueraine miftreffe clouded fo, without
My present vengeance taken: I threw my heart,
You never spoke what did become you leffe
Then this; which to retracte, were fin
As deepe as that, though true.

Leo. Is whifpering nothing?
Is leaning Checke to Checke; is meating Noefe?
Killing with in-side flipp'd: flapping the Cariler
Of laughter, with a light? (a note infallible
Of breaking honest) horfing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing Clocks more twift?
Houres, minutes? Noone, mid-night? and all eyes
Blind with the Pin and web, but theirs; theirs only,
That I could knowe be wicked? Is this nothing?
Why then the World, and all that's in't, is nothing,
The couring skie is nothing. Bobemia nothing,
My wife is nothing, nor Nothing have thefe Nothings,
If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my Lord, be cur'd
Of this difeased Opinion, and beimes,
For 'tis most dangerous.
Leo. Say it be, 'tis true.

Cam. No, no, my Lord.
Leo. It is: you lye, you lye:
I say thou lyest Camille, and I hate thee, pronounce thee a groff Leowt, a mindleffe Slave,
Or else a houering Temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once fee good and evil,
Inclining to them both: were my Wifes Luyer
InfeCed (as her life) she would not live
The running of one Glafs.

Cam. Who do's infect her?
Leo. Why he that weares her like her Medall, hanging
About his neck (Bobemia) who, if I
Had Seruants true about me, that bare eyes
To fee a like mine Honor, as their Profit,
(Their owne particular Thiefs) they would doe that
Which shold vnoe more doeing: I, and thou
His Cup-bearer, whom I from meaner forme
Hauet Bench'd, and rear'd to Worthiip, who may't fee
Plainly, as Heaven fees Earth, and Earth fees Heaven,
How I am gill'd, might'st be-spice a Cup,
To give mine Enemy a lafting Winke:
Which Draught to me, were cordiall.

Cam. Sir (my Lord)
I could doe this, and that with no rash Potion,
But with a lingering Draught, that should not worke Maliciously, like Poyson: But I cannot Beleeue this Crack to be in my dread Miftraffe
(So foueraigne being Honorable.)
I hau' eu'd thes,

Leo. Make that thy question, and goe rot:
Do't think I am so muddy, fo vnfeyled,
To aoont my felle in this vexation?
Sully the puritie and whitenesse of my Sheetes (Which to preferre, is sleepe; which is spotted,
Is Godes, Thorne. Nettles, Tayles of Wafps)
Glue'd fast to the blood of th' Prince, my Sonne,
(Who I doe think is mine, and loue as mine)
Without ripe mowing to't? Would I doe this? could man so blench?

Cam. I must beleeue you(Sir)
I doe, and will fetch off Bobemia for't:
Provided, that when he's remou'd, your Highnesse
Will take againe your Queene, as yours at first,
Even for your Sonnes fake, and thereby for sealing
The injuria of Tongues, in Courts and Kingdomes
Knowne, and alio'd to yours.

Leo. Thou do'st alio'd me,
Even fo as I mine owne courfe have set downe:
I lie geue no blenham to her Honor, none.

Cam. My Lord,
Goe then; and with a countenaunce as cleare
As Friendship weares at Feasts, keepe with Bobemia,
And with your Queene? I am his Cap-bearer,
If from me he haue wholesome Beuendar.
Account me not your Seruant.

Leo. This is all:
Do't, and thou haft the one halfe of my heart;
Do't not bend my spirit till thine owne.

Cam. Hee do's, my Lord.
Leo. I will ferme friendly, as thou haft adu'd me. Exit
Cam. O misera ble Lady. But for me,
What cafe stand I in? I must be the pooyfern
Of good Puxaxen, and my ground to do't,
Is the obedience to a Master; one,
Who in Rebellion with himselfe, will haue
All that are his, fo too. To doe this deed,
Promotion follows: If I could find example
Of thousand's that had struck aunyted Kings,
And four'd after, I'd not doe't; But since
Nor Baffe, nor Stone, nor Parchment bears not one, Let Villianie it selfe forwar't. I must Forfake the Court: to doe't, or no, is certaine
To me a breake-neck. Happy Starreaigne now,
Here comes Bobemia. Enter Puxaxen.

Pol. This is strange: Me thinkes
My favor here begins to warpe. Not speake?

Good day Camille.

Cam. Hayle most Royall Sir.
Pell. What is the Newes Ith Court?
Cam. None rare (my Lord.)
Pell. The King hath on him such a countenaunce,
As he had loft some Prouince, and a Region
Lou'd, as he loves himselfe: even now I met him
With cufomarie complements, when hee
Waiting his eye's to th' contrary, and falling
A Lippe of much contempt, (speakes from me, and)
So leaves me, to consider what is breeding,
That changes thus his Manners,
Cam. I dare not know (my Lord.)
Pell. How dare not? doe not do you know, and dare not?
Be intelligible to me, 'lis theroabout;
For to your felle, what you doe know, you mutt,
And cannot fay, you dare not. Good Camille,
Your chang'd complexities are to me a Mirror,
Which shews me mine chang'd too:for I must be
A partie in this alteration,finding
My felle thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There is a fackesnefe
Which puts fome of vs in dilember, but I cannot name the Dilembe, and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.
Pell. How came it to be?
Cam. Make me not fighted like the Bafifquie.

I hau'
The Winter's Tale.

I have look'd on thousands, who have savor the better.
By my regard, but kill'd none so: Camillo,
As you are certainly a Gentleman, thereto
Clerke-like experienc'd, which no leafe almore,
Our Gentry, then our Parents Noble Names,
In whose successe we are great: I befeech you,
If you now ought which do's behouse my knowledge,
Thereof to be inform'd, impoff'n't not
In ignorant concealment.
Camillo. I may not anfwer.
Pol. A Sickenife caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be anfwer'd. Do'th thou hear Camillo,
I coniure thee, by all the parts of man,
Which Honor do's acknowledge, wherefoe the head
Is not this Suit of mine, that thou declare,
What incencde thou do's gher, of harme
Is creeping toward me; how farre off, how neere,
Which way to be presented, if to be:
If not, how beft to bear it.
Camillo. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charg'd in Honor, and by him
That I think Honoroble: therefore marke my counfals,
Which must be eu'n as ftrively followed, as
I mean to vter it; or both your felfe, and me,
Cry loft, and fo good night.
Pol. On, good Camillo.
Camillo. I am appoint'd him to murder thee.
Pol. By whom, Camillo?
Camillo. By the King.
Pol. For what?
Camillo. He thinkes, nay with all confidence he sweares,
As he had feen't, or been an Instrument
To vce you to't, that you have touch'd his Queene Forbidde'tly.
Pol. Oh then, my belt blood turne
To an infected Gelly, and my Name
Be yoak'd with his, that did betray the Belt:
Turns then my fpeechfull Reputation to
A favour, that may strike the dulfeft Noithill
Where I arrive, and my approch be shun'd,
Nay hated worfe, or then the great't Infection
That ere was heard, or read.
Pol. Swear his thought out
By each particular Starre in Heaven, and
By all their Influences; you may as well
Forbid the Sea for to obey the Moone,
As (or by Oath) remove, or (Counfale)fake
The Fable of his Fally, whose foundation
Is p'y'd upon his Faithe, and will continue
The standing of his Body.
Pol. How should this grow?
Camillo. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's groome, then question how 'tis borne.
If therefore you dare truft my honoreth,
That lyes enclofe'd in this Trunke, which you
Shall bear along impaw'd, away to Night,
Your Followers I will whifer to the Bufineffe,
And will by twoes, and threes, at feveral Potters,
Clear them o' th' Citle: For my felfe, I put My fortunes to your service(whiche are here
By this discouerie loft.) Be not vncertaine,
By the honor of my Parents, I
Have vertre' Truth:which if you fecke to prove,
I dare not flande by; nor shall you be fater,
Then one condemne by the Kings owne mouth:
Thereon his Execution sworne.

Pol. I doe beleue thee:
I saw his heart in his face.Give me thy hand,
Be Pilot to me, and thy places flall
Sell neibhour mine. My Ships are ready, and My people did expect my hence departure
Two daies afe. This Ifalouie
Is for a precious Creature: as fhee's rare,
Muft it be great; and, as his Perfons mightie,
Muft it be violent: and, as he do's conceive,
He is difhonor'd by a man, which ever
Profede'd to him: why his Reneges muft
In that be made more bitter. Fear e're-shades me:
Good Expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious Queene, part of his Theame:but nothing
Of his ill-ta'n foulution. Come Camillo,
I will refpect thee as a Father, if Thou bear't my life off, hence: Let vs auoid.
Camillo. It is in mine authority to command
The Keys of all the Potters: Pleafe your Highness
To take the vrgent houre, Come Sir, away. Exeunt.

Aetvs Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hermione, Mamillius, Ladies: Leontes, Antigonus, Lords.

Hermione. Take the Boy to you: he fo troubles me,
'Tis paft endureing.

Sir, Come(my gracious Lord)
Shall I be your play-fellow?

Mam. No, Ile none of you.

Hermione. Why(my sweet Lord?)

Mam. You'll kill me hard, and speake to me, as if I were a Baby still. I love you better.

Lady. And why (o my Lord?)

Mam. Not for becaufe
Your Brows are blacker (yet black-browes they say
Become some Women beft, fo that there be not Too much haire there, but in a Cemicircle,
Or a half-Moone, made with a Pen.)

Lady. Who taught this?

Mam. I learn'd it out of Women faces: pray now,
What colour are your eye-browes?

Lady. Blew(my Lord.)

Mam. Nay, that's a mocke: I have feene a Ladies Nofe
That's beene blewne, but not her eye-browes.

Hermione. Harke ye,

The Queene(your Mother)rounds apacese whoe shall Presend our servises to a fine new Prince
One of these daies, and then you'd wanton with vs,
If we would have you.

Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly Bulke(good time encounter her.)

Her. What wisome firs amongst you?Come Sir, now
I am for you againe: Pray you fit by vs,
And tell's a Tale.

Mam. Merry, or sad, sh'lt be?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad Tale's best for Winter:
I have one of Sprights, and Goblins.

Her. Let's have that (good Sir.)

Come on, fit downe, come on, and doe your best,
To fright me with your Sprights:you're powerfull at it.

A 3
The Winters Tale.

St. Mam. There was a man.

Her. Nay, come sit downe; then on.

S. Mam. Dwelt by a Church-yard: I will tell it softly, Yond Cricket'll shall not hear it.

Her. Come on then, and gi't me in mine care.

Leo. Was hee met there? his Traine? Camillo with him?

Lord. Behind the tuft of Pines I met them, neuer Saw I men soewre fo on their way: I eyed them Euen to their Ships.

St. Leo. How blest am I

In my last Censure? In my true Opinion?

Allack, for leafer knowledge, how accur'd,

In being so blest? There may be in the Cup
A Spider (tceep'd, and one may drinke; depart,
And yet partake no venom: (for his knowledge
Is not inched) but if one pretend
Th'abhor'd Ingredient to his eye, make knowne
How he hath drunkke, he cracks his gorge, his fides
With violent Hefts: I have drunked, and seen the Spider.

Camillo was his helpe in this, his Pandar:

There is a Plot against my Life, my Crown; All's true that is mistrusted: that falle Villaine,
Whom I empoy'd, was pre-empoy'd by him:

He ha's discouer'd meuf Defigne, and I Remaine a pinch'd Thingyes, a very Trick
For them to play at will: how came the Poiternes So eaily open?

Lord. By his great authority,

Which often hath no leffe preuail'd,then fo,

On your command,

Leo. I know't too well.

Gie me the Boy, I am glad you did not nurse him:

Though he do's bear some signes of me, yet you Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this? Sport?

Leo. Beate the Boy hence, he shall not come about her,

Away with him, and let her spire her selfe

With that shee's big-with, for 'tis Polixenes

Ha's made thee swell thus.

Her. But I'll say he had not;

And Ile be sworn you would beleeue my sayeing,

How e're you leaue to th'Nay-ward.

Leo. You (my Lords)

Looke on her, make her well: be but about

To say she is a goodly Lady, and

The iustice of your hearts will thereto addde

'Tis pitty shee's not honest: Honorable;

Prayse her but for this her without-dore-Forme,

(Which on my faith deferes highe speech) and straute

The Shrugs, the Hum, or Ha's, (thee Petty-brands

That Calumnie doth vfe. Oh, I am out,

That Mercy do's, for Calumnie will learne

Vertue it selfe) these Shrugs, these Hum's, and Ha's,

When you have said shee's goodly, come betweene,

Ere you can say shee's honest: But be't knownne

(From him that ha's most caufe to grieve it should be)

Shee's an Adultrefte.

Her. Should a Villaine say so,

(The most repen'd Villaine in the World)

He were as much more Villaine: you (my Lord)

Doe but mistrake.

Leo. You have mistooke (my Lady)

Polixenes for Leontes: O thou Thing

(Which Ile not call a Creature of thy place,

Lest Barbarisme (making me the precedent)

Should a like Language vfe to all degrees,

And mannerly differenctiae leaue out,

Betwixt the prince and Begger!? I have said
Shee's an Adultrefte, I have said with whom:

More: shee's a Trayer, and Camillo is A Pedaratie with her, and one that knows

What shee should flame to know her selfe, But with her most vild Principall: that shee's A Bed-fwaruer, even as bad as thofe

That Vulgar glue bold'd Titles; I, and priuy

To this their late escape, Your Life.

Her. No: if I mistrake

In thofe Foundations which I build vpou,
The Centre is not bigge enough to bære
A Schoole-Boyes Top. Away with her, to Prifon:

He who shall speake for her, is a fare-off guillie,

But that he speaks.

Her. There's some ill Planet raigens:

I must be patient, till the Heaueens looke

With an Aspekt more favorable. Good my Lords,

I am not prone to weeping (as our Sex

Commonly are) the want of which vaine dew

Perchance shall dry your pitties: but I haue

That honorable Griefe lodg'd here, which burnes

Worfe then Teares drowners:beseech you all (my Lords)

With thoughts fo qualifie'd,as your Charityes

Shall bett infructe you, mesur e me; and fo

The Kings will be perform'd.

Leo. Shall I be heard?

Her. Who's is that goes with me? beseech your Highnes

My Women may be with me, for you see

My plight requires it. Doe not wepe(good Foolies)

There is no caufe:When you shall know your Mistres

Ha's deferued Prifon, then abound in Teares,

As I come out; this Action I now goe on,

Is for my better grace. Adieu (my Lord)

I never with'd to fee you forry, now

I trull I shall: my Women come,you haue leave.

Leo. Go, doe our bidding: hence.

Lord. Befeech your Highnesse call the Queene againe.

Antig. Be certaine what you do(Sir)lest your Jusitice

Prove violence, in the which three great ones suffer,

Your Selves, your Queene,your Sonne.

Lord. For her (my Lord)

I dare my life lay downe, and will do't (Sir)

Please you t'accept it, that the Queene is spotlffe

I th's eyes of Heauen, and to you (I meane

In this, which you accuе her.)

Antig. If it prove

Shee's other wise, Ile keepe my Stables where

I lodge my Wife, Ile goe in couples with her:

Then when I feele, and see her, no farther tru th her:

For euery ynych of Woman in the World,

I, euery dram of Womans flesh is falle,

If he be.

Leo. Hold your peace.

Lord. Good my Lord.

Antig. It is for you we speake, not for our selues:

You are abud'd, and by some patter on,

That will be damn'd for't:would I knew the Villaines,

I would
The Winters Tale.

I would Land-damme him: be the honor-faw'd,
I have three daughters: the eldest is eleen;
The fcond, and the third, nine: and some fife:
If this profe true, they'll pay for't. By mine Honor
Ile gell'd em all: fourteen they fhall not fee
To bring falle generations: they are co-heyres,
And I had rather glib my felfe, then they Should not produce faire lifue.

Leo. Crefte, no more:
You smell this boffice with a fense as cold
As is a dead-mans nose: but I do fee't, and feel't,
As you feele doing thus: and fee withall
The Infruments that feele.

Antig. If it be fo,
We neede no graue to burie honfly,
There's not a graine of it, the face to sweeten
The whole dangy-earth.

Leo. What lacke I credit?
Lord. I had rather you did lacke then I (my Lord)
You put this ground: and more it would content me
To haue her Honor true, then your flupition
Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leo. Why what neede we Commune with you of this? but rather follow
Our forcefull Inftigation: Our prerogative
Cals not your Counfailes, but our natural goodneffe
Imparts this: which, if you, or fuppofed,
Or foone fo, in fkill, cannot, or will not
Reli'll a truth, like vs: informe your felues,
We neede no more of your advice: the matter,
The loffe, the gaine, the ord'ring on't,
Is all properly ours

Antig. And I with (my Liege)
You had only in your fluent judgement tride it,
Without more ouertroune.

Leo. How could that be?
Either thou art moft ignorant by age,
Or thou weren't borne a fool: Camille's flight
Added to their Familiarity
(Which was as great, as ever touch'd conchure,
That lack'd fight onely, nought for approbation
But only feeing, all other circumstances
Made vp to'th deed) both put-on this proceeding.
Yet, for a greater confirmation
(For in an Act of this importance, 'twere Moft pitioes to be wilde) I have dispatch'd in poft,
To facred Delphos, to Apollo's Temple,
Chonimis and Dion, whom you know
Of fluf'd-fufficiency: Now, from the Oracle
They will bring all, whole spiritual counfaile had Shall flop, or spurre me. Haue I done well?

Lord. Well done (my Lord.)
Leo. Though I am satisfide, and neede no more
Then what I know, yet fhall the Oracle
Glue reft to th'mindes of others: such as he Whose ignorant credulity, will not Come vp to'th truth. So haue we thought it good
From our free perfon, the should be confide
Leaff that the treachery of the two, fled hence,
Be left her to performe. Come follow vs,
We are to speake in publique: for this bufiniffe
Will raffe vs all.

Antig. To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth, were knowne.

Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Paulina, a Gentleman, Gaoler, Emilia.

Paul. The Keeper of the prifon, call to him:
Let him have knowledge who I am. Good Lady,
No Court in Europe is too good for thee,
What doft thou then in prifon? Now good Sir,
You know me, do you not?
Gaol. For a worthy Lady,
And one, who much I honour.
Paul. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the Queene.
Gaol. I may not (Madam)
To the contrary I haue exprefse commandement.
Paul. Here's a doo, to haue vp honesty & honour from Th'acceffe of gentle visitors. Isn't lawfull pray you
To fee her Women? Any of them? Emilia?
Gaol. So pleafe you (Madam)
To put a-part thefe your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.
Paul. I pray now call her:
With-draw your felues.

Gaol. And Madam,
I must be prefent at your Conference.
Here's the fuch a doo, to make no flaine, a flaine,
As paffes colouring. Deare Gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious Lady?
Emil. As well as fo great, and fo forlorne
May hold together: On her ftripes, and greese
(Which neuer tender Lady hath borne greater)
She is, something before her time, delin'd.
Paul. A boy?
Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Lufty, and like to luge: the Queene receues
Much comfort ine: I sayes, my poore prifoner,
I am innocent as you,
Paul. I dare be fowane:
These dangerous, venfale Lunes i'th'King, bedrew them:
He must be told on't, and he fhall: the office
Becomes a woman beft. Tis take't upon me,
If I proue hone-mouth'd, let my tongue blifher,
And neuer to my red-look'd Anger bee
The Trumpet any more: pray you (Emilia)
Commend my beft obedience to the Queene,
If the daren trut me with her litte babe,
I'll thow't the King, and ynterake to bee
Her Advocate to th'Lord: We do not know
How he may flothen at the fight o'th Child:
The silence ofte often of pure innocence
Perlwades, when speaking failles.

Emil. Moft worthy Madam, your honor, and your goodneffe is fo evident,
That your free undertaking cannot mife
A thriling yssue: there is no Lady luing
So mete for this great errand; pleafe your Ladihip
To vifit the next room, I prelenly
Acquaint the Queene of your moft noble offer,
Who, but to day hammered of this defigne,
But durft not tempt a minifter of honour
Leaf the should be deny'd.
Scanæ Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Servants, Paulina, Antigonus, and Lords.

Leo. Nor night, nor day, no rest: It is but weakneesse
To bear the matter thus: mere weakneesse, if
The caufe were not in being: part of the caufe,
She, th'Adulteresse: for the harlot-King
Is quite beyond mine Arme, out of the blanke
And level of my braine: plot-proof: but thee,
I can hooke to me: say that the were gone,
Gitten to the fire, a moity of my rest
Might come to me again. Whole there? Where?
Ser. My Lord.
Leo. How do's the boy?
Ser. He tooke good rest to night: 'tis hop'd
His sickneffe is dicharg'd.
Leo. To fee his Noblenesse,
Conceiving the dishonour of his Mother.
He straights declin'd, droop'd, tooke it deeply,
Fallen'd, and fix'd the flame on't in himselfe:
Throw-off his Spirit, his Appetite, his Sleepe,
And down-right languish'd. Leave me solely: goe,
See how he fares: Fie, fie, no thought of him,
The worst thought of my Reneges that way
Recoyle vpon me: in himselfe too mightie,
And in his parties, his Alliance: Let him be,
Vntill a time may ferue. For present vengeance
Take it on her: Camillos, and Polincnes
Laugh at me: make their paftime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh, if I could reach them, nor Shall thee, within my powre.

Enter Paulina.

Lords. You must not enter.

Paul. Ne'er rather (good my Lords) be second to me:
Fear you his tyrannous passion more (alas)
Then the Queenes life? A gracious innocent soule,
More free, then he is jealous.

Antig. That's enough.

Ser. Madam; he hath not slept to night, commanded
None should come at him.

Paul. Not so hot (good Sir)
I come to bring him sleepe. 'Tis such as you

That creepe like shadowes by him, and do fighe
At each his needlese headings: such as you
Nourish the caufe of his awakling. I
Do come with words, as medicinal, as true;
(Heofe, as either,) to purge him of that humor,
That preffes him from sleepe.

Leo. Who noyfe there, hoa?
Paul. No noyfe (my Lord) but needfull conference,
About some Gofips for your Highneffe.

Leo. How?

Away with that audacious Lady, Antigonus,
I charg'd thee that she should not come about me,
I knew she would.

Ant. I told her so (my Lord)
On your displeasure peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leo. What? canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonestie he can: in this (Valeffe he take the course that you have done)
Commit me, for committing honer, trust it,
He shall not rule me:

Ant. La-you now, you heare,
When he will take the raine, I let her run,
But thee'll not flumble.

Paul. Good my Liege, I come:
And I beseech you heare me, we preffes
My selfe your loyall Servant, your Physitian,
Your most obedient Counsellor: yet that dares
Leffe appeare fo, in comforting your Eulitel,
Then fuch as moft feeme yours. I fay, I come
From your good Queene.

Leo. Good Queene?

Paul. Good Queene (my Lord) good Queene,
I fay good Queene,
And would by comitie, make her good fow, were I
A man, the worst about you.

Leo. Force her hence.

Paul. Let him that makes but triles of his eyes
First hand me: on mine owne accord, Ile off,
But firft, Ile do my errand. The good Queene
(For the is good) hath brought you forth a daughter,
Heere 'tis: Commends it to your blifes.

Leo. Out: A mankinde Witch? Hence with her, out o'dore: A moft Intelligencing bawd.

Paul. Not fo.

I am as ignorant in that, as you,
Le to entitle me and no left honest
Then you are mad: which is enough, Ile warrant
(As this world goes) to passe for honest:

Leo. Traitors.

Will you not push her out? Glue her the Baffard,
Thou dotard, thou art woman-tyr'd: vnroofed
By thy dame Pariter herre. Take vp the Baffard, Take vp, I fay I give to thy Croane.

Paul. For ever

V venerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak't vp the Princede, by that forced bafenelle
Which he ha's put vp'.

Leo. He dreads his Wife.

Paul. So I would you did: then 'twere past all doubt
You'd call your children, yours.

Leo. A neft of Traitors.

Ant. I am none, by this good light.

Paul. Nor I: nor any
But one that's heere: and that's himselfe: for he,
The Winters Tale.

The sacred Honor of himselfe, his Queens,
His hopful Sonnes, his Babes, betrays to Slander,
Whose sting is sharper than the Swords; and will not (For as the caw now stands, it is a Curfe
He cannot be compel'd too't) once remove
The Root of his Opinion, which is rotten,
As euer Osle, or Stone was foun.d.

Antig. I did not, Sir:
These Lords, my Noble Fellowes, if they please,
Can cleare me in't.

Lords. We can: my Royall Liege,
He is not guiltie of her comming hither.

Leo. You're lyars all.

Lords. Befeerch your Highness, give vs better credit:
We have alwayes truly feru'd you, and befeech'
So to eftimate of vs: and on our knees we begge,
(As recompence of our deare fervices
Faith, and to come) that you doe change this purpose,
Which being fo horrible, fo bloody, muft
Lead on to fome foule Ifuue. We all kneele.

Leo. I am a Feather for each Wind that blows:
Shall I live on, to fee this Baffard kneele,
And call me Father? better burne it now,
Then curle it then. But be it a let it liue.
It shall not neyther. You Sir, come you hither:
You that have beene so tenderly officious
With Lady Margeris, your Mid-wife there,
To fave this Baffards life; for'tis a Baffard,
So faire as this Beard's gray. What will you adventure,
To fave this Brat life?

Antig. Any thing (my Lord)
That my abilitie may vnnerge,
And Noblenesse impofe at leaft much:
Ile pawne the little blood which I have leaft,
To fave the Innocent; any thing perfible.

Leo. It shall be perfible; Sware by this Sword
Thou wilt performance my bidding.

Antig. I will (my Lord.)

Leo. Marke, and perfome it: feeth thou for the faile
Of any point in't, shall not onely be Death to thy felfe, but to thy lewd-tongue'd Wife, (Whom for this we pardon) We enioyne thee,
As thou art Liege-man to vs, that thou carry
This female Baffard hence, and that thou beare it
To fome remote and defart place, quite out
Of our Dominions; and that there thou leave it (Without more mercy) to it owne protection,
And favour of the Climate: as by strange fortune
It came to vs, loe doe in Justice charge thee,
On thy Soules perill, and thy Bodies torture,
That thou command it strangetly to fome place,
Where Chance may nurfe, or end it: take it vp.

Antig. I sware to doe this though a prefent death
Had beene more mercifull. Come on (poore Babe)
Some powerfull Spirit infruct the Kytes and Rauens
To be thy Nursers. Wolves and Beares, they fay, (Calling their fauagenetic fate) have done
Like offices of Pity. Sir, be properous
In more then this deed do's require; and Bleffing
Againft this Crueltie, fight on thy fide
(Poore Thing, condemn'd to loft.)

Exit.

Leo. No: Ile not reare.

Antig. I furely I'll doe this now.

Leo. Another Ifuue.

Enter a Servant.

Stru. Pleafe 'you Highneffe, Pofts
From thofe you fent to th'Oracle, are come
An houre fince: Clemency and Dion,
Being well arriued from Delphi, are both landed,
Hafing to th'Court.

Lord. So pleafe you (Sir) their speed
Hath beene beyond complte.

Leo. Twentie three dayes
They have beene abften't: 'tis good speed: fore-tells
The great Apoll suddenly will have

The
Enter Cleomines and Dion.

Cleo. The Clymant's delicate, the Ayre most sweet,
Fertile the isle, the Temple much surpassing
The common praye it beares.

Resp. For most it caught me, the Celestiall Habits,
(Me thinks I so foould terme them) and the reverence
Of the grewe Wearers. O, the Sacrifice,
How ceremonious, solemnne, and vn-earthly
It was Ph'OfFering.

Cleo. But of all the burft
And the ear-deaf' ning Voyce o' th'Oracle,
Kin to Ioues Thunder, so surpri'd my Sence,
That I was nothing.

Dis. If th'event o'th'Journey
Prose as succeffall to the Queene(O be't so)
As it hath beene to vs, rare, pleasant, speedie,
The time is worth the fte on't.

Cleo. Great Apollo
Turne all to th'beft : thefe Proclamations,
So forcing fults upon Hermione,
I little like.

Dis. The violent carriage of it
Will cleare, or end the Buineffe, when the Oracle (Thys by Apollo's great Duiue feal'd vp)
Shall the Contents difcover something rare
Even then will ruth to knowledge. Goes fresh Horfed,
And gracous be the ifue.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Leones, Lords, Officers : Hermione (as to her Trial) Ladies : Cleomines, Dion.

Leo. This Seffions (to our great griefe we pronounce) Euen pulleth 'gainft our heart. The partie try'd,
The Daughter of a King, our Wife, and one
Of vs too much belou'd. Let vs be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we fo openly
Proceed in Juslice, which shall have due course,
Euen to the Guilt, or the Purgation :
Produce the Prisoner.

OfFicer. It is his Highneffe pleasure, that the Queene Appeare in perfon, here in Court.

Silence.

Leo. Restie the Indictment.

OfFicer. Hermione, Queene to the worthy Leones, King of Sicilia, thus art here accuses and arraigns of High Treafon, in committing Adultery with Polixenes King of Bohemia, and conjuring with Camillo to take away the Life of our Souveraine Lord the King, by the Royall Husband: the pretences whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, about Hermione contrary to the Faith and Allegiance of a true Subject, dwell courtefefully and cede them, for their better safety, to fly away by Night.

Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradiceth my Accusation, and
The testimonie on my part, no other
But what comes from my selfe, it shall scarce boot me
To say, Not guilty: mine Intellige
Being counted Falsehood, shall (as I expresse it)
Be so recey'd. But thus, if Powres Divine
Behold our humane Actions (as they doe)
I doubt not then, but Innocence shall make False Accusation bloud, and Tyrannie
Tremble at Patience. You (my Lord) best know (Whom least shall verme to doe so) my past life
Hath beene as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Then Historie can pattern, though deu'd,
And play'd, to take Speculators. For behold me,
A Fellow of the Royall Bed, which owr
A Motie of the Throne: a great Kings Daughter,
The Mother to a hopeful Prince, here standing
To prate and talk with Life, and Honor, fore
Who pleafe to come, and heare, For Life, I prize it
As I weigh Griefe (which I would spare): For Honor,
'Tis a deriuation from me to mine,
And onely that I stand for. I appeale
To your owne Confidence (Sir) before Polixenes
Came to your Court, how was I in your grace,
Where looked to be so: Since he came,
With what encounter so vacuante, I
Have thynd' a Ippeares thus: if one lot beyond
The bound of Honor, or in vs, or will
That way enclining, hardned be the hearts
Of all that here me, and my neer'st of Kin
Cry fie by my Graue.

Leo. I ne're heard yet,
That any of these bolder Vices wanted
Leffe Impudence to gainsay what they did,
Then to performe it ift.

Her. That's true enough,
Though 'tis a saying (Sir) not due to me.

Leo. You will not owne it.

Her. More then Mytreffe of,
Which comes to me in name of Fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes
(With whom I am accus'd) I doe confesse
I lou'd him, as in Honor he requir'd:
With such a kind of Loue, as might become
A Lady like me; with a Loue, cuen fuch,
So, and no other, at your felfe commanded:
Which, not to have done, I think'd had been in me
Both Dilobedience, and Ingratitude
To you, and toward your Friend, whose Loue had spoke,
Euen since it could speake, from an Infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now for Conspiracie,
I know not how it taches, though it be d ift
For me to try how: All I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honett man;

And why he left your Court, the Gods themelves
(Wothing no more then 1) are ignorant.

Leo. You knew of his deportation, as you know
What you have vnderta'n to doe in's abence.

Her. Sir,
The Winters Tale.

Her. Sir,
You speak a Language that I understand not:
My Life stands in the leuell of your Dreams,
Which Ie lay downe.
Leu. Your Actions are my Dreams.
You had a Baffard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it: As you were past all blame,
(Tho' of your Façt are so) to past all truth;
Which to deny, concernes more then ausiles: for as Thy Brat hath beene call out, like to it selfe,
No Father owning it (which is indeed
More criminall in thee, then it) so thou shalt feel our justices; in whose easest passage,
Looke for no leefe then death.
Her. Sir, spare your threats: The Bugge which you would fright me with, I feake:
To me, can life be no commoditee;
The crowne and comfort of my life(your Fauer)
I do give loot, for I do feele it gone,
But know not how it went. My seconed joy,
And first fruits of my body, from his presence
I bathe, like one infirmous. My third comfort
(Star'd most unluckily) is from my breath
(The innocent milke in it most innocent mouth)
Hal'd out to murther. My felons on every Post
Proclaym'd a Strumpet: With Immodest hatred
The Child-bed privledge deny'd, which longs
To Women of all fashion. Lastly, hurried
Here, to this place, I'ch open eye, before
I have got strength of limit. Now(my liege)
Tell me what blessings I have here alee,
That I should fear to die? Therefore proceed:
But yet here is this: mistake me not: no life,
(I prize it not a straw) but for mine Honor,
Which I would loose: if I shall be condemn'd
 Upon furnizes (all proofs fleeing else,
But what your Jeaolies awake) I tell you
'Tis Rigor, and not Law. Your Honors all,
I doe referre me to the Oracle:
Apollo be my Judge.
Lord. This your request
Is altogether lift: therefore bring forth
(And in Apollo's Name) his Oracle.
Her. The Emperor of Ruflia was my Father,
Oh that he were alive, and here beholding
His Daughters Tryall: that he did but see
The flatness of my miferie; yet with eyes
Of Pity, not Reuenge.
Officer. You here shall swarne upon this sword of Jusitice,
That you (Chemenes and Dioue) have Been both at Delphos, and from thence have brought
This seal'd vp Oracle, by the Hand deliuer'd
Of great Apollo's Priest; and that since then,
You have not dard to breake the holy Seale,
Nor read the Secrets in't.
Geo Diu. All this we sweare.
Leo. Breake vp the Seales, and read.
Officer. Hermione is chaff,Poliexene blameiself, Camillo a true Sibylt, Leuentor a lauall Tyrant, his innocent Babe truly begotten, and the King shall live without an heir,if that which is lost, be not found.
Lords. Now bleiefed be the great Apollo.
Her. Pray'd.
Leo. Haft thou read truth?
Officer. I(my Lord) even so as it is here set downe.
Leo. There is no truth at all 'tis Oracle:
The Seffions shall proceed: this is mere falshood.
Sr'. My Lord the King: the King?
Leo. What is the businesse?
Sr'. O Sr, I shall be havel to report it.
The Prince your Sonne, with mere conceit, and fear
Of the Queens speed, is gone.
Leo. How? gone?
Sr'. Is dead.
Leo. Apollo's angry, and the Hauen's themselfes
Doe Ritate at my insufficie. How now there?
Paul. This news is mortall to the Queener.Look downe
And see what Death is doing.
Leo. Take her hence:
Her heart is but o're-charg'd: she will recouer.
I have too much beleue'd mine owne fuposition:
'Beleeve you tendery apply to her
Some remedies for life. (my Lord presently)
My great prophaneresse 'gainst thinke Oracle.
Ie reconcile me to Polixenes,
New owe my Queene, recall the good Camillo
(Whom I proclame a man of Truth, of Mercy)
For being transported by his that daeth
To bloody thoughts, and to revenges, I ches
Camillo for the minifter, to poynon
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command: though I with Death, and with Reward, did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: he(most humane,
And fli'd with honor) to my Kingly Guelt
Vncall'd my prafticke, quit his fortunes here
(Which you knew great) and to the hazard
Of all Incertainties, himselfe commended,
No richer then his Honors: how he glitters
Through my Ruft? and how his Piete
Do's my deeds make the blacker?
Paul. Woe the whiler.
O cut my Lace, left my heart (cracking it)
Breake too.
Lord. What fit this? good Lady?
Paul. What studied torment( Tyrant) haft for me?
In Leads, or Oyles? What old, or newer Torture
Muft I recieve? whose every word defenses
To taste of thy most worth. Thy Tyranny (Together working with thy Jeaoloues,
Fancies too weake for Boyes, too greene and idle
For Girles of Nine) O thinkke what they haue done,
And then run mad indeed: flarke-mad: for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.
That thou betray'dst't Polixenes, twas nothing,
(That did but flue thee, of a Poole, inconfant,
And damnable ingratefull) Nor was much,
Thou would'st have poynon'd good Camillo's Honor,
To have him kill a King: poore Trepaffers,
More monftrous standing by: wherefore I reckon
The casting forth to Crowes, thy Baby-daughter,
To be or none, or little: though a Deuill
Would have shed water out of fire,ere don't:
Nor is't directly layd to the death
Of the young Prince, whose honorable thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart
That could conceive a groffe and foolish Sire
Blemisht his gracious Dam: this is not, no,
Layd to thy answerer but the Laeth: O Lords.
When I have laid, cry woet the Queene, the Queene,
The sweet'rt. deer'rt creature's dead& vengeance for't
Not drop'd downe yet.

Lord. The higher powres forbid.

Psem. I say he's dead : Ile swear't. If word, nor oath
Preuails, not and goe : if you can bring Tinture, or luffre in her lip, her eye
Heate outwardly, or breath within, lie ferue you
As I would do the Gods. But, O thou Tyrant,
Do not repent these things, for they are hauier
Then all thy woes can fiiire : therefore betake thee
To nothing but dispare. A thousand knees,
Ten thousand yeares together, naked, faffing,
Vpon a barren Mountains, and still Winter
In forme perpetuall, could not move the Gods
To looks that way thou wert.'

Leo. Go on, go on :
Thou canst not speake too much, I haue defera'd
All tongues to talke their bittiret.

Lord. Say no more ;
How ere the businesse goes, you haue made fault
I'll houldnoffe of your speech.

Psem. I am forry for't ;
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent; Alas, I haue fliew't too much.
The raundnoffe of a woman : he is touch't
To th'Noble heart. What's gone, and what's past helpe
Should be past greese : Do not receiue affliction
At my petition; I befeech you, rather
Let me be punisht'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now (good my Liege)
Sir, Royall Sir, forgive a foolish woman :
The loue I bore your Queene (Lo, foolse againe)
Ile speake of her no more, nor of your Children :
Ile not remember you of my owne Lord,
(Who is lost too:) take your patience to you,
And ile say nothing.

Leo. Thou didst speake but well,
When moft the truth : which I receyue much better,
Then to be pittied of thee. Prethee bring me
To the dead bodies of my Queene, and Sonne,
One graue shall be for both Vpon them shall
The caules of their death appeares (vnto
Our Shame perpetuall) once a day, Ile visit
The Chappell where they ly, and tears shed there
Shall be my recreation, So long as Nature
Will beare vp with this exercife, fo long
I dasy vp to vfe it. Come, and leade me
To these Eorowes. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Antigonus, a Marriner, Babe, Sheepebeards, and Cloane.

Ant. Thou art perfefft then, our ship hath toucht vpon
The Defarts of Bohemia.

Mar. I (my Lord) and fear
We haue Landed in ill time : the skies looke grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my confience
The heauens with that we haue in hand, are angry,
And frowne vpon't.

Ant. Their fiared will's be done : go get a-boord,
Looke to thy harke, Ile not be long before

I call vpon thee.

Mar. Make thy belt haffe, and go not Too-farre in Land : 'tis like to be lowd weather,
Befides this place is famous for the Creatures
Of prey, that keepe vpon't.

Antig. Go thou away,
Ile follow inantly,

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be go thode o' th businesse.

Ant. Come, poore babe;
I haue heard (but not beleue'd) the Spirits o' th dead
May walke againe : i f such thing be, thy Mother
Appeard to me last night : for ne're was dreame
So like a waking. To me comus a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another,
I never saw a velliff of like forrow
So fild', and so becoming : in pure white Robes
Like very fancifly the did approach
My Cabine where I lay : thrice bow'd before me,
And (gaping to begin some speech) did
Become two spouts; the furie fpent, anon
Did this breakce from her. Good Antigonus,
Since Fate (against thy better disposition)
Hath made thy perfon for the Thower-out
Of my poore babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough arc in Bohemia,
There weepe, and leave it crying : and for the babe
Is counted loft for euer, Perdita
I prethee call't : For this vngentle businesse
Put on thee, by my Lord, thou ne're falt fee
Thy Wife Pamintia more : and fo, with Shriekes
She melted into Ayre. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect my felfes, and thought
This was fo, and no flumber : Dreams, are toys.
Yet for this once, yea superflifioy, I
Will bequaid by this. I do beleue
Hermine hath fuffer'd death, and that Apollo would (this being indeede the iuffe
Of King Polixenes) it shoulde heere be laide
(Either for life, or death) vpon the earth
Of it's right Father. Blofionne, fpeed thee well,
There ly, and there thy charracler : there thefe,
Which may if Fortune pleafe, both breed thee (pretty)
And fill reft thine. The fiorne beginnes,poore wretch,
That for thy mothers fault, art thus expos'd
To loles, and what may follow. Weepe I cannot,
But my heart bleedes : and toft accur'd am I
To be by oath enjoi'nd to this. Farewell,
The day frownes more and more : thon't like to haue
A lullable too rough : I neuer faw
The heauens fo dim, by day. A favage clorum
Well may I get a-boord : This is the Chace,
I am gone for euer. Exit pursuf'd by a Bear.
Slop. I would there were no age betweene ten
And three and twenty, or that youth would sweet the reft :
for there is nothing (in the betweene) but getting wenches with childe, wronging the Ancientery, feeding, Fighting, bate one too : would eny but these boyldebraines of nineenes, and two and twenty hunt this weather :
They haue fca'd away two of my belte Shepe, which I fear the Wolfe will fooner finde then the Malter ;
if any where I have them, 'tis by the fea-fide, brooz-ing of Iuy. Good-lucks (and 't be thy will) what have we heere? Mercury on's, a Barne ? A very pretty barne ; A boy, or a Chilae I wonder? (A pretty one, a verie prettie one) fue some Scape ; Though I am not bookish, yet I Enter Cleon.

Cleo. Hilloa, loa.

Slep. What? art so neere? If thou'lt see a thing to talk on, when thou art dead and rotten, come hither what say'lt thou, man?

Cleo. I have scene two such fights, by Sea & by Land: but I am not to say it is a Sea, for it is now the sicle, between the Firmament and it, you cannot thrust a boylkin point.

Slep. Why boy, how is it?

Cleo. I would you did but see how it chases, how it rugs, how it takes vp the thore, but that's not to the points: Oh, the moat pitious cry of the poore soules, sometimes to see'em, and not to see'em: Now the Shippie boating the Moone with her maile Maft, and anon swallowed with yett and froth, as you'd thrust a Curke into a hog-head. And then for the Land-feruice, to see how the Beare tore out his shoulder-bone, how he cri'd to me for helpe, and find his name was Antigammon, a Nobleman: But to make an end of the Ship, to see how the Sea flap-dragon'd it: but firft, how the poore soules roared, and the sea mock'd themand how the poore Gentleman roared, and the Beare mock'd him, both roaring lowder then the sea, or weather.

Slep. Name of mercy, when was this boy?

Cleo. Now, now: I have not wink'd since I saw these fights: the men are not yet under water, nor the Beare halfe din'd on the Gentleman: he's at it now.

Slep. Would I had bin by, to have help'd the olde man.

Cleo. I would you had beene by the ship side, to have helph't her/here your charity would have lack'd footing.

Slep. Heayn matters, heayn matters: looke thee heere boy. Now Slefe thy felfe: thou met't with things dying, I with things now borne: Here's a fight for thee: Looke there, a bearing-clotch for a Squires childe: looke thee heere, take vp, take vp (Boy): open't: so, let's fee, it was told me I should be rich by the Fairies. This is some Changing, open'lt: what's within, boy?

Cleo. You're a mad olde man: If the finnes of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Golde, all Gold.

Slep. This is Fairly Gold boy, and 'twill proue so: vp with't, keep it clofe: home, home, the next way. We are luckie (boy) and to bee so full requires nothing but frecrcie. Let my sheepe go: Come (good boy) the next way home.

Cleo. Go you the next way with your Findings, Ie go fee if the Beare bee gone from the Gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curf but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, Ie bury it.

Slep. That's a good deed: if thou mayest discern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to th'fight of him.

Cleon. 'Marry will I: and you shall helpe to put him the ground.

Slep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on't.

Exeunt.
of that penitent (as thou callest him) and reconciled King my brother, whose lofe of his most precious Queene & Children, are even now to be a-fresh lamented. Say to me, when faul's thou the Prince Floryzell? my Ion? Kings are no leffe vnhappy, their issue, not being gracious, then they are in looing them, when they have approved their Vertues.

Cam. Sir, it is three dayes since I saw the Prince: what his happier affayres may be, are to me vnknowne: but I haue (mifsingly) noted, he is of late much retir'd from Court, and is leffe frequent to his Princey exercites when formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I haue considered so much (Camillus) and with some care, fo farre, that I haue eyes vnder my servise, which looke vpon his remou'd遂le: from whom I haue this Intelligence, that he is feldome from the house of a moft homely shepheard: a man (they say) that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbors, is grown to an unpræfiable estate.

Cam. I haue heard (Sir) of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare beautie: the report of her is extended more, then can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewíse part of my Intelligence: but (I vear) the Angle that plucks our fonie thither. Thou shalt accompany vs to the place, where we will (not apperenting what we are) have some quæstion with the shepheard: from whose simplicitie, I thinke it not vncafe to get the cause of my sonnes retur there. 'Pretie be my present partner in this busines, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillus, we must difguise our felues. Exit pound of Sugar, five pound of Currence, Rice: What will this siller of mine do with Rice? But my father hath made her Milfris of the Feast, and she lays it on.

Shee hath made me four and twenty Nofe-gyes for the Aut. If I buy no Ginger when I was borne.

Cl. 'Tis name of me.

Aut. Oh helpe me, helpe mee: pluckle but off these

Cl. Alacke poore foule, thou haft need of more rags to lay on thee, rather then haue thee off.

Aut. Oh Sir, the loathfomeneffe of them offend mee, more then the strips I haue receu'd, which are mightie ones and millions.

Cl. Alas poore man, a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am rob'd Sir, and beaten: me money, and apparlance from me, and these dereftable things put vp on me.

Cl. What, by a horfe-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A footman (sweet sir) a footman.

Cl. Indeed, he should be a footman, by the garments he has left with thee: If this bee a horfemans Coate, it hath scene very hot seruice. Lend me thy hand, Ile helpe thhee. Come, lend me thy hand.

Aut. Oh good Sir, tenderly, oh.

Cl. Alas poore foule.

Aut. Oh good Sir, softly, good Sir: I feare (Sir) my

Cl. How now? Canst stond?

Aut. Softly,deere Sir: good Sir,softly: you ha done

Cl. Doest lacke any mony? I haue a little mony for whome I was going: I thall there haue money, or ane thing I want: Offer me no money I pray you, that kills my heart.

Clow. What manner of Fellow was hee that robb'd yeu?

Aut. A fellow (Sir) that I haue knowne to goe about with Troll-my-dames: I knew him once a feruant of the Prince: I cannot tell good Sir, for which of his Ventues it was, but he was certainly Whipt out of the Court.

Cl.
The Winters Tale.

Ch. His vices you would say: there's no vertue whipt out of the Court: they cherish it to make it fly there; and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say (Sir,) I know this man well, he hath bene since an Ape-bearer, then a Processe-ferrer (a Bayliff) then hee compait a Motion of the Prodigall Jonne, and married a Timkers wife (a Mile where my Land and Luing lyes; and (hauing flowne over many knauih professions) he sattled onely in Rogue: some call him Autelioo.

Ch. Out vpon him: Prig, for my life Prighes hauntes Wakes, Faires, and Bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true fir: he fir here: that's the Rogue that put me into this apparrel.

Ch. Not a more cowardly Rogue in all Bohemia; if you had look'd bigge, and spit at him, he'd haue runne.

Aut. I must confesse to you (Sir) I am no fighter: I am safe of heart that way, & that he knew I warrant him.

Ch. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet fir, much better then I was: I can fland, and walke: I will even take my leave of you, & pace softly towards my Kinfmans.

Aut. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Ch. No, good fac'd fir, no sweet fir.

Ch. Then fairewell, I must go buy Spices for our sheepe-shearing.

Aut. Prosper you sweet fir. Your purfe is not enougnough to purchase your Spices: Ile be with you at your sheepe-shearing too: if I make not this Chear bring out another, and the sheepeeing proste sheepe, let me be vnrolde, and my name in the booke of Vertue.

The Winters Tale.

Pol. Shepherdess,
(A faire one are you) well you fit our ages
With flowers of Winter.

Perd. Sir, the yeare growing ancient,
Not yet on hammers death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the fairest flowers o' th'seaon
Are our Carnations, and breake'd Gilly-vorts,
(Which come call Natures baffards) of that kind
Our rufflieke Gardens barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore (gentle Maiden)
Do you neglect them.

Perd. For I have heard it said,
There is an Art, which in their pilenesse shares
With great creating-Nature.

Pol. Say there be:

Yet Nature is made better by no meane,
But Nature makes that Meane: so ouer that Art,
(Which you say addes to Nature) is an Art
That Nature makes: you see (sweet Maid) we marry
A gentler Sien, to the wildefe Stocke,
And make conceyve a barke of safer kinde
By bud of Nobler race. This is an Art
Which do's mend Nature: change it rather, but
The Art it selfe, is Nature.

Perd. So it is.

Pol. Then make you Garden rich in Gilly'vors,
And do not call them baffards.

Perd. Be it not put
The Bible in earth, to fet one slip of them:
No more then were I painted, I would with
This youth should lay 'twr well: and only therefore Dirtre to breed by me. Here's flowers for you:

Hot Launder, Mint, Smary, Marlorum,
The Mary-gold, that goet to bed with Sun,
And with him riife, weeping: These are flowers
Of middle summe, and I thinke they are gnen
To men of middle age. Y're very well come.

Cam. I shoule leave grasing, were I of your flocke,
And onely lye by gazinge.

Perd. Out alas:
You'll be so leane, that blafs of January (Friend, Would blow you through and through. Now my faire
I would I had some Flowers o' th' Spring, that might Become a time of day: and yours, and yours,
That weare upon your Virgin-branches yet
Your Maiden-heads growing: O Prosperina,
For the Flowers now, that (frighted) thou left' fall
From Daffies Wagon: Daffodils,
That come before the Swallow dares, and take
The winde of March with beauty: Violets (dim,
But sweeter then the lids of Luc's eyes,
Or Cythera's breath) pale Prime-roles,
That dye vnmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phebus in his strength (a Maladie Most incident to Maid's:) hold Outils, and
The Crowne Imperiall: Lillies of all kinds,
(The Flower-de-Luce being one.) O, these I lacke,
To make you Garlands of) and my sweet friend,
To shew him ore, and ore.

Flo. What like a Coarse

Perd. No, like a banke, for Loue to ly, and play on:
Not like a Coarse: or if: not to be buried,
But quicke, and in mine armes. Come, take your flowers,
Me thinkes I play as I have feene them do
In Whitton-Patloras: Sure this Robe of mine

Do's change my dispoition:
Flo. What you do,
Still better what is done. When you speake (Sweet)
I'd have you do it euer: When you sing,
I'd have you buy, and fell fo: fo glue Almes,
Pray fo: and for the ord'ring your Affayres,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I with you
A wave o' th Sea, that you might euer do
Nothing but that : mose fill, fill fo:
And owne no other Function. Each your doing,
(To singular, in each particular)
Crownes what you are doing, in the present deeds,
That all your Aces, are Queens.

Perd. O Doriltes,
Your praires are too large: but that your youth
And the true blood which peeps fairely through tis,
Do plainly glue you out an vnblm'ed Shepherd
With who I hope: I might feare (my Doriltes)
You wou'd me the faire way.

Flo. I think you haue
As little skill to fear, as I haue purpose
To put you to't. But come, our dance I pray,
Your hand (my Perdites) to Turtles paire
That newe meane to part.

Perd. Ic sweare: for em.

Poe. This is the prettiest Low-borne Laffe, that euer
Ran on the greene-lord: Nothing the do's, or feemes
But fimakes of something greater then her selfes,
Too Noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something
That makes her blood looke on't: Good footh she is The Queene of Curns and Creame.

Flo. Come on: strike vp.

Dorac. Myfis must be your Miftris: marry Garlick to mend her kissinge with.

Mop. Now in good time.

Flo. Not a word, a word, we stand upon our manners,
Come, strike vp.

Here a Dance of Shepheards and Shepherdesses.

Pol. Pray good Shepheard, what faire Swaine is this,
Which dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doriltes, and boasts him selfe.
To have a worthy Feeding: but I have it
Vpon his owne reper, and I beleue it:
He looks like foote: he fayes he loues my daughter,
I thinke fo too: for neuer gas'd the Moone
Vpon the water, as hee'l stand and reade
As 'twere my daughters eyes: and to be plaine,
I thinke there is not halfe a kiffe to choose
Who loues another best.

Pol. She dances feathly.

Shep. So she do's any thing, though I report it
That should be silente: If yong Doriltes
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

Enter Servant.

Ser. O Mafter: if you did but heare the Pedler at the doors, you would never dance againe after a Tabor and Pipe: no, the Bag-pipe could not moue you: hee finges feuerall Tunes, after then you'd tell money: hee vters them as he had eaten ballaids, and all mens cares grew to his Tunes.

Flo. He could never come better: hee shall come in:
I loose a ballaid but euyn too well, if it be dolefull matter merrily set downe: or a very plesant thing indeede, and gung lamentably.
Ser. He hath songs for man, or woman, of all sizes:
No Milliner can so fit his customers with Glouces: he has the prettiest Loue-songs for Maids, so without bowdrie (which is strange,) with such delicate burthenes of Dildo's and Fadings: lump-her, and thump-her, and where some stretch-mouth'd Raffcall, would (as it were) meant mischeefe, and breake a bowie gap into the Matter, hee makes the modl to answer, Whoaop, doe me no barne good man: put's him off, flings him, with Whoop, doe mo no barne good man.

Pol. This is a braue fellow.

Clu. Beleece mee, thou talkell of an admirable conscill felow, has he any unbraided Wares?

Ser. Hee hath Ribbons of all the colours 1th Rainbow; Points, more then all the Lawyers in Babelonia, can learnedly handle, though they come to him by th'groffes: Inklees, Caddyles, Cambrickes, Lawmes: why he sings em ouer, as they were Gods, or Goddelfes: you would think hee singing before a Duke of Aquitaine, hee so chaunteth to the fleue-hand, and the worke about the square on't.

Clu. Pre'thee bring him in, and let him approach fing.

Perd. Forewarne him, that he vfe no furrilous words in his tunes.

Clu. You have of these Pellers, that have more in them, then you'll think (Sifer.)

Perd. I, good brother, go about to think.

Enter Antillocus singing.

Lawnes as white as driven Snow,
Cyprifes blacke as ere was Crew,
Glouces at fweete as Dananke Rojes,
Maskes for faces, and for noyes:
Bangle-bratelles, Necke-lace Amber,
Perfumes for a Ladies Chamber
Golden gypheets, and Stomachers
For my Lads, to gue their deers:
Pins, and poaking-flickes of steel.
What s Maids lacke from head to beale.
Come by me, come by me, come by me,
Buy Lads, or elf your Laffes crye: Come by me.

Clu. If I were not in loue with Mope, thou shouldest take no money of me, but being enfrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certaine Ribbons and Glouces.

Mop. I was promis'd them against the Feath, but they come not late now.

Dor. He hath promis'd you more then that, or there be lyars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promises'd you; May be he has paid you more, which will shame you to give him againe.

Clu. Is there no manners left among maids? Will they wear their placlets, where they should bear their faces?
Is there not milking-time? When you are going to bed? Or kill-hole? To whistle of these secrets, but you must be tittle-tailing before all our guests? 'Tis well they are whitlings-clamor your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done; Come you promis'd me a tawarylace, and a pair of sweet Glouces.

Clu. Have I not told thee how I was cozen'd by the way, and lost all my money.

Ant. And indeed Sir, there are Cozeners abroad, therefor he behoues men to be wary.

Clu. Fear not thou man, thou shalt lose nothing here

Ant. I hope so sir, for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clu. What hath heere? Ballads?

Mop. Pray now by fome: I loue a ballet in print, a life, for then we are sure they are true.

Ant. Here's one, to a very dolefull tune, how a Vu-eres wife was brought to bed of twenty money bags at a burthen, and how the long'd to eate Adders heads, and Toads carbonad'd.

Mop. Is it true, thinke you old.

Ant. Very true, and but a moneth old.

Dor. Bleffe me from marrying a Vurer.

Ant. Here's the Midwies name to't: one Mift. Tale-
Porter, and five or fix honest Wius, that were present.
Why shold I carry lyes abroad?

Mop. 'Pray vou now buy it.

Clu. Come on, lay it by: and let's first fee mee Ballads: We'll buy the other things anon.

Ant. Here's another ballad of a Fith, that appeared yon the coaft, on wenflay the fourecore of April, fortie thousand fdom above water, & fugg this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a Woman, and was turn'd into a cold fith, for she wold not exchange flesht with one that lou'd her: The Ballad is very pitifull, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, thinke you.

Ant. Five Jujices hands at it, and witneffe more then my packe will hold.

Clu. Lay it by too; another.

Ant. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Ant. Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of two maids wooing a man: there's fcare a Maide weftward but the fings it: 'tis in requett, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both fingt: if thou'll beare a part, thou flalt hear's, 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't, a month agoe.

Ant. I can beare my part, you must know 'tis my occupation: Haue at it with you.

Song. Get you hence, for I must goe

Ant. Where it fits not you to know.

Dor. Whether?

Mop. O whether?

Dor. Whether?

Mop. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.

Dor. Me too: Let me go thether.

Mop. Or thou mayst go to the Orange, or Mill,

Dor. If so either thou deft ill.

Ant. Neither.

Dor. What neither?

Ant. Neither.

Dor. Thou haft vowed me my Loue to be,

Mop Thou haft voverne it more to me.

Then whether guft? Say whether?

Clu. Well haue this song out anon by our selves: My Father, and the Gent. are in sad tale, & we'll not trouble them: Come bring away thy pack after me, Wenches Lie buy for you both: Pedler let's have the first choice, follow me girls.

Dor. And you shall pay well for 'em.

Song. Will you buy any Tape, or Lace for your Crape?

My dainty Ducky, my dece-a?

Any Sike, any Thered, any Vrys for your head

Of the newell, and fan'st not wear-a.

Come to the Pedler, My lady's a medler,

That doth utter all mens ware-a.

Exit.

Squire. Mayster, there is three Carteres, three Shepherds, three Neat-herds, three Swine-herds I have made.

B 3 them.
The Winters Tale.

themselfes all men of haire, they call themselfes Saltiers, and they have a Dance, which the Wenches say is a gallantly-maurey of Gambols, because they are not in't: but they themselfes are o'th'minfe (if it bee not too rough for some, that know little but bowling) it will please plentifully.

Shag. Away: We'll none on't; here hee bees too much homely foolery already. I know (Sir) wee wearie you.

Pol. You wearie those that refresh vs: pray let's see these foure-three's of Heart-syne.

Ser. One three of them, by their owne report (Sir,) hath danc'd before the King: and not the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foote and a halfe by th'quire.

Shag. Leave your prating, since these good men are pleas'd, let them come in: but quickly now.

Ser. Why, they play at dooce Sir.

Pol. O Father, you'll know more of that hereafter:
Is it not too farre gone? 'Tis time to part them,
He's simple, and tels much. How now(faire thepheard)
Your heart is full of something, that do's take Your minde from fealing. Sooth, when I was yong,
And handed loue, as you do; I was wont
To load my Shee with knacks: I would haue ranfacke
The Pedlers fillken Trefury, and hauue pow'r'd it
To her acceptence: you hauue let him go,
And nothing marred with him. If your Laffe
Interpretation shoulde abaye, and call this
Your lacke of loue, or bounty, you were ftraited
For a reply at least, if you make a care
Of happie holding her.

Fio. Old Sir, I know
She prises not such trifles as these are:
The gifts the lookes from me, are packt and lockt
Vp in my heart, which I have gien already,
But not deliver'd. O hearre me breath my life
Before this ancient Sir, whom (it should seeme)
Hath sometime lou'd: I take thy hand, this hand,
As fowl as Doures-downe, and as white as it,
Or Ethypians tooth, or the fan'd know, that's bolted
By th'Northerne blafs, twice ore.

Pol. What followes this?
How prettily th'yong Swaine feemes to waft
The hand was fai'd before I have put youout,
But to your protession: Let me heare
What you proffe.

Fio. Do, and be witniffe too't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Fio. And he, and more
Then he, and men: the earth, the heauens, and all;
That were I crown'd the moft Imperiall Monarch
The reof moft worthy: were I the fairest youth
That euer made eye lwerue, had force and knowledge
More then euer mans, I would not prize them
Without her Loue; for her, employ them all,
Command them, and commende them to her feruice,
Or to their owne perdition.

Pol. Fairely offer'd.

Cam. This fhewes a found affection.

Shag. But my daughter,
Say you the like to him.

Per. I cannot speake
So well, (nothing fo well) no, nor meane better
By th'patterne of mine owne thoughts, I cut out
The puritie of his.

Shag. Take hands, a bargaine:

And friends unknowne, you shall bear witniffe to't:
I give my daughter to him, and will make
Her Portion, equal his.

Fio. O, that muft bee
Th'victory of your daughter: One being dead,
I shall have more then you can dreame of yet,
Enough then for your wonder: but come on,
Contract vs fore thefe Witnisses.

Shag. Come, your hand:
And daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft Swaine a while, befeech you,
Have you a Father?

Fio. I haue: but what of him?

Pol. Knowes he of this?

Fio. He neither do's, nor fhall.

Pol. Me-thinks a Father,
Is at the Diuision of his fonne, a gueft
That beft becomes the Table: Pray you once more
Is not your Father growne incapable
Of reasonable affayres? Is he not fupid
With Age, and altering Rheums? Can he speake? heare?
Know man, from man? Dispute his owne state?
Lies he not bed-rid? And againe, do's nothing
But what he did, being childifh?

Fio. No good Sir:
He has his health, and ampler ftrength indecide
Then moft haue of his age.

Fio. By my white beard,
You offer him (if this be fo) a wrong
Something vnfallial: Reaon my fonne
Should choose himfelfe a wife, but as good reason
The Father all whose loye is nothing elfe
But faire pofterity) should hold fome counfale
In fuch a bufinefe.

Fio. I yeeld all this;
But for fome other reafons (my graue Sir)
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint
My Father of this bufnefe.

Pol. Let him know't.

Fio. He shal not.

Pol. Prethee let him.

Fio No, he muft not.

Shag. Let him (my fonne) he shall not need to greene
At kind, way of thy choice.

Fio. Come, come, he muft not:
Marke our Contract.

Pol. Marke your divorc (yong Sir)
Whom fonne I dare not call: Thou art too bafe
To be acknowledge. Thou a Scepters heire,
That thus affeels a fheepe-hooke! Thou, old Tralter,
I am forry, that by hanging thee, I can but shorten thy life one wecke. And thou, freth pece
Of excellent Witchcraft, whom of force must know
The royall Foure thou coop't it with.

Shag. Oh my sonne,

Fio. Ie haue thy beautyشرف with brers & made
More homely then thy state. For thee (fond boy)
If I may euer know thou doft but figh,
That thou no more shalt neruer fee this knacks (as neuer
I meane thou shalt) we'er barte thee from fuccifion,
Not hold thee of our blod, no not our Kin,
Farre then Deuallon off (marke thou my words)
Follow vs to the Court. Thou Churle, for this time
(Though full of our displeasure) yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it. And you Enchantment,
The Winter's Tale.

Worthy enough a Heardsman: yea him too,
That makes himselfe (but for our Honor therein)
Yn worthy thee. If ever henceforth, thou
These rural Latches, to his entrance open,
Or hope his body more, with thy embraces,
I will deuise a death, as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to't.

Perd. Even here vndone:
I was not much a-feard: for once, or twice
I was about to speake, and tell him plainly,
The selfe same Sun, that thines upon his Court,
Hides not his vifage from our Cottage, but Lookes on allise. Wilt please you (Sir) be gone?
I told you what would come of this: Before you
Of your owne owne take care: This dreame of mine
Being now awake, Ile Queene it no inch farther,
But milke my Eues, and wepe.

Cam. Why how now Father,
Speake ere thou dyest.
Shop, I cannot speake, nor thinke,
Nor dare to know, that which I know: O Sir,
You have vn-done a man of fourecore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet: yea,
To dye upon the bed my father dy'de,
To lye cloe by his honste bones: but now
Some Hangman muft put on my throw'd, and lay me
Where no Priest fhoul'd in duft. Oh curfed wretch,
That knew't this was the Prince, and woul'd adventure
To mingle faith with him. Vndone, vndone:
If I might dye within this houre, I have li'd
To die when I desire.

Flo. Why looke you so vpon me?
I am but forry, not affafr'd: delaid,
But nothing altered: What I was, I am:
More fhaining on, for phicking baccke; not following
My leath vainlying.

Cam. Gracious my Lord,
You know my Fathers temper: at this time
He will allow no speech: (which I do gheffe
You do not purpose to him:) and as hardly
Will he endure your fight, as yet I fcare;
Then till the fury of his Highnesse fettle
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it:
I thinke Camillo.

Cam. Even he, my Lord.

Flo. It cannot faile, but by
The violacion of my faith, and then
Let Nature cruft the fides o'th earth together,
And marre the feeds within. Lift vp thy looke:
From my fuccifion wie me (Father) I
Am heare to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.

Flo. I am: and by my fance, if my Reafon
Will thereto be obedient: I have reafon:
If not, my fences better pleas'd with madneffe,
Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate (Sir.)

Flo. So call it: but it do's fulfill my vow:
I needs muft thinke it honestly. Camillo;
Not for Bohemias, nor the pompe that may Be thereto gleans: for all the Sun fees, or
The clofe earth wombes, or the profound feas, hides
In vnknowne fadomes, will I breake my oath
To this my faire belou'd: therefore, I pray you,
As you have ever bin my Fathers honou'red friend,
When he shall miscle me, as (in faith I meane not To fee him any more) caft your good counfalies
Vpon his paflion: Let my felfe, and Fortune
Tog for the time to come. This you may know,
And fo delier, I am put to Sea
With her, who heere I cannot hold on trothe:
And moft opportune to her needes, I have
A Vellell rides falt by, but not prepar'd
For this designe. What course I meane to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concerne me the reporting.

Cam. O my Lord,
I would your spirit were eafer for advice,
Or stronger for your needes.

Flo. Hearke Perdita,
Ile hearre you by and by.

Cam. Heer's iremoueable,
Refolv'd for flight: Now were I happy if
His going, I could frame to ferue my turne,
Saue him from danger, do him loue and honor,
Purchafe the fight againe of deere Sicilia,
And that unhappy King, my Mafter, whom
I fo much thirft to fee.

Flo. Now good Camillo,
I am fo fraught with curious buinesse, that
I leaue out ceremony.

Cam. Sir, I thinkeke
You have heard of my poore services, i'th loue
That I have borne your Father?

Flo. Very nobly
Have you defer'd: It is my Fathers Muficke
To speake your deeds: not little of his care
To have them recompen'd, as thought on.

Cam. Well (my Lord)
If you may pleafe to thinke I love the King,
And through him, what's neerest to him, which is
Your gracious felfe: embrase but my direction,
If your more ponderous and fetted project
May fuffer alteration. On mine honor,
Ile point you where you shall haue such recueeling
As shall become your Highnesse, where you may Enjoy your Militir; from the whom, I fee
There's no difunction to be made, but by
(As heauen forefend) your ruine: Marry her,
And with my best endeavours, in your abence,
Your discontenting Father, trie to qualifie
And bring him vp to liking.

Flo. How Camillo
May this (almost a miracle) be done?
That I may call thee something more then man,
And after that traft to thee.

Cam. Haue you thought on
A place whereeto you'go?

Flo. Not any yet:
But as th'vnth'ning-on accident is gulltie
To what we wildely do, so we proffe
Our felues to be the flaves of chance, and flies
Of euerie winde that blowes.

Cam. Then lift to me:
This followes, if you will not change your purpose
But vndergo this flight; make for Sicilia,
And there present your felfe, and your royale Princeffe,
(For fo I fee the muft be) yore Leantie;
She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your Bed. Me thinks I see
Leontes opening his free Armes, and weeping
His Welcome forsthanks thee there Sonne forgivene.
As 'twere I'th' Fathers perfons: kills the hands
Of your fresh Princesse; ore and ore divides him,
'Twixt his vnkindnedf, and his Kindnedf: th'one
He chides to Hell, and bids the other grow.
Father then Thought, or Time.

Fls. Worthy Camilles,
What colour for my Visitation, shall I
Hold vp before him?

Cam. Sent by the King your Father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you (as from your Father) fhall deliver,
Things knowne betwixt vs three, Ile write you downe,
The which fhall point you forth at every fitting
What you must fay: that he fhall not perceve,
But that you have your Fathers Bosome there,
And Spake his very Heart.

Fls. I am bound to you:
There is some fappe in this.

Cam. A Courfe more promifing,
Then a wide dedication of your fcelus
To vnpath'd Waters, vndream'd Shores; moft certaine,
To Miferies enough: no hope to helpe you,
But as you shake off one, to take another;
Nothing fo certaine, as your Anchors, who
Doe their beft office, if they can but fay you,
Where you'le be loth to be: besides you know,
Properifie's the very bond of Loue,
Whole fresh complexion, and whole heart together,
Afflicted alters.

Perd. One of thefe is true:
I thinke Affiliation may subdue the Cheke,
But not take-in the Mind.

Cam. Yet? fay you fo?
There fhall not, at your Fathers Houfe, thefe feven yeres
Be borne another fuch.

Fls. My good Camilles,
She's as forward, of her Breeding, as
She is th'atre our Birth.

Cam. I cannot fay, it's pity
She lacks Injunctions, for the femees a Miferre.
To moft that teach.

Perd. Your pardon Sir, for this,
Ile blufh you Thanks.

Fls. My prettief Perdita.
But O, the Thorne we stand upon: (Camille)
Preferner of my Father, now of me,
The Medicine of our Houfe: how fhall we doe ?
We are not furnish'd like Bobemias Sonne,
Nor fhall appear in Sicilia.

Cam. My Lord,
Fare none of this: I thinke you know my fortunes
Doe all lye there: it fhall be fo my care,
To have you royally appointed, as f
The Scene you play, were mine. For inftance Sir,
That you may know you fhall not want: one word.

Enter Adrius.

Aut. Ha, ha, what a Foole Honfice is? and Truth(his sworne brother) a very fimple Gentleman. I have fold all my Trumperie: not a counterfeit Stone, not a Ribbon, Claffe, Pommader, Browch, Table-bookes, Ballad, Knife, Tape, Gloue, Shoe-yes, Bracelet, Horeme Ring, to keeper
my Pack from fifting: they throng who fhould buy fift, as if my Trinkets had beene hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which means, I faw whofe Perde was bett in Picture: and what I faw, to my go de: I remembered. My Clareome (who wants but something to be a reafonable man) grew fo in louse with the Wenchers Song, that hee would not firr his Petty-toes, till he had both Tune and Words, which fo drew the ref.
of hee to me, that all their other Sences bucke in Eares: you might have pinch'd a Placket, it was fenceleffe: I was nothing to guld a God-peece of a Perde: I would have fill'd Keys of that hung in Chaynes: no hearing, no feeling, but my Sirs Song, and admiring the Nothing of it. So that in this time of Lethargie, I picked and cut moft of their Fettuall Perdes: And had not the old-man come in with a Whoob-bug against his Daughter, and the Kings Sonne, and fear'd my Chowghes from the C round, I had not left a Perde alive in the whole Army.

Cam. Nay, but my Letters by this meanes being there
So foune as you arrive, shall cleare that doubt.

Fls. And thofe that you procure from King Leontes?
Cam. Shall fatisfie your Father.

Perd. Happy be you:
All that you fpeak, thewes faire.

Cam. Who have we here?
We'le make an Instrument of this: omit
Nothing may glue vs a feite.

Aut. If they have ouer-heard me nowwhy hanging.

Cam. How now (good Fellow)
Why fhall'th thou fo? Feare not (man)
Here's no harme intened to thee.

Aut. I am a poore Fellow, Sir.

Cam. Why, be fo fill: here's no body will fitalize that from thee: yet for the out-fide of thy pouerlie, we muft make an exchange; therefore dif-cafe thee infantry(touh muft thinke there's a neceffity in't) and change Garments with this Gentleman: Though the penny-worth (on his fide) be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.

Aut. I am a poore Fellow, Sir: (I know ye well enough.)

Cam. Nay prethee difpatch: the Gentleman is halfe fled already.

Aut. Are you in earnef, Sir? (I fhmell the trick on't.)

Fls. And thofe, I pradie.

Aut. Indeed I have had Earnef, but I cannot with confeience take it.

Cam. Vnbuckle, vnbuckle.

Fortunate Miftrife (let my prophecie Come home to yet) you must retire your fife
Into fome Courte: take your swet-hearts Hat
And pluck it ore your Browes, muffle your face,
Dif-mante you, and (as you can) diilken
The truth of your owne feeming, that you may
(For I doe looke eyes ouer) to Ship-board
Get under'ld.

Perd. I fee the Play fo lyes,
That I muft beare a part.

Cam. No remedie:
Have you done there?

Fls. Should I now meet my Father,
He would not call me Sonne.

Cam. Nay,you fhall have no Hat:
Come Lady,come: Farewell (my friend.)

Aut. ADieu, Sir.

Fls. O Perdita: what have we twaine forgot?

Pray
Pray you a word.

C. What do you next, shall be to tell the King

Of this escape, and whither they are bound;

Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevaile,

To force him after: in whole company

I shall re-view Siriciis; for whole fight,

I have a Woman Longing.

Flo. Fortune speed vs.

Thus we set on (Camille) to th' Sea-side.

C. The swifter speed, the better. Exit.

A. I understand the businesse, I hear it: to have an open ear, a quick eye, and nimble hand, is necessary for a Cut-purse; a good Nofe is requisite also, to smell out work for th'othon' Serens. I see this is the time that the vnuit man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot? What a boot is here, with this exchange? Shall the Gods do this yeere continuie at vs, and we may doe any thing extempore. The Prince himselfe is about a piece of Iniquitie (feeling away from his Father, with his Clog at his heart;) if I thought it were a piece of honetteff to acquaint the King withall, I would not doe it: I hold it the more knorrerie to conceale it; and therein am

I condant to my Profession.

Enter Clowme and Shephard.

Aide, aide, here is more matter for a hot braine: Every Lanes end, every Shop, Church, Seflion, Hanging, yeilds a carefull man work.

Clowme. Sex, fie: what a man you are now? there is no other way, but to tell the King this is a Changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Slep. Nay, but heare me.

Clow. Nay: but heare me.

Slep. Go to too then.

Clow. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood ha's not offended the King, and fo your flesh and blood is not to be punishd by him. Shew those things you found about her (those secret things, all but what she ha's with her) This being done, let the Law goe whilfe: I warrant you.

Slep. I will tell the King all, every word, yea, and his Sonnes prancs too; who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his Father, nor to me, to goe about to make me the Kings Brother in Law.

Clow. Indeed Brother in Law was the farthest off you could have been to him, and then your Blood had beene the dearen, by I know how much an ounce.

A. Very wifely (Puppies.)

Slep. Well: let vs to the King: there is that in this Farthall, will make him scratch his Beard.

A. I know not what impediment this Complaint may be to the flight of my Matter.

Cl. Pray heartily he be at Pallace.

A. Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance: Let me pocket vp my Pedlers excres-ment. How now (Rufiques) whither are you bound?

Slep. To th' Pallace (and it like your Worship.)

Tell me (for you feeme to be honest plain men) what you have to the King: being something genly consider'd, I'll bring you where he is abroad, tender your perfons to his presence, whisper him in your behalves; and if it be in man, besides the King, to effect your Sutes, here is man shall doe it.

Clov. He feemes to be of great authoritie: close with him, give him Gold; and though Authoritie be a stubborne Bear, yet hee is oft led by the Nose with Gold: shew the In-fide of your Purfe to the out-fide of his hand, and no more adoe. Remember this, and say'd alius.

Slep. And's please you (Sir) to undertake the Bufeineffe for vs, here is that Gold I haue: Ie make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawne, till I bring it you.

Aui. After I have done what I promised?
Slep. I Sir.
Aui. Well, give me the Mollie: Are you a partie in this Bufeineffe?

Clov. In some fome, Sir but though my cafe be a pitiffal one, I hope I shall not be flayd out of it.

Aui. O, that's the cafe of the Shepards Sonne: hang him, hee'le be made an example.

Clov. Comfort, good comfort: We muft to the King, and shew our strange flight: he muft know 'tis none of your Daughters, nor my Sifer: we are gone elfe. Sir, I will gueze you as much as this old man do's, when the Bufeineffe is performed, and remaine (as he fays) your pawne till it be brought you.

Aui. I will trust you. Walk before toward the Sea-fide, goe on the right hand, I will but look upon the Hedge, and follow you.

Clov. We are bleas'd, in this man: as I may fay, even bleas'd.
Slep. Let's before, as he bids vs: he was prouzed to doe vs good.

Aui. If I had a mind to be honest, I fee Fortune would not fuffer mee: thee drops Booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occaion (Gold, and means to doe the Prince my Matter good; which, who knowes how that may turne backe to my advancement?) I will bring their two Moaies, these blind-ones, abord him: if he thinke it fitte to shooe them againe, and that the Com plaint they have to the King, concerns him nothing, let him call me Rogue, for being so farre officious, for I am prooue againf that Title, and what Shame elke belongs to't: To him will I prefent them, there may be matter in it.

Exeunt.

Aclus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Leontes, Cleomites, Dion, Paulina, Servants: Florinio, Petrnis.

Clov. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd A Saint-like Sorrow: No fault could you make, Which you have not redeem'd; Indeed pay'd downe More penitence, then done trefpas: At the laft Doe, as the Heaues have done; forget your eull, With them, forgive your felfe.

Her, and her Vertues, I cannot forget

My blemishes in them, and so still think of The wrong I did my felfe: which was so much, That Heire-leffe it hath made my Kingdome, and Deftoy'd the sweet Companion, that ere man Bred his hopes out of true.

Paul. Too true (my Lord) If one by one, you wedded all the World, Or from the All that are,ooke something good, To make a perfect Woman: she you kill'd, Would be vnparallell'd.

Leo. I thinke fo. Kill'd? She I kill'd? I did fo: but thou firk't it me Sorely, to fay I did: it is as bitter Upon thy Tongue, as in my Thought. Now, good now, Say fo but feldome.

Clov. Not at all, good Lady: You might have spoken a thousand things, that would Have done the time more benefits, and grac'd Your kindneffe better.

Paul. You are one of those Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not fo, You pitty not the State, nor the Remembrance Of his moft Soveraigne Name: Confer little, What Dangers, by his Highneffe falle of Iffue, May drop upon his Kingdome, and desoure Incertaine lookers on. What were more holy, Then to rejoyce the former Queene is well? What holier, then for Royalties repayre, For prefent comfort, and for future good, To bleffe the Bed of Malefte againe With a fweet Fellow tot?

Paul. There is none worthy, (Respecting her that's gone) besides the Gods Will haue fulfill'd their fecret purpofes: For ha's not the Diune Apollo fay'd? Let's not the tenor of his Oracle, That King Leontes fhall not have an Heire, Till his loft Child be found. Which, that it fhall, Is all as moniftrous to our humane reafon, As my Antiquity to brake his Graue, And come againe to me: who, on my life, Did perfay with the Infant, 'Tis your councef, My Lord fhould to the Heaunes be contrary, Oppofe againft their wills. Care not for Iffue, The Crowne will find an Heire. Great Alexander Left his to the Worthieft: fo his Succefior Was like to be the beft.

Leo. Good Paulina, Who haft the memorie of Hermione I know in honor: O, that euer I Had fear'd me to thy counfel: then, even now, I might haue look'd upon my Queenes full eies, Haue taken Treasure from her Lipes.

Paul. And left them More rich, for what they yeilded.

Leo. Thou speakeft truth: No more fuch Wives, therefore no Wife: one worfe, And better vs'd, would make her Sainted Spirit Againfe poftifie her Corp, and on this Stage (Where we Offendors now appeare) Soleus-text, And begin, why to me?

Paul. Had the fuch power, She had fuch caufe.
Leo. She had, and wou'd incence me To murther her I marry'd.

Paul. 1
Paul, I should do:
Were I the Ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark,
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in
You choose her: then I'd shrive, that even your cares
Should rife to hear me, and the words that follow'd,
Shall be, Remember mine.
Leo. Starres, Starres,
And all eyes elst, dead coales teare thou no Wife;
Ille have no Wife, Paulina.
Paul. Will you beare
Never to marry, but by my free lease?
Leo. Neuer (Paulina) so be hie'd my Spirit.
Paul. Then good my Lords, beare witnesse to his Oath.
Clo. You tempt him over-much.
Paul. Vnhelie another,
As like Hermione, as is her Picture,
Affront his eye.
Leo. Good Madame, I have done.
Paul. Yet if my Lord will marry: if you will, Sir;
No remeie but you will: Glue me the Office
To chuse you a Queen; the shall not be so young
As was your former, but she shall be such
As (walk'd your first Queen's Ghost) it should take joy
To fee her in your arms,
Leo. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till you bid us vs.
Paul. That
Shall be when your first Queen's againe in breath; Neuer till then.

Enter a Servant.
Ser. One that glues out himselfe Prince Florizell, Somne of Polesins, with his Princeffe (the
The fairest I have yet beheld) desiers accesse
To your high presence.
Leo. What with him? he comes not Like to his Fathers Greatnese: his approach
(So out of circumstance, and fuddaine) tells vs,
'Tis not a Visitacion fram'd, but forc'd
By need, and accident. What Triaine?
Ser. But few,
And theo be meant.
Leo. His Princeffe (say you) with him?
Ser. I, the most peerlesse peace of Earth, I think,
That ere the Sunne shine bright on.
Paul. Oh Hermione,
As every present Time doth boast it selfe
Abuse a better, gone: so muft thy Graue
Glue way to what's feene now. Sir, you selfe
Hau'e fad, and write fo; but your writing now
Is colder then that Theanee: she had not beene,
Nor was not to be equal'd, thus your Vere
Flow'd with her Beautie once; 'tis threwdly ebb'd,
To say you feene a better.
Ser. Pardon, Madame: the one, I haue almost forgot (your pardon)
The other, when she ha's obtayn'd your Eye,
Will have your Tongue too. This is a Creature,
Would she begin a Seiz'd, might quench the zeale
Of all Profeffors eelc; make Prophyles
Of who the but bid fallow.
Paul. How? not women?
Ser. Women will love her, that she is a Woman
More worth then any Man: Men, that she is
The rarest of all Women.
Leo. Go to Cleomenes,
Your selfe (afflicted with your honor'd Friends)

Bring them to our embracement. Still 'tis strange,
He thus should steale vpone vs.

Paul. Had our Prince
(lewell of Children) seene this hour, he had pay'd
Well with this Lord; there was not full a month
Betweene their births.
Leo. Prethee no more; ceafe, thou know'st
He dye's to me againe, when talk'd-off: sure
When I shall fee this Gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that, which may Vnferlift me of Reason. They are come.

Enter Florizell, Pardice, Cleomenes, and others,
Your Mother was most true to Wedlock, Prince,
For she did print your Royall Father off,
Conceiuing you. Were I but twentie one,
(His very aye) that I should call you Brother,
As I did him, and speake of something wildly
By vs perforn'd before. Moit dearly welcome,
And your faire Princeffe (Godseffe) oh! alas,
I loft a couple, that 'twixt Heauen and Earth
Might thus have fweet, begetting wonder,
Regard you (gracious Couple) do: and then I loft
(All mine owne Folly) the Societie,
Amite too of your brave Father, whom (Though bearing Miferie) I defire my life
Once more to looke on him.

Fls. By his command
Haue I here touch'd Sicilia, and from him
Glue you all greetings, that a King (at friend)
Can send his Brother: and but Infinmite
(Which waits upon worne times) hath something feld'ed
His with'd Ability, he had himselfe
The Lands and Waters, 'twixt your Throne and his,
Mesfur'd, to looke upon you; whom he loues
(He had me say so)more then all then the Scepters,
And those that bear them, lusting.
Leo. Oh my Brother,
(Good Gentleman) the wrongs I have done thee, fibre
Aforeth within me: and thee thy offices
(So rarely kind) are as Interpreters
Of my behind-hand flackneffe. Welcome hither,
As is the Spring to th Earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this Paragon to th' rearfull vsage
(At least vgentle) of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man, not worth her pains; much leffe,
Th'adventure of her person?

Fls. Good my Lord,
She came from Lilib.
Leo. Where the Warlike Smalbus,
That Noble honor'd Lord, is fear'd, and lou'd?

Fls. Moit Royall Sir,
From thence: from him, whose Daughter
His Teares proclaym'd his parting with her: thence (Aprosperous South-wind friendly we have cou'd,)
To execute the Charge my Father gave me,
For viitting his Highness: my best Traine
I haue from your Sicilien Shores dissim'd; a
Who for Dedemia bend, to dignifie
Not onely my Successe in Lilib (Sir)
But my arrivall, and my Wife, in safetie
Here, where we are.
Leo. The bleffed Gods
Purge all Infection from our Ayre, whilst you
Doe Cymate here: you have a holy Father,
A gracefull Gentleman, against whose perfon
(So)
(So fcred as it is) I have done finne,
For which, the Heauens (taking angry note)
Have left me lisse-liue-lefe: and your Father's blef'd
(As he from Heauen meriies it) with you,
Worthy his goodneffe. What might I have been,
Might I a Sonne and Daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most Noble Sir,
That which I shall report, will bear no credit,
Were not the proofs fo high. Please you(great Sir)
Bekenis greets you from himselfe, by me:
Defies you to attach his Sonne, who ha's
(His Dignific, and Dutie both call'd off)
Fled from his Father, from his Hopes, and with A Shepheard's Daughter.

Leo. Where's Bekenis? (speak;)

Lord. Here, in your Citie: I now came from him.
I speake amazedly, and it becomes
My meruaille, and my Message. To your Court
While he was hunting (in the Chafe, it feemes,
Of this faire Couple) meets he on the way
The Father of this feeming Lady, and
Her Brother,having both their Countrie quitted,
With this young Prince.

Fls. Camillo ha's betray'd me;
Whole honor, and whole honesty till now,
Endur'd all Weather.

Lord. Lay's fo to his charge:
He's with the King your Father.
Leo. Who? Camillo?

Lord. Camillo (Sir) I speake with him: who now
Ha's these poore men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so foake: they kneele, they kiffe the Earth;
Forweare themselfes as often as they speake:
Bekenis fops his cares, and threatens them
With divers deaths, in death.

Pard. Oh my poor Father:
The Heauen lets Spyes upon vs, will not hauve
Our Contract celebrated.

Leo. You are married?

Fls. We are not (Sir) nor are we like to be:
The Sternes (I fee) will kiffe the Valleys first:
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leo. My Lord,
Is this the Daughter of a King?

Fls. She is,
When once she is my Wife.
Leo. That once (I fee) by your good Fathers speed,
Will come-on very flowly. I am forry
(Moff forry) you have broken from his illking,
Where you were't in dutie: and as forry,
Your Cholie is not so rich in Worth, as Beautie,
That you might well enjoy her.

Fls. Dearer,lookie vp:
Though Fortune, visible an Enemy,
Should chance vs, with my Father; powre no lot
Hath the to change our Loues. Befeech you (Sir)
Remember, since you ow'd no more to Time,
Then I doe now with thought of fuch Affections,
Step forth mine Advocate: at your request,
My Father will grant preclusive things, as Trifies.

Leo. Would he doe so, I'd beg your precious Miftis,
Which he counts but a Trife.

Pard. Sir (my Liege)
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a moneth

'T fore your Queene dy'd, she was more worth such gazes,
Then what you looke on now.

Leo. I thought of her,
Suen in thefe Lookes I made. But your Petition
Is yet vn-answer'd: I will to your Father:
Your Honor not o're-throwne by your deffer,
I am friend to them, and you: Vpon which Errand
I now go to toward him: therefore follow me,
And marke what way I make: Come good my Lord.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Aduaticus, and a Gentleman.

Aud. Befeech you (Sir) were you preuent at this Relation?

Gen. 1. I was by at the opening of the Fairthall, heard the old Shepheard deliver the manner how he found it: Whereupon(after a little amazenesse) we were all commanded out of the Chamber: only this (me thought) I heard the Shepheard say, he found the Child.

Aud. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

Gen. 2. I make a broken deliuerie of the Bifinnesse;
but the changes I perceive in the King, and Camillo, were very Notes of admiration: they seem'd almost, with flaring on one another, to teare the Cufes of their Eyes.
There was speech in their dumbnesse, Language in their very geture: they look'd as they had heard of a World rul'd, or one destroy'd: a notable paffion of Wonder appeared in them: but the wiseft beholder, that knew no more but feeing, could not fay, if th'importance was joy, or Sorrow; but in the extremite of the one, it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.
Here comes a Gentleman, that happily knowes more:
The Newes, Roger.

Gen. 2. Nothing but Bon-fires the Oracle is fulfill'd:
the Kings Daughter is found: such a deale of wonder is broken out within this hour: that Ballad-makers cannot be able to expresse it.

Enter another Gentleman.
Here comes the Lady Paulina's Steward, hee can deliuer you more. How goes it now (Sir.) This Newes (which is calle'd true) is fo like an old Tale, that the verifie of it is in throng fulpiion: Ha's the King found his Heire?

Gen. 3. Moft true, if ever Truth were pregnant by Circumstance: That which you hear, you'll owre you, there is such vniue in the provees. The Mantle of Queene Hermione: her Iewell about the Neck of it:
The Letters of Antigam found it, with which they know to be his Character: the Malefike of the Creature, in resemblance of the Mother: the Affedia of Noblenesse, which Nature flowes above her Breeding, and many other Evidences, proclame her, with all certaine, to be the Kings Daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two Kings?

Gen. 2. No.

Gen. 3. Then have you left a Sight which was to bee seen, cannot bee spooke of. There might you have beheld one loy crowne another, so and in fuch manner, that it seem'd Sorrow wept to take leave of them: for their loy waid in tears. There was cifting vp of Eyes, holding vp of Hands, with Countenance of fuch diffraction, that they were to be knowne by Garment, not by Fauor.

Our
Our King being ready to leave out of himself, for joy of his found Daughter; as if that joy were now become a Loffe, cryes, Oh, thy Mother, thy Mother: then asks Bhekemia forgiueneresse, then embraces his Sonne-in-Law; then againe worrieys he his Daughter, with clipping her. Now he thanks the old Shephard (which stands by, like a Weather-bitten Conduit, of many Kings Reignes.) I never heard of such another Encouter, which James Report to follow it, and vndo's description to doe it.

Gent. 2. What, 'pray you, became of Antiguenus, that carried hence the Child?

Gent. 3. Like an old Tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though Credit be asleep, and not an ear o- pen; he was toorne to pieces with a Beare: This aououches the Shephards Sonne; who ha's not onely his Innocence (which seemes much) jollifit him, but a Hand-kercifh and Kings gift, that Paulina knows.

Gent. 1. What became of his Barke, and his Followers?

Gent. 3. Wrackt the fame infant of their Mafters death, and in the view of the Shephard: so that all the Instruments which ayled to expofe the Child, were even then left, when it was found. But oh the Noble Combat, that 'twixt Joy and Sorrow was fought in Paulina. Shee had one Eye declin'd for the loffe of her Husband, another elevated, that the Oracle was fullifh'd: Shee lifft the Princefle from the Earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if shee would pin her to her heart, that fhee might no more be in danger of loofing.

Gent. 1. The Dignity of this Act was worth the audience of Kings and Princes, for by such it was acted.

Gent. 3. One of the prettieft touches of all, and that which ang'd for mine Eyes (caught the Water, though not the Fift) was, when at the Relation of the Queenes death (with the manner how fhee came to it, bravely confess'd, and lamented by the King) how attentioned wounded his Daughter, till (from one figne of colour to another) fhee did (with an Alm) I would faine ftay, bleed Tears; for I am fure, my heart wept blood. Who was most Marble, there changed colour: fome fhew'd, all forrow'd: if all the World could have seen't, the Wee had beene vniefall.

Gent. 1. Are they returned to the Court?

Gent. 3. No: The Princefle hearing of her Mothers Statue (which is in the keeping of Paulina) a Peace many yeares in doing, and now newly perform'd, by that rare Italian Mafter, Giulio Romanos, who (had he himselfe Eternifie, and could put Breath into his Workes) would beguile Nature of her Cuffome, fo perfectly he is her Ape: He fo necre to Hermione, hath done Hermione, that alay fay one would speake to her, and fand in hope of awnter, Thither (with all greendiefe of affection)are they gone, and there they intend to Sup.

Gent. 2. I thought she had fome great matter there in hand, for they hath privately, twice or thrice a day, euer since the death of Hermione, visited that removed Houfe. Shall wee thither, and with our companye the Pece the Rejoycing?

Gent. 1. Who would be thence, that he's the benefic of Acclef? every wink of an Eye, some new Grace will be borne our Absence makes vs vnthriftive to our Knowledge. Let's along.

Aunt. Now (had I not the dafh of my former life in me) would Preferment drop on my head. I brought the old Shake and his Sonne aboord the Prince; told him, I heard them talke of a Faithfull, and I know not what: but he at that time over-fond of the Shephards Daughter(for he then tooke her to be) who began to be much Sea-fell, and himselfe little better, extremity of Weather continuing, this Myfterie remained vndiscouer'd. But 'tis all one to me: for had I beene the fender-out of this Secret, it would not have relift'd among my other difcreetes. Enter Shephard and Cloues.

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and alreadie appearing in the blossomes of their Fortune.

Sleep. Come Boy, I am past moe Children: but thy Sonnes and Daughters will be all Gentleman borne.

Clou. You are well met (Sir,) you deny'd to fight with mee this other day, because I was no Gentleman borne. See you thefhe Clothes? fay you fee them not, and thinke me flill no Gentleman borne: You were bef't fay thefe Robes are not Gentleman borne. Give me the Eyce: doe: and try whether I am not now a Gentleman borne.

Aunt. I know you are now(Sir) Gentleman borne.

Clou. And have beene so any time thefe foure hours.

Sleep. And fo have I, Boy.

Clou. So you have: but I was a Gentleman borne before my Father: for the Kings Sonne toke me by the hand, and call'd mee Brother: and then the two kings call'd my Father Brother: and then the Prince (my Brother) and the Princefle(my Sifter)call'd my Father, Father; and fo wee wept: and there was the first Gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

Sleep. We may live (Sonne) to fheid many more.

Clou. Or else'twere hard luck, being in fo propofiteous effate as we are.

Aunt. I humbly bafe each you (Sir) to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your Worfhip, and to give me your good report to the Prince my Master.

Sleep. 'Prethee Sonne doe: for we muft be gentle, now we are Gentlemen.

Clou. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aunt. I, and it like your good Worfhip.

Clou. Give me thy hand: I will fware to the Prince, thou art as honest a true Fellow as any is in Bhekemia.

Sleep. You may lay it, but not fware it.

Clou. Not fware it, now I am a Gentleman? Let Boeres and Frankclins fay it, Ille fware it.

Sleep. How if it be fale (Sonne?)

Clou. If it be ne're fo fale, a true Gentleman may fware it, and that the behalfe of his Friend: And Ille fware to the Prince, thou art a tall Fellow of thy hands, and all thou wilt not be drinke: but I know thou art no tall Fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drinke: but Ille fware it, and I would thou wilt be a tall Fellow of thy hands.

Aunt. I will proue fo (Sir) to my power.

Clou. I, by any meanes proue a tall Fellow: if I do not wonder, how thou darft venture to be drinke, not being a tall Fellow, truft me not. Harke, the Kings and the Princes (our Kindred) are going to fée the Queenes Picture. Come, follow vs: wee'll be thy good Masters.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Laetes, Pelicines, Florinacl, Perdita, Camille, Paulina: Hermione (like a Statue) Lords, &c.

Lds. O grue and good Paulina, the great comfort
That I have had of thee?

C c Paul, What
Paul. What (Souveraigne Sir) I did not well, I meant well: all my Services.
You have pay'd home. But that you have vouchafed (With your Crown'd Brother, and thence your contrasted Heires of your Kingdomes) my poor House to visit; It is a surplus of your Grace, which newer
My life may laft to anfwere.

Leo. O Paulina,
We honor you with trouble; but we came
To fee the Statue of our Queene. Your Gallerie
Hauce we paft'd through, not without much content
In many singularities; but we faw not
That which my Daughter came to looke vpon,
The Statue of her Mother.
Paul. As the liu'd pereleffe,
So her dead likeneffe I doe well beleue
Excell what ever yet you looke'd vpon,
Or hand of Man hath done: therefore I keepe it Lonely, apart. But here it is: prepare
To fee the Life as life, as ever
Still Sleepe mock'd Death: behold, and fay 'tis well.
I like your vlience, it the more thers-off
Your wonder but yet speake, first you (my Liege)
Comes it not something neere?

Leo. Her natural Poffure.
Chide me (deare Stone) that I may fay indeed
Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art the,
In thy not chiding: for the was as tender
As Infancy, and Grace. But yet (Paulina)
Hermione was not fo much wrinckled, nothing
So aged as this frames.

Pel. Oh, not by much.

Paul. So much the more our Carurers excellence,
Which lets goe-by fome fixteen yeeres, and makes her
As the liu'd now.

Leo. As now the might have done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my Soule. Oh, thus the flood,
Euen with fuch Life of Malefie (warne Life,
As now it coldly (flands) when firft I woor'd her.
I am affhamed: Do not the Stone rebuke me,
For being more Stone then it? Oh Royall Perce:
There's Magic in thy Malefie, which ha's
My Euis conur'd to remembrance; and
From thy admiring Daughter tooke the Spirit,
Standing like Stone with thee.

Perd. And give me leave,
And doe not fay 'tis Superfitition, that
I kneele, and then implore her Blessing. Lady,
Deere Queene, that ended when I but began,
Gue me that hand of yours, to kiffe.

Paul. O, patience:
The Statue is but newly fix'd; the Colour's
Not dry.

Cam. My Lord, your Sorrow was too foare lay'd-on,
Which fixteen Winters cannot blow away,
So many Summers dry: scarce any joy
Did ever fo long live; no joy grow,
But kill'd it felfe much sooner.

Pel. Deere my Brother,
Let him, that was the caufe of this, haue powre
To take-off fo much griefe from you, as he Will pcece vp in himfelfe.

Paul. Indeed my Lord,
If I had thought the fight of my poor Image
Would thus haue wrought you (for the Stone is mine)

II'd not have fwe'd it.

Leo. Doe not draw the Curtaine.
Paul. No longer shell you gae on't, leaft your Fancie
May thinke anon, it moves.
Leo. Let be, let be:
Would I were dead, but that me thinkes already,
(What was he that did make it?) See (my Lord)
Would you not deeme it breath'd? and that thofe veines
Did verily bear blood?

Pel. Majefty done:
The very Life feemes warme vpon her Lippe.

Leo. The fixure of her Eye ha's motion in't,
As we are mock'd with Art.

Paul. Ile draw the Curtaine:
My Lord's almost fo farre transport'd, that He'll thinke anon it liues.

Leo. O'h sweet Paulina,
Make me to thinke it fo twenty yeeres together:
No fifted Sences of the World can match
The pleafure of that madneffe. Let's alone.

Paul. I am forry (Sir) I haue thus farre fir'd you: but I could afflift you farther.

Leo. Doe Paulina:
For this Affiiction ha's a taft as sweet
As any Cordiall comfort. Still me thinkes
There is an ayre comes from her. What fine Chizzell
Could euer yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiffe her.

Paul. Good my Lord, forbear:
The ruddineffe vpon her Lippe, is wet:
You're marre it, if you kiffe it; blayne your owne
With Oyly Painting: all I draw the Curtaine.

Leo. No: not thefe twenty yeeres.

Perd. So long could I Stand-by, a looker-on,
Paul. Either forbear,
Quiet prefently the Chappell, or refolute you
For more amazement: if you can behold it,
Ile make the Statue move indeed defcend,
And take you by the hand: but then you'll thinke
(Which I proteft againft) I am afflifted
By wicked Powers.

Leo. What you can make her doe,
I am content to looke on: what to speake,
I am content to heare: for 'tis as eafe
To make her speake, as moue.

Paul. It is requir'd
You doe awake your Faith: then, all fland fill:
On thofe that thinke it is invaluable Business
I am about, let them depart.

Leo. Proceed:
No foot flall firre.
Paul. Misfick; awake her: Strike:
'Tis time: defcend: be Stone no more: approach:
Strike all that looke vpon with merauaile: Come:
Ile fll your Graue vp: Biire: nye, come away:
Bequeath to Death your numneffe: (for from him, Dearly Life redeemes you) you perceiue the Biire:
Start not: her Affions shall be holy, as
You heare my Spell is lawfull: doe not thun her,
Vntill you fee her dyne again: for then
You kill her double: Nye, prefent your Hand:
When she was young, you woor'd her: now, in age,
Is the become the Sutor?

Leo. Oh fie's warme:
If this be Magick, let it be an Art
The Winters Tale.

Lawfull as Eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his necke,
If the pertaine to life, let her speake too.

Pol. I, and make it manifest where she ha's liu'd,
Or how foame from the dead?

Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old Tale: but it appears the liues, Though yet the speake not. Marke a little while:
Please you to interpose ( faire Madam) kneele,
And pray your Mothers blessing : turne good Lady,
Our Perdita is found.

Her. You Gods looke downe,
And from your sacred Viols pour your graces
Upon my daughters head : Tell me (mine owne)
Where halst thou bin preferu'd? Where liu'd? How found Thy Fathers Court? For thou shalt hear that I
Knowing by Paulina, that the Oracle
Gave hope thou waint in being, haue preferu'd
My felle, to fee the yffine.

Paul. There's time enough for that,
Least they defire (upon this pult) to trouble
Your ioyes, with like Relation. Go together
You precious winners all : your exultation

Partsake to every one: I (an old Turtle)
Will wing me to some wither'd bough, and there
My Mate (that's never to be found again)
Lament, till I am lost.

Lea. O peace Paulina : Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a Wife. This is a Match,
And made betwenee's by Vowes. Thou haft found mine,
But how, is to be queffion'd : for I faw her
(As I thought) dead: and haue (in vaile) faid many
A prayer vpon her grave. Ie not fecke faucere
(For him, I partly know his minde) to finde thee
An honourable husband, Come Camillo,
And take her by the hand: whose worth, and honeftly
Is richly noted: and heree justiffed
By Vs, a paire of Kings. Let's from this place.
What? looke vpon my Brother: both your pardons,
That ere I put betwene your holy lookes
My lil fupffition: This your Son-in-law,
And Sonne vnto the King, whom heauen directing
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,
Leade vs from hence, where we may leyfurely
Each one demand, and answere to his part
Perform'd in this wide gap of Time, fince fift
We were difleuer'd: Haultly lead away.

Exeunt.

FINIS.
The life and death of King John.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Enter King John, Queen Elene, Pembroke, Elyas, and Salutary, with the Embassie of France.

King John.

Ow say Chalillin, what would France with vs? Chatl. Thus (after greeting) speaks the King of France.

In my behaviour to the Majesty, The borrowed Majesty of England hear.

Ely. A strange beginning; borrowed Majesty?

K. John. Silence (good mother) heare the Embassie.

Chatl. Philip of France, in right and true behalfe Of thy deceased brothers, Geoffrey sonne,

Arthur Plantaginet, laies most lawfull claim To this faire Iland, and the Territories;

To Ireland, Poitiers, Anjou, Taveyne, Maine, Defiring thee to lay aside the sword Which have transfiguring these several titles, And put the fame into yong Arthurs hand,

Thy Nephew, and right royal Soueraigne.

K. John. What followes if we disallow of this?

Chatl. The proud controle of fierce and bloody warre, To inforce these rights, so forcibly with-held,

K. In. Hear we war for war, & bloud for bloud, Controlement for controlement: so answer France.

Chatl. Then take my Kings defiance from me, The farthest limit of my Embassie.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace, Be thou as lightning in the eies of France; For ere thou canst report, I will be there:

The thunder of my Cannon shall be heard. So hence the thou the trumpet of our wrath, And fallen preflage of your owne decay; An honourable conduct let him have,

Pembroke looke too: farewell Chalillin.

Exit Chatl. and Pemb.

Ely. What now my sonne, have I not ever fail

How that ambitious Constance would not cease

Till the she kindled France and all the world, Upon the right and party of her sonne.

This might have beene prevented, and made whole

With very eafe arguments of love,

Which now the manage of two kingdoms must

With fearefull bloodye illue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possesion, and our right for vs.

Ely. Your strong possesions much more then your right,

Or else it must go wrong with you and me,

So much my confidence whispers in your ear;

Which none but heauen, and you, and I, shall heare.

Enter a Sheriff.

Elyas. My Liege, here is the strangest controioere

Come from the Country to be judg'd by you

That ere I heard; shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach:

Our Abbies and our Priories shall pay

This expeditious charge: what men are you?

Enter Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip.

Philip. Your faithfull subject, I a gentleman,

Borne in Northamptone, and eldste sonne

As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,

A Soueraigne by the Honor-gluing-hand.

Of Cordesion, Knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Robert. The son and heir to that fame Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heyre?

You came not of one mother then it seems.

Philip. Most certain of one mother, mighty King,

That is well knowne, and as I think one father:

But for the curreign knowledge of that truth,

I put you o're to heauen, and to my mother;

Of that I doubt, as all mens children may.

Ely. Out on thee rude man, who dost shame thy mother,

And wound her honor with this difference.

Philip. I Madam? No, I have no reason for it,

That is my brothers plea, and none of mine,

The which if he can prove, a pops me out,

At least from faire five hundred pound a yeare:

Heauen guard my mothers honor, and my Land.

K. John. A good blunt fellow: why being yonger born

Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Philip. I know not why, except to get the land:

But once he flandered me with bashardy:

But where I be as true begot or no,

That still I lay upon your mothers head,

But that I am as well begot my Liege

(Faire fall the bones that tooke the pains for me)

Compare our faces, and be judge your selfe.

If old Sir Robert did beget vs both,

And were our father, and this sonne like him:

O old sir Robert Father, on my knee

I giue heauen thanks I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why what a mad-cap hath heauen lent vs here?

Ely. He hath a trichke of Cordelion face,

The accent of his tongue affleoth him:

Doe you not read some tokens of my sonne

In the large composition of this man?

K. John.
The life and death of King John.

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his part,
And findes them perfect Richard: firra speake,
What doth move you to dissemble your brothers land.

Phil. Because he hath a half-face like my father?
With halfe that face would he have all my land,
A halfe-face'd, groat, four hundred pound a yeare?
Rob. My gracious Liege, when that my father liu'd,
Your brother did imploy my father much.

Phil. Well sir, by this you cannot get my land,
Your tale muft be how he employ'd my mother.

Rob. And once dispatch'd him in an Embassie
To Germany, there with the Emperor
To treat of high affairs touching that time:
Th'advantage of his absence tooke the King,
And in the meane time foum'd at my fathers;
Where how he did preuaile, I blame to speake:
But truth is truth, large lengths of feas and shores
Betweene my father, and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speake himselfe.
When this same hau' he heard it last:
Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me, and took it on his death
That this my mothers fonne was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourante weeke before the course of time:
Then good my Ledge let me have what is mine,
My fathers land, as was my fathers will.

K. John. Sirra, your brother is Legitimate,
Your fathers wife did after wedlocke bear him:
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lyes on the hazards of all husbands That marry wives: tell me, how if my brother
Who as you say, tooke paines to get this fonne,
Had of your father claim'd this fonne for his,
Infooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This Calle, bred from his Cow from all the world:
Infooth he might: then if he were my brothers,
My brother might not clain him, nor your father
Being none of his, refuse him: this concludes,
My mothers sonne did get your fathers heir,
Your fathers heire must have your fathers land.

Rob. Shall then my fathers Will be of no force,
To dispisseffe that childle which is not his.

Phil. Of no more force to dispisseffe me sir,
Then was his will to get me, as I think.

Ell. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother to enjoy thy land:
Or the reputed fonne of Cordelion,
Lord of thy presence, and no land beside.

Baft. Madam, and if my brother had my shape
And I had his, sir Roberts his like him,
And if my legs were two fuch riding rods,
My armes, such eele-skins durt, my face so thin,
That in mine eare I durst not dixke a roke,
Left men shold fay, looke where three farthgins goes,
And to his shape were heyre to all this land,
Would I might never ftryre from off this place,
I would say to her, give it every foot to han this face:
It would not be fir noble in any cafe.

Elina. I like thee well: wilt thou forake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a Souldier, and now bound to France.

Baft. Brother, take you my land, lie take my chance;
Your face hath got five hundred pound a yeare,
Yet fell your face for five pence and 'tis deere:
Madam, lie follow you unto the death.

Ellenor. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.

Baft. Our Country manners glue our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name?

Baft. Philip my Liege, so is my name begun,
Philip, good old Sir Roberts wifes eldest fonne.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name
Whome forse thou hearest:
Knelle thou downe Philip, but rise more great,
Anke Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Baft. Brother by th'motheres side, glue me your hand,
My father gaue me honor, your gae land:
Now bleffed be the hours by night or day
When I was got, Sir Robert was away.

Ell. The very spirit of Plantagenet:
I am thy grandame Richard, call me fo.

Baft. Madam by chance, but not by truth, what tho;
Something about a little from the right,
In at the window, or else ore the hatch:
Who dares not fyre by day, must walke by night,
And haue his sent, how euer men doe catch:
Neere or farre off, well wonne is still well ftoet,
And I am I, how eere I was begot.

K. John. Go to Faulconbridge, now haue thoe thy defire,
A landlief Knight, makes thee a landed Squire:
Come Madam, and come Richard, we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more then need.

Baft. Brother adieu, good fortune come to thee,
For thou waft got i' th' way of honesty.

Exeunt all but baftard.

Baft. A foot of Honor better then I was,
But many a many foot of Land the worfe.
Well, now can I make any Ioane a Lady,
Good den Sir Richard, Godamery fellow,
And if his name be George, Ile call him Peters,
For new made honor doth forget mens names:
'Tis two reprefeine, and too fickle.
For your conversion, now your traueller,
Hee and his tooth-pike at my worshipes meefe,
And when my knightly fhowmacke is luftis'd,
Why then I luke my teeth, and catche
My picked man of Countries: my deer fit,
Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,
I shall befeech thee; that is queestion now,
And then comes anfwer like an Ablpe booke:
O fir, fayes anfwer, at your beft command,
At your employment, at your faire fit:
No fir, fayes queftion, I fweet fay at yours,
And fo are anfwer knowes what queftion would.
Sauing in Dialogue of Complement,
And talking of the Alpes and Appenines,
The Perrenean and the ruer Pone,
It draws toward flippers in concluſion fo.
But this is worthifull fociety,
And firs the mounting spirit like my felpe;
For he is but a battard to the time
That doth not fmoake of obfervation,
And lo am I whether I fmoake or no:
And not alone in habit and deице,
Exterior forme, outward accoußrement:
But from the inward motion to deliuer
Sweet, sweet, sweet petion for the ages tooth,
Which though I will not praftice to deceive,
Yet to avoid deceit I meanes to learn;
For it fhall fhew the footsteps of my ridding:
But who comes in fuch hafe in riding robes?
The life and death of King John.

What woman pott is this hath she no husband
That will take paines to blow a horne before her?
O me, 'tis my mother: how now good Lady,
What brings you heere to Court so hastily?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.

Lady, Where is that blase thy brother? where is he?
That holds in chafe mine honour vp and downe.

'Baft. My brother Robert,old Sir Roberts fonne:
Colbrand the Gryn, that fame mighty man,
Is it Sir Roberts fonne that you seek ye so?

Lady. Sir Roberts fonne, I thou vnreuerend boy,
Sir Roberts fonne? why fcorn'ft thou at Sir Robert?
He is Sir Roberts fonne, and fo art thou.

'Baft. James Gournt, with thou gue ve leave a while?
Gour. Good leave oue good Philip.
'Baft. Philip, Sparrow, James,
There's toyes abroad, anon Ie tell thee more.

Exit James.

Madam, I was not old Sir Roberts fonne,
Sir Robert might haue eat his part in me
Vpon good Friday, and mere broke his fate: Sir Robert could doe well, marrie to confelle
Could get me Sir Roberts could not doe it;
We know his handy-worke, therefore good mother,
To whom am I beholding for these limmes,
Sir Robert neuer holpe to make this legge.

Lady. Haft thou confpired with thy brother too,
That for thine owne gaine shoulde defend mine honor?
What meannes this fcorne, thou most vntrouwes knaue?

Bal. Knight, knight good mother, Basilisco-like;
What, I am dub'd, I have it on my shoulder;
But mother, I am not Sir Roberts fonne,
I have declaim'd Sir Robert and my land,
Legitimation, name, and all is gone;
Then good my mother, let me know my father,
Some proper man I hope, who was it mother?

Lady. Haft thou denied thy flcife a Faulconbridge?
'Baft. As faithfully as I denie the deull.

Lady. King Richard Cordelion was thy father,
By long and vehement force I was feduc'd
To make roome for him in my husbands bed;
Heuen lay not my transgression to my charge,
That art the issue of my deere offence
Which was so strongly vy'd past my defence.

'Baft. Now by this light were I to get againe,
Madam I would not with a better father:
Some finnes doe bear their prilude on earth,
And so doth yours: your fault, was not your follie,
Needs must you lay your heart at his dippole,
Subleched tribute to commanding loue,
Against whole furlie and vnmatchted force,
The aweffle Lion could not wage the fight,
Nor kepe his Princely heart from Richards hand:
He that perforce robs Lions of their hearts,
May eaily winue a woman; aye my mother,
With all my heart I thankte thee for my father:
Who lives and dures but thy, thou didst not well
When I was got, Ie fend his foule to hell.
Come Lady I will shew thee to my kinne,
And they shall fay, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst fayd him nay, it had beene finne;
Who fayes it was, he lyes, I fay twas not.
The life and death of King John.

Whose before I have faild, have guen him time
To land his Legions all as Fonse as I:
His marches are expedient to this towne,
His forces strong, his Soulers confident:
With him along is come the Mother Queene,
An Ace slirring him to blood and fire;
With her her Neece, the Lady Blanche of Spaine,
With them a Baillard of the Kings deceas;
And all th'falsest humors of the Land,
Ruth, Inconfiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With Ladies faces, and fierce Dragons sideoes,
Have fold their fortunes at their native homes;
Bearing their birth-rights proudly on their backs,
To make a hazard of new fortunes here:
In briefe, a braver choysd of dauntlesse spirits
Then now the English bottomes have warre o're,
Did neuer is Geoffrey the name of God:
Do be offence and sacthe in Christendome:
The interruption of their churlish drums
Cuts off more circunstance, they are at hand,
Drum beats.

To partie or to fight, therefore prepare.
K. How much vnlook'd for, is this expedition.
Asf. By how much vnexpectd, by fo much
We must awake Indeuer for defence,
For course mounteth with occasion,
Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter K. of England, Baffard, Queene, Blanche, Pembrooke,

K. John. Peace be to France If France in peace permit
Our luff and lineall entrance to our owne;
If not, bleede France, and peace accend to heaven.
Whiles we Gods wrathfull agent doe correct
Their proud contempt that beats his peace to heaven.
Fran. Peace be to England, it that warre returne
From France to England, there to live in peace;
England we loue, and for that Englands sake,
With burden of our armor here we sweat;
This toyle of ours should be a worke of thine;
But thou from losung England art so farre,
That thou wilt vnder-wrought his lawfull King,
Cut off the sequence of pollierty,
Out-faced Infant State, and done a rape
Vpon the maiden vertue of the Crowne;
Looke here vpon thy brother Geoffrey face,
These eyes, these browes, were moul'd out of his;
This little abrac'd doth containe that large,
Which died in Geoffrey, and the hand of time,
Shall draw this breeze into as huge a volume:
That Geoffrey was thy elder brother borne,
And this his fonne, England was Geoffrey right,
And this is Geoffrey in the name of God:
How comes it then that thou art call'd a King,
When lying blood doth in these temples best
Which owe the crowne, that thou ore-maiered?
K. John. From whom haft thou this great commision
To draw my answer from thy Articles? (Franse.
Fra. Fr. To that supernal lidge that fits good thoughts
In any beall of strong authorite,
To looke into the blots and flaines of right,
That lidge hath made me guardian to this boy,
Vnder whole warrant I impect thy wrong,
And by whose helpe I meant to chaffle it.

K. John, Alack thou doft vfurpe authority.
Fran. Excuse it is to beat vfurping done.
Queen. Who is it thou doft call vfurper France?
Conf. Let me make anfwer; thy vfurping fonne.
Queen. Out infolent, thy battard shall be King,
That thou maist be a Queen, and checke the world.
Con. My bed was euar to thy fonne as true
As thine was to thy husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geoffrey
Then thou and John, in manners being as like
As raine to water, or deuill to his damme;
My boy a baillard, and my foule I thinke
His father neuer was fo true begetter,
It cannot be, and if thou wert his mother.

Queen. There's a good mother boy, that blots thy fa-
Conf. There's a good grandame boy
That will blot thee.
Asf. Peace.
Baff. Hearre the Cryer.
Asf. What the deuill art thou?
Baff. One that will play the deuell fir with you,
And may catch your hide and you alone.
You are the Hare of whom the Proverb goes
Whole value plucks dead Lyons by the beard;
Ile smooke your skin-cost and I catch you right,
Sira looke too, yeafith I will, yeafith.
Blas. O well did he become that Lyons robe,
That did difrobe the Lion of that rofe.
Baff. It lies as lightly on the backe of him
As great Alcides dooche vpon an Afe:
But Afe, ile take that buthen from your backe,
Or lay on that shall maie your shoulders cracke.
Asf. What cracker is this fame that deales our eares
With this abundance of superfluous breath?
King Lew's, determine what we shall doe frait.
Law. Women & fooles, brake off your conference.
King John, this is the very famme of all:
England and Ireland, Angiers, Toulaine, Malms,
In right of Arthur dое I claim of thee;
Wilt thou refigne them, and lay downe thy Armes?
Iohn. My life as fone, I doe defe Teh France,
Arthur of Britaine, yield thee to my hand,
And out of my deere lone Ile gue thee more,
Then er the coward hand of France can win;
Submit thine boy.
Queen. Come to thy grandame child.
Conf. Doe childe, gое to yt grandame childe,
Give grandame kingdome, and it grandame will Give yt a plum, a cherry, and a figge,
There's a good grandame.
Arthur. Good my mother peace,
I would that I were low laid in my grave,
I am not worth this coyle that's made for me. (weepes.

The life and death of King John.

Thy finnes are visit'd in this poore child,
The Canon of the Law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy finne-concealing womb.

B. Bedlam have done,
Can. I have but this to say,
That he is not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her finne and her, the plague
On this removed issue, plagued for her,
And with her plague her finne: his injury
Her induce the Beadle to her finne,
All punish'd in the perfon of this child,
And all for her, a plague upon her.

Que. Thou vnsudied scold, I can produce
A Will, that bars the title of thy finne.
Can. I who doubts that, a Will: a wicked will,
A woman's Will, a cankred Grandam's will.

F. Peace Lady, paufe, or be more temperate,
It ill becometh this presence to cry ayme
To those ill-tuned repetitions:
Some Trumpet summoned hither to the walls
Those men of Angiers, let vs hear them speake,
Whose title they admit, Arturbs or Johnes.

Trumpet sounds.

Enter a Citizen upon the walls.

Cit. Who is it that hath warr'd vs to the walls?
F. 'Tis France, for England.

B. England for it selfe:
You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects.

E. You looking men of Angiers, Arturbs subjects,
Our Trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.

I. D. For our advantage, therefore hear vs first:
These flagges of France that are advanced here
Before the eye and prospect of your Towne,
Have hither march'd to your endaempment.
The Canons have their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to spift forth
Their iron indignation'gainst your walle:
All preparation for a bloody fledge
And merelles proceeding, by thefe French.
Comfort your Citties eies, your winking gate.

B. And but for our approach, those deeping stones,
That as a waife doth girdle you about
By the compulsion of their Ordinance,
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had bin dissip'd, and wide havoc made
For bloody poole to touch vpper your peace.
But on the fight of vs your lawful King,
Who painefull with much expedient march
Have brought a counter-checke before your gates,
To fawe vncover'd your Citties threatned checkes:
Behold the French amaz'd vouchsafe a paufe,
And now indev'd of ballets wrap in fire
To make a flaking fcor in your walle,
They shooe but calm words, folded vp in fmoake,
To make a fathiffe error in your eares,
Which truit accordingly kinde Cittizens,
And let vs in. Your King, whose labour'd spirits
Fore-weared in this action of swift speedes,
Caues harbourage within your Cittie walle.

F. Peace. When I hafe faide, make anfwver to vs both.

Cit. In briefe, we are the King of Englands subjects
For him, and in his right, we hold this Towne.

Have we remm'd vp our gates against the world.

At your den firrah, with your Lionneffe
I would set an Oxe-head to your Lyons hide:
And make a monfher of you.
Who by the hand of France, this day hath made
Much worke for teares in many an England mother,
Whose fonnes ye scattered on the bleeding ground:
Many a widower husband grousing lies,
Coldly embracing the discoloured earth,
And victorie with little loffe doth play
Vpon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand triumphantly displayed
To enter Conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Britaine, Englands King, and yours.

Enter English Herald with Trumpet.

E. Har. Rejoyce you men of Angiers, ring your bells,
King Iohn, your king and Englands doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day,
Their Armours that march'd hence to shiver bright,
Hithe returne all gilt with Frenchmens blood:
There stuckle no plume in any English Creft,
That is remoued by a blaffe of France:
Our colours do returne in those same hands
That did display them when we firft marcht forth:
And like a Jollity, none can match these shows.
Our lustie English, all with purpled hands,
Dide in the dying slaughter of their foes,
Open your gates, and give the victors way.

Hubert. Herold, from off our towres we might behold
From first to laft, the on-set and returye
Of both your Armie, whose equality
By our base eyes cannot be fentenc'd: (blow)
Blood hath bought blood, and blows have anfwerd Strength matcht with strength, and power confronted power,
Both are alike, and both unlike we like:
One might prize greatest. While they weigh so even,
We hold our Towne for neither: yet for both.

Enter the two Kings with their powers,
at foureall doors.

Roy. France, haft thou yet more blood to caft away?
Say, shall the currant of our right rume on,
Whole paflage vext with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channell, and owre-swell
With course diffus'd even thy confining shores,
Vincile thou let his flifer Water, keepe
A peacefull progresse to the Ocean.

Fra. England thou haft not faul'd one drop of blood
In this hot trall more then we of France,
Rather laft more.
Exeunt both by this hand I fwear
That fways the earth this Climate over-lookes. Before we will lay downe our infinit Armes, Wee'll put thee downe, gainst whom these Armes wee Or adde a royll number to the dead: (beare, Gracing the foure that tells of this warres loffe,
With daughter coupled to the name of kings.

Baft. His Majestie: how high thy glory towres,
When the rich blood of kings is fet on fire:
Oh now doth death line his dead chaps with fleete,
The fwords of fouldiers are his teeth, his phangs,
And now doth death, make a great number of men
In vndetermin'd differences of kings.
Why stand them royal fronts amazed thus:
Cry haucck kings, backe to the flaine field
You equall Potenis, feric kindled spirits,
Then let confusion of one part confirm
The others peace; and blowing blood, and death.

Iohn. Whose party do the Townefmen yet admit?
The life and death of King John.

Where should he finde it faire, then in Blanch:
If zealous loue should go in fearch of vertue,
Where should he finde it purer then in Blanch?
If love ambitious, fought a match of birth,
Whose veins bred richer blood then Lady Blanch?
Such as the is, in beaute, vertue, birth,
Is the yong Dolphin euery way compleat,
If not compleat of, say he is not free,
And the againe wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that she is not hee:
He is the halfe part of a blessed man,
Left to be finisht by such as shee,
And she a faire diuided excellence,
Whole fulnesse of perfection lyes in him.
O two such ficher currents when they loney
Do glorifie the bankes that bound them in:
And two such shores, to two such streams made one,
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To chafe two Princes, if you marry them:
This Vrion shall do more then batterie can
To our fast clofed gates: for at this match,
With twentie hope,I hope you will enforce
The mouth of paffage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance: but without this match,
The sea enraged is not halfe fo deafe,
Lyons more confident, Mountaine and rocks
More free from motion, no not death himselfe
In mortall furie halfe fo persomptuous,
As we to keepe this Citie.

Blaff. Beares a fray,
That shakes the rotten carkaffe of old death
Out of his ragges. Here's a large mouth indeede,
That spits forth death, and mountaine, rockes and seas,
Talkes as familiarly of roaring Lyons,
As maids of thirtene doe of puppy-dogges.
What Canonneere begot this lustie blood,
He speakez plaine Cannon fire, and smoake, and bounce,
He glues the b_RANDOM with his tongue:
Our eares are cudgel'd: not a word of his
But buffes better then a fist of France:
Zounds, I was neuer fo bethump't with words,
Since I first cal'd my brothers father Dad.

Old Quo. Son, lift to this conflagration, make this match
Glide with our Niece a downe, as large enough,
For by this knot, thou shalt so furry eye
Thy now vnwin'd affurance to the Crowne,
That you greene boy shall have no Sunne to ripe
The bloome that promiseth a mightie fruite.
I see a yielding in the lookes of France:
Marke how they whisper, vyre them while their foules
Are capable of this ambition,
Least zeal now melted by the windle breath
Of loft petition, pitie and remorse,
Cooles and congrate againe to what it was.

Hub. Why anfwer not the double Maitelses,
This friendly treatise of our threatened Towne.

Fra. Speak England first, that hath bin forward first
To speake vnto this Cittie: what flay you?
Idn. If that the Dolphin there thy Princez felone,
Can in this book of beautie read, I loue:
Her Dowrie shall weigh equall with a Queene:
For Angiers, and faire Taraine Maine, Pegleiers,
And all that we upon this side the Sea,
(Except this Cittie now by vs befriended)
Findes liable to our Crowne and Dignity,
Shall glide her bridall bed and make her rich
In titles, honors, and promotions,
As she in beautie, education, blood,
Holden hand with any Princesse of the world.

Fra. What fai'th thou boy? looke in the Ladies face.

Del. I do my Lord, and in her eie I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of my felpe form'd in her eye,
Which being but the shadow of your fonne,
Becomes a fonne and makes your fonne a shadow:
I do protest I never lou'd my felpe
Till now, in deed I beheld my felpe,
Drauwe in the flattering table of her eie.

Whaffers with Blanch.

Baff. Drauwe in the flattering table of her eie,
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, hee doth eie
Himselfe loues traytor, this is pitie now:
That hang'd, and drawne, and quarter'd there should be
In fuch a lose, so vile a Lout as he.

Blan. My vackles will in this refpect is mine,
If he fee ought in you that makes him like,
That any thing hee's fee's what molest his liking,
I can with ease tranflate it to my will:
Or if you will, to speake more properly,
I will enforce it easie to my love.
Further I will not flatter you, my Lord,
That all I fee in you is worthe love,
Then this, that nothing do I fee in you,
Though charulith thoughts themselves should bee your Judge,
That I can finde, shou'd merit any hate.

Idn. What fale these yong-ones? What fay you my Niece?

Blan. That she is bound in honor full to do
What you in wifedome still vouchsafe to fay.

Idn. Speakes then Prince Dolphin, can you loue this Ladie?

Del. Nay ask me if I can refraine from loue,
For I do loue her moft unfeinlessly.

Idn. Then do I giue Dolpuppen, Taraine, Maine,
Pogleiers, and Aniou, these fute Prouinces
With her to thee, and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand Markes of English coyne:
Phillips of France, if thou be plea'd withall,
Command thy fonne and daughtier to loyne hands,

Fra. It likes vs well young Princes close your hands

Auff. And your lippes too, for I am well affur'd,
That I did fo when I was first affur'd.

Fra. Now Citizens of Angires ope your gates,
Let in that amitie which you have made,
For at Saint Maries Chappell presently,
The rights of marriage fhallbe solemniz'd.
Is not the Lady Conflance in this troope?
I know she is not for this match made vp,
Her preface would have interrupted much,
Where is she and her fonne, tell me, who knowes?

Del. She is fad and passionate at your highnes Tent.

Fra. And by my faith, this league that we have made
Will giue her fadnesse very little care:
Brother of England, how may we content
This widow Lady? In her right we came,
Which we God knowes, have turn d another way,
To our owne vantage.

Idn. We will heale vp all.

For we'l create young Arch Duc de Britaine
And Earle of Richmond, and this rich faine Towne

We
The life and death of King John.

We make him Lord of. Call the Lady Constance.
Some speedy Meffinger bid her repair
To our solennity: I trust we shall,
(If not fill yp the measure of her will)
Yet in some measure fatifie her so,
That we shall flay her exclamation,
Go we as well as haft will fuffer va.
To this vnlook'd for vnprepared pompe.

Exeunt.

Bafh. Mad world, mad kings, mad composition:
John to flay Arthur's Title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part,
And France, whole armoure Conftance buckled on,
Whom zeal and charitie brought to the field,
As Gods owne fouldier, rounded in the care,
With that fame purpofe-changer, that flye diuer,
That Broker, that ftil breaks the pate of faith,
That dafly breaks-vow, he that winnes of all,
Of kings, of beggers, old men, yong men, maides,
Who having no external thing to los.
But the word Maid, chefts the poore Maid of that.
That smooth-fac'd Gentleman, tickling commodite,
Commoditie, the byas of the world,
The world, who of it felle is payed well,
Made to run euen, upon euern ground;
Till this advantage, this vile drawing byas,
This fway of motion, this commodite,
Makes it take head from all indiffenency,
From all direcion, purpofe, course, intent.
And this fame byas, this Commodite,
This Bawd, this Broker, this all-changing-word,
Clap'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawne him from his owne determin'd ayd,
From a refolu'd and honourable warre,
To a mutt baife and vile-concluded peace.
And why rayle I on this Commodite?
But for becaufe he hath not woood me yet:
Not that I have the power to clutich my hand,
When his faire Angels would falue my paimes,
But for my hand, as unvampted yet,
Like a poore begger, relieft on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a begger, I will raile,
And fay there is no fin but to be rich:
And being rich, my vertue then fhall be,
To fay there is no vice, but beggerie:
Since kings breake faith vpon commodite,
Gaine be my Lord, for I will worchip thee.

Be well adu'd, tell ore thy tale againe.
It cannot be, thou doft not fay 'tis fo.
I truth I may not trut thee, for thy word

Thou fhalt be punifh'd for thus ftruing me,
For I am fickle, and capable of fear.

Oppreft with wrongs, and therefore full of feares,
A widow, husbands, fubjec't to feares,
A woman naturally born to feares;
And though thou now confefte thou didft but left

But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What doft thou meane by flinking of thy head?
Why doft thou looke fo fadly on my fawe?

Why holds thine eie that lamentable rheume,

Be thee fad, fignes conformer of thy words?
Then fpeak again, not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as I beleue you thinke them false,
That gleue you caufe to prove my faying true.

Teach thou this forrow, how to make me dye,
And let beleues, and life encounter fo,
As doth the furie of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall, and die.

Full of vnpleasing blots, and lightlefe felines,
Lame, luffhifh, crooked, twarre, prodigious,
Patch'd with foule Moles, and eye-offending marke,

For then I fhould not loue thee: no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deere a Crown.
But thou art fairs, and at thy birth (deere boy)
Nature and Fortune joynd to make thee great.
Of Natures guifts, thou mayft with Lillies boatt,
And with the halfe-blowne Rose. But Fortune, oh,
She is corrupted, chang'd, and wonne from thee,
Sh'abat isthes honeyle with thine Vracle John,
And with her golden hand hath pluckt on France
To tread downe faire respect of Soueraignitie,
And made his Majieftie the bawd to their.
France is a Bawd to Fortune, and king John,
That trumpet Fortune, that vurping John:
Tell me they fellow, is not France forworne?
Evonem him with words, or get thee gone,
And leue thees woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to vnder-beare.

Sal. Pardon me Madam,
I may not goe without you to the kings.

Con. Thou maft, thou shalt, I will not go with thee,
I will infruct my fowres to bee proud,
For greafe is proud, and makes his owner fnoop.

Here is my Throne, bid kings come bow to it.

Though you, and all the Kings of Christendom Are led to groffely by this medling Priefh, Dreading the curfe that money may buy out, And by the merit of vide gold, droffe, duft, Purchase corrupted pardon of a man, Who in that fale fels pardon from himfelfe: Though you, and at the reft to groffely led, This jugling witchcraft with revenue cherifh, Yet I alone, alone doe me oppofe Against the Pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pan. Then by the lawfull power that I haue, Thou shalt call curs, and excommunicate, And bleffed shall he be that doth revolv From his Allegation to an heretique, And meritorious shall that hand be call'd, Canonizd and worship'd as a Saint, That takes away by any secretcourfe Thy hateful life.

Gam. O lawfull let it be That I have roome with Rome to curfe a while, Good Father Cardinal, cry thou Amen To my keene curses; for without my wrong There is no tongue hath power to curfe him right.

Pan. There's Law and Warrant (Lady) for my curfe.

Conf. And for mine too, when Law can do no right.

Let it be lawfull, that Law barre no wrong: Law cannot give my childe his kingdome here; For he that holds his Kingdome, holds the Law: Therefore since Law it felle is perfect wrong, How can the Law forbid my tongue to curfe? Pand. Philip of France, on perill of a curfe, Let goe the hand of that Arch-heretique, And raise the power of France upon his head, Vnleffe he doe submit himfelfe to Rome.

Gam. Look'd it thou paue France to do not let go thy hand.

Gam. Look to That Deuell, left that France repent,

Aulf. O that a man shoulde speake thofe words to me.
And by diſſpoynd hands hell lofe a soule.

Aft. King Philip, lyen to the Cardinall.

Bof. And hang a Calues-skin on his recrante limbs.

Aft. Well ruffian, I must po pocket vp thee, wrongs,

Beſe.

Bof. Your breeches beft may carry them.

John. Philip, what flaw theſt thou to the Cardinall?

Con. What fhould he fay, but as the Cardinall?

Dolph. Bethinke you father, for the diſſcrepance

Is Purchafe of a heaue curfe from Rome,

Or the light loſt of England, for a friender:

Forgoe the eafe.

Blas. That the curfe of Rome.

Con. O Lewis, fland fafe, the deuill temptes thee here,

In likenesſe of a new vntrimmed Bride.

Blas. The Lady Conſance speakes not from her faith,

But from her need.

Con. Oh, if thou grant my need,

Which onely lies but by the death of faith,

That need, muſt needs infringe this principle,

That faith would liue againe by death of need:

O then trend downe my need, and faith muſt moue vp,

Kepe my need vp, and faith is trodden downe.

John. The king is moud, and anſwers not to this.

Con. O be remou'd from him, and anſwere we.

Aft. Doe fo king Philip, hang no more in doubt.

Bof. Hang nothing but a Calues skin most fwerie lowt.

Fras. I am perplex'd, and know not what to fay.

Pam. What canfl thou fay, but wil perples thee more?

If thou fband excommunicate, and curft?

Fras. Good reuerence father, make my perfon yours,

And tell me how you would befowre your felfe?

This royall hand and mine are newly knitt,

And the conſuſion of our inward soules

Married in league, coupled, and link'd together

With all religious strength of sacred vowes,

The laft breath that gave the found of words

Was deep-fwarne faith, peace, amity, true loue

Betweene our kingsdomes and our royall felves,

And even before this truce, but new before,

No longer then we well could waft our hands,

To clap this royall bagaine vp of peace,

Heauen knowes they were befmeard and o'er-flaind

With f-caret pensill; where renuerge old paiet

The fcareful difference of incenced kings:

And fhall thofe hands fo lately purg'd of blood?

So newly-loyn'd in loue? fo frong in both,

Vvoyke this feuaryre, and this kinde regreffe?

Play fght and loffe with faith? fo left with heauen,

Make fuch vnaconfant children of our felves

As now againe to fatch our paume from paume:

Vn-fwarne faith fwarne, and on the marriage bed

Of smiling peace to march a bloody houfe,

And make a ryt on the gentle brow

Of true fincerity? O holy Sir

My reuerenced father, let it not be fo:

Out of your grace, defufe, ordaine, impofe

Some gentle order, and then we fhall be bleft

To doe your pleaufure, and continue friends.

Pand. All formes are formeſſe, Order orderleſſe,

Save what is oppofite to Englands loue.

Therefore to Armes, be Champion of our Church,

Or let the Church our mother breathe her curfe,

A mothers curfe, on her rewolting fonne:

Frances, thou muft hold a serpant by the tongue,

A caſed Lion by the moftail paw,
The life and death of King John.

Scena Secunda.

Allarums, Excursions: Enter Baffard with Austria’s beard.

Baf. Now by my life, this day grows wondrous hot,
Someavy Deuill hovers in the skie,
And pour’s downe mischief: Austria lend hee there,
Enter Iohn, Arthur Hubert.

While Philip breathes.

Iohn. Hubert, keep thee this boy: Philip make vp,
My Mother is affayled in our Tent,
And tane I fear.

Baf. My Lord I reduced her,
Her Highness is in safety, feare you not:
But on my Life, for very little pains
Will bring this labor to an happy end. Exit.

Allarums, excursions, Retreat. Enter Iohn, Eleanor, Arthur Bafard, Hubert, Lords.

Iohn. So shall it be: your Grace shall stay behinde
So strongly guarded: Cofen, looke not sad,
Thy Grandame loses thee, and thy Vnkle will
As deere be to thee, as thy father was.

Arth. O this will make my mother die with grieues.
Iohn. Cofen away for England, haste before,
And ere our comming fee thou slake the bags
Of hoarding Abbotts, imprisoned angels
Set at libertie: the fat ribles of peace
Mush by the hungry now be fed vp from:
Vse our Commission in his vomit force.

Baf. Bell, Book, & Candle, shall not drive me back,
When gold and silver beckes me to come on.
I leave your highness: Grandame, I will pray
(If ever I remember to be holy)
For your faire safety: to I kiffe your hand.

Ele. Farewell gentle Cofen.

Iohn. Coze, farewell.

Ele. Come hether little kinsman, harke a woordie.

Iohn. Come hether Hubert, O my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh
There is a foule counts thee her Creditor,
And with advantage meanes to pay thy love:
And my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lives in this bofore, dearly cherished.

Give me thy hand, I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better tune.

By heaven Hubert, I am almost affram’d to say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your Maiestie.

Iohn. Good friend, thou haft no caufe to say so yet,
But thou shalt have: and creepe time nere so low,
Yet it shall come, for me to doe thee good.
I had a thing to say, but let it goe:
The Sunne is in the heauen, and the proud day
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gawdes.

To give me audience: if the mid-night bell
Did with his yron tongue, and burn’t my mouth
Sound on into the drowse race of night:
If this same were a Church-yard where we stand,
And thou possest with a thousand wrongs:
Or if that fury sa’lt melancholy
Had bak’d thy blood, and made it heavy, thicker,
Which else runnes tickling vp and downe the veins,
Making that idiot laughter keepens mans eyes,
And strive their cheakes to idle merriment,
A passion hatefull to my purposes:

Or if that thou couldest fee me without eyes,
Hear me without thine eares, and make reply
Without a tongue, ving conceit alone,
Without eyes, eares, and harnefull sound of words:
Then, in delight of brooded watchfull day,
I would into thy bofore pour my thoughts:
But (sh) I will not, yet I love thee well,
And by my troth I thinke thou lovt me well.

Hub. So well, that what you bid me vndertake,
Though that my death were adiunct to my Aet,
By heauen I would doe it.

Iohn. Doest not I know thou wouldest?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert: throw thine eye
On yon young boy: Ile tell thee what my friend,
He is a very serpenter in my way,
And wherefore this foot of mine doth tread,
He lies before me: dost thou vnderstand me?
Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And he keepes him fo,
That he shall not offend your Maiestie.

Iohn. Death.

Hub. My Lord.

Iohn. A Grace.

Hub. He shall not live.

Iohn. Enough.

I could be merry now, Hubert, I love thee.
Well, Ie not say what I intend for thee:
Remember Madam, Fare you well,
Ie send those powers o’re to your Maiestie.

Ele. My bleeding goe with thee.

Iohn. For England Cofen, goe.

Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
With all true duece: On toward Callicoe, hoo.

Exeunt.
Scena Tertia.

Enter France, Dolphin, Pandulfho, Attendants.

Fra. So by a roaring Tempelt on the flood,
A whole Armado of conseild saile
Is scattered and dil-loynd from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort, all shall yet goe well.

Fra. What can goe well, when we have runne so ill?
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?

Arthur take prisoner? divers deere friends faine?

And bloudy England into England gone,
One-bear'd interruption fight of France?

Doth not the earth butcher all their liberie?
So hot a speed, with such advice dopso'd,
Such temperate order in so fierce a caufe,
Doth want example: who hath read, or heard
Of any kindred-action like to this?

Fra. Well could I bare that England had this praffe,
So we could finde some patterne of our faine:

Enter Conffance.

Looke who comes heere? a grave vnto a foule,
Holding th'eternall spirit against her will,
In the vile prison of affliction breath:
I prethe Lady goe away with me.

Con. Lo! now: now see the issue of your peace.

Fra. Patience good Lady, comfort gentle Conffance.

Con. No, I deffe all Counffell, all redresse,
But that which ends all counffell, true Redresse:
Death, death, O amiable, lovely death,
Thou odoriferous rch: found rottenneffe,
Arife forth from the couch of lafitng night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperite,
And I will kiffe thy deteable bones,
And put my eye-balls in thy vaulitie brawes,
And ring thefe fingers with thy houshold worms,
And flop this gap of breath with fulfome duft,
And be a Carrion Monfter like thy felfe;
Come, grin on me, and I will thinke thou smilft,
And buffe thee as thy wife: Milieres Loue,
O come to me.

Fra. O faire affiétion, peace.

Con. No, no, I will not, hauing breath to cry:
O that my tongue were in the thunders mouth,
Then with a passion would I blace the world,
And rowse from sleepe that fell Anatomy
Which cannot heare a Ladies feeble voyce,
Which fornes a moderne Invocacion.

Pand. Lady, you vter madness, and not forrow.

Con. Thou art holy to belee me fo,
I am not mad: this haire I teare is mine,
My name is Conffance: I was Conffant, hard he forfie,
Yong Arthur is my fonne, and he is loft:
I am not mad, I would to heauen I were,
For then 'tis like I should forget my fife:
O, if I could, what grieue should I forget?
Preache some Philosophy to make me mad,
And thou shalt be Conffant's(2)Cardinal.
For, being not mad, but fensible of grieue,
My reasonable part produces reafon
How I may be deliuer'd of these woes,
And teaches mee to kill or hang my fife:
If I were mad, I should forget my fonne,

Or madly thinke a babe of clouts were he;
I am not mad: too well, too well I feele
The different plight of each calamitie.

Fra. Binde vp those treffes: O what love I note
In the faire multitude of those her hairies;
Where but by chance a fluer drop hath faine,
Euen to that drop ten thousand wiery fiends
Doe glem themselues in fociable grieue,
Like true, ineparable, faihfull loves,
Sucking together in calamitie.

Con. To England, if you will.

Fra. Binde vp your hairies.

Con. Yes that I will; and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds, and clire aloud,
O, that thefe hands could fo redeeme my fonne,
As they hau en gien thefes hayres their liberie:
But not by true, fo I will fee my boy againe,
And will againe commit them to their bonds,
Becaufe my poore childe is a prifoner.
And father Cardinall, I have hearde you fay
That we shall fee and know our friends in heauen:
If that were true, I fhall fee my boy again:
For since the birth of Caius, the first male-childe
To him that did bat yesterday fupre,
There was not fuch a gracius creature borne:
But now will Canker-forrow eat my bud,
And chafe the natiue beauty from his cheeke,
And he will looke as hollow as a Ghost,
As dim and meager as an Agues fitte,
And fo he'll dye: and rifing fo againe,
When I fhall meet him in the Court of heauen
I fhall not know him: therefore neuer, neuer
Muf't I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pand. You hold too heynous a repect of greefe.

Conff. He talkes to me, that neuer had a fonne.

Fra. You are as fond of greefe, as of your childe.

Con. Greefe fift the roome vp of my ableft childes:
Lies in his bed, walkes vp and downe with me,
Put on his pretty looks, repeat his words,
Ren embtes me of all his gracius parts,
Stufes out his vancat garments with his fonne;
Then, hauce I reafon to be fond of grieue?
Fareyouwell: had you fuch a loft as I,
I could gie better comfort then you doe.
I will not keepe this forme vpon my head,
When there is fuch deforder in my witte:
O Lord, my boy, my Arthur, my faire fonne,
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world:
My widow-comfort, and my forrowes cure.

Fra. I feare fome out-rage, and lea fupp healthcare.

Exit. Fra. Exeunt. Del. There's nothing in this world can make me joy,
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull eare of a drowlie man;
And better Shame hath foop'ld the sweet words taste,
That it yeelds no nought but flambe and bitterneffe.

Pand. Before the curing of a strong diseafe,
Euen in the infant of repaire and health,
The fit is stronge: Eulias that take leave
On their departure, mort of all fwee euill:
What hauce you loft by losing of this day?

Del. All daies of glory, joy, and happyneffe.

Pan. If you had won it, certainly you had.
No, no: when Fortune means to men most good,
Shee lookes vpon them with a threatening eye:
'Tis strange to thinke how much King John hath loft
In this which he accounts so cleere wonne.
Are not you grie’d that Arthur is his prifoner?
Del. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Pan. Your mind is all as youthfull as your blood.
Now heare me speake with a prophetick spirit:
For euery breath of what I meane to speake,
Shall blow each duff, each fraw, each little rub
Out of the path which shall direcdy lead
Thy ftoe to Englands Throne. And therefore marke:
Iohn hath felt’d Arthur, and it cannot be,
That whiles warme life playes in that infants veins,
The mis-plac’d-Iohn shou’d entertaine an houre,
One minute, nay one quiet breath of red.
A Scepter sna’th’t with an unruly hand,
Must be as boyderfully maintaine’d as gain’d.
And he that flandes upon a flipp’y place,
Makes nice of no vilde hold to stay him vp:
Then Iohn may fland, then.
Four needs must fall,
So be it, for it cannot be but fo.
Del. But what shall I gaze by yong Arthur’s fall?
Pan. You, in the right of Lady Blanche your wife,
May then make all the claimes that Arthur did.
Del. And looie it, life and all, as Arthur did.
Pan. How green you are, and fresh in this old world?
Iohn lays you plots: the times confpire with you,
For he that feepes his safetie in true blood,
Shall finde but bloodie safetie, and vnture.
This Act so euiilly borne faire cooke the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze vp their zeale,
That none so fmall advantage shall step forth
To checke his reigne, but they will cherish it.
No natural exhalation in the skie,
No scope of Nature, no diftemper’d day,
No common winde, no customized event,
But they will plucke away his natural caufe,
And call them Metcors, prodigies, and signes,
Aborbtious, prefages, and tongues of heauen,
Plainly denoing vengeance vpon Iohn.
Del. May he be he not touch yong Arthur’s life,
But hold himselfe safe in his prifonment.
Pan. O Sir, when he shall heare of your approach,
If that yong Arthur be not gone already,
Euen at that newes he dies: and then the hearts
Of all his people shall reuolt from him,
And kiffe the lips of vnacquainted change,
And piceke strong matter of reuolt, and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers ends of Iohn.
Me thinkes I see this hurley all on foot;
And O, what better matter breeds for you,
Then I have nam’d. The Buffard Falcondridge
Is now in England rancking the Church,
Offending Charity: If but a dozen French
Were there in Armes, they would be as a Call
To traine ten thousand English to their side;
Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon comes a Mountaine. A noble Dolphin,
Go with me to the King, ’tis wonderfull,
What may be wrought out of their difcontent,
Now that their foules are tofpull of offence,
For England go; I will whet on the King.
Del. Strong resouns makes strange actionslet vs go,
If you say I, the King will not say no,
Exeunt.
The life and death of King John.

If heaven be pleas'd that you must vfe me ill,
Why then you must. Will you put out mine eyes?
Theefe eyes, that never did, nor neuer shall
So much as frowne on you.

Hub. I haue sworne to do it:
And with hot Irons muft I burne them out.

Art. Ah, none but in this Iron Age, would do it:
The Iron of it felfe, though heate red hot,
Approaching neere thefe eyes, would drinke my teares,
And quench this ferior indignation,
Even in the matter of mine innocence:
Nay, after that, confume away in ruft,
But for containing fire to harne mine eye:
Are you more fliborne hard, then hammer'd Iron?
And if an Angell should haue come to me,
And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes,
I would not haue beleau'd him: no tongue but Hubert.

Art. O faue me Hubert, faue me: my eyes are out
Even with the fierce looks of thefe bloody men.

Hub. Glue me the Iron I fay, and binde him heere.

Art. Alas, what neede you be fo bollious rough:
I will not frugle, I will fland fome flill:
For heaven fake Hubert let me not be bound:
Nay hear me Hubert, drive thefe men away,
And I will fit as quiet as a Lambe.
I will not firre, nor winch, nor fpeak a word,
Nor looke upon the Iron angrily:
Thrufh but thefe men away, and Ile forgive you,
What euer torment you do put me too.

Hub. Go fand within: let me alone with him.

Exe. I am beat pleas'd to be from such a deede.

Art. Alas, I then haue child away my friend,
He hath a ferner looks, but a gentle heart:
Let him come backe, that his compaffion may Glue life to yours.

Hub. Come (Boy) prepare your felfe.

Art. Is there no remolie?

Hub. None, but to lofe your eyes.

Art. O heauen: that there were but a moth in yours,
A graine, a dust, a gnats, a wandering hair,
Any annoyance in that precious fenfe:
Then feeling what fmall things are boysterous there,
Your vile intent muft needs feme horrible.

Hub. Is this your promife? Go too, hold your toong.

Art. Hubert, the vterance of a brace of tonguues,
Muft needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue: let me not Hubert,
Or Hubert, if you will cut out my tongue,
So I may kepe mine eyes. O vpeare mine eyes,
Though to no vfe, but fll to looke on you.
Loe, by my truth, the Instrument is cold,
And would not harne me.

Hub. I can haue it, Boy.

Art. No, in good ftooch the fire is dead with griefe,
Being create for comfort, to be va'd.
In vndeuered extreames: See elye your felfe,
There is no malice in this burning cole,
The breath of heauen, hath blowne his fpirit out,
And frownd repentant aches on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can reuine it Boy,

Art. And if you do, you will but make it blufh,
And glow with thame of your proceedings, Hubert:

Nay, it perchance will sparkle in your eyes:
And, like a dogge that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his Mafter that doth tare him on.

All things that you fhould vfe to do me wrong
Deny their office: oneley you do lacke
That mercie, which fierce fire, and Iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy, lacking vfe.

Hub. Well, fee to liner: I will not touch thine eye,
For all the Treasure that thine Vnkle owes,
Yet am I nowrene, and I did purpofe, Boy,
With this fame very Iron, to burne them out.

Art. O now you looke like Hubert. All this while
You were difguis'd.

Hub. Peace: no more. Adieu,
Your Vnkle muft not know but you are dead.
Ile thee those dogged Spies with falfe reports:
And, pretty childe, thee doublet, and secure,
That Hubert for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.

Art. O O fay no more that I thankie you Hubert.

Hub. Silence, no more; go clofely in with mee,
Much danger do I vndergoe for thee.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter John, Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lordes.

John. Here once againe we fit: once against crown'd
And look'd vpon, I hope, with chearefull eyes.

Pem. This once again (but that your Highnes pleas'd)
Was once superfluous: you were Crown'd before,
And that high Royalty was nere pluck'd off:
The faults of men, nere ftrained with resolt:
Freh expecution troubled not the Land
With any long'd-for-change, or better State.

Sal. Therefore, to be poiffe'd with double pompe,
To guard a Title, that was rich before;
To glide refined Gold, to paint the Lilly;
To throw a perfume on the Violet,
To smooth the yce, or adde another hew
Vnto the Raine-bow, or with Taper-light
To feeke the beauteous eye of heauen to garnish,
Is wastefull, and ridiculous exceffe.

Pem. But that your Royall pleafure muft be done,
This aile, is as an ancient tale new told,
And, in the laft repeating, troublesome,
Being vrged at a time vnafeonable.

Sal. In this the Anticke, and well noted face
Of plaine old forme, is much diffigur'd,
And like a fiftled winde vnto a falle,
It makes the court of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles, and frights confideration:
Makes found opinion fickle, and truth fupfected,
For putting on io new a fashion'd robe.

John. When Workemen drive to do better then wel,
They do confound their skill in coutoufneffe,
And oftemtimes excuing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worfe by th'excuse:
As patches fet vpon a little breach,
Difcreete more in hiding of the fault,
Then did the fault before it was fo patch'd.

Sal. To this effect, before you were new crown'd
We breath'd our Councell: but it pleas'd your Highnes
To over-beare it, and we are all well pleas'd,
Since all, and every part of what we would Doth make a fland, at what your Highnes will.
Iohn. Let it be so: I do commit his youth
To your direction: Hubert, what news with you?

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody deed:
He th'ew'd his warrant to a friend of mine,
The image of a wicked heynous fault
Lines in his eye: that close aspect of his,
Do shew the mood of a much troubled bre't.
And I do fearfully beleue 'ts done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.

Sal. The colour of the King doth come, and go
Between his purpose and his confidence,
Like Herold's 'twixt two dreadful batallions fcht:
His passion is so fpe, it needs must beke.

Pem. And when it beakes, I fear will influe thence
The foule corruption of a sweet chil'des death.

Iohn. We cannot hold mortailities strong hand.
Good Lords, though my will to grace, is living,
The suite which you demand is gene, and dead.
He tells vs Artur is deceas'd to night.

Sal. Indeed we fear'd he's this knight was pate cure.

Pem. Indeed we heard how neere his death he was,
Before the childe him'self felt he was sick:
This must be answ'rd either heere, or hence.

Iohn. Why do you bend such folome brokes on me?
Thinke you I bear the Sheeres of defety?
Have I commaundement on the pult of life?

Sal. It is apparent foule-play, and this flame
That Greatneffe should so grooffly offer it;
So throu't it in your game, and so farewell.

Pem. Stay yet (Lord Salibury) Ie go with thee,
And finde th'inheritance of this poole childe,
His little kingdom of a forced grave.
That blood which ow'd the breath of all this Ie,
Three foot of it doth hold; bad world the while:
This must not be thus borne, this will beke out
To all our sorrowes, and ere long I doubt.

Iohn. They burn in indignation: I repent:
There is no sure foundation yet on blood:
No certain life attich'd by others death:
That carefull eye thou haß. Where is that blood,
That I havescene inhabite in those cheekes?
So soule a skie, cleeres not without a storme,
Poure downe thy weather: how goes all in France?

Iohn. From France to England, neuer such a powre
For any forraigne preparation,
Was leued in the body of a land.
The Copie of your speede is learn'd by them:
For when you should be told they do prepare,
The tydings comes, that they are all arru'd.

Iohn. Oh where hath our Intelligence bin drunke?
Where hath it slept? Where is my Mothers care?
That such an Army could be drawne in France,
And the not heare of it?

Iohn. My Liege, her ear
Is floust with blift: the first of April dide
Your noble mother; and now, my Lord,
The Lady Conurance in a frenzie dide
Three days before: but this from Rumors tongue
I idely heard: if true, or faile I know not.

Iohn. With-hold thy speed, dreadful Occasion:
O make a league with me, 'till I have pleased
My discontented Peers. What! Mother dead?
How wildly then walkes my Estate in France?
Vnder whose conduct came those powres of France,
That thou for truth gius't out are landed here?

Iohn. Vnder the Dolphin.

Iohn. Thou haßt made me giddy
With these ill tydings: Now? What fayes the world
To your proceedings? Do not fecke to blufse
My head with more ill newses: for it is full.

Iohn. How if you haßt to hear the worl'd,
Then let the worl'd vn-heard, fall on your head.

Iohn. Bear with me Cofen, for I was amaz'd
Vnder the tide: but now I breath againe
Aloft the flood, and can glue audience
To any tongue, speake it of what it will.

Iohn. How I have fped among the Clergy men,
The Summes I have collectt shall expeffe:
But as I trauall'd hither through the land,
I finde the people stranget fantastied,
Poffett with rumors, full of idle dreams,
Not knowing what they are, but full of feare.
And here's a Prophet that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pompfres, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heele:
Whom he fung in rude harth founling rimes,
That ere the next Ascension day at noone,
Your Highnes shou'd deliver vp your Crowne.

Iohn. Thou idle Dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?
Pet. Fore-knowing that the truth will fall out so.

Iohn. Hubert, away with him: imprison him,
And on that day at noone, whereon he eyes
I shall yeeld vp my Crowne, let him be hang'd.
Delier him to safety, and returne,
For I must vs thee. O my gentle Cofen,
Hearst thou the newes abroad, who are arru'd?

Iohn. The French (my Lord) mens mouths are full of it:
Besides I met Lord Biger, and Lord Salibury
With eyes as red as new enkindled fire,
And others more, going to fecke the graue
Of Artur, whom they say is kill'd to night, on your

Iohn. Gentle kinlsman, go (Fuggeffion.)

And thruf thy felte into their Companies,
I have a way to winne their loues againe:
Bring them before me.

Baft. I will seeke them out.

Iohn. Nay, but make halfe: the better foote before.
O, let me have no subiect enemies,
When aduerse Forreyners affright my Townes
With dreadful pompe of shout invasion.
Be Mercurie, fet feathers to thy heales,
And flye (like thought) from them, to me againe.

Baft. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.Exit Iohn.
Spoke like a sightfull Noble Gentleman.
Go after him: for he perhaps shall neede
Some Messenger betwixt me, and the Peeres,
And be thou hee.

Mej. With all my heart, my Liege.
Iohn. My mother death?

Hub. My Lord, they bey suche Moones were feene to Foure fixt, and the fift did whirle about (nightes)
The other foure, in wondrous motion.
Iohn. Foure Moones?

Hub. Old men, and Belames, in the streets
Do prophete vpon it dangourously:
Yong Arturs death is common in their mouthes,
And when they talk of him, they shake their heads,
And whifer one another in the care,
And he that speakes, doth gripe the hearers wrat,
Whilfe he that heares, makes fearefull sallons
With wrinkled browes, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a Smith fand with his hammer (thus)
The whiff he his Iron did on the Anuile coole,
With open mouth swallowing a Taylors newes,
Who with his Sheeres, and Mfeasure in his hand,
Standing on flippers, which his nimble faste
Had fallye thrust vpon contrary feete,
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattalied, and rank'd in Kent.
Another leane, vnwhifd Artifer,
Cuts off his tale, and talkes of Arturs death.

Is. Why feelest thou to poffife me with these feares?
Why vrgest thou fo oft yong Arturs death?
Thy hand hath murderd him: I had a mighty caufe
To vthim dead, but thou hadft none to kill him.
H. No had (my Lord?) why, did you not provoke me?

Iohn. It is the curfe of Kings, to be attainted
By faues, that take their humors for a warrant,
To breake within the bloody houte of life,
And on the winking of Authoritie
To vnderstand a Law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous Mairdy, when perchance it brownes
More vpon humor, than aduice respect.

Hub. Here is your hand and Scale for what I did.
Iohn. Oh, when the last accompt twixt heaven & earth
Is to be made, then halfe this hand and Scale
Wittnesse against vs to commotion.

How oft the fight of meanes to do ill deeds,
Make deeds ill done? Had'st not thou beene by,
A fellow by the hand of Nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd to do a deede of fame,
This mother had not come into my minde.
But taking note of thy abhor'd Alpech,
Finding thee fit for bloody villainie?
Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arturs death:
And thou, to be endeavord to a King,
Made it no confidence to destroy a Prince.

Hub. My Lord.
Iohn. Had'st thou but thooke thy head, or made a paufe
When I spake darkely, what I purposed;
Or turn'd an eye of doubt vpon my face;
As bid me tell my tale in exprefse words;
Deepe flame had drunk me dumbe, made me break off,
And thofe thy feares, might have wrought feares in me.
But, thou didst vnderfand me by thy figures,
And didst in figures againe parley with finne,
Yea, without flop, didft let thy heart content,
And confequently, thy rude hand to arte
The deed, which both our tongues held vilde to name.
Out of my fght, and never fee me more:
My Nobles leave me, and my State is bruaded,
Even at my gates, with rankes of forriligne powres:
Nay, in the body of this feldely Land,
This kinges name, this Confine of blood, and breathe
Hoffhittite, and ciuill tumult reignes
Betwenee my confience, and my Coifs death.

Hub. Armie you against your other enemies:
Ile make a peace betweene youe, and you.
Yong Artu's is alive: This hand of mine
Havet a maiden, and an innocent heart.
Not painted with the Crimfon spots of blood,
Within this bofome, never entred yet
The dreadfull motion of a murderous thought,
And you have flander'd Nature in my forme,
Which howfocuer rude exteriorly,
Is yet the courer of a fayer minde,
Then to be butcher of an innocent childe.
Iohn. Doth Artu live? O haft thee to the Peeres,
Throw this report on their incendial rage,
And make them tame to their obedience.
Forgive the Comment that my paffion made
Vpon thy feature, for my rage was blinde,
And foule imaginarie eyes of blood
Pretended thee more hideous then thou art.
Oh, anfwver not; but to my Cloffeft bring
The angry Lords, with all expedient haile,
I confirue thee but flowly: run more faft.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Artuor on the wallers.

Ar. The Wall is high, and yet will I leape downe.
Good ground be piftifall, and hurt me not:
There's few or none do know me, if they did,
This Ship-hoyes semblance hath digni'd me quite.
I am afraid, and yet Ile venture it.
If I get downe, and do not breake my limbs,
Ile finde a thousand shifts to get away;
As good an eye, and go; as dye, and fay.
Oh me, my Vnckles spirit is in thefe stones,
Heuen take my foule, and England keep my bones. Dies

Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, & Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at S. EDMONDSBURY,
It is our faerie, and we muft embrace
This gentle offer of the perilous time.

Pem. Who brought that Letter from the Cardinall?

Sal. The Count Melone, a Noble Lord of France,
Whilfe priuate with me of the Dolphines lour,
Is much more general, than thefe lines import.

Big.
The life and death of King John.

Big. To morrow morning let us meete him then.
Sal. Or rather then let forward, for twill be
Two long days journey (Lords) or ere we meete.
Enter Bassard.

Bass. Once more to day well met, diestemper'd Lords, The King by me requests your presence strait.
Sal. The king hath dipposed himselfe of vs,
We will not lyne his thin-bethall'd cloake
With our pure Honors; nor attend the footes
That leaves the print of blood where ere it walkes.
Returne, and tell him so (we know the wont.

Bass. What are you thinkke, good words I thinke were best.
Sal. Our greefes, and not our manners reason now.
Bass. But there is little reason in your greefe.
Therefore t'were reason you had manners now.

Pem. Sir, if, impartialitie hath his priulidge.

Bass. Tis true, to herte his matter, no mans eile.
Sal. This is the prifon: What is he lyes here?
\(P.Oh\) death, made proud with pure & princely beuty;
The earth hid not a hole to hide this decease.
Sal. Murther, as hating what himselfe hath done,
Doth lay it open to venge on euenge.
Big. Or when he doone, the blood to a grave, Found it too precious Princely, for a grave.
Sal. Sir Richard, what thinkke you? you haue beheld,
Or have you read, or heard, or could you thinke?
Or do you almoost thinkke, although you see,
That you do see? Could thought, without this object
Forme such another? This is the very top,
The height, the Creft: or Creft into the Creft
Of murthers Armes: This is the bloodie shame,
The wildest Satavery, the wildest stroke
That ever wall-ey'd wrath, or daring rage
Presented to the tears of loft remorse.

Pem. All murthers paie, do stand excused in this:
And this fo folde, and fo vnmatchable,
Shall glue a holieffe, a puretie,
To the yet unbegotten sinne of times;
And proue a deadly blood-bled, but a left,
Exampled by this heynous speacle.

Bass. It is a damned, and a bloody worke,
The gracefull action of a heaun hand,
If that it be the worke of any hand?
Sal. If that it be the worke of any hand? We had a kinde of light, what would enuie;
It is the flamefull worke of Habert hand,
The practice, and the purpose of the king:
From whole obedience I forbid my foule,
Kneeling before this ruine of sweete life,
And breathing to his breathlefle Excellence
The Incence of a Vow, a holy Vow:
Neuer to take the pleasures of the world,
Neuer to be infected with delight,
Nor consuifant with Saff, and Idleneffe,
Till I have fet a glory on my head,
By givin g it the worship of Reuenge.

Pem. Big. Our soules religiously confirme thy words.
Enter Habert.

Hab. Lords, I am hot with haffe, in seeking you,
Arthur doth live, the king hath fent for you.
Sal. Oh he is bold, and bluffs not at death,
Anuat thou hatefull villain, get thee gone.

\(\text{the Law}\)

Hab. I am no villain, Sal. Must I rob
Bass. Your sword is bright fir, put it vp againe.
Sal. Not cill I threateth in a murthurer skin.

Hub. Stand backe Lord Salisbury, stand backe I say:
By heauen, I thinke my sword's as sharpe as yours,
I would not have you (Lord) forget thy selle,
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence; Leaft I, by marking of your rage, forget
Your Worth, your Greatneffe, and Nobility.

Big. Out dunghill: darft thou braue a Nobleman?
Hub. Not for my life: But yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an Emperor.
Sal. Thou art a Murtherer.

Hab. Do not proue me so;
Yet I am none. Where tongue so ere speaks selle,
Not truly speaks: who speaks not truly, Lies.

Pem. Cut him to peeces.

Bafl. Keep the peace, I say.

Hab. Stand by, or I shall gaul you Faulconbridge.

Bafl. Thou wert better gaul the diuell Salisbury.
If thou but frowne on me, for all I worth thy footes,
Or teach thy haffie fceleone to do me shame,
Ille strike thee dead. Put vp thy sword betime,
Or lle to maule you, and thy tolling-Iron,
That you shall thinke the diuell is come from hell.

Big. What wil thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?
Second a Villaine, and a Murtherer?

Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.

Big. Who kill'd this Prince?

Hub. 'Tis not an houre since I left him well:
I honour'd him, I love'd him, and will wepe
My date of life out, for his sweete blues loffe.

Sal. Truest not those cunning waters of his eyes,
For villanie is not without such rume,
And he, long traded in it, makes it seeme
Like Rivers of remorse and Innocence.
A way with me, all you whose foules abborre
The vncleane vnauxours of a Slaughter-house,
For I am st fissed with this smell of sinne.

Big. Away, toward Burrs, to the Dolphin there.
P. There tel the king, he may inquire vs out.Ex.Lords.

Ex. Here's a good world,knew you of this faire worke?
Beyond the infinite and boundleffe rech of mercle,
(If thou didst this deed of death) art thou damn'd Hubert.
Hub. Do but heare me sir.

Bafl. Hal! Ile tell thee what.
Thou'rt damn'd as blacke, nay nothing is fo blacke,
Thou art more deepe dam'd'd then Prince Lucifer :
There is not yet fo vgly a fiend of hell
As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this childe.

Hub. Vpon my soule.

Bafl. If thou didst but confent
To this moft cruel Act; do but dispare,
And if thou want'd a God, the smalllest thred
That ever Spider twifted from her wombe
Will ferue to trangle thee: A rush will be a beame
To hang thee on. Or wouldst thou drowne thy selfe,
Put but a little water in a poone,
And it shall be as all the world in one,
Enough to stifle such a villaine vp.
I do suspeft thee very greenuely.

Hub. If I in act, confent, or finne of thought,
Be guiltle of the being that sweete breath
Which was embozled in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want paines enough to torture me:
I left him well.

Bafl. Go, bear him in thine armes:
I am amaz'd me thinkes, and loose my way
Among the thornes, and dangers of this world.
The life and death of King John.

How eafe dost thou take all England vp,
From forth this morcell of dead Royalty?
The life, the right, and truth of all this Realme
Is fled to heaven: and England now is left
To tug and strumble, and to part by th' teeth
The vn-owed interett of proud swelling State:
Now for the bare-pickt bone of Maleity,
Doth dogged warre bristle his angry creft,
And herald in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now Poweres from home, and discontented at home
Meet in one line: and yit confufion waits
As doth a Rauen on a sickes-faine beast,
The iminent decay of wrested pompe.
Now happy he, whose cloake and center can Hold out this tempest. Bear we away that child;
And follow me with speed: I le to the King:
A thousand businesse are briefe in hand,
And heauen it selfe doth frowne vpon the Land. Exit.

Actus Quartus, Scena prima.

Enter King John and Pandolph, attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yeelded vp into your hand
The Circle of my glory.

Pan. Take againe
From this my hand, as holding of the Pope
Your Soueraigne greatest and authoritie.

Idem. Now keep your holy word, go meet the French,
And from his holyne frc all your power to ftop their marches 'fore we are enlam'd:
Our discontented Counties doe revolt:
Our people quarrell with obedience,
Swareing Allegiance, and the loye of soule
To stranger-bloud, to forren Royalty;
This inundation of misflempted humor,
Refts by you onely to be qualified.
Then panste not: for the present time's fo fickle,
That pretfent medicine must be minifred,
Or overthrow incurable enemies.

Pan. It was my breath that blew this Tempest vp Vpon your flubborne vflage of the Pope:
But fince you are a gentle conuertere,
My tongue shall h Ruiz against this forme of warre,
And make faire weather in your bluftring land:
On this Accention day, remember well,
Vpon your oathe of truce to the Pope,
Goe I to make the French lay downe their Armes. Exit.

Idem. Is this Accention day? did not the Prophet
Say, that before Accention day at noone,
My Crowne I should give off? even if I have:
I did fuppofe it should be on constraint,
But (heau'n be thank'd) it is but voluntary.

Enter Bajard.

Baf. All Kent hath yeelded: nothing there holds out
But Douver Castle: London hath receiv'd
Like a Kinde Holl, the Dolphin and his powers.
Your Nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer truce to your enemy:
And wilde amazement hurries vp and downe
The little number of your doubtful friends.

Idem. Would not my Lords returne to me againe
After they heard Yong Arthur was alioe?

Baf. They found him dead, and cast into the streets,
An empty Casket, where the Iewell of life
By some damned hand was rob'd, and taken away.

Idem. That villainie Hubert told me he did doe.

Baf. So on my foule he did, for ought he knew:
But wherefore do you droope? why looke you sad?
Be great in act, as you have beeene in thought:
Let not the world fee feare and fail distrust
Governe the motion of a kinglye eye:
Be ftrIngIngas the teime, be fire with fire,
Threaten the threatner, and out-face the brow
Of bragging horror: So flll inferior eyes
That borrow their behavours from the great,
Grow great by your example, and put on
The dauntlesse spiirt of resolution,
Away, and glifler like the god of warre
When he intendeth to become the field:
Shew boldneffe and aspiring confidence:
What, shall they fecke the Lion in his denne,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
Oh let it not be fad: forrage, and runne
To meet fpidere farther from the dores,
And grapple with him ere he come to nye.

Idem. The Legat of the Pope hath beeene with mee,
And I haue made a happy peace with him,
And he hath promis'd to difmalte the Powers
Led by the Dolphin.

Baf. Oh inglorious league:
Shall we vpon the footing of our land,
Send fayre-play-orders, and make comprimide,
Infamution, parley, and safe truce
To Armes Inuafion? Shall a beardleffe boy,
A cockrell-likene wanton bronce our fields,
And fped his spirit in a warre-like foyle,
Mocking the ayre with colours idely spred,
And find no checke? Let vs my Liege to Armes:
Perchance the Cardinall cannot make your peace;
Or if he doe, let it at leafe be fald
They faie we had a purpofe of defence.

Idem. Have thou the ordering of this pretfent time.

Baf. Away then with good courage: yet I know
Our Partie may well meet a prowder foe.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter (in Armes) Dolphin, Salisbury, Melone, Pembroke, Bigot, Souldiers.

Dol. My Lord Melone, let this be copyed out,
And keepe it fawe for our remembrance:
Returne the preffent to thefe Lords againe,
That hauing our faire order written downe,
Both they and we, perufing ore thee notes
May know wherefore we tooke the Sacrament,
And keepe our faiths firme and imuable.

Sal. Vpon our fides it never fhall be broken.
And Noble Dolphin, albeit we sweare
A voluntary zeale, and an vn-ur'd Faith
To your proceedings: yet beleue me Prince,
I am not glad that fuch a fere of Time
Should feeke a platter by containing reuels,
And hele the inseuerate Canker of one wound,

By
By making many: Oh it grieues my soule, That I must draw this mettle from this side To be a widow-maker: oh, and there Where honourable refuge, and defence Cries out upon the name of Salisbury. But such is the infection of the time That for the health and Phyficke of our right, We cannot deal but with the very hand Of ferne Inuiufce, and confufed wrong: And 'st is not pitty, (oh my grieved friends) That we, the fonnes and children of this life, Was borne to see so fast an hour as this, Wherein we flie after a stranger, march Upon her gentle bosome, and fill vp Her Enemies rances? I muft withdraw, and weep Upon the spot of thi infected caufe, To grudging breiety of a Land remote, And follow vnauncoloured colours heere: What heere? O Nation that thou couldst remove, That Neptune armes who clippeth thee about, Would bear thee from the knowledge of thy selfe, And enrap the onely souldier of this State, Wherein thee two Christian Armies might combine The bloud of mallice, in a vaine of league, And not to spend it fo vn-neighbourly.

Delph. A noble temper doth thou shew in this, And great affections wraithing in thy boforme Doth make an earth-quake of Nobility: Oh, what a noble combat haft fought Between compulsion, and a braue refpeft: Let me wipe off this honourable dewe, That fluently doth progresse on thy cheeks: My heart hath melted at a Ladies teares, Being an ordinary Inundation:

But this effusion of such manly drops, This showre, blowne vp by tempeft of the foule, Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd. Then had I feene the vaulete top of heaven Figur'd quire ore with burning Meteor, Lift vp thy brow (renowned Saliburk) And with a great heart heauen away this storme: Commande them waters to thofe baby-eyes That never faw the gaint-world enrag'd, Nor met with Fortune, other then at fea, Full warm of blood, of mirth, of golflipp: Come, come; for thou haft thrue thy hand as deep Into the purie of rich prosperity As Lem mournifie: to (Nobles) shall you all, That knit your finewes to the strength of mine. Enter Pandulpho. And even there, methinks an Angell fpake, Looke where the holy Legate comes apace, To glue vs warrant from the hand of heauen, And on our actions fet the name of right With ho refpiration.

Pand. Haile noble Prince of France: The next is this: King John hath reconcil'd Himfelfe to Rome, his fpirt is come in, That fo ftood out again the holy Church, The great Apostrops, and Sea of Rome: Therefore thy threateninge Colours now winde vp, And tame the fauage fpirt of wilde warre, That like a Lion fottred vp at hand, It may lie genty at the foot of peace, And be no further harmefull then in heue.

Dol. Your Grace fhall pardon me, I will not backe:

I am too high-born to be proportioned To be a secondary at controul, Or vffulft fureruing-man, and Infrument To any Soueraigne State throughout the world. Your breath first kindled the dead coale of warres, Betweene this chaflie's kingdome and my felue, And brought in matter that should feed this fire; And now 'tis farre too huge to be blowne out With that fame weake winde, which enkindled it: You taught me how to know the face of right, Acquainted me with interest to this Land, Yea, thrust this enterprise into my heart, And come ye now to tell me John hath made His peace with Rome & what is that peace to met? I by the honour of my marriage bed, After yong Arthur, claim this Land for mine, And now it is halfe conquer'd, the rest backs, Because that John hath made his peace with Rome? Am I Romes flave? What penny hath Rome borne? What men provided? What munition fent To vnder-prop this Action? 'st is not I That vnder-go with this charge? Who, but I, And such as to my claime are liable, Sweat in this bufineffe, and maintaine this warre? Han I not heare thefe Ilandiers shout out Une le Roy, as I haue bank'd theire Townes? Han I not heare the bell Cards for the game To winne this ease match, plaid for a Crowne? And shall I now give ore the yeelded Set? No, no, on my foule it neuer shall be fald.

Pand. You looke but on the out-fide of this worke.

Dol. Out-side or in-fide, I will not returne Till my attempt fo much be glorified, As to my ample hope was promis'd, Before I drew this gallant head of warre, And cul'd thefe fiery spirits from the world To out-lookke Conquest, and to winne renowne Even in the lawes of danger, and of death; What luffy Trumpet thus doth fummer vs? Enter Baynard.

Baff. According to the faire-play of the world, Let me have audience: I am bent to speake: My holy Lord of Millane, from the King I come to learn how you have dealt for him: And, as you anfwer, I doe know the scope And warrant limited into my tongue.

Pand. The Dolphin is too wilfull oppofite And will not temperize with my intretiatives: He flantly fiales, hecill not lay downe his Armes.

Baff. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd, The youth sies well. Now heere our English King, For thus his Royaltie doth speake in me: He is prepar'd, and reafon to he fould, This sphif and vnmannerly approch, This harnef'd Mailke, and wadified Renell, This vn-heard fawcineffe and boyift Troopes, The King doth fmile at, and is well prepar'd To whip this dwarfish warre, this Pigmy Armes From out the circle of his Territories. That hand which had the strength, even at your dore, To cudgell you, and make you take the hatch, To diue like Buckets in conceited Welles, To crowch in litter of your flable plankes, To lye like pawnes, lock'd vp in cheeffs and truncks, To hug with fhine, to feeke fweete fafety out In vaulc and pitions, and to thrill and shake,
The life and death of King John.

Euen at the crying of your Nations crow,
Thinking this voyce an armed Englishman.
Shall that victorious hand be feeleth here,
That in your Chambers gave you chaffiment?
No: know the gallant Monarch is in Armes,
And like an Eagle, o'er his syryc towres,
To lowe an annoyance that comes nears his Neif; And you degenerate, you ingrate Reuolds, you bloudy Ner"s, tipping vp the warbe
Of your deere Mother-England: blush for shame:
For your owne Ladies, and pale-vifag'dia Maides,
Like Amazons, come tripping after drummes : Their thimbles into armed Gatlets change,
Their Needle's to Lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Del. There end thy brave, and turn thy face in peace,
We grant thou canst out-fold vs: Far thee well,
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabler.

Pan. Give me leave to speake.
Baf. No: I will speake.
Del. We will attend to yeuther:
Strike vp the drummes, and let the tongue of warre
Pleade for our interest, and our being heere.

Baf. Indeede your drums being beaten, wi try out;
And lo shall you, being beaten: Do but flart.
An echo with the clamor of thy drumme,
And even at hand, a drumme is readie brac'd,
That shall reuererate all, as loud as thine.
Sound but another, and another shal
(As lowd as thine) rattle the Welkins ear,
And mocke the deepes mouth'd Thunder: for at hand
(Not trufing to this halting Legate heere, Whom he hath vs'd rather for sport, then neede)
Is warlike John: and in his fore-heads
A bare-rib'd death, whose office is this day
To fealt vp whole thousands of the French.

Del. Strike vp our drummes, to finde this danger out.
Baf. And thou shalt finde it (Dolphin) do not doubt

Scena Tertia.

Alarums. Enter John and Hubert.

John. How goes the day with vp? oh tell me Hubert.
Hub. Badly I feare; how fares your Maiestie?
John. This Feauer that hath troubled me fo long,
Lyes heaule on me: oh, my heart is fick.

Enter a Miffinger.

Mef. My Lord: your valiant kinman Falconbridge,
Defire your Maiestie to leave the field,
And fend him word by me, which way you go.

John. Tell him toward Swinfield, to the Abbey there.
Mef. Be of good comfort: for the great supply
That was expected by the Dolphin heere,
Are wrack'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
This newes was brought to Richard but even now,
The French fight coldly, and retirue themselfes.

John. Aye me, this tyrant Feauer burns mee vp, And will not let me welcome this good newes.
Set in your Swinfield: to my Letter straight,
Weakneffe poffeth mee, and I am faint.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, and Biga.

Sal. I did not think the King so for'd with friends.
Pem. Vp once again: put spirit in the French,
If they miscarry: we miscarry too.
Sal. That misbegotten dissell Falconbridge,
In flight of flight, alone vpholds the day.
Pem. They say King John fore sick, hath left the field.

Enter Melton wounded.

Mel. Lead me to the Reuolts of England heere.
Sal. When we were happie, we had other names.
Pem. It is the Count Melborne.
Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly Noble English, you are bought and fold,
Vnthead the rude eye of Rebellion,
And welcome home againe discarded faith,
Seeke out King John, and fall before his feet.
For if the French be Lords of this lowd day,
He meanes to recompence the paines you take,
By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he wonne,
And I with him, and many more with mee,
Vpon the Altar at S. Edmundsbury,
Even on that Altar, where we swore to you
Deere Amity, and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be posible? May this be true?
Mel. Hale I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantaty of life,
Which bleedeth away, even as a forme of waxe
Resolue in his figure 'gainst the fire?
What in the world should make me now deceive,
Since I must loofe the vfe of all deceite?
Why should I then be false, since it is true
That I must dye heere, and of heere, by Truth?
I say againe, if Lewd do win the day,
He is forfowrme, if cre those eyes of yours
Behold another day breake in the East:
But eu'n this night, whose blaccke contagious breath
Already smokes about the burning Cref.
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied Sunne,
Euen this ill night, your breathing shall expire,
Paying the fine of rated Treachery,
Euen with a treacherous fine of all your liues:
If Lewd, by your asfisance win the day.
Commend me to one Hubert, with your King;
The love of him, and this reft fedes
(For that my Grandfire was an Englishman)
Awakes my Conscience to confesse all this,
In lieu whereof, I pray you beare me hence
From forth the noife and rumour of the Field,
Where I may thinkke the remnant of my thoughts
In peace: and part this bodie and my foule
With contemplation, and deouet defires.

Sal. We do beleue thee, and befhrew my foule,
But I doe loue the fauter, and the forme
Of this moft faire occaion, by the which
We will vntread the flps of dammnd flight,
And like a bated and retired Flood,
Leaing our rankneffe and irregular course,
Stoope lowe within those bounds we have ore-look'd, And calmly run on in obedience
Euen to our Ocean, to our great King John.
My armes shall glue thes helps to heare thee hence,

For
The life and death of King John.

For I do see the cruel pangs of death
Right in thine eye. Away, my friends, new flight,
And happy newness, that intends old right.

Enter Dolphin, and his Traine.

Did. The Sun of heaven (me thought) was loth to set;
But fled, and made the WesternWelkin blithe,
When English measure backward their owne ground
In fainst Retire: Oh bravely came we off,
When with a volley of our needesse shot,
After such bloody tolie, we did good night,
And wond our tart'ring colours clearly vp,
Laft in the field, and almost Lords of it.
  Enter a Mijenger.

  Mef. Where is my Prince, the Dolphin?

  Did. Here: what newes?

  Mef. The Count Melborne is faine: The English Lords
By his pervasion, are againe faine off,
And your supply, which you have with'd fo long,
Are cast away, and fink in Goodwin fands.

Did. Ah fowle, fhew'd newes. Be fare thy very
I did not thinke to be fo fad to night (hart:
As this hath made me. Who was he that faid
King Ladis did flie an houre or two before
The fumbling night did part our warie powrs?

Mef. Who ever fpoke it, it is true my Lord.

Did. Well: keep good quarter, & good care to night,
The day fhall not be vp fo fpone as I,
To try the faire adventure of to morrow.

Enter Bajfard and Hubert, severally.

Hub. Whofe there? Speake hoa, speake quickly, or I fhoot.

Bajf. A Friend. What art thou?

Hub. Of the part of England.

Bajf. Whether doeft thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee?

Bajf. Hubert, I thinke.

Hub. Thou haft a perfect thought.
I will vpon all hazards well beleauce
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue fo well:
Who art thou?

Bajf. Whou thou wilt: and if thou pleafe
Thou maif be friend me fo much, as to thinke
I come one way of the Plantsmen.

Hub. Vnderstanding remembrance: thou, & endless night,
Have done me faine: Brute Soldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue,
Should caufe the true acquaintance of mine care.

Bajf. Come, come: fans complement. What news abroad?

Hub. Why heere walke I, in the black brow of night
To finde you out.

Bajf. Breafe then: and what's the news?

Hub. O my sweet fir, news fitting to the night,
Blacke, fearefull, comfortlffe, and horrible.

Bajf. Show me the very wound of this ill newes,
I am no woman, ile not I wouind at it.

Hub. The King I feare is poyson'd by a Monke,
I left him almoft speechlffe, and broke out
To acquaint you with this euill, that you might
The better arme you to the fodaime time,
Then if you had at leiffer knowne of this.

Bajf. How did he take it? Who did take to him?

Hub. A Monke I tell you, a refolved villain.
Whofe Bowels foadainly burst out: The King
Yet speakes, and perdurance may recover.

Bajf. Who didf thou leaue to tend his Maifeiny?

Hub. Why know you not: The Lords are all come backe,
And brought Prince Henry in their companie,
At whose requeft the king hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his Maietie.

Bajf. With-hold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt vs not to bear about
Ile tell thee Hubert, halfe my power this night
Pafing thefe Flats, are taken by the Tyde,
Thefe Lincolne-Waffes have decoy'd them,
My felfe, well mounted, hardly have ecape'd.
Away before: Conduckt me to the king,
I doubt he will be dead, or eare I come.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Hen. It is too late, the life of all his blood
Is touch'd, corruptibly: and his pure braine
(Which some fuppole the foules fraile dwelling house)
Doth by the idle Coments that it makes,
Fore-tell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His Highneffe yet doth speake, & holds beleauce,
That being brought into the open ayre,
It would alay the burning qualitie
Of that fall poison which affayleth him.

Hen. Let him be brought into the Orchard heere:
Doth he still rage?

Pem. He is more patient
Then when you left him; cuen now he fang.

Hen. Oh vanitie of ficknedef: fierce extremes
In their continuance, will not feele theirselves.
Death hauing prai'de vpon the outward parts
Leaves them inuible, and his felge is now
Against the winde, the which he prickes and wounds
With many legions of strange fantafies,
Which in their throng, and preffe to that latt hold,
Confound themfelves. 'Tis strange thy death fholde fangs:
I am the Symet to this pale faint Swan,
Who chaunts a doelegall hymne to his owne death,
And from the organ-pipe of fraility fings.
His foule and body to their laffing reft.

Sal. Be of good comfort (Prince) for you are borne
To fet a forme vpon that indignet
Which he hath lef fo时代中国, and fo rude.

Iam broucht in.

John. I marrie, now my foule hath elowe roome,
The life and death of King John.

It would not out at windowes, nor at doores,
There is so hot a summer in my bohome,
That all my bowles crumble vp to doit:
I am a servile forme drawne with a pen
Vpon a Parchment, and against this fire
Do I shrink vp.

Hen. How fares your Maiestie?
Ish. Poyfon'd, ill fare: dead, farboke, cast off,
And none of you will bid the winter come
To thrust his yece fingers in my maw;
Nor let my kingdome Riuers take their course
Through my burn'd bohome: nor intrest the North
To make his bleak winds kisse my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold. I do not ask you much,
I begge cold comfort: and you are so straight
And so ingratefull, you deny me that.

Hen. Oh that there were some vertue in my teares,
That might releue you.

Ish. The fea in them is hot.
Within me is a hell, and there the poyson
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize,
On vnrepreuable condemned blood.

Enter Basfard.

Bas. Oh, I am seald with my violent motion
And spleene of speede, to fee your Maiestie.

Ish. Oh Cozen, thou art come to fet mine eye:
The tackle of my heart, is crack'd and burnt,
And all the flowds wherewith my life shold falle,
Are turned to one thred, one little haire:
My heart hath one poor string to flay it by,
Which holds but till thy newes be vterred,
And then all this thou feeld, is but a cloa,
And module of confounded royalty.

Bas. The Dolphin is preparing hither-ward,
Where heauen he knowes how we shall anfwer him.
For in a night the beft part of my powre,
As I vpon advantage did remoue,
Were in the Wafhes all vnwarlly,
Deuoured by the vnexpeected flood.

Sal. You breath these dead newes in as dead an eare
My Ligg's, my Lord's but now a King, now thus.

Hen. Even fo muu I run on, and even fo stop.
What suret of the world, what hope, what flay,
When this was now a King, and now is clay?

Bas. Art thou gone fo? I do but flay behinde,
To do the office for thee, of reuenge,
And then my fowle shall waite on thee to heauen,
As it on earth hath bene thy fervant all.
Now, now you Starres, that move in your right fpheres,
Where be your powres? Shew now your mended faiths,
And infantly returne with me againe.
To put destruction, and perpetuall shame
Out of the weake doore of our fainting Land:
Straight let vs feele, or straight we shall be fought,
The Daphine rages at our verey heele.

Sal. It fummes you know not then fo much as we,
The Cardinall Pandulfic is within at reft,
Who halfe an houre fince came from the Daphine,
And brings from him fuch offers of our peace,
As we with honor and refpect may take,
With purpose prefently to leave this warre.

Bas. He will the rather do it, when he fees
Our felues well finew'd to our defence.

Sal. Nay, 'tis in a manner done already,
For many carriages hee hath dispatch'd
To the fheet fide, and put his caufe and quarrell
To the difpofing of the Cardinall,
With whom your felfe, my felfe, and other Lords,
If you thinkne meete, this afnoome will poaff
To conformate this buinffe happily.

Bas. Let it be fo, and you my noble Prince,
With other Princes that may beft be fpair'd,
Shall waite vpon your Fathers Funerall.

Hen. At Worlter muff his bodie be intern'd,
For fo he will'd it.

Bas. Thither fhall it then,
And happily may your sweet felle put on
The lineall fate, and glorie of the Land,
To whom with all submiffion on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithfull fervices
And true fubiection everlaufflingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our love wee make
To reft without a spot for evermore.

Hen. I haue a kinde foule, that would give thankes,
And knowes not how to do it, but with teares.

Bas. Oh let vs pay the time: but needfull woe,
Since it hath beene before hand with our greeues.
This England never did, nor neuer shall
Lye at the proud foote of a Conqueror,
But when it first did helpe to wound it felfe.
Now, these her Princes are come home againe,
Come the three corners of the world in Armes,
And we'll fchoke them: Naught fhall make vs rue,
If England to it felle, do reft but true.

Exeunt.
The life and death of King Richard the Second.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Enter King Richard, Lord of Gaunt, with other Nobles and Attendants.

King Richard.

A. Ld. Lord of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster,

Haft thou according to thy oath and band

Brought hither Henry Herfroid thy bold son:

But he to make good bolthous late appeals,

Which then our legislature would not let us hear.

Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I have my Liege.

King. Tell me moreover, hast thou founded him,

If he appeals the Duke on ancient malice,

Or worthily as a good subject should

On some knowne ground of treacherie in him.

Gaunt. As near as I could fift him on that argument,

On some apparant danger feene in him,

Aye'd at your Highneffe, no inuerate malice.

Kin. Then call them to our preence face to face,

And frowning brow to brow, our felues will hear

The accufer, and the accused, freely speake;

High thomack'd are they both, and full of ire,

In rage, desse as the sea; hafte as fire.

Enter Bullingbrooke and Mowbray.

Bul. Many years of happy days befall

My gracious Soverainge, my most loving Liege.

Mow. Each day still better others happinefse,

Vntill the heavens enoying earths good hap,

Add an immortall title to your Crowne.

King. We thank you both, yet one but flatters vs,

As well appeareth by the caufe you come,

Namely, to appeal each other of high treason.

Coofin of Hereford, what doft thou obiect

Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Bul. Firft, heauen be the record to my speech,

In the devotion of a subject's love,

Tendering the precious favtie of my Prince,

And free from other misbegotten hate.

Come I appellant to this Princeely presence.

Now Thomas Mowbray do I turne to thee,

And mark my greeting well: for what I speake,

My body shall make good vpon this earth,

Or my diuine foule anfwer it in heauen,

Thou art a Traitor, and a Mifcreant;

Too good to be fo, and too bad to live.

Since the more faire and chirifflis is the skie,

The vplier ferme the clouds that in it flye:

Once more, the more to aggravate the note,

With a foule Traitors name, defcuing I thy throates,

And with (to pleafe my Soveraigne) ere I moue,

What my tong speaks, my right drawn sword may proue

Mow. Let not my cold words here accufe my zeale:

'Tis not the trial of a Womans warre,

The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,

Can arbitrate this caufe betwixt vs twaine;

The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this.

Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,

As to be huift, and nought at all to fay.

Firft the faire recorrence of your Highneffe curbes mee,

From guing reines and figures to my free speech,

Which elfe would poif, vntill it had returnd

These tearmes of treafon, doubly downe his throat.

Setting aife his high bloods royalty,

And let him be no Kinfman to my Liege,

I do defte him, and I fift at him,

Call him a flanders Coward, and a Villaine:

Which to maintaine, I would allow him odde,

And meete him, were I tide to runne afoote,

Even to the frozen ridges of the Alpes,

Or any other ground inhabitable,

Where euer Englishman durft fet his foote,

Meane time, let this defend my loyaltie,

By all my hopes moft falfely doth he lie.

Bul. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my gage,

Disclaiming here the kindred of a King,

And lay aside my high bloods Royalty,

Which feare, not reuerence makes thee to except.

If guilty dred hath left thee fo muchrength,

As to take vp mine Honors pawne, then floope.

By that, and all the rites of Knight-hood elle,

Will I make good against thee arme to arme,

What I have fpoken, or thou canst defufe

Mow. I take it vp, and by that sword I fware,

Which gently laid my Knight-hood on my shoulder,

He anfwer thee in any faire degree,

Or Chivalrous defigne of knightly triall:

And when I mount, allue may I not light,

If I be Traitor, or vniutlly figh.

King. What doth our Cofin lay to Mowbrayes charge?

It muft be great that can inherit vs,

So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bul. Look what I fay, my life shall proue it true,

That Mowbray hath receiued eight thoufand Nobles,

In
In name of lendings for your Highness Soldiers,
The which he hath detain’d for lewd employments,
Like a false Traitor, and injurious Villaine.
Befide I say, and will in battle prone,
Or here, or elsewhere to the furthest Verge
That ever was furer’d by English eye,
That all the Treasons for these eighteen yeares
Complotted, and contrived in this Land,
Fetch’d from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
Further I say, and further will maintaine
Upon his bad life, to make all this good,
That he did plot the Duke of Gloucester death,
Suggest his sone beheading aduersaries,
And consequently, like a Traitor Coward,
Stic’d out his innocent foule through streams of blood:
Which blood, like sacrificing Aabls cries,
(As when the crocodile devours the earth)
To me for justice, and rough chastisement:
And by the glorious worth of my dificent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.
King. How high a pitch his resolution foares:
Thomas of Norfolk, what layeth thou to this?
Mow. Oh let my Soueraigne turne away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf.
Till I have told this flander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate so foule a tyr.
King. Mowbray, impartill all our eyes and ears,
Were he my brother, say our kingdomes heyre,
As he is but my fathers brothers sone;
Now by my Scepters awe, I make a vow,
Such neighbour-neereneesse to our sacred blood,
Should nothing prululde him, nor paralize
The vn-looping firmeneesse of my vpright foule.
He is our palace (Mowbray) fo art thou,
Free speech, and faireleffe, I to thee allow.
Mow. Then Bullingbrooks, as low as to thy heart,
Through the false pallage of thy throat; thou lyest:
There parts of that receipt I had for Callice,
Dishart I to his highness fouldiers;
The other part refer’d I by confection,
For that my Soueraigne Liege was in my debt,
Vpon remainder of a decree Accompt,
Since I went to France to fetch his Queene:
Now swallow downe that Lyce. For Gloucester death,
I flew him not (but to mine owne disgrace)
Neglected my fwarne duty in that cafe:
For you my noble Lord of Lancaster,
The honourable Father to my foe,
Once I did lay an ambush for your life,
A trepasse that doth vex my greene foule:
But ere I left receiv’d the Sacramento,
I did confesse it, and exactly begg’d
Your Graces pardon, and I hope I had it.
This is my fault: as for the reit appeale’d,
It suffer from the rangelle caustnes of a liane,
A recreant, and most degenerate Traitor,
Which in my sake I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurle downe my gage
Vpon this ouer-weeing Traitors foote,
To prove my selfe a loyall Gentleman,
Even in the bed blood chamber’d in his bofore.
In haft wereof, most heartily I pray
Your Highnessse to affigne our Triall day.
King. Wrath-kindled Gentlemen be rul’d by me:
Let’s purge this choller without letting blood:
This we prefigure, though no Phyfition,
Deepe malice makes too deepe incision.
Forget, forgive, conclude, and be agreed,
Our Doctors say, This is no time to bleed.
Good Vacnkle, let this end where it begun,
Wee’ll calme the Duke of Norfolke; you, your fon.
Gaunt. To be a make-piece shall become my age,
Throw downe (my sone) the Duke of Norfolkes gage.
King. And Norfolke, throw downe his.
Gaunt. When Halie when? Obedience bids,
Obedience bids I should not bid agen.
King. Norfolke, throw downe, we bidde; there is no boote.
Mow. My felie I throw(dread Soueraigne)at thy foot.
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame,
The one my dotie owes, but my fable name
Delight of death, that lies vpon my grave
To darke dishonours vie, thou shalt not have.
I am disgrac’d, impeach’d, and baffeld heere,
Pierc’d to the foule with flanders venom’d spiere:
The which no balme can cure, but his heart blood
Which breath’d this poyfon.
King. Rage must be withthold:
Give me his gage: Lyons make Leopards tame.
Me. Yes, but not change his spotstake but my shame,
And I resigne my gage. My deere, deere Lord,
The purest treaure mortall times afford
Is spotlefe reputation: that away,
Men are but gilded loame, or painted clay.
A Jewell in a ten times bar’d wp Cheff,
Is a bold spirit, in a loyall breft.
Mine Honor is my life; both grow in one:
Take Honor from me, and my life is done.
Then (deere my Liege) mine Honor let me trie,
In that I live; and for that will I die.
King. Coofin, throw downe your gage,
Do you begin.
But. Oh heauen defend my foule from fuch foule sin.
Shall I feeme Creft-faine in my fathers fight,
Or with pale beggar-faire impeach my hight
Before this out-da’d daffard? Ere my toong,
Shall wound mine Honor with fuch feeble wrong;
Or found so base a parle: my teeth shall teare
The flauish motue of recanting fear,
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbrrays face.
Exit Gaunt.
King. We were not borne to fuit, but to command,
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready (as your friends shall answer it)
At Coucctree, vpon S. Lamberts day:
There shall your swords and Lancies arbitrate
The dwelling difference of your settled hate
Since we cannot attone you, you shall see
Justice defende the Vidon Chialair.
Lord Marshall, command our Officers at Armes,
Be ready to direct these home Alarums.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gaunt, and Duke of Gloucester.
Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glouesters blood,
Doth more follicite me then your exclames,
To flire against the Butchers of his life.

But
The life and death of Richard the second.

But since correction lyeth in that hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrell to the will of heaven,
Who when they see the houres ripe on earth,
Will raigne hot vengeance on offenders heads.

Ends. Finishes brotherhood in thee no faster spurre?
Hath loue i'th thy old blood no liuing fire?

As euens foules (whereof thy selfe art one)
Were as euens violles of his Sacred blood,
Or euens faire branches springing from one root:
Some of those euens are dride by natures course,
Some of those branches by the definies cut:
But Thomas, my deere Lord, my life, my Glaouter,
One Viol full of Edwards Sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his moist Royall roote
Is crack'd of, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hacket downe, and his furnamer leaves all vaded
By Exuies hate, and Murders bloody Axe.

Ah Gaunt! His blood was thine, that bed, that wombe,
That mettle, that selfe-mould that faision'd thee,
Made him a man: and though thou liest, and breath'th,
Yet art thou flaine in him: thou doft content
In some large measure to thy Fathers death,
In that thou feest thy wretched brother dy';
Who was the modell of thy Fathers life,
Call it not patience (Gaunt) it is diaprare,
In suffring thus thy brother to be slaufter'd,
Though thou liest the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching thine owne mother how to butcher thee:
That which in meane men we intitle patience
Is pale cold cowardice in noble brevts:
What shall I say, to safegard thine owne life,
The brest way is to venge my Glaouter death.

Gaunt. Heuen is the quarrell: for heuens subfute
His Deputy appointed in his fight,
Hath cau'd his death, the which if wrongfull
Let heauen reuenge: for I may never lift
An angry arme against his Minifter.

Dur. Where then ( alas may I) complaint my selfe?
Gaunt. To heauen, the wilderous Champion to defend
Dur. Why then I wills: farewell old Gaunt.
Thou go'lt to Coventrie, there to behold
Our Cofine Herford, and fell Mowbray fight:
O fit my husbands wrongs on Herford's speare,
That it may enter butcher with my woe:
Or if misfortune misse the first carreere,
Be Mowbrayes finnes fo heavy in his bosome,
That they may break his foaming Couriers backe,
And throw the Rider headlong in the Lifs,
A Caytiffe recreant to my Cofine Herford:
Farwell old Gaunt, thy sometime brothers wife
With her companion Greefe, must end her life.

Gaunt. Sifter farewell: I must to Coventree,
As much good day with thee, as go with mee.

Dur. Yet one word more: Greefe boundeth where it
Not with the empte hollowes, but weightier
I take my leau, before I haue begun,
For sorrow ends not, when it semeth done.
Commend me to my brother Edmund Turge.

Lest, this is all I nay, yet depart not so,
Though this be all, do not so quickly go,
I shall remember more. Bid him, Oh, what?
With all good speed at Plafhie vist mee.
Alacke, and what thall good old Yorke there see
But empty lodgingis, and vnfurnished walls,
Vn-people'd Offices, vntrodun Stones?

Scena Tertia.

Enter Marshall, and Aumerle.

Mar. My L. Aumerle, is Harry Herford arm'd.
Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.

Mar. The Duke of Norfolk, frightfully and bold,
Stays but the specimens of the Apprentis Trumpet.

Aum. Why then the Campions are prepar'd, and stay
For nothing but his Maleficies approach.

Flourish. Enter King, Gaunt, Bophy, Bagot, Greene, & others:
Then Mowbray in Arms, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshall, demand of yonder Champion
The cause of his arriuall heere in Armes,
Aske him his name, and orderly proceed
To sweare him in the iustice of his caufe.

Mar. In Gods name, and the Kings, say who ye art,
And why thou com'lt thus knightly clad in Armes?
Against what man thou com'ft, and what's thy quarrell,
Speak truly on thy knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heauen, and thy valour.

Marshall. My name is The Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither comes engaged by my oath
(Which heauen defend a knight should violate)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my King, and his succeeding ifue,
Against the Duke of Herford, that appeales me:
And by the grace of God, and this mine arme,
To prooue him (in defendeing of my selfe)
A Traitor to my God, my King, and me,
And as I truly fight, defend me heauen.

Tucket. Enter Herford, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshall: Aske yonder Knight in Armes,
Both who he is, and why he commeth hither,
Thus placed in habiliments of warre;
And formerly according to our Law
Depose him in the iustice of his caufe.

Mar. What is thy name? and wherefore com'st thither?
Before King Richard in his Royall Lifs?
Against whom com'st thou? and what's thy quarrell?
Speakke like a true Knight, to defend thee heauen.

Bul. Harry of Herford, Lancater, and Derbee,
Am I who ready heere do stand in Armes,
To prooue by heaunns grace, and my bodies valour,
In Lifs, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk,
That he's a Traitor foule, and dangerous,
To God of heauen, King Richard, and to me,
And as I truly fight, defend me heauen.

Mar. On paine of death, no perfon be so bold,
Or daring hardie as to touch the Lifs,
Except the Marshall, and such Officers
Appointed to direct these faire defignes.

Bul. Lord Marshall, let me kisse my Soueraigne hand,
And bow my knee before his Malefie:
For Mowbray and my selfe are like two men,
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage,

...
Then let us take a ceremonious leave
And bowing farwell of our feuerall friends.

Mar. The Appealant in all duty greets your Highness,
And charges to kisse your hand, and take his leave.

Rich. We will defend, and fold him in our arms.

Cofin of Herford, as thy cause is just,
So be thy fortune in this Royal fight:
Farewell, my blood, which if to day thou sheddest,
Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Ball. Oh let no noble eye prophane a teare
For me, if I be gored with a Membrayd speare:
As confident, as is the Falcons flight
Against a bird, do I with Membray fight.
My loving Lord, I take my leave of you,
Of you (my Noble Cofin) Lord Sumarle;
Not bittie, although I have to do with death,
But laufhe, young, and cheerfully drawing breath.

Loo, as at English Feasts, so I regrete
The daintie flift, to make the end most sweet.
Oh thou the earthy author of my blood,
Whole youthfull spirit in me regenerate,
Dost with a two-fold rigor life inpour To reach at victory above my head,
Adde proof unto mine Armour with thy praysre,
And with thy blestings fleie my Lances point,
That it may enter Membraynes waxen Coate,
And furnish new the name of Iohn a Gaunt,
Even in the lufty hauour of his fonne.

Gaunt. Heauen in thy good caufe make thee prof'reous
Be swift like lightning in the execution,
And let thy bowes doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the Canke
Of thy amaz'd pernicious enemy.

Rouze vp thy youthfull blood, be valiant, and live.

Ball. Mine innocence, and S. George to thrive.

Men. How ever heauen or fortune caft my lot,
There lies, or dies, true to Kings Richards Throne,
A loyall, iuft, and vpright Gentleman:
Neuer did Captive with a freer heart,
Caft off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden vncontrol'd enfranchisement,
More then my dancing foule doth celebrate
This Feast of Battell, with mine Adverarie.

Moit mighty Liege, and my companion Peere,
Take from my mouth, the wish of happy yereas,
As gentle, and as locond, as to left,
Go I to fight: Truth, hath a quiet bret.

Rich. Farewell, my Lord, securely I eyfe
Vertue with Valour, couched in thine eye:
Order the trial Marshall, and begin.

Mar. Harrie of Herford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Receiv thy Launce, and heauen defend thy right.

Ball. Strong as a towre in hope, I cry Amen.

Mar. Go bear this Lance to Thomas D. of Norfolke.

1. Har. Harry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands heere for God, his Soueraigne, and himselfe,
On paine to be found falfe, and recreant,
To prooue the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Membray,
A Traitor to his God, his King, and him,
And dares him to fet forwardes to the fight.

2. Har. Here handeth Thos Membray Duke of Norfolk
On paine to be found falfe and recreant,
Both to defend himselfe, and to approve
Henry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his Soueraigne, and to him disloyall:
Couragiously, and with a free defire

Attending but the signall to begin. A charge founded
Mar. Sound Trumpets, and let forward Combatants:
Stay, the King hath thowne his Warder downe.

Rich. Let them lay by their Helmetts & their Spears,
And both returne backe to their Chaires againe.
Withdraw with vs, and let the Trumpets found,
While we returne these Dukes what we deceere.

A long Fflourib.

Draw neere and lift
What with our Councell we have done.
For that our Kingdomes earth should not be foyled
With that deceere blood which it hath foothered,
And for our eyes do hate the dire affect
Of ciuill wounds powdog'd vp with neighbors swords,
Which do rouze'd with boystroues vattun'd drummes,
With harfth refounding Trumpets dreadefull bray,
And grating thockes of wrathfull yron Armes,
Might from our quiet Confines fright faire peace,
And make vs wade euene in our kinds blood:
Therefore, we banifh you our Territories.

You Cofin Herford, vpon paine of death,
Till twice fume Summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regrete our faire dominions,
But treate the stranger pathes of banifhment.

Bul. Your will be done: This mutt my comfort be,
That Sun that warmes you heere, shall shine on me:
And thro' his golden beams to you heere lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banifhment.

Rich. Norfolke: for thee remaines a heauier dofte,
Which I with some vnwillingethe pronounce,
The fye flow hours shall not determinate
The dateleffe limit of thy deere exile:
The hopeleffe word, of Neuer to returne,
Breath I against thee, vpon paine of life.

Men. A heauie sentence, my moft Soueraigne Liege,
And all vnlock'd for from your Highnesse mouth:
A deeree merit, not fo deepe a malaine,
As to be call forth in the common ayre.
Hauie I deferred at your Highnesse hands.
The Language I have learn'd these forty yerees
(My native English) now I must forgoe,
And now my tongues vfe is to me no more,
Then an vnfringeable Vyll, or a Harpe,
Or like a cunning Instrument ca'd vp,
Or being open, put into his hands
That knowes no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have engag'd my tongue,
Doubly percul'd with my teeth and lippes,
And dull, vnpracting, barren ignorance,
Is made me Gooler to attend on me:
I am too old to fawne vpon a Nurfe,
Too farre in yeeres to be a pupill now:
What is thy sentence then, but speecchleffe death,
Which robbs my tongue from breathing naturall breath?
Rich. It boost thee not to be compassionate,
After our sentence, plaining comes too late.

Men. Then thus I turne me from my countrey light
To dwell in solemne shades of endleffe night.

Rich. Returne againe, and take an oath with thee,
Lay on our Royall sword, your banifht hands:
Sware by the duty that you owe to heauen
(Our part therein we banifh with your felues)
To keepe the Oath that we adminiftere:
You euery shall (to helpe you Truth, and Heuen)
Embrace each other loose in banifhment,
Nor euer looke vpon each other face,

Nor
The life and death of Richard the second.

Nor euer write, regrette, or reconcile
This lowring tempest of your home-born hate,
Nor euer by asidul purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
Gainst Vs, our State, our Subiects, or our Land.

But. I swears.

Mew. And I, to keepe all this.

But. Norfolkke, so fare, as to mine enemies,
By this time (had the King permitted vs)
One of our foules had wandred in the ayre,
Banish'd this saile repulche of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from the Land.
Confecte thy Tresafons, ere thou flye this Realme,
Since thou haft fare to go, beare not along
The clogging burthen of a guilty soule.

Mew. No Bullingbrede: If euer I were Traitor,
My names be blotted from the booke of life,
And I from heauen banish'd, as from hence:
But what thou art, heauen, thou, and I do know,
And all too foonie (I fear) the King shall fare.
Farewel my Lige (now) no way can I fayy,
Save backe to England, all the worlds my way.

Rich. Blink'd, in the glaries of thine eyes
I fee thy greene heedd: thou fad afflicted,
Hath from the number of his banish'd years
Pluck'd fowre away: Six frozen Winters fpent,
Returne with welcome home, from banishment:
But how long a time lyeth in one little word:
Foure lagging Winters, and fowre wanton fprings
End in a word, fuch is the breath of Kings.

Gaunt. I thanke my Lige, that in regard of me
He shortens foure years of my fonnes exile:
But little vantage shall I reape thereby.
For ere the foure yeares that he hath to spend
Can change their Moones, and bring their times about,
My oyie-eride Lampe, and time-bewatked light
Shall be extint with age, and endleffe night:
My inch of Paper, will be burnt, and done,
And blindfold death, not let me fee my fonne.

Rich. Why Vnkle, thou haft many yeares to fue.

Gaunt. But not a minute (King) that thou canst glue:
Shorten my dayes thou canst with fudden forow,
And plucke nightes from me, but no lend a morrow:
Thou canft helpe time to furrow me with age,
But no flop wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is currant with him, for my death,
But dead, thy kindeome cannot buy my breath.

Rich. Thy fonne is banish'd (upon good advice,
Whereby thy tongue a party-verdick gue,
Why at our Jutlic feme'll thou then to lowre?

Gau. Things sweet to taff, prowe in digeftion fowre:
You urg'd me as a judge, but I had rather you would haue bid me argue like a Father.
Alas, I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too drift to make me more way;
But you gaue leauie to my vawilling tong,
Against my will, to do my felfe this wrong.

Rich. Confine farewell I and Vnkle bid him fo:
Six yeares we banish him, and he shall go.

Enter King, Anmerle, Greene, and Bagot.

Rich. We did obferue. Confine Anmerle,
How far brought you high Herfard on his way?

Anm. I brought high Herfard (if you call him fo)
but to the next high way, and there I left him.

Rich. And say, what flore of parting tears were shed?

Anm. Faith none for me: except the Northeast wind
Which then grew bitter against our face,
Awak'd the fleape rheums, and fo by chance
Did grace our hollow parted with a tear.

Rich. What fald our Coyn when you parted with him?

Anm. Farewell; and for my hart deftain'd my tongue
Should to prophane, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppreffion of fuch greefe,
That worke foc'd buried in my forowes graue.
Marrey, would the word Farewell,hau'e lengthen'd houre,
And added yeeres to his short banishment,
He should have had a volume of Farewels,
but fince it would not, he had none of me.

Rich. He is our Coyn (Coyn) but 'tis doubt
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinman come to fee his friends,
Our Icles, and Bagot: here Bagot and Greane
Obferu'd his Courtship to the common people:
How he did seeme to dive into their hearts,
With humble, and familiat Courtfe,
What reverence he did throw away on faues;
Wooling poore Craftef-men, with the craft of foules,
And patient vnder-bearing of his Fortune,
As 'twere to banifh their affeets with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an Oyher-wench,
A brace of Dray-men bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With thanks to my Countrymen, my loving friends,
As were our England in retourion his,
And he our Sodainly next degree in hope.

Gr. Well, he is gone, & with him go these thoughts:
Now for the Rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient manage must be made my Liege
Ere further leutyr, yield them further means
For their advantage, and your Highness’s lote.

Ric. We will our selfe in perfon to this warre,
And for our Coffiers, with too great a Court,
And liberal Largefle, are growne somewhat light,
We are inforde to farme our royall Realme,
The Renewne whereof shall furnih vs
For our auxaries in hand: if that come short
Our Substitutes at home shall haue Blanke-charters:
Whereeto, when they shall know what men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large sums of Gold,
And lend them after to supply our wants:
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bofhy, what newes?
Bof. Old Iohn of Gaunt is verie fickle my Lord,
Souldainly taken, and hath fent pull halfe
To entreat your Maiesty to visit him.

Ric. Now put it (heaven) in his Phyfians minde,
To helpe him to his grave immediately:
The lining of his coffiers shall make Coates
To decke our fouldiers for these Irish warres.
Come Gentlemen, let’s all go visit him:
Pray heauen we may make haf, and come too late. Exit.

Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gaunt, fiche with Yerke.

Gaunt. Will the King come, that I may breath my lafte
In wholsome counfell to his unfayld youth?
Yor. Vex not your felfs, nor fhrue not with your breath,
For all in vaine comes counfell to his eare.

Gaunt. O but (they fay) the tongues of dying men
Inforce attention like deepes harmonie:
Where words are scarce, they are feldom feene in vaine,
For they breath truth, that breath their words in vaine.
He that no more muft fay, is linder more,
Then they whom youth and eafe have taught to glofe,
More are mens ends mark’d, then their lues before,
The fetting Sun, and Muifcke is the clofe
As the lafte taft of fweetnes, is fweeteft laft,
Writ in remembrance, more then things long past;
Though Richard my lyes counfell would not heare,
My deaths lad tale, may yet vndeere his eare.

Yor. No, it is flpott with other flatting founds
As praifes of his flate: then there are found
Lacifious Meeters, to whose vnoem found
The open eare of youth doth always liften.
Report of fadnes in proud Italy,
Whole manners still our tardie apth Nation
Limpes after in bafe Imitation.

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanities,
So it be new, there’s no repect how vile,
That is not quickly buz’d into his eares?
That all too late comes counfell to be heard,
Where will doth muityn with wits regard?
Direct not him, whose way himfelfe will choofe,
Tis breath thou lackft, and that breath wilt thou looie.

Gaunt. Me thinkes I am a Prophet new infir’d,
And thus expiring, do foretell of him,
Hisراف fierce blaze of Ryot cannot laft,
For violent fires foone burne out themfelves,
Small flourves laft long, but fodaine formes are fhort,
He tyres betimes, that ipurs too falt betimes;
With eager feeding, food doth choake the fedeer:
Light vanity, infaftate comorant,
Confuming means foone preyes upon it felfe.
This royall Throne of Kings, this fceptred Ile,
This earth of Mafeiy, this fteate of Mars,
This other Eden, demy paradife,
This Fortreff built by Nature for her felfe,
Against intfortune, and the hand of warre:
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious flone, fit in the filler fea,
Which ferues it in the office of a wall,
Or as a Moafe defence to a house,
Against the enuy of leefe happy Lands,
This bleffed plot, this earth, this Realme, this England,
This Nurfe, this teemmg wombe of Royall Kings,
Fare’d by their breed, and famous for their birth,
Renowned for their deeds, as farre from home,
For Christian fervice, and true Chialitie,
As is the f quelcher in fubborne Jury
Of the Worlds ranfome, bleffed Makers Sonne.
This Land of fuch deer eoules, this deere-deere Land,
Deere for her reputation through the world,
Is now Leas’d out (I dye pronouncing it)
Like to a Tenement or pelling Farme.
England bound in with the triumphant fea,
Whofe rocky shore beats backe the enuisous fedge
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with flame,
With Inky blottes, and rotten Parchment bonds.
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath’made a flamelfall conquest of it felfe.
Ah! would the scandall vanifh with my life,
How happy then was my enfuing death?

Enter King, Queene, Asouerels, Bofhy, Greene, Bogen, Ric, and Willoughby.

Yor. The King is come, deale mildly with his youth,
For young hot Colts, being rag’d, do rage the more.

Ri. How fares our noble Vade Lancaler?

Ri. What comfort man! How fit with aged Gaunt?

Ri. Oh how that name befins my compoition:
Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me greefe hath kept a tedious faft,
And who abfaynes from meate, that is not gaunt?
For feeding England long time hau I watcht,
Watching breeds leannesse, leannesse is all gaunt.
The pleafure that forme Fathers fedes upon,
Is my driff faft, I meane my Childrens lookec,
And therein fafting, haft thou made me gaunt:
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whole hollow wobme inherits naught but bones.

Ric. Can fiche men play fo nicely with their names?

Gaunt. Mo, milery makes sport to mocke it felfe:
Since thou doft fcke to kill my name in me,
To He Liue Thy Dar'ft Prefuming Is Why Which Depofing The A

It were ftate yet thou hast ftoke thy name is

Not Glaufers death, nor Herfords banifhment, Nor Gauntes rebukes, nor Englands priuate wrongs, Nor the prevention of poore Bullyingbrook,

The plate, coine, reueneuves, and moneiables, Whereof our Vnice Gaunt did fland pooffit.

How long hall I be patient? Oh how long Shall tender dutie make me fuffer wrong?

Right, Tor. Oh my Liege, pardon me if you pleafe, if not I plea'd not to be pardon'd, am content with all: Seeks you to fteke, and gripe into your hands The Royalties and Rights of banifh'd Herfords Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Herfords life? Was not Gaunt iuft? and is not Harry true? Did not the one deferue to have an heyre? Is not his heyre a well-deferuing fonne? Take Herfords rights away, and take from time His Charters, and his cuftomarie rights: Let not to morrow then infue to day, Be not thy felte. For how art thou a King But by faire fucceffion and fucceffion? Now afore God, God forbid I fay true, If you do wrongfully feize Herfords right, Call in his Letters Patents that he hath By his Atrunneys generill, to fue His Luefle, and deny his offer'd homage, You plucke a thoufand dangers on your head, You loafe a thoufand well-dilpoled hearts, And pricke my tender patience to thofe thoughts Which honor and allegiance cannot think.

Nor, My Liege, olde Gaunt comemnds him to your Malefie.

Ric. What fayes he? Nor. Nay nothing, all is faid:

The tongue is now a fringileffe instrument, Words, life, and all, old Lancaffer hath fpent.

Ter. Be Yorke the next, that mutt be bankrupt fo, Though death be poore, it ends a mortall wo.

Ric. The ripeft fruit firft falls, and fo doth he, His time is fpent, our pilgrimage must be:

So much for that. Now for our Iriſh warres, We muff supplant thofe rough rug-headed Kernes, Which blue like venom, where no venom elle

But onely they, haue privilege to lieue. And for thefe great afiayres do aske some charge Towards our allience, we do feize to vs

I mocke my name (great King,) to flatter thee.

Ric. Should dying men flatter thofe that lieue?

Gau. No, no, men liuing flatter thofe that dye.

Ric. Thou now a dying, faid thou flatter'ft me. Gau. Oh no, thou dyed, though I the fickler be.

Ric. I am in health, I breathe, I fee thee ill.

Gau. Now he that made me, knowes I fee thee ill: Ill in my felie to fee, and in thee, feeling ill, Thy death-bed is no leffer then the Land, Wherein thou lieft in reputation fickes, And thou too care-leffe patient as thou art, Commit't thy amоеted body to the cure Of thofe Phyfition, that ft first wounded thee. A thoufand flatterers ft within thy Crowne, Whofe compaffe is no bigger then thy head, And yet incaged in fo small a Verge, The wide is no whit leffer then the Land.

Oh had thou Grandfire with a Prophefs eye, Scene how his fonnes fonne, thoud destroy hisfonnes, From forth thy racy he would haue laied thy flame, Depofing thee before thou were pooffit.

Whofe pooffit now to thy vnreuerent falte.

Why (Cofine) were thou Regent of the world, It were a fame to let his Land by leafe: But for thy world enjoying but this Land, Is it not more then thame, to flame it fo?

Landlord of England art thou, and not King:

Thy fate of Law, is bondlaue to the law, And—

Rich. And thou, a lunatike leane-witted foolo, Prefuming on an Agues pruflledge, Dar'ft with thy frozen admonition Make pale our cheekes, chafing the Royall blood With fury, from his natuie reffidence?

Now by my Seates right Royall Malefie, Wer't thou not Brother to great Edwards fonne, This tongue that runs fo roundly in thy head, Should run thy head from thy vnreuerent shoulder.

Gau. Oh spare me not, my brothers Edwards fonne, For that I was his Father Edwards fonne:

That blood already (like the Pellican) Thou haft taft out, and drunkenly carow'd,

My brother Gloucefter, plaine well meaning soule (Whom Bire befall in heauen 'mong happy foules) May be a preftident, and witneffe good,

That thou refpeft'ft not falline Edwards blood: Ioyned with the prefent fiekneffe that I have, And thy vnhindneffe be like crooked age,

To crop at once a too-long. whither'd frowne. Liue in thy fbrane, but dye not fbrane with thee.

Thofe words hereafter, thy tormentors bee. Conuey me to my bed, then to my grave, Love they to blue, that love and honor haue.

Exit Rich. And let them dye, that age and fallens haue, For both haft thou, and both become the grave.

Ter. I do befeech your Malefie impute his words To wayward fickleneffe, and age in him:

He loues you on my life, and holds you deere As Harry Duke of Herfords, were he heere.

Rich. Right, you fay true: as Herfords love, so his;

As theirs, fo mine: and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.

Nor. My Liege, olde Gaunt comemnds him to your Malefie.
The life and death of Richard the second.

Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.
Nor. Then thus: I have from Port & Blan
A Bay in Britaine, receiv'd intelligence,
That Harry Duke of Hereford, Rainold Lord Cobham,
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother Archbishop, late of Canterbury,
Sith Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Rainfion,
Sith John Norberis, Sir Robert Waterton, & Francis Quaint,
All these well furnisht'd by the Duke of Britaine,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of warre
Are making bither with all due expediency,
And shortly meane to touch our Northerne shore:
Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the King for Ireland.
If we shall then flake off our flauish yoke,
Impe out our drooping Countries broken wing,
Prepare to warre for England's life or limb;
Prepare our felves, for this is no time to play
Stay, and be secret, and my felle: we'll all go.
Re. To horfe, to horfe, vrge doubts to them: yet fear.
Will. Hold out my horfe, and I will first be there.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Queene, Buffie, and Baget.

Buff. Madam, your Maiestie is too much fad,
You promis'd when you parted with the King,
To lay aside felle-harming heauineffe,
And entertain a chearfull disfopition.
Que. To please the King, I did: to please my felle.
I cannot do it: yet I know no caufe,
Why I should welcome such a gueft as greefe,
Sauue bidding farewell: to fo fweet a gueft
As my sweet Richard: yet againe I thinke,
Some vnborne forrow, ripe in fortunes wombe
Is coming towards me, and my inward foule
With nothing trembles, at something it greues,
More then with parting from my Lord the King.
Buff. Each fabfiance of a greefe hath twenty shadows
Which fliues as greefe it felle, but is not fo:
For frownes eye, glazed with blinding tears,
Diidues one thing intire, to many obiects,
Like peripeclues, which rightly gazed vpon
Shew nothing but confusion, ey'd awry,
Diltinguifh forme: fo your sweet Maiestie
Looking awry vpon your Lords departure,
Findes the front greefe, more then himfelfe to waile,
Which look'd on as it is, is naught bur shadows.
Of what it is not: then thrice-gracious Queene,
More then your Lords departure weep not, more's not
Or if it be, 'tis with felle frowne eyes,
Which for things true, weree things imaginary.

Qu. It may be fo: but yet my inward foule Periwades me it is otherwife: how erre it be,
I cannot but be fad: fo heavy fad,
As though on thinking on no thought I thinke,
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and drihke.
Buff. 'Tis nothing but conceit (my gracious Lady.)

Queen.
The life and death of Richard the second.

Qu. "Tis nothing leffe: conceit is still derl'd
From some fore-father greefe, mine is not fo,
For nothing hast begot my sometimed greefe,
Or something, hath the nothing that I greeue,
"Tis in reuerence that I do polleffe,
But what it is, that is not yet knowne, what
I cannot name, 'tis namelesse woe I wot.

Enter Greene.

Gre. Heauen faue your Maiestie, and wel met Gentle-
I hope the King is not yet shipt for Ireland. (men:
Qu. Why hop't thou so? 'Tis better hope he is:
For his digines craze hast, his haft good hope,
Then wherefore doth thou hope he is not shipt?
Gre. That he our hope, might have retrey'd his power,
And driven into dispaire an enemies hope,
Who strongly hath fet footing in this Land.

Enter a servant.

The banifh'd Bullingbrooke repeales himselfe,
And with vp-lifted armes is fast arru'd
At Rauenburg.

Qu. Now God in heauen forbid.
Gr. O Madam 'tis too true: and that is worfe,
The L.Northumberland, his yong fonne Henrie Perche,
The Lords of Rauff, Beaumont, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends are fled to him.

Bpf. Why have you not proclaimed Northumberland
And the rest of the revolted faction, Traitors?
Gre. We haue: whereupon the Earl of Worcerfe
Hath broke his staffe, reneg'd his Stewardship,
And at his houhold seruants fled with him to Bullenbrook
Qu. So Greene, thou art the midwife of my woe,
And Bullenbrooke my forrowes dimmall beye:
Now hath my soule brought forth her prodegie,
And I a gasping new deliered mother,
Hast woe to woe, forrow to forrow loyn'd.

Bpf. Dispaire not Madam.
Qu. Who shall hinder me?
I will dispaire, and be at enemie
With cowzening hope; he is a Flatterer,
A Parasite, a keeper backe of death,
Who gently would disfloue the bands of life,
Which flife hopes linger in extremity.

Enter Yorke

Gre. Heere comes the Duke of Yorke.
Qu. With signes of warre about his aged necke,
Oh full of carefull visages, and sad lookes:
Uncle, for heauens fake speake comfortable words:
For comfort in heauen, and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lies but croffe, care and griefe:
Your husband he is gone to face farre off,
Whilst others come to make him looke at home:
Heere am I left to vnder-prop his Land,
Who weake with age, cannot support my selfe:
Now comes the fickle hour of his forrurts made,
Now shall he try his friends that flattered him.

Enter a vnder

Sr. My Lord, your fonne was gone before I came.
Yor. He was: why fo? go all which way it will:
The Nobles they are fled, the Commons they are cold,
And will I fare reclue on Herfords side.
Sr. Get thee to Plashee to my sister Clother,
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound,
Hold, take my Ring.
Sr. My Lord, I had forgot
To telle your Lordship, to day I came by, and call'd there,
But I shall greeue you to report the rel.
Yor. What? is't knaue?

Sr. An houre before I came, the Dutchaffe di'de.
Yor. Heau'n for his mercy, what a tide of woes
Come rushing on this wofull Land at once?
I know not what to do: I would to heauen
(For my vntruth had not provok'd him to it)
The King had cut off my head with my brothers.
What, are there pothes dispatcht for Ireland?
How shall we do for money for these warres?
Come sister (Coren I would say) pray pardon me.
Go fellow, get thee home, pouseide some Cartes
And bring away the Armour that is there.
Gentlemen, will you murther men?
If I know now, which way to order these affaires
Thus disorderly thruth into my hands,
Neuer beleue me. Both are my klinkmen.
'Th'one is my Soueraigne, whom both my oath
And dute bids defend: th'other againe
Is my kinman, whom the King hath wrong'd,
Whom confidence, and my kindred bids to right:
Well, somewhat we muft do: Come Cozen,
Ile disppofe of you. Gentlemen, go murther vp your men,
And meet me prefently at Barkley Castle:
I shold to Plasby too: but time will not permit,
All is vneuen, and every thing is left at fix and feuon. Exit
Bpf. The windes fit faire for newes to goe to Ireland,
But none returns: For vs to leuy power
Proportional to th'enemy, is all impracible.
Gr. Besides our neesenne to the King in loue,
Is neere the hate of thofe loue not the King.
W. And that's the wauering Commons, for th'eir loue
Lies in their pors, and who fit empties them,
By fo much fits their hearts with deadly hate.
Bpf. Wherein the King stands generally condemn'd
Bag. If judgement bye in them, then fo do we,
Because we have beene euer neere the King.
Gr. Well: I will for refuge straight to Brittoile Castle,
The Earle of Wiltshire is alreadie there.
Bpf. Thither will I with you, for little office
Will the hatefull Commons performe for vs
Except like Currets, to teare vs all in pieces;
Will you go along with vs?
Bag. No, I will to Ireland to his Maiestie:
Farewell, if hearts prefages be not vaine,
We three here part, that neuer shall meete againe.
Bf. That's as Yorke thinges to heare back Bullenbrooke
Gr. Alas poor Duke, the taskie he vndertakes
Is numbring fanes, and drinking Oceans drie,
Where one on his side fights, thousands will flye.
Bpf. Farewell at once, for once, for all, and euer.
Well, we may meege againe.
Bag. I feare me neuer. Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter the Duke of Hereford, and Northumberland.

Bpf. How farre is it my Lord to Barkley now?
Nor. Beleeue me noble Lord,
I am a stranger heere in Glouffershire,
These high wilde hilles, and rough vneuen waises,
Drawes out our miles, and makes them wearisome:
And yet our faire discouer hath beene as figne,

Mak in Making the hard way sweet and delectable:
But I thinke it, what a wearie way
From Rauenburgh to Cottifld will be found,
In Roife and Willoughby, wasting your companie,
Which I protest hath very much beguil
The tedious, and proceed of my trauell:
But therein is sweetned with the hope to have
The present benefit that I pouffe.
And hope to joy, is little lesse in joy,
Then hope enjoy'd: By this, the wearie Lords
Shall make their way lesse thorn, as mine hath done,
By fight of what I have, your Noble Companie.

Bull. Of much lesse value is my Companie,
Then your good words: but who comes here?

Enter H. Percie.

North. It is my Sonne, young Harry Percie,
Sent from my Brother Willoughby; Whence fouer.
Harry, how fares your Vackie?

Percie. I had thought, my Lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the Queene?

Percie. Because your Lordship was proclaimed Traitor.
But hee, my Lord, is gone to Rauenburgh,
To offer servuce to the Duke of Hereford,
And sent me ouer by Barkely, to deliver
What power the Duke of Yorke had leaved there,
Then with direction to repair to Rauenburgh.
North. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford(Boy.)
Percie. No, my good Lord; for that is not forgot
Which ne're I did remember: to my knowledge,
I never in my life did looke on him.

North. Then learne to know him now: this is the Duke.
Percie. My gracious Lord, I tender you my servuce,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young.
Which elder dayes shall ripen, and confirme
To more approv'd servuce, and defeert.
Bull. I thanke thee gentle Percie, and be sure
I count my felowe in nothing elfe fo happy.
As in a Soule remenbering my good Friends:
And as my Fortune ripens with thy Loue,
It shall be still thy true Loues recumence,
My Heart this Covenant makes, my Hand thus feales it.
North. How farre is it to Barkely? and what firre
Kepes good old York there, with his Men of Warre?
Percie. There stands the Castle, by yond taft of Trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard,
And in it are the Lords of Barkely, Barkely, and Seymour,
None elfe of Name, and noble elimate.

Bull. Of Roife and Willoughby.

North. Here come the Lords of Roife and Willoughby,
Bloody with furpicing, fere red with haufe.

Bull. Welcome my Lords, I wot your love pursues
A banifh'd Traytor; all my Treasurie
Is yet but vnforten, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your love, and labours recumence.
Roife. Your preference makes vs rich, most Noble Lord.
Wife. And ferre furmounts our labour to atteaine it.
Bull. Euermore thanke'sh, the Excheuer of the poore,
Which till my infant-fortune comes to yeeres,
Stands for my Bountie: but who comes here?
The life and death of Richard the Second.

What would you have me doe? I am a Subject,
And challenge Law: Attorneys are deny’d me;
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To my Inheritance of free Diftinct.

North. The Noble Duke hath been much abuse’d.
Ruff. It stands your Grace upon, to doe him right.
Wilt. Bafe men by his endowments are made great.

Thee. My Lords of England, let me tell you this,
I have had feeling of my Cozens Wrongs,
And labour’d all I could to doe him right:
But in this kind, to come in brauing Armes,
Be his owne Career, and cut out his way,
To find out Right with Wrongs, it may not be;
And you that doe abett him in this kind,
Cherish Rebellion, and are Rebels all.

North. The Noble Duke hath sworn his comming is
But for his owne; and for the right of that,
Were all have strongly sworn to give him ayd,
And let him ne’er fee joy, that breaks that Oath.

Thee. Well, well, I fee the ific of these Armes,
I cannot mend it, I must needs confede,
Because my power is weake, and all ill left:
But if I could, by him, or gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you floope
Unto the Souvereigne Mercy of the King.
But since I cannot, be it knowne to you,
I doe remaine as Neuter. So fare you well,
Vnlaffe you pleade to enter in the Castle,
And there repose you for this Night.

Butl. An offer Vnkle, that wee will accept:
But wee must winne your Grace to goe with vs
To Britow Castle, which they say is held
By Boffie, Bager, and their Complices,
The Caterpillers of the Commonwealth,
Which I haue sworn to weed, and placke away.

Thee. It may be I will goe with you: but yet Ile pass,
I am loth to break our Countries Lawes:
Nor Friends, nor Foes, to me welcome you are,
Things past redresse, are now with me pass.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, and a Captaine.

Cape. My Lord of Salisbury, we haue layd ten dayes,
And hardly kept our Countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the King;
Therefore we will dispere our forces: farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou truest Welchman,
The King repeth all his confidence in thee.

Cape. 'Tis thought the King is dead, we will not lay;
The Bay-trees in our Country all are wither’d,
And Meteors fright the fixed Starres of Heaven;
The pale-fac’d Moon looks bloody on the Earth,
And leene-looke’d Prophets whisper fearfull change;
Rich men looke sad, and Ruffians dance and leap;
The one in fear, to looke what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by Rage, and Warre:
These signes fore-run the death of Kings.
Farewell, our Countrymen are gone and fled,
As well affur’d Richard their King is dead.

Thee. Ah Richard, with eyes of heauie mind,
I see thy Glory, like a shooing Starre,
Fall to the base Earth, from the Firmament:
Thy Sunne sets weeping in the lowly Weft,
Witnesing Stormes to come, Woe, and Vnrest:
Thy Friends are fled, to wait upon thy Foes,
And crostely to thy good, all fortune goes.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Bullingbrooke, York, Northumberland,
Ruff, Percy, Willoughby, with Boffie and Greene Prifoners.

Bull. Bring forth these men:
Boffie and Greene, I will not vex your foulces,
(Since presently your foulces must part your bodies)
With too much verging your prisoners there.
For twere no Charite: yet to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some caues of your deaths.
You have mis-led a Prince, a Royall King,
A Happie Gentleman in Blood, and Lineaments,
By you unhappied, and disguiz’d cleane:
You have in manner with your sinfull hours
Made a Diuorce betwixt his Queen and him,
Broke the poffeition of a Royall Bed,
And thayd the beautie of a faire Queens Cheekes,
With tears drawn fro’ her eyes, with your foulces wrongs.
My selfe a Prince, by fortune of my birth,
Neere to the King in blood, and neere in lour,
Till you did make him mis-interpette me,
Hast foppt my neck vnder your injuries,
And figh’d my English breath in forsaine Clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
While you have fed vp my Seignories,
Dif-park’d my Parkes, and fell’d my Forrest Woods;
From mine owne Windows torne my Household Coat,
Raz’d out my Emprefle, leaving me no signe,
Saued men opinions, and my living blood,
To shew the World I am a Gentleman.
This, and much more, much more then twice all this,
Condemnes you to the death: fee them delieverd ouer
To execution, and the hand of death.
Boffie. More welcome is the frooke of death to me,
Then Bullingbrooke to England.

Greene. My comfort is, that Heauen will take our foules,
And plague Injustice with the paines of Hell.

Bull. My Lord Northumberland, fee them dispaich’d:
Vnkle, you say the Queene is at your Houfe,
For Heauens fake fairly let her be entreated,
Tell her I tend to her my kind commends;
Take speciall care my Greetings be deliver’d.

Thee. A Gentleman of mine I have dispaich’d
With Letters of your love, to her at large.

Bull. Thankes gentle Vnkle: come Lords away,
To fight with Glendour, and his Complices;
A while to worke, and after holiday.
Scena Secunda.

Drums: Flourish, and Colours.

Enter Richard, Aumerle, Carlisle, and Soulaiters.

Rich. Barloughly Castle call you this at hand?
Amer. Ye, my Lord: how brooks your Grace the ayre,
After your late toiling on the breaking Sea?
Rich. Needs must I like it well: I wepe for joy
To stand upon my Kingdom once again.
Doth not the Sunthwaste the true Sun,
Though Rebels wound thee with their Horifes hooves:
As a long parted Mother with her Child,
Plays fondly with her tears, and smiles in meeting;
So weeping, moaning, grie at thee my Earth,
And doe thee favour with my Royal hands.
Feed not thy Soueraignes Foe, my gentle Earth,
Nor with thy Sweetnes, comfort his raunous fence:
But let thy Spiders, that suck vp thy Venom,
And hennie-gated Tooas lyke in their way,
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feetes,
Which with whipping thyes doe trample thee.
Yield flinging Nettes to mine Enemies;
And when they from thy Bofome pluck a Flower,
Guard it I prethee with a lurking Adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortall touch
Throw death upon thy Soueraignes Enemies.
Mock not my fenclefs Condivation, Lords;
This Earth shall have a feeling, and those Stones
Prose armed Soulaiters, ere her Native King
Shall falter vnder foule Rebellious Armes.

Car. Fear not my Lord, that Power which made you King
Hath power to keepe you King, in sight of all.
Amer. He means, my Lord, that we are too remisse,
Whilest Ballingbroke through our securite,
Growes strong and great, in subdiance and in friends.
Rich. Difcomfortable Cousin, knowest thou not,
That when the searching Eye of Heaven is hid
Behind the Globe, that lights the lower World,
Then Theeues and Robbers range abroad vndhee,
In Murthers and in Out-rage bloody here:
But when from vnder this Terreftriall Ball
He fires the proud tops of the Ealterme Pines,
And darts his Lightning through e'ry guillite hole,
Then Murthers, Trefaons,and deftrett Sinnes
(The Cloake of Night being pluckt from off their backs)
Stand bare and naked, trembling at them selves.
So when this Theews, this Traitor Ballingbrooke,
Who all this while hath revelld in the Night,
Shall fee vs rising in our Throne, the Exalt,
His Trefaons will fit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the fight of Day;
But false-affrighted, tremble at his Unee.
Not all the Water in the rough rude Sea
Can wash the Balme from an anonymt King;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The Deputie elected by the Lord:
For every man that Ballingbrooke hath priss,
To lift firewd Steele against our Golden Crowne,
Heauen for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious Angell: then if Angels fight,
Weske men must fall, for Heauen sill guards the right.
Enter Salisbury.

Welcome my Lord, how farre off lyes your Power?
Salib. Nor neere, nor farther off, my gracious Lord,
Then this weske armes; discoomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speake of nothing but despaire:
One day too late, I feare (my Noble Lord)
Hath clouded all this happy dayes on Earth:
Oh call bokes Yesterday, bid Time returne,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men:
To day, to day, vnhappy day too late
Orethrowes thy Joyes, Friends, Fortune, and thy State;
For all the Welchmen hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Ballingbrroke, diaprfft, and fled.
Amer. Comfort my Liege, why lookes your Grace so pale?

Rich. But now the blood of twentie thouand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled,
And till so much blood thither come againe,
Hue I not reall to looke pale, and dead?
All Souls that will be safe, flye from my side,
For Time hath fet a blot upon my prise.
Amer. Comfort my Liege, remember who you are.
Rich. I had forgot my felle. Am I not King?
Awake thou flagg'd Malef.ft, thou sleepeft:
Is not the Kings Name forte thouand Names?
Arme, arme my Name: a punie fuffected Drikes
At thy great glory. Looke not to the ground,
Ye Favorites of a Kings: are wee not high?
High be our thoughts! I know my Vnkle York
Hath Power enough to ferue our Unee,
But who comes here? Enter Scroope.

Scrope. More health and happineffe bethue my Liege,
Then can my care-tun'd tongue delier him.
Rich. Mine earse is open, and my heart prepar'd:
The work is worldly loffe, thou canst unfold:
Say, is my Kingdome loffe? why twas my Care:
And what iffue is it to be rid of Care?
Strieus Ballingbrroke to be as Great as wee?
Greater he shall not be: If hee ferue God,
We'll ferue him too, and be his Fellow fo.
Reuold our Subiefts: That we cannot mend,
They beake their Faith to God, as well as vs:
Cry Woe, Deuastation, Ruine, Lofse, Decay,
The work is Death, and Death will have his day.
Scroope. Glad am I, that your Highneffe is so arm'd
To beate the tidings of Calamitie.
Like an unfeasable storme day,
Which make the Silver Rivers drowne their Shores,
As if the World were all diffolu'd to teares:
So high, aboe his Limits,swells the Rage
Of Ballingbrooke, couering your fearfull Land
With hard bright Steele, and hearts harder then Steele:
White Beares have arm'd their thin and hairleffe Sculpes
Against thy Malic, and Boyes with Womens Voyces,
Strue to speake bigge, and clap their female jonts
In stilf unwieldie Armes: against thy Crowne
Thy very Beadi-men learn to bend their Bows
Of double fatall Eogh: against thy State
Yea. Diffacft Women manage rude Bills:
Against thy Sest both young and old rebell,
And all goes worse then I haue power to tell.
Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'st a Tale so ill.
Where is the Earle of Wiltshire where is Baygar?
What is becomse of&quothere where is Greece?
The life and death of Richard the second.

That they have let the dangerous Enemy
Measure our Confines with such peacefull steps?
If we proceed, their heads shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Ballingbrooks.

Scroope. Peace have they made with him indeed (my Lord.)

Rich. Oh Villains, Vipers, distrust not redemption,
Dogs, easily woun to fawn on any man,
Snakes in my heart blood warm'd, that sting my heart,
Three Judas's, each one thrice worse then Judas,
Would they make peace terrifable Hell make warre
Upon their spotted Souls for this Offence.

Scroope. Sweet Leon (I fee) changing his property,
Turns to the fowerth, and most deadly hate:
Againe vncurse their Soules; their peace is made
With Heads, and not with Hands those whom ye curse.
Hawe felt the sword of Death in his right hand,
And lye full lowly, in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Basfins, Greene, and the Earl of Wiltshire dead?

Scroope. Yes, all of them at Bristlow loft their heads.

Aum. Whence is the Duke my Father with his Power?

Rich. No matter where; of comfort no man speake:
Let's talk of Graves, of Wormes, and Epitaphs,
Make Dust our Paper, and with Raynel eyes
Write Sorrow on the Bofome of the Earth.
Let's chafe Executors, and talk of Wills:
And yet not so; for what can we bequeath,
Save our depofed bodies to the ground?
Our Lands, our Lives, and all are Ballingbrokes,
And nothing can we call our owne, but Death,
And that small Modell of the barren Earth,
Which furnes as Paffes, and Cover to our Bones:
For Heauens fake let vs fit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of Kings:
How some have beene depot'd, some flaine in warre,
Some haunted by the Ghoths they have depot'd,
Some poisned by their Wives, some sleeping kill'd,
All murther'd. For within the hollow Crowne
That rounds the mortall Temples of a King,
Keeps Death his Court, and there the Antique fits
Scoffing his State, and grinning at his Pompe,
Allowing him a breath, a little Scene,
To Monarchize, he beare'd, and kille with lookes,
Infuing him with felle and vaine conceit,
As if this Fleth, which walls about our Life,
Were Braffe impregnable: and humor'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little Pinne
Bores through his Carlike Walls, and farwell King.
Cover your heads, and mock not fleth and blood
With Solemne Resurrection: throw away Repeal,
Tradition, Forme, and Ceremonious dutie,
For you have but mistooke me all this while:
I line with Bread like you, celestial Want,
Take Griefe, need Friends: fubtacted this,
How can you fay to me, I am a King?

Carl. My Lord, wise men re're sware their prefent woe,
But prefently prevent the ways to sware:
To feare the Poe, since feare oppreffeth strength,
Gives in your weakneas, strength vnto your Poe.
Fear, and be flaine, no worfe can come to fight,
And fight and die, is death destroying death,
Where fearing, dying, pays death ferule breath.

Aum. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
And learn to make a Body of a Limbe.

Rich. Thou didst me wellpraise Ballingbrooks I come to change Blowses with thee, for our day of Doome:
This ague fit of feare is over-blowne,
An exile take it is to winne our owne.

Say Scroope, where vyes our Vnkle with his Power?
Speak sweetly man, although thy looks be fowre.

Scroope. Men judge by the complexion of the Skie
The flatte and inclination of the day;
So may you by my dull and heavie Eye:
My Tongue hath but a heauier Tale to fay:
I play the Torturer, by small and small
To lengthen out the word, that must be spoken.
Your Vnkle York is loyn'd with Ballingbrokes,
And all your Northern Caffles yeeded vp,
And all your Southerne Gentlemen in Armes
Upon his Facion.

Rich. Thou haft faid enouf.

Becuow the Confed, which didt lead me forth
Of that sweet way I was in, to despare:
What say you now? What comfort have we now?
By Heauen I lie him euersallingly,
That bids me be of comfort any more.

Goe to Flint Caffe, there the pine away,
A King, Wris flmes, flmall Kingly Woe obay:
That Power I haue, discharge, and let em goe
To care the Land, that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none. Let no man speake againe
To alter this, for counfaille is but vaine.

Aum. My Liege, one word.

Rich. He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
From Richards Night, to Ballingbrokes faire Day.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Ballingbrooks, York, Northumberland, Attendants.

Bull. So that by this intelligence we learne
The Welchmen are diligent'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the King, who lately landed
With some few private friends, vpon this Coast.

North. The news is very faire and good, my Lord,
Richard, not farre from hence, hath hid his head.

York. It would becomme the Lord Northumberland,
To say King Richard: I slake the heauey day,
When such a sacred King should hide his head.

North. Your Grace mistakes: only to be briefe,
Left I his Title out.

York. The time hath bene,
Would you have bene fo briefe with him, he would
Have bene fo briefe with you, to shorten you,
For taking to the Head, your whole heads length.

Bull. Mistake not (Vnkle) farther then you shoulde.
York. Take not (good Cousin) farther then you shoulde.
Leaft you mislike the Heauens are ove your head.

Bull. I know it (Vnkle) and oppoite not my felde Against their will. But who comes here?

Enter Percey.

Welcome Harry, what, will not this Caffe yield?

Per. The Caffe royally is mann'd, my Lord,
Against thy entrance.
The life and death of Richard the second.

Bull. Royally? Why, it contains no King?
Per. Yes (my good Lord)
It doth contain a King: King Richard lies
Within the limits of yond Lime and Stone,
And with him, the Lord Asmerle, Lord Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scrope, before a Clergie man
Of holy reuerence; who, I cannot learn.
North. Oh, belike it is the Bishop of Carlile.

Bull. Noble Lord,
Goe to the rude Ribs of that ancient Castle,
Through Brazen Trumpet send the breath of Parle
Into his ruin'd Eares, and thus deliuer:
Henry Bullingtonbrok vpon his knees doth kisse
King Richard's hand, and sends all allegiance
And true faith of heart to his Royall Person: hither come
Even at his feet, to lay my Armes and Power,
Profounded, that my Banishment repeal'd,
And Lands restor'd againe, be freely granted:
If not, Ile vfe th'advantage of my Power,
And lay the Summers duft with flowers of blood,
Rayn'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen;
The which, how faire off from the mind of Bullingtonbrok
It is, fuch Orifon Tempesf should bedrench
The freth greene Lap of faire King Richard's Land,
My flooping dutie tenderly shall shew.
Goe signific as much, while here we march
Vpon the Grasse Carpet of this Plaine:
Let's march without the noyle of threatening Drum,
That from this Castles tatter'd Battlements
Our faire Appointments may be well perus'd.
Me thinkes King Richard and my felfe should meet
With no leffe terror then the Elements
Of Fire and Water, when their thundering snoake
At meeting teares the cloudie Cheekes of Heauen:
Be he theire, Ile be the yelding Water;
The Rage be his, while on the Earth I raine
My Waters on the Earth, and not on him.
March on, and marke King Richard how he lookes:
Parle withoues, and anfwer withoues; then a Flurries,
Enter on the Wallis, Richard, Carlile, Asmerle, Scrope; Salisbury.

See, see, King Richard doth himselfe appeare
As doth the blushing discontented Sunne,
Out from the feste Portall of the Eaft,
When he perceives the enuious Clouds are bent
To dimme his glory, and to flaine the tract
Of his bright paflage to the Occident.
York. Yet lookes he like a King; behold his Eye
(As bright as is the Eagles) lightens forth
Controlling Maieffte's slack, slack, for woe,
That any harme should flaine fo faire a fiew.
Riche. Wee are amaz'd, and thus long hue we fwoon
To watch the fearfull bending of thy knea
Because we thought our felle thy lawfull King:
And if we be, how dare thy floynts forget
To pay their awfull dutie to our preence?
If we be not, fiew the Hand of God,
That hath difmif'd vs from our Stewardhip,
For well wee know, no Hand of Blood and Bone
Can grip the farded Handle of our Scepter,
Vnleffe he doe prophanes, hailes, or vilupere.
And though you thinke, that all, as you have done,
Haue torne their Souls, by turning them from vs,
And we are barren, and bereft of Friends:
Yet know, my Maffer, God Omnipotent,
Is muttering in his Clouds, on our behalfe,
The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Queen, and two Ladies.

Queen. What sport shall we devise here in this Garden, To drive away the base thought of Care?

Lady. Madame, we'll play at Bowles.

Queen. 'Twill make me think the World is full of Rags, And that my fortune runs against the Bys.

Lady. Madame, we'll Dance.

Queen. My Legges can keepe no measure in Delight, When my poor Heart no measure keeps in Grief.

Therefore no Dancing (Girl) some other sport.

Lady. Madame, we'll tell Tales.

Queen. Of Sorrow, or of Griefe?

Lady. Of eyther, Madame.

Queen. Of neither, Girle.

For if of Joy, being altogether wanting, It doth remember me the more of Sorrow:

Or if of Griefe, being altogether had, It adises more Sorrow to my want of Joy:

For what I haue, I need not to repeat;

And what I want, it bootes not to complain.

Lady. Madame, I'll sing.

Queen. 'Tis well that thou haft caufe:

But thou should'st please me better, wouldst thou wepe.

Lady. I could wepe, Madame, would it doe you good.

Queen. And I could sing, would weeping doe me good:

And never borrow any Teare of thee.

Enter a Gardiner, and two Servants.

But play, here comes the Gardiners,

Let's dip into the shadow of these Trees.

My wretched Nettle, ysto a Rowe of Pinnes,

They're talkse of State for every one doth so,

Against a Change; Woe is fore-runne with Woe.

Gard. Goe binte thep vp yond dangling Apricocks,

Which like vnruely Children, make their Syre

Stoupe with oppertission of their prodigall weight:

Give some suffertance to the bending twigges,

Goe thou, and like an Executioner

Cutt off the heads of too fatt growing Sprays,

That look too loftfe in our Common-wealth:

All must be eu, in our Government.

You thus limply'd, I will goe root away

The noyforme Weedes, that without profit sucke

The Soyle fertility from wholefome flowers.

Ser. Why should we, in the compasse of a Pale,

Keepe Law and Forse, and doe Proportion,

Shewing as in a Modell our ilme Estate?

When our Sea-walled Garden, the whole Land,

Is full of Weedes, her fairest Flowers choak vp,

Her Fruit-trees all vnprun'd, her Hedges ruin'd,

Her Knots disterd, and her wholefome Heares

Sworming with Caterpillers.

Gard. Hold thy peace.

He that hath suffer'd this disterd Spring,

Hath now himselfe met with the Fall of Leaf.

The Weeds that his broad-spreading Leaves did shelter,

That seem'd, in eating him, to hold him vp,

Are pull'd vp, Root and all, by Ballingbrooks:

I mean, the Earl of Wiltshire, Boffio, Greene.

Ser. What,
Ser. What are they dead?
Gard. They are,
And Bollingbrook hath feit’d the wafteful King.
Oh, what pitty is it, that he had not fo trim’d
And dreft his Land, as we this Garden, at time of yeare,
And wound the Barke, the skin of our Fruit-trees,
Leat being over-proud with Sap and Blood,
With too much riches it confound it felie?
Had he done fo, to great and growing men,
They might have hu’ld to bear, and he to taffe
Their fruits of duty. Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughes may live:
Had he done fo, himselfe he bore the Crowne,
Which waffe and idle hours, hath quite thrown downe.
Ser. What thinke you the King shall be depo’d?
Gard. Depreft he is already, and depo’d
’Tis doubted he will be. Letters came last night
To a deere Friend of the Duke of Yorkes,
That tell blakke tydings.

Oh, I am preft to death through want of speaking:
Thou old Adam likefene, fet to drefs this Garden:
How dares thy harsh rude tongue found this vnpleasing
What Ease! what Serpent hath suggeted thee, (newes to make a second fall of curfed man?
Why do’st thou say, King Richard is depo’d,
Dar’ft thou, thou little better thing then earth,
Diuine his downfill? Say, where, when, and how Cam’st thou by this ill-tydings? Speak, thou wretch.
Gard. Pardon me Madam. Little joy have I
To breath thefe newes; yet what I fay’s, is true
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bollingbrook, their Fortunes both are weigh’d
In your Lords Scale, is nothing but himselfe,
And some few Vanities, that make him light:
But in the Balance of great Bollingbrook,
Besides himselfe, are all the English Peeres,
And with that oddes he weighes King Richard downe.
Pente you to London, and you’l finde it fo,
I speake no more, then every one doth know.

29. Nimble mfchance, that art to light of foote,
Doth not thy Embaffage belong to me?
And am I laft that knowes it? Oh thou thinke’t
To ferue me laft, that I may longest keepe
Thy forrow in my breath. Come Ladies goe,
To meet at London, Londons King in woe.
What was I borne to this: that my fad looke,
Should grace the Triumph of great Bollingbrook.
Gardner, for telling me this newes of woe,
I would the Plants thou grafit’it, may never grow. Exit.
Poore Queen, fo that thy State might be no worfe,
I would my skill were fubject to thy curfe:
Here he dropp a teare, here he in this place
Ile fet a Banke of Rew, fourre Herbe of Grace:
Rue, eu’n for ruth, herehe shortly hall be feene,
In the remembrance of a Weeping Queene. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter as to the Parliament, Bollingbrook, Aumerle, Northumberland, Percy, Fins-Water, Surrey, Carlisle, Albat of Whinnyburn, Herald, Officers, and Bagot.

Bollingbrook. Call forth Bagot.

Now Bagot, freely speake thy minde,
What thou do’st know of Noble Gloufiers death:
Who wrought it with the King, and who perform’d
The bloody Office of his Timeleffe end.
Bag. Then fet before my face, the Lord Aumerle.
Bol. Conf’y hand forth, and looke upon that man.
Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
Scores to vnfay, what it hath once deliver’d.
In that dead time, when Gloufiers death was plotted,
I heard you fay, Is not my arme of length,
That reacheth from the reftfull English Court
As faire as Calius, to my Valiant head.
Amongst much other talke, that very time,
I heard you fay, that you had rather refufe
The offer of an hundred thoufand Crownes,
Then Bollingbrook returne to England; adding withall,
How blest this Land would be, in this your Collins death.
Aum. Princes, and Noble Lords:
What anfwer hall I make to this base man?
Shall I fo much dihonor my faire Starres,
On equal terrms to glue him chaffement?
Either I muft, or have mine honor foyl’d
With th’ Attainder of his fland’rous Lipes.
There is my Gage, the manuall Scale of death
That marks thee out for Hell. Thou lyef,
And will maintaine what thou haft faid, is fife,
In thy heart blood, though being all too base
To fhine the temper of my Knightly word.
Bol. Bagot forbeare, thou fhalt not take it vp.
Aum. Excepting one, I would he the beft
In all this prefence, that hath mou’d me fo.

Fins. If that thy valour fland on sympathize:
There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thine:
By that faire Sunne, that fhewes me where thou fand’st,
I heard thee fay (and vauntingly thou spak’ft it)
That thou’rt caufe of Noble Gloufiers death.
If thou defenf’t it, twenty times thou lyef,
And I will turne thy fulplood to thy hart,
Where it was forgew with my Rapiers point.
Aum. Thou dar’ft not (Coward) line to fee the day.
Fins. Now by my Soule, I would it were this houre.
Aum. Fins-Water thou art dumb’d to hell for this.
Per. Aumerle, thou lyef’t: his Honor is as true
In this Appelle, as thou art all vniou:
And that thou art fo, there I throw my Gage
To prove ou thee, to th’extreme point
Of mortall breathing. Seize it, if thou dar’ft.
Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more reuengefull Steele,
Over the glittering Helmet of my Foe.
Surrey. My Lord Fins-water:
I do remember well, the very time
Aumerle, and you did talke.
Fins. My Lord,
‘Tis very true; You were in preffence then,
And you can witneffe with me, this is true.
Surrey. As fife, by heauen,
As Heauen it felle is true.
Fins. Surrey, thou Lyef.
Surrey. Dishonourable Boy;
That Lyef, fhall lie fo heavy on my Sword,
That it fhall render Vengeance, and Reuenge,
Till thou the Lyf-guer, and that Lyf, doe lyf in earth as quiet, as thy Fathers Scull.
In prove whereof, there is mine Honors pawn,
Engage it to the Trial, if thou dar’ft.

The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

Fiers. How fondly do'th thou purr a forward Horse?
If I dare eate, or drinke, or breathe, or live,
I dare meete Surry in a Wildernesse,
And spit upon him, whilst I say he Lyes,
And Lyes, and Lyes: there is my Bond of Faith,
To yee thee to my strong Corrrection.
As I intend to thrive in this new World,
Aumerle is guilty of my true Appeal.
Besides, I heard the bandit's Norfolke say,
That thou Aumerle didst lend two of thy men,
To execute the Noble Duke at Calis.
Aum: Some honest Christian trufl thou me with a Gage,
That Norfolke lyes: here do I throw downe this,
If he may be replaid, to trie his Honor.
Bull: These differences shall all reft vnder Gage,
Till Norfolke be replaid: replaid he shall be,
And (though mine Enemie) reftor'd againe
To all his Lands and Seigniories: when he's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his Tryall.
Carl: That honorable day shall ne'er be seen.
Many of North Bandit's Norfolke fought
For Iufc Christian, in glorious Christian field
Streaming the Ensigne of the Christian Cross,
Against black Pagans, Turks, and Saracen:
And tody I'd with worke of Warre, retyr'd himselfe
To Italy, and there at Venice gate
His Body to that pleasant Countries Earth,
And his pure Soule unto his Captain Chrift,
Vnder whose Colours he had fought fo long.
Bull: Why Bifhop, is Norfolke dead?
Carl: As fue as I live, my Lord.
Bull. Sweet peace conduct his sweet Soule
To the Boome of good old Abraham.
Lords Apoelants, your differences all reft vnder gage,
Till we alligne you to your days of Tryall.

Enter Torke.

Torke. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From plume-pluckt Richard, who with willing Soule
Adopts thee Heire, and his high Scepter yeilds
To the posseffion of thy Royal Hand.
Ascend his Throne, defending now from him,
And long live Henry, of that Name the Fourth.
Bull. In God's Name, He ascend the Regall Throne.
Carl: Mary, Heauen forbid.
Worth in this Royal Prefence may I speake,
Yet beft becominge me to speake the truth.
Would God, that any in this Noble Prefence
Were through Noble to be brought to light.
Of Noble Richard: then true Noblenesse would Leame him forbearance from fo foule a Wrong,
What Subiect can giue Sentence on his King?
And who fits here, that is not Richard Subiect?
Theues are not lou'd, but they are by to heare.
Although apparant guilt be feene in them:
And shall the figure of Gods Maietie,
His Captaine, Steward, Deputie eclef,
Anonyted, Crown'd, plantead many yeeres,
Be lou'd by Subiect, and inferior breathe,
And he himfelf not profent? Oh, forbidd it God,
That in a Christian Climate, Soules refin'd
Should be to heynous, black, obfcene a deed.
I speake to Subiects, and a Subiect speakes,
Stirr'd vp by Heauen, thus boldly for his King.
My Lord of Herefode here, whom you call King,
Is a foule Tryall to the noblest of Kings.
And if you Crowne him, let me prophacie,
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future Ages groan for his foule Aet.
Peace shall goe sleepe with Turkes and Infidels,
And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous Warres
Shall Kinne with Kinne, and Kinde with Kinde confound.
Disorder, Horror, Fear, and Mutinie
Shall here inhabit, and this Land be call'd
The field of Golgota, and dead mens Sculls.
Oh, if you reare this House, against this House
It will the wofull Dilution proce,
That ever fell vpon this curfed Earth.
Preuent it, refist it, and let it not be fo,
Least Child, Childs Children cry against you, Woe.
Norbe. Well haue you argu'd Sir: and for your pains,
Of Capitall Trefon we arethe you here.
My Lord of Wefminder, be it your charge,
To keepe him safely, till his day of Tryall.
May it please you, Lords, to grant the Commons Suit?
Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may furrender: so we shall procede
Without further'shation.
Torke. I will be his Conduct.

Enter Richard and Torke.

Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a King,
Before I have hooke off the Regall thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To infrinate, flatter, bowe, and bend my Knee.
Glue Sorrow lease a while, to tureme
To this submiffion. Yet I well remember
The fakers of thefe men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry, All hailie to me?
So Judas did to Christ: but he in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one, Lim in twelve thousand, none.
God faue the King: will no man say, Amen?
Am I both Priest, and Clarke? well then, Amen.
God faue the King, although I be not hee:
And yet Amen, if Heauen doe thinke him mee.
To doe what fervice, am I fent for thither?
Torke. To doe that office of thine owne good will,
Which tyred Maietie did make thee offer:
The Resignation of thy State and Crowne
To Henry Batlingbrooke.
Rich. Glue me the Crown, Here Cousin, sitze ye Crown:
Here Cousin, on this fide my Hand, on that fide thine.
Now is this Golden Crowne like a deep Well,
That owes two Buckets, filling one another,
The empiere ever dancing in the ayre.
The other downe, vnfeene, and full of Water:
That Bucket downe, and full of Tears am I,
Drinking my Griefes, whilst ye mount vp on high.
Bull. I thought you had been willing to renigne.
Rich. My Crowne I am, but fill my Griefes are mine:
You may my Glories and my State depofe,
But not my Griefes: fill am I King of thothes.
Bull. Part of your Cares you glue me with your Crowne.
Rich. Your Cares set vp, do not pluck my Cares downe.
My Care, is loafe of Care, by old Care done,
Your Care, is gaine of Care, by new Care wonne:
The Cares I glue: I have, though gien away,
They tend the Crown, set till with them they say:
"Bull. Are you contented to renigne the Crowne?"

Rich. 1.
The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

Rich. I, no, no, I: for I must nothing bee:
Therefore no, no, for I refuge to thee.
Now, mark me how I will vn doe my selfe, I gue this heauie Weight from off my Head,
And this vnwelde Scepter from my Hand,
The pride of Kingly sway from out my Heart.
With mine owne Teares I wash away my Balme,
With mine owne Hands I gue away my Crowne,
With mine owne Tongue deny my Sacred State,
With mine owne Breath release all duteous Oathes;
All Pompe and Malfaie I doe forswear:
My Mansions, Rents, Reucences, I forgue;
My Acts, Decrees, and Statutes I denie:
God pardon all Oathes that are broke to mee,
God keepe all Vowes vnbroke are made to thee.
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing grieu'd,
And thou with all pless'd, that half all aitchiu'd.
Long may't thou live in Rich'da Seat to fit,
And soone my Richard in an Earthie Pit.
God save King Henry, vn-King'd Richard Eyes,
And I haue nowe fo manye of Sunne-shine days.
What more remains?
North. No more: but that you reade
These Accallations, and these grievous Crymes,
Committed by your Perfon, and your followers,
Against the State, and Profit of this Land:
That by confedling them, the Soules of men
May deeme, that you are worthy depos'd.
Rich. Muff I doe so? and must I rauell out
My wea'd-vp follyes? Gentle Nortb'umberland,
If thy Offences were vp Record,
Would it not shame thee, in fo faire a troupe,
To reade a Leature of them? If thou would'nt,
There should't thou finde one heuyous Article,
Contayning the defoping of a King,
And cracking the stronge Warrant of an Oath,
Mark'd with a Blot, damn'd in the Booke of Heaven.
 Nay, all of you, that hand and looke vp me,
Whil'st that my wretched nece doth bat my selfe,
Though some of you, with Pilates, wash your hands,
Shewing an outward pittie: yet you Pilates
Have here deliuer'd me to my fowre Croffe,
And Water cannot wash away your foune.
North. My Lord dispatch, reade o're thefe Articles.
Rich. Mine Eyes are full of Teares, I cannot see:
And yet falt-Water blinde them not fo much,
But they can see a fort of Traitors here.
Nay, if I turne mine Eyes vpou my selfe,
I finde my selfe a Traitor with the rest:
For I have gueen here my Soules confent,
Tvndeeck the pompous Body of a King;
Made Glory bafe, a Soueraignetie, a Slave;
Proud Malfaie, a Subiect; State, a Pefiant.
North. My Lord.
Rich. No Lord of thine, thou haunt-fuiling man:
Nor, nor no mans Lord: I haue no Name, no Title;
No, not that Name was gueen me at the Font,
But 'tis vperform'd: slack the heauie day,
That I haue won'd my many Winters out,
And know not now, what Name to call my selfe.
Oh, that I were a Mockerie, King of Snow,
Standing before the Sunne of Bullingtons;
To melt my selfe away in Water-drops.
Good King great King, and yet not greatly good,
And my word be Staffed yet Longing,
Let it command a Mirror hither flatlie,
That it may flewe me what a Face I haue,
Since it is Bankrupt of his Maffeile.
North. Read o're this Paper, while I Glasse doth come.
Rich. Fiend, thou tormentes mee, ere I come to Hell.
Bull. Vrge it no more, my Lord Nortb'umberland.
North. The Commons will not then be sattysfie'd.
Rich. They shall be sattysfy'd: I lea reade enough,
When I doe fee the very Booke indeedes,
Where all my finnes are writ, and that's my selfe.
Ente one with a Glasse.
Gue me that Glasse, and therein I will reade.
No deeper wrinkles yet; hath Sorrow strucke
So many Blows vpon this Face of mine,
And made no deeper Wounds? Oh flat'tring Glasse,
Like to my followers in prosperous,
Thou do'tt beguiue me. Was this Face, the Face
That every day, vnder his House-hold Roofe, Dide keepe ten thousande men? Was this the Face,
That like the Sunne, did make beholders winke?
Is this the Face, which faue'd fo manye folowers,
That was at last out face'd by Bullingbrooke?
A brite Glasse fhine in this Face,
As brite as the Glory, is the Face,
For there it is, crac't in an hundred shiners.
Marke filent King, the Morall of this sport,
How fome my Sorrow hath defroy'd my Face.
Bull. The shadow of your Sorrow hath defroy'd
The shadow of your Face.
Rich. Say that againe.
The shadow of my Sorrow: ha, let's fee,
'Tis very true, my Grieue eyes all within,
And thefe externall manner of Lamentes,
Are meere shadowes, to the vnfeeone Grieue,
That fwell with silence in the tortur'd Soule.
There lyes the Subflance: and I thank thee King
For thy great boundlesse, that not onely gue'ke
Me caufe to wayle, but teacheth me the way
How to lament the caufe. I begge one Boone,
And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtaine it?
Bull. Name it, faire Cousin.
Rich. Fare Cousin! I am greater then a King:
For when I was a King, my flatterers
Were then but fubiebt; being now a fubiebt,
I haue a King here to my flatterer:
Being fo great, I have no neede to begge.
Bull. Ye ask.
Rich. And shall I haue?
Bull. You shall.
Rich. Then giue me leave to goe.
Bull. Whither?
Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your fights,
Bull. Go, giue some of you, convey him to the Tower.
Rich. Oh good: convey: Conuers are you all,
That rife thus nimbly by a true Kings fall.
Bull. On Wednesday next, we solemnly fet downe
Our Coronation: Lords, prepare your felues.
Exeunt.
Abbot. A wofall Pageant we have beheld.
Carl. The Woes to come, the Children yet vnborne,
Shall feele this day as sharpe to them as Thorne.
Asm. You holy Clergie-men, is there no Plot
To rid the Realme of this pernicious Blot.
Abbot. Before I freely speake my minde herein,
You shall not wordly thinges take the Sacraments,
To bury mine intents, but alfo to effeet

The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

What ever I shall happen to deuife. I see your Browes are full of Decent content, Your Heart of Sorrow, and your Eyes of Teares. Come home with me to Supper, I'll lay a Plot Shall shew vs all a merry day. ?

\textit{Exeunt.}

\textit{Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.}

\textit{Enter Queen and Ladies.}

\textit{Qu.} This way the King will come; this is the way To Julian Caesars ill-crested Tower: To whose flint Bofome, my condemned Lord Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Ballingbrooke. Here let vs rife, if this rebellious Earth Have any ruffling true Kings Queenes. \textit{Enter Rich., and Guards.}

But lest, but fee, or rather doe not see, My faire Rofe wither; yet looke vp; behold, That you in pittye may dissolve to dew, And with him fresh againe with true, luye Teares, Ah thou, the Modell where old Troy did fland, Thou Mappe of Honor, thou King Richarcl's Tombe, And not King Richard; thou most beauituous Inne, Why shoud hard-favor'd Griefe be lodg'd in thee, When Triumph is become an Ale-houfe Guett.\textit{Rich.} Lyon not with griefs, faire Woman, do not see To make my end too sudden: leane good Souls, To think our former State a hammock Dreame, From which awak'd, the truth of what we are, Shewes vs but this, I am wronge Brother(Sweet) To grim Necessity; and fee and I Will keepe a League till Death. High thee to France, And Clyofter thee in some Religious Houfe: Our holy lyes must winne a new World of Crowne, Which our prophane hours here haue broken downe.

\textit{Qu.} What is my Richarcl both in shape and minde Transformed? and weakned? Hath Ballingbrooke Depo'd thine Intellect? hath he beene in thy Heart? The Lyon dying, througtheth forth his Paw, And wounds the Earth,if nothing else,with rage To be o're-pow'd? and wilt thou, Popull, take thy Correction mildly, kiffe the Robbe, And fawe on Rage with base Humiltie, Which art a Lyon, and a King of Beasts? \textit{Rich.} A King of Beasts indeed! if oughht but Beasts, I had beene full a happy King of Men.

\textit{Coes(sometime Queen) prepare thee hence for France: Thinke I am dead, and that euen here thou tak'st, As from my Death-bed, my laft living leaque. In Winters tedious Nights fit by the fire With good olde folkes, and let them tell thee Tales Of woeful Ages, long age betide: And see thou this good night, to quite their griefs, Tell thou the lamentable fall of me, And fend the hearers weeping to their Beds: For why? the fenceleffe Brans ids fypathize The heauie accent of thy mouing Tongue, And in compation, wepe the fire out: And fome will mourne in athes, fome coale-black, For the depofing of a rightfull King. \textit{Enter Northumberland.}

\textit{North.} My Lord, the mind of Ballingbrooke is chang'd.\textit{You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower. And Madame, there is order thus for you: With all swift speed, you must away to France.} \textit{Rich.} Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithall The mounting Ballingbrooke ascends my Throne, The time shall not be many hours of age, More then it were foule inne, gathering head, Shall brake into corruption thou shalt thinke, Though he shield the Realmes, and glue thee halfe, It is too little, helping him to all: He shall thinke, that thou which know'st the way To plant vrightfull Kings, wilt know againe, Being ne're so little vrg'd another way, To pluck him headlong from the usurped Throne. The Loe of wicked friends converts to Feare; That Feare, to Hate; and Hate turns one, or both, To worthe Dange, and deferred Death.

\textit{North.} My guilt be on my Head, and there an end: Take Leafe, and part, for you must part withth. \textit{Rich.} Doubly discorde(k bad men) ye violate A two-fold Marriage; twist my Crowne, and me, And then betwixt me, and my married Wife. Let me va-kiffe the Oath twist thee, and me; And yet not fo, for with a Kiffe twas made. Part vs, \textit{Northumberland,} I towards the North, Where shivering Cold and Sickneffe pines the Clyme: My Queen to France: from whence, set forth in pompe, She came adorned hithe like sweet May; Sent back like Hollowoa, or short it of day, \textit{Qu.} And must we be divided? must we part? \textit{Rich.} I hand from hand( my Loue) and heart fro heart. \textit{Qu.} Banish vs both, and fend the King with me. \textit{North.} That were some Loue, but little Pollicy. \textit{Qu.} Then whither he goes, theither let me goe. \textit{Rich.} So two together weeping, make one Woe. Wepe thou for me in France, I for thee heere: Better fare off, then neere, he're the neere, Goe, count thy Way with Sighes, I mine with Grownes. \textit{Qu.} So longest Way shall haue the longest Moanes. \textit{Rich.} Twice for one Hepe lie groane, of Way being short, And peace the Way out with a heauie heart. Come, come, in wooling Sorrow let's be briefs, Since wadding it, there is fuch length in Griefe: One Kiffe shall flop our mouths, and dumblly part: Thus giue I mine, and thus take I thy heart. \textit{Qu.} Give me mine owne againe, were no good part, To take on me to keepes, and kill the heart. So, now I have mine owne againe, be gone, That I may frise to kill it with a groane. \textit{Rich.} We make Woe wanton with this fond delay: Once more adieu, the rest, let Sorrow say.

\textit{Scena Secunda.}

\textit{Enter Torky, and the Dukeflow.}

\textit{Duch.} My Lord, you told me you would tell the rest, When weeping made you brake the story off, Of our two Cousins coming into London. \textit{Torky.} Where did I leave? \textit{Duch.} At that fud floppes, my Lord, Where rude mif-gourn'd hands, from Windowes tops, Threw dust and rubbiffh on King Richard head.

\textit{Enter. Then d 3 Torky.}
Torke. Then, as I said, the Duke, great Ballingbrooke, Mounted upon a hot and ferile Steed,
Which as aspiring Rider seem'd to know,
With flow, but rattle pace, kept on his course:
While all tongues cried, God save thee Ballingbrooke.
You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy lookers of yong and old,
Through Caffemants dared their defiring eyes
Upon his vifage: and that all the walle,
With painted Imagery had said at once,
Iefo preferre thee, welcom Ballingbrooke.
Whil'st he, from one fide to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower then his proud Steeds necke,
Befpoke them thus: I thank ye Countrimen:
And thus fill doing, thus he paft along.

Dutch. Alas poore Richard, where rides he the whilfe?

Torke. As in a Theatre, when the eyes of men
After a well grac'd Actor leaves the Stage,
Are idely bent on that which enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Even fo, or with much more contempt, mens eyes
Did fcowe on Richard: no man cried, God save him:
No loyfull tongue guae him his welcome home,
But dut was throwne upon his Sacred head,
Which with fuch gentle forrow he fwoke off,
His face fill combating with tears and smiles
(The bagges of his greefe and patience)
That had not God (for fome strong purpofe) feald'd
The hearts of men, they muft perforce have melted,
And Barbarifme it felle haue pittied him.
But heauen hath a hand in thefe events,
To whole high will we bound our calme contents.
To Ballingbrooke, are we fwores Subiecks now,
Whofe State, and Honor, I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Dut. Here comes my fonne Aumerle.

Tor. Aumerle that was,
But that is loft, for being Richards Friend.
And Maim, you muft call him Rutland now:
I am in Parliament pledge for his truth,
And lafitting festlie to the new-made King.

Dut. Welcome my fonne: who are the Violets now,
That drew the greenep lap of the new-come Springe?

Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not,
God knowes, I had as lief he be none, as one.

Torke. Well, bear we well in this new-spring of time
Leaff you be cropt before you come to prime.
What news from Oxford? Hold thofe Juifs & Triumphs?
Aum. For ought I know my Lord, they do.

Torke. You will be there I know.

Aum. If God preuent not, I purpofe fo.

Tor. What Scarle is that that hangs without thy bofom?
Yes, look't thou pale? Let me fee the Writing.

Aum. My Lord, 'tis nothing.

Torke. No matter then who fees it, I will be fatisfi'd, let me fee the Writing.

Aum. I do befeech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small confequence,
Which for fome reafons I would not haue feene.

Torke. Which for fome reafons fir, I mean to fee:
I fear, I fear.

Dut. What should you fear?
'Tis nothing but fonne bond, that he is enter'd into
For gay apparell, againft the Triumph.

Torke. Bound to himfelfe? What doth he with a Bond
That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool.
The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

For there (they say) he daily doth frequent,
With unrefrained looks Companions,
Euen fuch (they say) as stand in narrow Lanes,
And rob our Watch, and beate our passengers,
Which he, yong wanton, and effeminste Boy
Takes on the point of Honor, to support
So disolute a crew.

Per. My Lord, some two days since I saw the Prince,
And told him of those Triumphes held at Oxford.

But. And what said the Gallant?

Per. His anfwer was: he would vnto the Stewes,
And from the commone creature placce a Gloue
And weare it as a fauour, and with that
He vnborhe the luffie Challenger.

But. As disolute as deep rate, yet through both,
I see some sparkes of better hope: which elder days
May haply bring forth. But who cometh here?

Enter Anon.e.

Anon. Where is the King?

But. What means our Cofin, that hee fares
And looks so wildly?

Anon. God fave your Grace. I do befeech your Maiefty
To have some conference with your Grace alone.

But. Withdraw your felues, and leave vs here alone:
What is the matter with our Cofin now?

Anon. For ever may my knees grow to the earth,
My tongue cleaue to my rooffe within my mouth,
Vnleffe a Parson, ere I rife, or speake.

But. Intended, or committed was this fault?
If on the first, so heynous ere it bee,
To win thy after love, I pardon thee.

Anon. Then gue me leave, that I may turne the key,
That no man enter, till my tale be done.

But. Haue thy defire.

Ter. My Liege beware, looke to thy selfe,
Thou haft a Traitor in thy prefence there.

But. Villains, Ile make thee faye.

Anon. Stay thy revengefull hand, thou haft no caufe to feare.

Ter. Open the doore, secure foole-hardy King:
Shall I for looe fpeake treafe to thy face?
Open the doore, or I will break it open.

Enter Terke.

But. What is the matter (Vnuke) speake, recover breath,
Tell vs how neere is danger,
That we may arme vs to encounter it.

Ter. Perufe this writing here, and thou fhalt know
The reafon that my haffe forbids me fhow.

Anon. Remember as thou read it, thy promife paft:
I do reprent me, read not my name there,
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

Ter. It was (villaine) ere thy hand did fet it downe.
I tore it from the Trafoners bofome, King.
Feare, and not Love, begetts his penitence;
Forget to pity him, lefte thy pity proue
A Serpent, that will fling thee to the heart.

But. Oh heinous, foere, and bold Conspiracie,
O loyall Father of a treacherous Sonne:
Thou feere, immaculate, and filler fountain,
From whence this fireame, through muddy paffage
 Hath had his current, and defil'd himfelfe.
Thy overfowre of good, convertes to bad,
And thy abundant goodneffe fhall excufe
This deadly blot, in thy dilligence fonde.

Terke. So fhall my Vrune be his Vices bred,
And he fhall fpend mine Honour, with his Shame;
As thrieffe Sonnes, their scraping Fathers Gold.
Mine honor liues, when his difhonor dies,
Or my fhame's life, in his difhonor liues:
Thou kill'd me in his life, giving him breath,
The Traitor liues, the true man's put to death.

Dutcheffe within.

Dut. What hath (my Liege) for heavens fake let me in.

But. What thrill-voic'd Supplian, makes this eager cry?

Dut. A woman, and thine Aunt (great King) 'tis I.
Speake with me, pity me, open the dore,
A Begger beggs, that never begg'd before.

But. Our Scene is alter'd from a furious thing,
And now chang'd to the Begger, and the King.
My dangerous Cofin, let your Mother in,
I know he's come, to pray for your foule fin.

Terke. If thou do pardon, whofeouer pray,
More finnes for this forlorneness, together may.
This feller'd loynt cut off, the reft reft found,
This let alone, will all the reft confound.

Enter Dutcheffe.

Dut. O King, beleev not this hard-hearted man,
Loue, louing not it felte, none other can.

Ter. Thou fran tile woman, what doft thou make here,
Shall thy old dugges, on more a Traitor reare?

Dut. Sweet Yorke be patient, heare me gentle Liege.

But. Rife vp good Aunt.

Dut. Not yet, I thee befeech.
For euer will I kneele vpun my knees,
And neuer fee day, that the happy feet,
Till thou glie joy: untill thou bid me joy.
By pardoning Rutland, my tranfgreffing Boy.

Anon. Vnto my mothers prayres, I bend my knee.

Terke. Against them both, my true loynts bended be,

Dut. Pleade be in earne: looke vpun his Face,
His eyes do drop no teares: his prayres are in left:
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breef.
He prayes but faintly, and would be dende,
We pray with heart, and foules, and all befide:
His weare loynts would gladly rife, I know,
Our knees fhall kneele, till to the ground they grow:
His prayres are full of filfe hypocrife,
Ours of true zeal, and deep integritie:
Our prayres do out-pray his, then let them haue
That mercy, which true prayres ought to haue.

But. Good Aunt fhind vp.

Dut. Nay, do not fay fhind vp.
But Pardon firft, and afterwards fhand vp.
And if I were thine Nurfe, thy tongue to teach,
Pardon should be the firft word of thy speach.
I never long'd to hear a word till now:
Say Pardon (King,) let pitty teach thee how.
The word is short: but not fo short as sweet,
No word like Pardon, for Kings mouth's to meeet.

Terke. Speake it in French (King,) say Pardon ne may.

Dut. Doth thou teach pardon, Pardon to defroy?
Ah my lowre husband, my hard-hearted Lord,
That fet's the word it felte, againft the word.

Speake Pardon, as 'tis currant in our Land,
The chopping French we do not vnderfand.
Thine eye begins to speake, fet thy tongue there,
Or in thy pitres heart, plant thou thine care,
That hearing how our plaints and prayres do pearce,
Pitty may moue thee, Pardon to reheare.

But. Good Aunt, fhind vp.

Dut. I do not fay to fhand,
Pardon is all the fute I have in hand.

Bul.

147
The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

Bul. I pardon him, as heaven shall pardon mee.

Dar. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee:

Yet am I fickle for fear: Scape it again,

Twice saying Pardon, doth not pardon twaine,

But makes one pardon strong.

Bul. I pardon him with all my hart.

Dar. A God on earth thou art.

Bul. But for our truthy brother-in-law, the Abbot,

With all the rest of that conforted crew,

Destruction straight shall dogge them at the heels:

Good Vncle helpe to order feuernall powres

To Oxford, or where ere these Traitors are:

They shall not live within this world I Sware,

But I will have them, if I once know where.

Vncle farewell, and Cofn adieu!

Your mother well hath praised, and proue you true.

Dar. Come my old son, I pray heauen make thee new.

Enter Exton and Servants.

Exon. Didst thou not marke the King what words hee spake?

Have I no friend will rid me of this lying feare?

Was it not so?

Ser. Those were his very words.

Ex. Have I no Friend? (quoth he) he spake it twice,

And vrg'd it twice together, did he not?

Ser. He did.

Ex. And speaking it, he wifly look'd on me,

As who should say, I would not be the man

That would divorce this terror from my heart,

Meaning the King at Pomfret: Come, let's goe;

I am the Kings Friend, and will rid his Foe.

Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Richard.

Rich. I have bin studying, how to compare

This Prisone where I live, into the World:

And for because the world is populous,

And here is not a Creature, but my selfe,

I cannot do it: yet lye hammer't out.

My Braine, lie proue the Female to my Soule,

My Soule, the Father: and these two beget

A generation of fill breeding Thoughts;

And these same Thoughts, people this Little World

In honors, like the people of this world,

For no thought is contented. The better for,

As thoughts of things Divine, are intermixt

With wryttes, and do se the Faith it selfe

Against the Faiths thus Come little ones: & then again,

It is as hard to come, as for a Camel

To thred the poterne of a Needles eye.

Thoughts tending to Ambition, they do plot

Vnlikely wonders; how these value weak sails

May teare a passage through the Flinty ribbes

Of this hard world, my ragged prison walle:

And for they cannot, dye in their owne pride.

Thoughts tending to Consent, flatter themselues,

That they are not the Sift of Fortunes flames,

Nor shall not be the last. Like silly Beggars,

Who sitting in the Stockes, refuse their shame

That many have, and others must fit there;

And in this Thought, they finde a kind of cafe,

Bearing their owne misfortune on the backe

GF such as have before indur'd the like.

Thus play I in one Prisone, many people,

And none contented. Sometimes am I King;

Then Trefalon makes me with my selfe a Beggar,

And I lo Amen. Then crying penurie,

Perfumes me, I was better when a King:

Then am I King's againe; and by and by,

Thinke that I am vn-King'd by Ballingbrooke,

And strait am nothing. But what ere I am,

Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,

With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd

With being nothing. Musicke do I heare?

Ha, ha! keepe time: How lowre sweet Musick is,

When Time is broke, and no Proportion kept?

So is it in the Musick of mens liues:

And here he have I the disappointment of,

To heare time broke in a disorder'd thing:

But for the Concord of my State and Time,

Had not an ear to heare my true Time broke.

I wished Time, and now doth Time waife me:

For now hath Time made me his numbring clocke;

My Thoughts, are minutes; and with Sighes they lare,

Their watches on unto mine eyes, the outward Watch,

Where to my finger, like a Dials point,

Is pointing still, in cleaning them from teares.

Now fir, the found that tells that houre it is,

Are clarious greanes, that strike vpon my heart,

Which is the bell: I so Sighes, and Teares, and Grones.

Shew Minutes, Hours, and Times: but my Time

Runs poasing on, in Ballingbrooke proud joy,

While I stand fooling heere, his iacke o'th'Clocke.

This Musicke makes me, let it found no more,

For though it have holpe madmen to their wits,

In me it seemes, it will make wife-men mad:

Yet beffling on his heart that gues it me;

For 'tis a signe of louse, and louse to Richard,

Is a strange Brooch, in this all-hating world.

Enter Groome.

Groo. Halle Royall Prince.

Rich. Thankes Nobel Peer,

The cheapeft of vs, is ten grostes too deare.

What art thou? and how com'th thou hither?

Where no man euer comes, but that fid dogge

That brings me food, to make misfortune lye?

Groo. I am a Groome Groome of the Stable (King)

When thou wert Kingswho travelling towards Yorke,

With much ado, at length have gotten leaue

To looke vpon my (sometimes Royall) masters face.

O how it yernd my heart, when I beheld

In London streets, that Coronation day,

When Ballingbrooke rode on Roane Barbary,

That horfe, that thou so often haft befrid,

That horfe, that I so carefully have dret,

Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me gentle Friend,

How went he vnder him?

Groo. So proudly, as if he had disdained the ground.

Rich. So proud, that Ballingbrooke was on his backe;

That lade hath eate bread from my Royall hand,

This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.

Would he not humble? Would he not fall downe

(Since Pride must have a fall) and breake the necke

Of that proud man, that did vrflpe his backe?

Forgiveustee horshe: Why do I raste on thee,

Since thou created to be aw'd by man

Was't borne to beare? I was not made a horfe,

And
And yet I bear a burthen like an Afe,
Spur-gall'd, and tyed by issuing Bullingbrook.

Enter Keeper with a Difj.
Keep. Fellow, give place, here is no longer stay.
Ricb. If thou lose me, 'tis time thou wert not away.

Goss. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say.

Keep. My Lord, wilt please you to fall too?
Ricb. Taste of it first, as thou wert wont to doo.
Keep. My Lord I dare not; Sir Piers of Exton,
Who lately came from the King, commands the contrary.
Ricb. The duel take Henry of Lancaster, and thee; patience is flate, and I am weary of it.

Keep. Help, help, help.

Enter Exton and Servants.
Ex. How now? what means Death in this rude affair?
Villaine, thine owne hand yields thy deats instrumcnt,
Go thou and fill another roome in hell.

Exton strikes him downe.

That hand shall burne in neuer-quenching fire,
That flaggers thus my perfon. Exton, thy fierce hand,
Hath with the Kings blood, flain'th the Kings own land.
Mount, mount my soule, thy fate is vp on high,
Whil'st my grosse feth flakes downward, here to dye.

Exton. As full of Valor, as of Royall blood,
Both have I spilt: Oh would the deed were good.
For now the duell, that told me I did well,
Says, that this deed is chronicled in hell.
This dead King to the living King I beare,
Take hence the refl, and give them buriall here.

Ex. Finis.

Scena Quinta.

Flourish. Enter Bullingbrook, York, with other Lords & attendants.

Bul. Kinde Vnkle Yorke, the latest newes we heare,
Is that the Rebels have confum'd with fire
Our Towne of Gloucester in Gloucheshire,
But whether they be tane or slaine, we heare not.

Enter Northumberland.

Welcome my Lord: What is the newes?
Nor. First to thy Sacred State, with I all happinesse:
The next newes is, I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent.

The manner of their taking may appeare
At large discoursed in this paper here.

Bul. We thank thee gentle Percy for thy paines,
And to thy worth shall add right worthy gaine.

Enter Fif-waters.

Fif. My Lord, I have from Oxford sent to London,
The heads of Erocest, and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous comforted Traitors,
That fought at Oxford, thy dire ouerthrow.

Bul. Thy paines Fittwater shall not be forgot,
Right Noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter Percy and Carlisle.

Per. The grand Conspirator, Abbot of Wextminster,
With clog of Conscience, and foure Melancholly,
Hath yeelded wp his body to the grave:
But heere is Carlisle, living to abide
Thy Kingly doome, and tentencie of his pride.

Bul. Carlisle, this is your doome:
Choice out some secret place, some reuerend roome
More then thou haft, and with it joy thy life:
So as thou liist in peace, dye free from strife:
For though mine enemy, thou haft ever borne,
High sparkes of Honor in thee have I feene.

Enter Exton with a Coffin.

Exton. Great King, within this Coffin I present
Thy buried flare. Herein all breathlesse lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies
Richard of Bordeaux, by me bither brought.

Bul. Exton, I thinke thee not, for thou haft wrought
A deede of Slaughter, with thy fatall hand,
Upon my head, and all this famous Land.
Ex. From your owne mouth my Lord, did I this deed.

Bul. They love not payson, that do payson neede,
Nor do I thee: though I did with him dead,
I hate the Martherer, lose him murthered.
The guilt of confience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor Princely favour,
With Calm go wander through the shade of night,
And never flour thy head by day, nor light.
Lords, I protest my soule is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkles me, to make me grow.
Come mourne with me, for that I do lament,
And put on fallen Blacke incontinence;
I he make a voyage to the Holy-land.
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.
March sadly after, grace my mourning heere,
In weeping after this untimely Beere.

Exeunt.
The First Part of Henry the Fourth, with the Life and Death of HENRY Sirnamed HOTSPURRE.

ACTUS PRIMUS. SCENA PRIMA.

Enter the King, Lord John of Lancaster, Earl of Westmoreland, with others.

King.

O shaken as we are, to war with care,
And breath shortwinded accents of new broils
To be commenced in Stronds farre remote:
No more the thrifty entrance of this Sile,
Shall daube her lips with her owne childrens blood:
No more shall trenching Warre channell her fields,
Nor bruife her Flowrets with the Armed hooves
Of bohile pace. Thofe oppo'd eyes,
Which like the Meteors of a troubled Heaven,
All of one Nature, of one Subtance bred,
Did lately meete in the interfine shockes,
And furious close of ciuill Butchery,
Shall now in mutuall well-believing ranks
March all one way, and be no more oppo'd
Against Acquaintance, Kindred, and Allies.
The edge of Warre, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his Master. Therefore Friends,
As farre as to the Sepulchre of Christ,
Whofe Souldier now under whole bleffed Croffe
We are imprefled and ingag'd to fight,
Forthwith a power of Englifh shall we leuie,
Whofe arms were moulded in their Mothers wombes,
To chace thofe Pagans in thofe holy Fields,
Que a whole Acres walk'd thofe bleffed feet.
Which fouteene hundred years ago were nail'd
For our advantage on the better Croffe,
But this our purpoze is a twelvemonth old,
And bootleffe 'tis to tell you we will go;
Therefore we meete not now. Then let me heare
Of you my gentle Cousin Westmoreland,
What yeftereyforth our Counsell did decree,
In forwarding this deere expedience.

Weft. My Liege: This haffe was hot in question,
And many limits of the Charge fet downe
But yefternight: when all atwarth there came
A Poet from Wales, loaden with heavy Newes;
Whofe worth was, That the Noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight
Against the irregular and wilde Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,
And a thousand of his people butchered.

Upon whose dead corpes there was such misufe,
Such beatly, flamelle transformation,
By thofe Welshwomen done, as may not be (Without much shame) re-told or spoken of.

King. It formes then, that the tiding of this broil,
Brake off our businesse for the Holy land.

Weft. This match with other like, my gracious Lord,
Farre more vnueuen and vnwelcome Newses
Came from the North, and thus it did report:
On Holy-roode day, the gallant Hotspurre there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approoued Scots,
At Holmeden met, where they did spend
A fad and bloody house:
As by discharge of their Artillerie,
And shape of likely-hood the newes was told:
For he that brought them, in the very heat:
And pride of their contention, did take horse,
Vncertaine of the issue any way.

King. Here is a deere and true induftrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his Horfe,
Strain'd with the variation of each foyle,
Bewerted that Holmeden, and this Seat of ours:
And he hath brought us smooth and welcomes newes.
The Earle of Douglas is difcomfited,
Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty Knights
Balk'd in their owne blood did Sir Walter fee.

On Holmedon Plains. Of Pecloner, Hotspurre tooke
Meredith Earle of Fife, and eldick fomases
To beaten Douglas, and the Earle of Ahtoll,
Of Marrue, Angus, and Monteith.

And is not this an honourable fpoyle?
A gallant prize? Ha Colin, is it not? Infaith it is.

Weft. A Conqueft for a Prince to boaff of.

King. Yea, there thou mak't me sad, & mak't me sin,
In envy, that my Lord Northumberland
Should be the Father of fo blefe a Sonne:
A Sonne, who is the Theme of Honors tongue;
Among't a Gracie, the very fraughtlef Plant,
Who is fweet Fortunes Minion, and her Pride:
Whill I by looking on the praffe of him,
See Ryot and Dihonor faine the brow
Of my yong Harry. O that it could be prou'd,
That fome Night-tripping-Faiery, had exchang'd
In Cradle-clothes, our Children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet:

The
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Then would I have his Harry, and he mine:
But let him from my thoughts. What think ye Coze
Of this young Pericles pride? The Prisoners
Which in this adventure hath surpris'd,
To his owne vfe he keepes, and sends me word
I shall have none but Farkhade Earle of Fife.

Pfal. This is his Vackles teaching, This is Worceler
Malevolent to you in all Aspects;
Which makes him proue himselfe, and blitze vp
The craft of Youth against your Dignity.

King. But I have sent for him to answer this:
And for this cause a while we muft neglect
Our holy purpofe to Jerusalem.

Cofin, on Wednesday next, our Councell we will hold
At Windsor, and fo informe the Lords:
But come your felfe with speed to vs againe,
For more is to be faid, and to be done,
Then out of anger can be vterted.

Pfal. I will my Liege.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Henry Prince of Wales, Sir Iohn Falstaff, and Poets.

Pfal. Now Hal, what time of day is it Lad?

Prince. Thou art fo fat-witted with drinking of old Sacke, and vbuttoning thee after Supper, and sleeping vpon Benches in the afternoon, that thou haft forgotten to demand that truely, which thou wooldst truly know.

What a dulle haft thou to do with the time of the day? vnliffe hours were cups of Sacke, and minutes Capons, and clockes the tongues of Bawdes, and dialls the ligues of Leaping-houses, and the bleffed Sunne himfelfe a faire hot Wench in Flame-colored Taffita; I fee no reafon, why thou shouldest fee fo superfluous, to demand the time of the day.

Pfal. Indeed you come neere me now Hal, for we that take Purfes, go by the Moone and seven Starres, and not by Phsebus hie, that wandring Knight fo faire. And I prythee sweet Wagge, when thou art King, as God faue thy Grace, Matefey I shoulde fay, for Grace thou wilt have none.

Prlm. What, none?

Pfal. Hal, I faie no more as will ferue to be Prologue to an Eggge and Butter.

Prlm. Well, then come roundly.

Pfal. Marry then, sweet Wagge, when thou art King, let not vs that are Squires of the Nightes boole, bee call'd Theues of the Doyes beautie. Let vs be Dianas Forefitters, Gentlemen of the Shade, Minions of the Moone; and let men fay, we be men of good Government, being governed as the Sea is, by our noble and chief mimics the Moone, vnder whole countenance we fleafe.

Prlm. Thou fay'st well, and it holds well too for the fortune of vs that are the Moones men, doeth ebe and flow like the Sea, being governed as the Sea is, by the Moone: as for proofs. Now a Purge of Gold most refolutely snatch'd on Monday night, and most diffolutely spent on Tuesday Morning; got with swearing, Lay by: and spent with crying, Bring in: now in as low an ebe as the foot of the Ladder, and by and by as high a flow as the ridge of the Gallowes.

Fal. Thou fay't true Lad: and is not my Hotteffe of the Tauerne a moft sweet Wench?

Prlm. As is the hony, my old Led of the Castle: and is not a BuffeJerkin a moft sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now? how now mad Wagge? What in thy quips and thy quiddities? What a plague haue I to doe with a Buffalo-Jerkin?

Prlm. Why, what a poxe haue I to doe with my Ho- tefse of the Tauerne?

Fal. Well, thou haft cal'd her to a reck'ning many a time and oft.

Prlm. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No, I cleve thee thy due, thou haft paid al there.

Prlm. Yea and elsewhere, fo faire as my Coine would ftrech, and where it would not, I haue ve'd my credit.

Fal. Yea, and fo ve'd it, that were it here apparent, that thou art Heire apparent. But I prythee sweet Wagge, shall there be Gallowes flanding in England when thou art King? and resolution thus fobb'd as it is, with the ruffe curle of old Father Anticke the Law? Doe not thou when thou art a King, hang a Theefe.

Prlm. No, thou haft.

Fal. Shall I O rare! Ile be a braue Judge.

Prlm. Thou judg'st falfe already. I meane, thou haft haue the hanging of the Theeues, and fo become a rare Hangman.

Fal. Well Hal, well: and in some fort it jumps with my humour, as well as wailing in the Court, I can tell you.

Prlm. For obtaining of foules?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of soules, whereof the Hangman hath no leane Wardrobe. I am as Melancholly as a Gyb-Cat, or a lugg'd Bear.

Prlm. Or an old Lyon, or a Louers Lute.

Fal. Yea, or the Drone of a Lincolnshire Bagpipe.

Prlm. What fay't thou to a Hare, or the Melancholly of Moore-Ditch?

Fal. Thou haft the moft unfavourable smiles, and art indeed the moft comparative rascal left sweet yong Prince. But Hal, I prythee trouble me no more with vanity, I wold thou and I knew, where a Commodity of good names were to be bought: an old Lord of the Councell rated me the other day in the street about you for; but I mark'd him not; yet hee talk'd very wide, but I regarded him not, and yet he talk'd very wide, and I regarded him not, and yet he talkt widely, and in the street too.

Prlm. Thou dost well: for no man regards it.

Fal. O, thou haft damnable iteration, and art indee def able to corrupt a Saint. Thou haft done much harme vs to me Hal, God forgive thee for it. Before I knew thee Hal, I knew nothing: and now I am (if a man hold speake truly) little better then one of the wicked. I muft glowe ouer this life, and I will glowe ouer: and I do not, I am a Villaine. Ile be damn'd for neuer a Kings sonne in Christendome.

Prlm. Where shall we take a purfe to morrow, Jacke?

Fal. Where thou wilt Lad, Ile make one: and I doe not, call me Villaine, and baffe me.

Prlm. I fee a good amendment of life in thee: From Preving, to Purdue-taking.

Fal. Why Hal, tis my Vocation Hal! 'Tis no sin for a man to labour in his Vocation.

Poets. Now shall we know if Gads hill have set a Watch. O, if men were to be fayed by merit, what hole in Hell were hot enough for him? This is the moft omnipotent Villainne, that euer cryed, Stand, to a true man.

Prlm. Good morrow Ned, Peine.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Poyns. Good morrow sweet Hal. What faires Monsieur Remorse? What fayes Sir John Sacke and Sugar: Jacke? How agrees the Dicuell and thee thy Soule, that thou soldest him on Good-Friday last, for a Cup of Madera, and a cold Capons legge?

Prin. Sir John stands to his word, the dicuell shall have his bargaine, for he was never yet a Breacher of Proverbs: He will give the dicuell to due.

Pom. Then art thou damn'd for keeping thy word with the dicuell.

Prin. Elfe he had damn'd for cozening the dicuell.

Pom. But my Lady, my Lady, to morrow morning, by foure a clocke early at Gads hill, there are Pilgrimes going to Canterbury with rich Offerings, and Traders ri Ding Poynes.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou canst not of the blood-royall, if thou darst not stand for ten shilling.

Prin. Well then, once in my days Ile be a mad-cap.

Fal. Why, that's well faile.

Prin. Well, come what will, Ile tarrie at home.

Fal. Ile be a Traitor then, when thou art King.

Prin. I care not.

Pom. Sir John, I pray thee leave the Prince & me alone, I will lay him downe such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, malft thou have the Spirit of perfwasion; and he the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest, may move; and what he hears be beleived, that the true Prince, may (for recreation fake) prove a false theefe; for the poore abuses of the time, want countenance. Farwel, you shall finde me in Eastcheape.

Prin. Farewel the latter Spring. Farewell Ahollowen Summer.

Pom. Now, my good sweet Hony Lord, ride with vs to morrow. I have a left to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falsfiggs, Harvey, Raffill, and Gadi-hill, shall robbe thefe men that wee have already way-laid, your felfe and I, wil not be there; and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

Prin. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Pom. Why, we wil fet forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to faile; and then will they adventure vpoun the exploit themselves, which they shall have no fooner achieveed, but we'll fet vpoun them.

Prin. I, but this like that they will know vs by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment to be our felues.

Pom. Tut our horses they shall not fee, Ile tye them in the wood, our wizards wee wilt change after wee leue them; and firrath, I have Ceses of Buckram for the nonce, to immanke our noted outward garments.

Prin. But I doubt they will be too hard for vs.

Pom. Well, for two of them, I know them to bee as true bred Cawards as ever turn'd backes, and for the third if he fight longer then he fesse reaon, Ile forweare Armes.

The verty of this left will be, the incomprehensible fires that this fat Rogue will tell vs, when we meete at Supper, how thirty at leafe he fought with, what Wardes, what blowes, what extremities he endur'd, and in the reprooef of this, byes the left.

Prin. Well, Ile goe with thee, provide vs all things necessarie, and meeete to morrow night in Eaftcheape, there Ile fup. Farewell.

Pom. Farewell, my Lord. Exit Pointa

Enter the King, Northumberland, Warwick, Hertfharre, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King. My blood hath beene too cold and temperate, Vnapt to threare at these dignities, And you have found me; for accordingly, You tread upon my patience; But be free, I will from henceforth rather be my Selfe, Mighty, and to be fard, then my condition Which hath beene smooth as Oyle, soft as young Downe, And therefore loft that Title of respect, Which the proud foule ne're pays, but to the proud.

Wor. Our house (my Soueraine Liege) little defires The fecourge of greatnesse to be vfed on it, And that fame greatnesse too, which our owne hands Have holpe to make it pory.

Nor. My Lord.

King. Worcester gethe gone i for I do fee Danger and disobedience in thine eye. O fir, your presence is too bold and preemptory, And Maltie might never yet endure The moody Frontier of a servent brow, You have good leaue to leaue vs. When we need Your vie and counsell, we shall fend for you. You were about to speake.

Nor. Yes, my good Lord.

Tho:
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

51

Those Prisoners in your Highness demanded,
Which Harry Percy heare at Holmeden tooke,
Were (as he fayes) not with fuch strength denied
As was deliuer'd to your Maiesty:
Who either through enuy, or milifion,
Was guilty of this fault; and not my Sonne.

Hot. My Liege, I did deny no Prisoners.
But, I remember when the fight was done,
When I was dry with Rage, and extreme Toyle,
Breathlesse, and Faint, leaning upon my Sword,
Came there a certaine Lord, next and trimly drest;
Freh as a Bride-groome, and his Chich new reapt,
Shew'd like a flobble Land at Haruelt-home.
He was perfume like a Milliner,
And 'twixt his Finger and his Thumble, he held
A Pounce-box ; which ever and anon
He gave his Nofe, and took't away againe:
Who therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in Snuffe: And till he fin'd it and talk'd:
And as the Souliers bare dead bodies by,
He call'd them vntaught, and vnder meane manners,
To bring a flowersly vnhandome Coare
Betwixt the Winde, and his Nobility.
With many Holiday and Lady tearme
He question'd me: Among the rett, demanded
My Prisoners, in your Maiesties behalfe.
I then, all-smarting, with my wounds being cold,
(To be fo peftered with a Popingsay)
Out of myGREECE, and my Impatience,
Anwier'd (neglicingly) I know not what,
He should, or should not: For he made me mad,
To fee him flime fo briske, and smell fo sweet,
And talke fo like a Waiting-Gentlewoman,
Of Guns, & Drums, and Wounds: God fave the marke
And telling me, the Soueraigne's thing on earth
Was Parmaclty, for an inward bruyle:
And that it was a great pity, fo it was,
That villainous Salt-peter should be digg'd
Out of the Bowels of the harmefte Earth,
Which many a good Tall Fellow had defroy'd
So Cowardely. And but for thefe vile Gunnes,
He would himselfe have bene a Soulier.
This bold, valiantly Chat of his (my Lord)
Made me to anwier indirectly (as I fayd.)
And I befeech you, let not this report
Come current for an Accusatton,
Betwixt my Loue, and your high Maiesty.

Hot. The circumstances, as good my Lord,
What euer Harry Percy then had faid,
To fuch a perfon, and in fuch a place,
At fuch a time, with all the rett toret,
May resonably dye, and never rife
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he faid, fo he vntie it now.

King. Why yet doth deny his Prisoners,
But with Prouide and Exception,
That we at owne charge, shall ranforme fright
His Brother-in-Law, the Soulie Mortimer,
Who (in my foule) hath wilfullly betrayer
The lives of thofe, that he did leade to Fight, Against the great Magitian, dam'd Glendower:
Whole daughter (as we hear) the Earlie of March
Hath lately married. Shall our COffers then,
Be empty'd, to redeem a Traitor home?
Shall we buy Treafon f, and indemnty with Fearers,
When they haue loft and forfeited themfelves.

No: on the barren Mountaine let him ferue:
For I shall never hold that man my Friend,
Whole tongue shall ask me for one peny coft
To ranforme home requited Mortimer.

Hot. Rewotted Mortimer?
He never did fall off, my Soueraigne Liege,
But by the chance of Warre: to prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue. For all thofe Wounds,
Thole mortred Wounds, which vauntly he tooke,
In single Opposition hand to hand,
He did condoune the beft part of an houre
In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink
Vpon agreement, of Swift Sorrowes flood;
Who then affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearefully among the trembling Reeds,
And hid his crispy-head in the hollow banke,
Blood-flain with their Valiant Combatants.
Neuer did base and rotten Policy
Colour her working with fuch deadly wounds
Nor neuer could the Noble Mortimer
Receive fo many, and all willingly:
Then let him not be fland'red with Rewolt.

King. Thou don't belie him Percy, thou dott beli him;
He never did encounter with Glendower:
I tell thee, he durft as well haue met the duell alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.

Art thou not abahm'd? But Sirrah, henceforth
Let me not heare you speake of Mortimer.
Send me your Prisoners with the speedlie means,
Or you fhill heare in fuch a kinde from me
As will diffeafe ye. My Lord Northumberland,
We Licens you your departure with your fonne,
Send vs your Prisoners, or you'll heare of it.

Exi't. King.

Hot. And if the duell come and roare for them
I will not fend them. I will after fraught
And tell him to: for I will eafe my heart,
Although it be with hazard of my head.

Nor. What's drunke with chololler? fay & paffe awhile,
Here comes your Vnckle. Enter Worcelfer.
Hot. Speake of Mortimer.

Yes, I will speake of him, and let my foule
Want mercy, if I do not joynie with him.
In his behalfe, Ie empty all thefe Veines,
And shed my deere blood drop by drop i'th duft,
But I will lift the downfall Mortimer
As high i'th Ayre, as this thy fmall King,
As this Ingrate and Cowreft Buildingbreaks.

Nor. Brother, the King hath made your Nephew mad
Wor. Who trokke this heavie vp after I was gone?

Hot. He will (forouthe)haue all my Prisoners:
And when I vrg'd the ranforme once againe
Of my Wines Brother, then his cheeke look'd pale,
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him; was he not proclaim'd
By Richard that deed is, the next of blood?

Nor. He was: I heard the Proclamation,
And then it was, when the vnhappy King
(Whofe wrongs in vs God pardon) did let forth
Vpon his Irith Expedition:
From whence he intercepted, did returne
To be depof'd, and shortly murdered.

Wor. And for whole death, we in the worldes wide mouth
Live scandalis'd, and fouly spoken of.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Hot. But soft I pray you; did King Richard then Proclaime my brother Mortimer,
Heuye to the Crowne?

Ner. He did, my selle did heare it.

Hot. Nay then I cannot blame his cousin King,
That willed him on the barren Mountains hard'd.
But still it be, that you that set the Crowne
Upon the head of this forgetfull man,
And for his fack, were the detested blot
Of murtherous subornation? Shall it be,
That you a world of curles vndergoe,
Being the Agents, or base second meanes,
The Corda, the Ladder, or the Hangman rathre?
O pardon, if that I defend so low,
To shew the Line, and the Predicament
Wherein you range vnder this subtilt King.
Shall it for flame, be spoken in these dayes,
Or fill up Chronicles in this manifes?
That men of Nobility and Power,
Did gage them both in an vnjust behalfe
(As both of you, God pardon it, have done)
To put downe Richard, that sweet lovelie Rofe,
And plant this Thorne, this Canker 'Bullingbrooke',
And shall it in more flame be further spoken,
That you are fool'd, dicarded, and chopped off
By him, for whom these flames ye vnderwent?
No yette time ferues, wherein you may redeem
Your banifled Honors, and reftore your vulnerabilities
Into the good Thoughts of the world againe.
Reuenge the geering and disdain'd contempt
Of this proud King, who stadies day and night
To anfwer all the Debt he owes vnto you,
Even with the bloody Payement of your deaths?
Therefore I say——

Wor. Peace cousin, say no more.
And now I will vnclape a Secret booke,
And to your quicke conceyuing Difcontents,
Ile reade you Matter, deeppe and dangerous,
As fale of perill and adventuroues Spirit,
As to o're-walke a Current, roaring loud
On the vnrelafteft footing of a Speare.

Hot. If he fall in, good night, or finte or swimme:
Send danger from the East unto the Weft,
So Honor croffe it from the North to South,
And let them grapple: The blood more flirres
To rowze a Lyon, then to flart a Hare.

Ner. Imagination of fome great exploit,
Dries him beyond the bounds of Patience.

Hot. By heauen, me thinks it were an esfe lees,
To pluke bright Honor from the pale-fac'd Moone,
Or diue into the bottome of the deep,
Where Facone-line could never touch the ground,
And pluke vp drowned Honor by the Lockes:
So he that doth redeem her thence, might weare
Without Co-riuall, all her Dignities;
But ouer this pale-fac'd Fellowship.

Wor. He apprehends a World of Figures here,
But not the forme of what he should attend:
Good Cousin give me audience for a-while,
And lift to me.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Thofe fame Noble Scottes
That are your Prisoners.

Hot. Ile keepe them all.
By heauen, he shall not have a Scot of them:
No, if a Scot would fute his Soule, he fhall not.

He keepe them, by this Hand.

Wor. You start away,
And lend no care vnto my purpofes.
Thefe Prisoners you fhall keepe.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat:
He falk, he would not ranfone Mortimer:
Forbad my tongue to speake of Mortimer:
But I will finde him when he lyes afleepe,
And in his ears, he hollis Mortimer.
Nay, Ile haue a Starling fhall be taught to speake
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,
To keepe his anger still in motion.

Wor. Heare you Cousin: a word.

Hot. All studies heere I hollemly defie,
Sauue how to gall and pinch this Bullingbrooke,
And that fame Sword and Buckler Prince of Wales.
But that I think his Father loyes him not,
And would be glad he met with fome mishance,
I would have poyfon'd him with a pot of Ale.

Wor. Farewell Kinffman: I leale to you
When you are better temper'd to attend.

Ner. Why what a Walpe-tongu'd & impatient foot
Art thou, to breake into this Woman's mood,
Tying thine eare to no tongue but thine owne?

Hot. Why look you, I am whipt & fourgd with rods,
Netted, and flung with Pifmires, when I heare
Of this vile Politician Bullingbrooke.
In Richards time: What de'ye call the place?
A raife upon't, it is in Glouffhires:
'Twas, where the madcap Duke his Vncle kept,
His Vncle Yorke, where I first bow'd my knee
Vnto this King of Smiles, this Bullingbrooke:
When you and he came backe from Kauenpurgh.

Ner. At Barkley Cuffe.

Hot. You fay true:
Why what a caule deale of curtefe,
This fawning Grey-hound then did proffer me.
Looke when his infant Fortune came to age,
And gentle Harry Percy, and kindle Cousin:
O, the Diuell take fuch Couseners, God forgive me,
Good Vncle tell your tale, for I haue done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, too't againe,
Woe'll flay your leyre.

Hot. I haue done Infooth.

Wor. The fecond more to your Scottifh Prisoners.
Deliver them vp without their ranfone frightly,
And make the Douglas fonne his ownely meane
For powres in Scotland: which for diuers reasons
Which I fhall fend you written, be affur'd
Will eftily be granted you, my Lord.
Your Sonne in Scotland being thus impl'y'd,
Shall fecretly into the bofome crepe
Of that fame noble Prelate, well belo'd,
The Archbishop.

Hot. Of Yorke, is't not?

Wor. True, who heares hard
His Brothers death at Briflum, the lord Scoope.
I fpeake not this in effimation,
As what I thinkke might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and fet downe,
And onely thymes but to behold the face
Of that occaion that fhall bring it on.

Hot. I fmemell it:
Vpon my life, it will do wond'rous well.

Ner. Before the game's a-foot, thou fhilltell't slip.

Hot. Why, it cannot choofe but be a Nobtle plot,
And
And then the power of Scotland, and of Yorke
To lyone with Mortimer, Ha.
War. And so they shall.
Her. In faith it is exceedingly well said.
War. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,
To ease our heads, by raising of a Head:
For, being our felues as even as we can,
The King will always think him in our debt,
And think, we think our felues vnfaithful,
Till he hath found a time to pay vs home.
And see already, how he doth beginne
To make vs strangers to his looks of love.
Her. He does, he does; we'll be enuoy'd on him.
War. Cousin, farewell. No further go in this,
Then I by Letters shall direct your course
When time is ripe, which will be sodainly:
Ile seale to Glendenny, and loe, Mortimer,
Where you, and Douglas, and our powres at once,
As I will publish it, shall haiply meete,
To buere our fortunes in our owne strong armes,
Which now we hold at much uncertainity.
War. Farewell good Brother, we'll thune, I trueth.
Her. Vn cle, adio: O let the howes be short,
Till fields, and blowes, and grones, applaud our sport.

Achus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Carrier with a Lantern in his hand.
1. Car. Heigh ho, and't not be foure by the day, Ile be hang'd. Charles maine is over the new Chimney, and yet our horse not packt. What Ofler?
Ofl. Anon, anon.
1. Car. I prethee Tom, beate Cuts Saddle, put a few Flockes in the point: the poore Iade is wrung in the withers, out of all cellce.

Enter another Carrier.
2. Car. Pease and Beans are as danke here as a Dog, and this is the next way to giue poore Iades the Bottes: this house is turnd vsipd downe since Riche the Ofler dyed.
1. Car. Poore fellow neuer joy'd since the price of oats rofe, it was the death of him.
2. Car. I think this is the most villinose house in all London rode for Fleas: I am diug like a Trench.
1. Car. Like a Trench? There is ne're a King in Chri-fendome, could be better bit, than I have beeene since the first Coke.
2. Car. Why, you will allow vs ne're a Jourden, and then we leake in your Chimney; and your Chamber-lye breeds Fleas like a Locash.
2. Car. I have a Gammon of Bacon, and two razes of Ginger, to be deliered as farre as Cheving-croffe.
1. Car. The Turks in my Pannier are quite flarued. What Ofler? A plague on thee, haft thou never an eye in thy head? Can't he hear? And there were not as good a deed as drinkke, to break the pate of thee. I am a very Villaine. Come and be hang'd, haft no faith in thee?
God. Good-morrow Carriers. What's a clocke?
Car. I think it be two a clocke.
God. I prethee lend me thy Lanthorne to see my Gelding in the stable.
God. I prethee lend me thine.
2. Car. I, when, can't tell? Lend mee thy Lanthorne (quo-th-a) marre Ile see thee hang'd firft.
God. Sirra Carrier: What time do you mean to come to London?
2. Car. Time enough to goe to bed with a Candle, I warrant thee. Come neighbour Magge, we'll call vp the Gentlemen, they will along with company, for they have great charge.

Enter Chamberlaine.

God. What ho, Chamberlaine?
Cham. At hand quoth Pick-purse.
God. That's even a faire, as at hand quoth the Chamberlaine: For thou variest no more from picking Pures, then gling direffion, doth from labouring. Thou lay't the plot, how.
Cham. Good morrow Master Gods-till, it holds currant that I told you yeternight. There's a Franklin in the wilde of Kent, hath brought three hundred Markes with him in Gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at supper; a kinde of Auditor, one that hath abundance of charge too (God knowes what) they are vp already, and call for Eeges and Butter. They will away presently.
God. Sirra, if they meeet not with S. Nicholas Clarks, I'll giue thee this necke.

Cham. No, Ie none of it: I prysthee keep that for the Hangman, for I know thou worchipst S. Nicholas as truly as a man of fullhood may.
God. What talkeft thou to me of the Hangman? If I hang, Ie make a fat payre of Gallowes. For, if I hang, old Sir Iah hangs with me, and thou know'st hee's no Starueing. Tut, there are other Troians that ye dream't not of, the which (for sport sake) are content to doe the Profession some grace; that would (if matters should be looked into) for their owne Credit sake, make all Whole. I am joyned with no Foot-land-Sakers, no Long-duffe fix-penny strikers, none of these mad Miftachio purple-hu'd-Maltwormes, but with Nobility, and Tranquillity; Bourgomafters, and great Oneyes, fuch as can holde in, such as will strike fooner then speake; and speake fooner then drinke, and drinke fooner then pray; and yet I yte, for they pray continually unto their Saint the Commonwealth; or rather, not to pray to her, but pray on herfor they ride vp & downe on her, and make hir their Boots.

Cham. What, the Commonwealth their Boots? Will she hold out water in sole way?
God. She will, she will; Justice hath liquor her. We feale as in a Caffle, cockfire we have the receit of Fern-

Seede, we walke invisible.
Cham. Nay, I think rather, you are more beholding to the Night, then to the Fernfeed, for your walking in-

God. Give me thy hand.
Thou shalt have a share in our purpose,
As I am a true man.
Cham. Nay, rather let mee hae it, as you are a false Thieves.

God. Go to: Homo is a common name to all men.
Bid the Ofler bring the Gelding out of the stable. Farewell, ye muddy Knave.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince, Pynes, and Pete.

Prin. Come shelter, shelter, I have removed Falstaff. Here, and he frets like a gum'd Velvet.

Prin. Stand close.

Fal. Princes, Princes, and be hang'd Princes.

Fal. What Princes, Hal?

Prin. He is walk'd vp to the top of the hill, Ile go seek him.

Fal. I am accurst to rob in that Theeue company: that Rascall hath removed my Horfe, and tied him I know not where. If I trauell but foure foot by the squere further a foote, I shall beke my winde. Well, I tell him not but to dye a faire death for all this, If I scape hauing for killing that Rogue, I have forfoworne his company hourely any time this two and twenty yeares, & yet I am bewitch't with the Rogues company. If the Rascall have not given me medicines to make me lose him, Ile behang'd it could not be else I have drank Melekines.

Poin. Hal, a Plague vpon you both.

Fal. Prin. Ile flaucre ere I rob a foote further. And twere not as good a deede as to drink, to turne True-man, and to leaueth thee Rogues, I am the veriest Varlet that euer chewed with a Tooth. Eight yards of vanisen ground, is therefore & ten miles about with me & the flouty-hearted Villaines knowe it well enough. A plague vpon't, when Thesees cannot be true one to another. Whew: a plague light vpon you all. Glue my Horfe you Rogues: give me my Horfe, and he hang'd.

Prin. Peace ye fat guttes, lye downe, lay thine ear close to the ground, and lift if thou canst hear the tread of Travellers.

Fal. Have you any Leauers to lift me vp again being downe? Ile not bære mine owne fleth so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy Fathers Exchequer. What a plague meane ye to colt me thus?

Prin. Thou by'rb, thou art not colt'd, thou art vacol'ted.

Fal. I prethee good Prince Hal, help me to my horfe, good Kings sonne.

Prin. Out you Rogue, shall I be your Offler?

Fal. Go hang thy selfe in thine owne heire-apparent-Garters: If I be tune, Ile peeche for this: and I have not Ballads made on all, and sang to flibby tunes, let a Cup of Sacke be my poyson: when a lef is to forward, & a foote too, I hate it.

Enter Gods-hill.

Gods. Stand.

Fal. So do I against my will.

Poin. O 'tis our Setter, I know his voyage:

Bardolph, what news?

Fal. Cale ye, cate ye; on with your Vizards, there's many of the Kings comming downe the hill, its going to the Kings Exchequer.

Fal. You lie you rogue, 'tis going to the Kings Tavern.

God. There's enough to make vs all.

Fal. To he hang'd.

Prin. You foure shall front them in the narrow Lane: Ned and I, will walke lower; if they scape from your encounter, then they light on vs.

Poin. But how many be of them?

God. Some eight or ten.

Fal. Will they not rob us?

Prin. What, a Coward Sir Jhon Pausch?

Fal. Indeed I am not Iohn of Gaunt your Grandfather; but yet no Coward, Hal.

Prin. We'll leaueth that to the profe.

Poin. Sirra lacke, thy horfe stands behinde the hegd, when thou need'st him, there thou shalt finde him. Farewell, and hand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hang'd.

Prin. Ned, where are our diquytes?

Poin. Heere hard by: Stand close.

Fal. Now my Masters, happy man be his dole, say I: every man to his busines.

Enter Travellers.

Tra. Come Neighbor: the boy shall lead our Horfes downe the hill: We'll walke a-foot a while, and cafe our Legges.

Theeues. Stay.

Tra. Iefu bleeve vs.

Fal. Strike: down with them, cut the villains throats; a whorson Caterpillas: Bacon-fed Knaves, they hate vs youth; downe with them, fence them.

Tra. O, we are vndone, both we and ours for euer.

Fal. Hang ye gorbells knaves, are you vndone? No ye Fat Chaffes, I would your foor were heree. On Bacons, on, what ye knaves? Yong men must liue, you are Grand furrers, are ye? We'll lure ye life.

Here they rob them, and binds them. Enter the Prince and Poinse.

Prin. The Theseus have bound the True-men: Now could thou and I rob the Theseus, and go merily to London, it would be argument for a Weeke, Laughter for a Moneth, and a good left for euer.

Poinse. Stand close, I heare them comming.

Enter Theseus again.

Fal. Come my Masters, let vs flaire, and then to horfle before day: and the Prince and Poinse bee not two arround Cowards, there's no equity flirling. There's no moe valuable pilfe that Poynes, than in a while Ducle.

Prin. Your money.

Poin. Villaines.

As they are flaring, the Prince and Poinse set upon them.

They all run away, leaving the booty behind them.

Prin. Got with much cafe. Now merrily to Horfe: The Theseus are cuttard, and poiffed with fear so strongly, that they dare not meet each other: each takes his fellow for an Officer. Away good Ned, Falstaff sweates to death, and Lords the lean earth as he walke al along; we're not for laughe, I should pity him.

Poin. How the Rogue vaunt'd.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hotspurre John, reading a Letter.

But for mine owne part, my Lord, I could be well contented to be there in refpeet of the loue I bear your hoife.

He
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

55

He could be contented; Why is he not then? in respect of the love he bears our house. He shewes in this, he loves his owne Barne better then he loves our house. Let me see some more. The purpose you undertake is dangerous. Why that's certaine: 'tis dangerous to take a Colde, to sleepe, to drinke: but I tell you (my Lord foole) out of this Nettle, Danger; we plucke this Flower, Safety. The purpose you undertake is dangerous, the Friends you have named: certaine, the time is not conforted, and your whole Plot no lights, for the counter-poise of Jove great an Opposition. Say you lo, say you so: I say unto you againe, you are a shalow cowardly Hinde, and you Lye. What a Jacke-braine is this? I protest, our plot is as good a plot as euer was laid; our Friend true and confant: A good Plotte, good Friends, and full of expectation: An excellent plot, very good Friends. What a Frothy-spitler rogue is this? Why, my Lord of Yorke commends the plot, and the general course of the action. By this hand, if I were now by this Rafcaill, I could braine him wi his Ladies Fan. Is there not my Father, my Vockle, and my Selie, Lord Edward in faire face of Tarly, and Owen Glendower? Is there not besides, the Douglas? Haue I not all their letters, to meete me in Armes by the ninth of the next Moneth? and are they not some of them fet forward already? What a Pagan Rafcaill is this? An Infidel. Ha, you shall fee now in very fincency of Perre and Cold heart, will be to the King, and lay open all our proceedings. O, I could divide my felie, and go to buffets, for mowing such a duch of skim'd Milk with fo honourable an Action. Hang him, let him tell the King we are prepared. I will set forwards to night.

Enter his Lady.

How now Kate, I must leave you within these two hours.

La. O my good Lord, why are you thus alone? For what offence have you this tonight bin

A banish'd woman from my Haries bed? Tell me (sweet Lord) what is't that takes from thee Thy fronecke,pleasure, and thy golden sleepe? Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth? And dart so often when thou fist't it alone? Why hast thou lost the freth blood in thy checkes? And giuen my Treasures and my rights of thee, To thicke-eye'd musing, and curt melancholy? In my faint-burners, I by thee haue watcht, And heard thee murmure tales of iron Warres: Speeches, and Warres of onely hate and ravening rage, and to thy bounding Steed, Cry courage to the field. And thou haist talk'd
Of Salletts, and Retire's; Trenches, Tents, Of Palisadoes, Frontiers, Parapets,
Of Ballinaked, of Canon, Culverin,
Of Prisoners ransome, and of Souldiers flaine, And all the current of a heady fight. Thy spirit within thee hath beene so at Warre, And thus hath he fo beffir'd thee in thy sleepe, That beds of sweate hast flood upon thy Brow, Like babbles in a late-disturb'd Sreame; And in thy strange motions have appear'd, Such as we fee when men refraine their breath On some great fadaine haft. O what portens are thefe? Some heauie buinelle hath my Lord in hand, And I must know it: else he losse me not.

Hot. What ho! Hal Gloucester with the Packet gone yet? Ser. He is my Lord, an houre agone.

Ser. One horfe, my Lord, he brought eu'n now.

Hot. What Horfe? A Roane, a crop eare, is it not.

Ser. It is my Lord.

Hot. That Roane shall be my Throne. Well, I will backe him straight. Efference, bid Butler lead him forth into the Parke.

La. But hearre you, my Lord.

Hot. What say't thou my Lady? La. What is it carres you away

Hot. Why, my horse (my Louis) my horse.

La. Out you mad-headed Ape, a Weazell hath not such a deale of Splesne, as you are soft with. In sooth I know your busineffe Harry, that I will. I fear my Brother Mortimer doth firr about his Title, and hath fent for you to line his enterprise. But if you go——

Hot. So farre a foot, I shall be weare, Louis. La. Come, come, you Paraquito, answer me directly vnto this question, that I shall aske. Indeede Ie breake thy little finger Harry, if thou wilt not tel me true.

Hot. Away, away you trifler! Louis, I loue thee not, I care not for thee Kate. This is no world To play with Mammets, and to tilt with lips. We must haue bloodie Nofes, and crack'd Crownes, And passe them currant too. Gods me, my horfe. What say't thou Kate,what wold't thou haue with me?

La. Do ye not loue me! Do ye not indeed? Well, do not then. For since you love me not, I will not loue my felie. Do you not loue me?

Nay, tell me if you speak't in left, or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou fee me ride? And when I am a-horseback, I will weare I loue thee infinitely. But beare you Kate, I must not haue you henceforth,queftion me, Whether I go: nor reason whereabout. Whether I must, I mutt and to conclude, This Evening mutt I leave thee,gentle Kate. I know you wife, but yet no further wife Then Harry Percies wife. Confant you are, But yet a woman: and for secretie, No Lady clofer. For I will beleue Thou wilt not vter what thou do'tt not know, And so farre wilt I true thee,gentle Kate.

La. How to fare?

Hot. Not an inch further. But harkye you Kate, Whither I go, thither shall you go too: To day will I set forth, to morrow you. Will this content you Kate?

La. It must of force. Exeunt.

Enter Prince and Poins.

Prin. Ned, prethee come out of that fat roome, & lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where haft bene Hall?

Prin. With three or foure Logger-heads, amongst 3. or fourecore Hogheads, I haue founded the very base string of humility. Sirra, I am sworn brother to a leath of Drawers, and can call them by their names,as Tom, Dicke, and Francis. They take it already vpon their confidence, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the King of Cuthlicke telling me flatly I am no proud Jack like Falstaff, but a Christian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, and when I am King of England, I shall command al the good Ladess in East-chepe. They call drinking deepes, dyeing Scarlet; and when you breath in your waterring, then 3. they they cry hem, and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drinke with any Tinker in his owne Language during my life. I tell thee Ned, thou hast loft much honor, that thou wert not with me in this action; but sweet Ned, to sweeter which name of Ned, I glue thee this pensiveness of Sugar, clap even now into my hand by an under Skinner, one that never spake other English in his life, then Eight shillings and six pence, and, You are welcome: with this thril addition, Anon, Anon fir, Score a Pint of Baffard in the Half Moon, or fo. But Ned, to drive way time till Falstaff come, I prythee doe thou stand in some by-rooms, while I question my puny Drawer, to what end hee gave me the Sugar, and do neuer leave calling Francis, that his Tale to me may be nothing but, Anon: stop aside, and he flew thee a President.

Pain. Francis. Enter Drawer.

Frans. My Lord. Prince. How long haft thou to serve, Francis?

Frans. Forthfoorth five yeares, and as much as to——

Prince. Five yeares: Berlady a long Leafe for the clinking of Pewter. But Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy Indenture, & shew it a faire pair of heeles, and run from it?

Frans. O Lord fir, he be onerone upon all the Books in England, I could finde in my heart.

Pain. Francis. Anon, anon fir.

Prince. How old art thou, Francis?

Frans. Let me see, about Michaelmas next I shalbe——

Pain. Francis. Anon anon fir, pray you flay a little, my Lord.

Prince. Nay but harke you Francis, for the Sugar thou gauest me, 'twas a penwyth, was't not?

Frans. O Lord fir, I would it had bene two.

Prince. I will give thee for it a thousand pound: Ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt haue it.

Pain. Francis.

Prince. Anon anon.

Prin. Anon Francis? No Francis, but to morrow Francis: or Francis, on thursday likewise indeed Francis when thou wilt. But Francis.

Frans. My Lord.

Prince. Wilt thou rob this Leathern Ierkin, Chriftall button, Not-pated, Agat ring, Pulse flocketing, Caddice garner, Smooth tongue, Spanish pouch.

Frans. O Lord fir, who do you meane?

Prince. Why then your brawne Baffard is your onely drinke: for looke you Francis, your white Canvas doublet will fulley. In Barbary fir, it cannot come to fo much.

Frans. What fir?

Pain. Francis.

Prince. Away you Rogue, doth thou heare them call?

Here they both call him, the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Ursinor.

Pint. What, stand't thou still, and hearst such a calling? Lookke to the Guets within: My Lord, old Sir Iden with halfe a dozen more, are at the doore: shall I let them in?

Prin. Let them alone awhile, and then open the doore.

Paines.

Enter Paines.

Pain. Anon, anon fir.

Prin. Sirra, Falstaffe and the rest of the Theuees, are at the doore, shall we be merry?

Pain. As merril as Cricketts my Lad. But harke yee, What cunning match haue you made with this left of the Drawer? Come, what's the issue?

Prin. I am noe now of all humors, that have thewem themselves humors, since the old dayes of goodman Adam, to the pupill age of this present twelve a clock at midnight. What's a clocke Francis?

Frans. Anon, anon fir.

Prin. That euer this Fellow should haue fewer words then a Parret, and yet the fonne of a Woman. His industry is vp-flaires and down-flaires, his eloquence the parcell of a reckoning. I am not yet of Pericles mind, the Hotspurre of the North, he that kills me some face or few dozen of Scots at a Breakeffast, washes his hands, and fears to his wife; Fie upon this quiet life, I want worke. O my sweet Harry sayes hee, how many halfe thou kill'd to day?

Glue my Roane horle a drench (fayes hee) and anweres, some fourteen, an hour after: a trible, a trible.

I prethee call in Falstaffe, Ile play Percy, and that damn'd Brawne shall play Dame Morris, her husband. Rivo, sayes the drunkard. Call in Rijs, call in Tallow.

Enter Falstaffe.

Pain. Welcome Jacke, where haft thou bene?

Fal. A plague of all Coward I say, and a Vengeance too, marry and Amen.

Glue me a cup of Sacke Boy. Ere I leade this life long, Ie fowe neither flockes, and mend them too. A plague of all cowards. Glue me a cup of Sacke, Rogue. Is there no Verteue extant?

Prin. Didst thou never see Titan kill a dike of Butter, pittifull hearted Titan that melted at the sweete Tale of the Sunne? If thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You Rogues, here's Lime in this Sacke toothere is nothing but Roguery to be found in Villanous man,yet a Coward is worthe then a Cup of Sack with lime. A villainous Coward, go thy wayes old Jacke, die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten Herring: there flues not three good men valiant'd in England, & one of them is far, and grows old, God helpe the while, a bad world I say. I would I were a Weaver, I could fing all manner of fongs. A plague of all Cowards, I say fill.

Prin. How now Woolfacke, what matter you?

Fal. A Kings Sonne? If I do not beate thee out of thy Kingdome with a dager of Lath, and drive all thy Subiects afore thee like a flocke of Wilde-geese, Ie never were haire on my face more. You Prince of Wales?

Prin. Why you horfon round man what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a Coward? Anwer me to that, and Paines there?

Prin. Ye fetch paunch, and yee call mee Coward, Ile stab thee.

Fal. I call thee Coward? Ile fee thee damnd'ere I call the Coward: but I would glue a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are strait enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your backe: Call you that that backing of your friends? a plague upon such backing: give me them that will face me. Give me a Cup of Sack, I am a Rogue if I drunke to day.

Prince. O Villaine, thy Lips are scarce wip'd, since thou drunke'ft last. Falstaff. All's one for that. He drinks.

A plague of all Cowards, ill, say I. Prince. What's the matter? Falstaff. What's the matter? here be foure of vs, haue ta'en a thousand pound this Morning. Prince. Where is it, Jack? where is it? Falstaff. Where is it? taken from vs, it is: a hundred vpon vpon foure of vs. Prince. What, a hundred, man? Falstaff. I am a Rogue, if I were not at halfe Sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have stpayed by miracle. I am eightimes thruft through the Double, foure through the Hofs, my Buckler cut through and through, my Sword hackt like a Hand-faw, see fig. I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not doe. A plague of all Cowards let them spake; if they speake more or leffe then truth, they are Villains, and the fonnes of darknesse.

Prince. Speake first, how was it? Gad. We foure fet upon some dozen. Falstaff. Sixteen,at least,my Lord. Gad. And bound them. Peto. No, no, they were not bound. Falstaff. You Rogues, they were bound, every man of them, or I am a lew elfe, an Ebrew lew. Gad. As we were spaking, some fexe or foure fresh men set vpon vs. Falstaff. And vnbound the rest, and then come in the other. Prince. What, fought ye with them all? Falstaff. All? I know not what ye call all: but if I fought not with fiftie of them, I am a bunch of Radifh: if there were not two or three and fiftie vpon poor olde Jack, then am I no two-legg'd Creature. Pain. Pray Heauen, you have not murthered some of them.

Falstaff. Nay, that's past praying for; I have pepper'd two of them: Two I am sure I have payed, two Rogues in Buckrom Sutes. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a Lye,spit in my face, call me Horfe: thou knowest my olde word: here I lay, and thus I bore my point; foure Rogues in Buckrom lef drivle at me.

Prince. What, foure thou say'st? but two, even now. Falstaff. foure Hal, I told thee foure.

Pain. I, I, he said foure.

Falstaff. These foure came all a-front, and mainly thruft at me; I made no more ado, but tooke all their feuen points in my Target, thus.

Prince. Seuen? why there were but foure, even now. Falstaff. In Buckrom.

Pain. I, four, in Buckrom Sutes.

Falstaff. Seuen,by these Hills,or I am a Villaine else. Prince. Prethee let him alone, we shall haue more anon.

Falstaff. Doeth thou haue me, Hal? Pain. I, and marke thee too, Jack. Falstaff. Doe so, for it is worth the linnen too: these nine in Buckrom,that I told thee of.

Falstaff. Began to give me ground: but I followed me clofe, came in foot and hand, and with a thought, feen of the eleuen I pay'd.

Prince. O monstrous! eleuen Buckrom men grown out of two?

Falstaff. But as the Deuill would have it, three mirbe- gotten Knaues, in Kendall Greene, came at my Back, and let drivle at me; for it was so darke, Hal, that thou could'st not see thy Hand.

Prince. These Lyes are like the Father that begetts them, groffe as a Mountaine, open, palpable. Why thou Clay-brayn't Guts, thou Knotty-rated Foolie, thou Horforn ob-scene greafe Tallow Catch.

Falstaff. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth? Prince. Why, how could'st thou know these men in Kendall Greene, when it was so darke, thou could'st not see thy Hand? Come, tell vs your reason: what say'st thou to this?

Prince. Come, your reason Jack, your reason.

Falstaff. What, vpon compulsion? No; I was at the Strappado, or all the Racks in the World, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion? If Reasons were as plentifull as Black-berries, I would give no man a Reason vpon compulsion.

Prince. Tis he no longer guilty of this finne. This fan-gaine Coward, this Bed-preffer, this Horf-back-breaker, this huge Hill of Flies.

Prince. Well, breath a while, and then to' again: and when thou haft ty'd thy felle in safe comparisons, hear me speake but thus.

Pain. Marke lacke.

Prince. We two, faw you foure fet on foure and bound them, and were Maffers of their Wealth: mark now how a plaine Tale shall put you downe. Then did we two, fet on you four, and with a word, outfac'd you from your prize, and haue it: yea, and can iet it you in the House.

And Falstaff, you caired your Guts away as nimibly, with as quick deseterite, and roared for mercy, and still ranne and roare'd, as ever I heard Bull-Caffe. What a Slaue art thou, to hacke thy fword as thou haft done, and then fay it was in fight. What trick? what device? what flarling hole canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparant flame?

Prince. Come, let's heare lacke: What trick haft thou now?

Falstaff. I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why heare ye my Maffers, was it for me to kill the Heire apparant? Should I turne vpon the true Prince? Why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware Infinch, the Lion will not touch the true Prince: Infinch is a great matter. I was a Coward on Infinch: I shall thinke the better of my felle, and thee, during my life: I, for a valiant Lion, and thou for a true Prince. But Lads, I am glad you have the Mony. Hoppifie, clap to the doores: watch to night, pray to morrow. Gallants, Lads, Boys, Har's of Gold, all the good Titles of Fellowship come to you. What, shall we be merry? shall we have a Play extemporary.

Prince. Content, and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Falstaff. A, no more of that Hal, and thou loue me.

Enter Hoppifie.

Hoppifie. My Lord, the Prince?
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Prin. How now my Lady the Ho!ffesse, what say't thou to me?

Ho!ffesse. Marry, my Lord, there is a noble man of the Court at dore would speake with you: hee fayes, hee comes from your Father.

Prin. Glue him as much as will make him a Royall man, and send him backe againe to my Mother.

Falst. What manner of man is hee?

Ho!ffesse. An old man.

Falst. What doth Gra unde his Bed at Midnight?

Prin. I will give him his answere.

Prin. Preethee doe Looke.

Falst. Faith, and I fende him packing.

Prin. Tell mee now in earnest, how came Falstaffs Sword so hackt?

Pen. Why, he hackt it with his Dagger, and faid, hee would fwearce truth out of England, but hee would make you beleue it was done in fight, and perfwaded vs to doe the like.

Bard. Yes, and to tickle our Noses with speer-graffe, to make them bleed, and then to bellub our garments with it, and fwearce it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this feuen yeeres before, I blufht to heare his monfrous deuices.

Prin. O Villaine, thou ftolef a Cup of Sacke eighteene yeeres agoe, and were taken with the manner, anduer fince thou haft blufht extemore: thou hadft fire and fword on thy fide, and yet thou ranke away; what infinft hadft thou for it?

Bard. My Lord, doe you fee thefe Meteors? doe you behold thefe Exhalations?

Prin. I doe.

Bard. What thinke you they portend?

Prin. Hot Lucre and cold Purfes.

Bard. Choler, my Lord, if rightely taken.

Prin. No, if rightly taken, Halter.

Enter Falstaff.

Here comes Leafe. Leafe, heere comes bare-bone. How now my sweet Creature of Bombaft, how long is agoe, Leafe, since thou faw'th thine owne Knee?

Falst. My owne Knee? When I was about that yeerees (Hal) I was not an Eagles Talent in the Waffe, I could haue crept into any Aldermans Thumbe-Ring; a plagce of fighting and griefes, it blowe a man vp like a Bledder. There's villainous Newes abroad: here is Sir John Braby from your Father; you must goe to the Court in the Morning. The fame mad fellow of the North, Percy; and hee of Wales, that gave Smooth in the Buffinado, and made Lucre Cuckold, and fware the Deuell his true Liege-man upon the Cross of a Welch-hooke; what a plagce call you him?

Pen. O, Glouforcer.

Falst. Owen, Owen; the fame, and his Sonne in Law Aftmortier, and old Northumberland, and the (prightely Scot of Scots, Dunglass, that ranne a Horfe-backe vp a Hill perpendicular.

Prin. Hee that rides at high speede, and with a Pittole kills a Sparrow flying.

Falst. You haue hit it.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth. 59.

many in our Land, by the Name of Pitch: this Pitch (as ancient Writers doe report) doth defile so doth the company thou keepst: for Harry, now I doe not speake to thee in Drink, but in Tears; not in Pleasure, but in Passion: not in Words only, but in Woes also: and yet there is a vertuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his Name.

Prin. What manner of man, and it like your Master?

Falst. A goodly portly man yfaith, and a corporulent, of a cheerfull Look, a pleasing Eye, and a most noble Carriage, and as I thinkke, his age some five, or(byrarity) inclining to threecore: and now I remember mee, his Name is Falstaff: if that man shoulde be newly gotten, hee deceues mee; for Harry, I see Vertue in his Lookes. If then the Tree may be knowne by the Fruit, as the Fruit by the Tree, then peremptorily I speake it, there is Vertue in that Falstaff: him kepe with, the reft banish. And tell mee now, thou naughtie Varlet, tell mee, where haft thou beene this moneth?

Prin. Doth thou speake like a King? doe thou stand for mee, and Ile play my Father.

Falst. Depose me: if thou doest halfe so gravely, so maisterfully, both in word and matter, hang mee vp by the heales for a Rabber-fucker, or a Poulterers Fare.

Prin. Well, here I am fet.

Falst. And here I stand: Judge my Masters.

Prin. Now Harry, whence come you?

Falst. My Noble Lord, from Exte-cheape.

Prin. The complaints I heare of thee, are grievous.

Falst. Yfaith, my Lord, they are false: Nay, Ile tickle ye for a young Prince.

Prin. Swearest thou, vngracious Boy? henceforth ne're looke to me: thou art violently carried away from Grace: there is a Deuill haunts thee, in the likeness of a fat old Man; a Tanne of Man is thy Companion: Why dost thou consuer with that Trunk of Humors, that Boultung-Hutch of Baslifneffe, that Twolle Parcell of Dropfies, that huge Bombard of Sacke, that flut Cloacke-bagge of Guts, that rotted Manning Tree Ox with the Pouling in his Belly, that reuerend Vice, that grey Iniquitie, that Father Ruffian, that Vanitie in yeare? where-in is he good, but to taste Sacke, and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carue a Capon, and eat it? wherein in Cuning, but in Craft? wherein Crafifie, but in Villainye? wherein Villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Falst. I would your Grace would take me with you: whom means your Grace?

Prince. That villainous abominable mis-leader of Youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Falst. My Lord, the man I know.

Prince. I knowe thou dostn't.

Falst. But to say, I know more harme in him then in my selfe, were to say more then I know. That hee is olde (the more the pitie) his white haires doe witnesse it: but that hee is (fuing your reverence) a Whore-mafler, that I verily deny. If Sacke and Sugar bee a fault, Heauen helpe the Wicked: if to be olde and merry, be a finne, then many an olde Hoafe that I know, is damn'd: if to be fat, to be hatted, then Pharaohs leane Kine are to be loued. No, my good Lord, banish Pete, banish Bardolph, banish Pains: but for sweete Jacke Falstaffe, kinde lucke Falstaffe, true Jacke Falstaffe, valiant Jacke Falstaffe, and therefore more valiant, being as hee is olde Jacke Falstaffe, banish not him thy Harryyes company, banish all the World.

Prince. I doe, I will.

Enter Bardolph running.

Bard. O, my Lord, my Lord, the Sherife, with a most most monstrouse Watch, is at the doore.

Falst. Out ye Rogues, play out the Play: I have much to say in the behalfe of that Falstaffe.

Enter the Hufseffe.

Hufseffe. O, my Lord, my Lord.

Falst. Heigh, heigh, the Deuill rides upon a Fiddle-stickes: what's the matter?

Hufseffe. The Sherife and all the Watch are at the doore: they are come to search the Houfe, shall I let them in?

Falst. Do'th thou heare Hal, neuer call a true peece of Gold a Counterfeit: thou art effectuallly made, without seeming fo.

Prince. And thou a naturall Coward, without inmult.

Falst. I deny your Maior: if you will deny the Sherife, so: if not, let him enter. If I become not a Cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing vp: I hope I shall as soone be strangell with a Halter, as another.

Prince. Goe hide thee behind the Arras, the reft walke vp aboue. Now my Masters, for a true face and good Conscience.

Falst. Both which I have had: but their date is out, and therefore Ile hide me.

Exit.

Prince. Call in the Sherife.

Enter Sherife and the Carrier.

Prince. Now Maiuer Sherife, what is your will with mee?

She. First pardon me, my Lord. A Hue and Cry hath followed certaine men vnto this house.

Prince. What men?

She. One of them is well knowne, my gracious Lord, a groffe fit man.

Car. As fit as Butter.

Prince. The man, I doe assure you, is not heere. For I my selfe at this tyme have impoly'd him: And Sherife, I will engeage my word to thee, That I will by to morrow Dinner time, Send him to anfwere thee, or any man, For any thing he shall be charg'd withall: And so let me entrest you, leave the house.

She. I will, my Lord: there are two Gentlemen Haue in this Robberie loft three hundred Marke.

Prince. It may be so: if he hauie robb'd thee men, He shall be answerable: and so farewell.

She. Good Night, my Noble Lord.

Prince. I thinke it is good Morrow, is it not?

She. Indeed, my Lord, I think it be two a Clocke.

Exit.

Prince. This cory Rafeall is knowne as well as Poules: goe call him forth.

Pete. Falstaffe? fast sleepe behinde the Arras, and snorting like a Horfe.

Prince. Harkke, how hard he fetches breath: search his Pockets.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

He searcheth his Pockets, and findeth certaine Papers.

Prince. What hast thou found?
Peto. Nothing but Papers, my Lord.

Prince. Let's see, what be they? read them.
Peto. Item, a Capon.
Item, Sawce.
Item, Sacks, two Gallons.
Item, Anchovies, and Sacke after Supper.
Item, Bread.

Prince. O monstrous, but one halfe penny-worth of Bread to this insatiable deale of Sacke! What there is else, keepe cloe, for I'll ofte ride at more advantage: there let him sleepe till day. I lie to the Court in the Morning: Wee must all to the Warres, and thy place shall be honorable. Ie procure this fat Rogue a Charge of Foot, and I know his death will be a Match of Twelue-score. The Money shall be pay'd backe againe with advantage. Ie with me betimes in the Morning; and to good morrow Peto.
Peto. Good morrow, good my Lord.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Hotspurre, Warcoster, Lord Mortimer, Owen Glendower.

Mort. These promises are faire, the parties true, And our indufion full of prosperus hope.

Hotspur. Lord Mortimer, and Cousin Glendower, Will you fit downe?

And Vackle Warcoster; a plague vpon it, I have forgot the Mappe.

Glendover. No, here it is:

Sit Cousin Percy, sit good Cousin Hotspur:
For by that Name, as oft as Lancaster doth speake of you, His Cheekes looke pale, and with a riling sight, He withereth you Heasen.

Hotspur. And you in Hell, as oft as he heares Owen Glendover spake of.

Glendover. I cannot blame him: At my Nativity, The front of Heauen was full of ffele shapes, Of burning Crokets: and at my Birth, The fame and foundation of the Earth Shok'd like a Coward.

Hotspur. Why so it would have done at the same season, if your Mothers Cat had but kettled, though your ffele had never beene borne.

Glendover. I say the Earth did shake when I was borne.

Hotspur. And I say the Earth was not of my minde, If you luppes, as fearing you, it shooke.

Glendover. The Heauens were all on fire, the Earth did tremble.

Hotspur. Oh, then the Earth shooke To fee the Heauens on fire, And not in feare of your Nativity. Diseased Nature oftentimes breaks forth In strange eruptions; and the teeming Earth Is with a kinde of Collick pincht and vex'd, By the imprifoning of varly Windes Within her Wombes; which for enlargement fruiling, Shakes the old Beldame Earth, and tumbles downe Steeples, and moleffe-growne Townes. At your Birth, Our Grandam Earth, hauing this disemperature, In paffion shooke.

Glendover. Cousin: of many men I doe not heare these Croffings: Give me leave To tell you once againe, that at my Birth The front of Heauen was full of ffele shapes, The Goates ranne from the Mountains, and the Heards Were strangely clamorous to the Rightest fields: These fignes have markt me extraordinary, And all the courses of my Life doe shew, I am not in the Roll of common men. Where is the Luing,clipt in with the Sea, That chides the Bankes of England, Scotland, and Wales, Which calls me Pupil, or hath read to me? And bring him out, that is but Womans Sonne, Can trace me in the tedious ways of Art, And hold me pace in depe experiments. Hotspur. I think there's no man speakes better Welsh: Ie to thee. Mort. Peace Cousin Percy, you will make him mad. Glendover. I can call Spirits from the watfe Depe. Hotspur. Why so can I, or can any man: But will they come, when you doe call for them? Glendover. Why, I can teach thee, Cousin, to command the Deuill.

Hotspur. And I can teach thee, Cousin, to shame the Deuill, By telling truth. Tell truth, and shame the Deuill. If thou haue power to rayfe him, bring him hither, And Ie be sworne, I haue power to shame him hence. Oh, while you live, tell truth, and shame the Deuill. Mort. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable Chat.

Glendover. Three times hath Henry Bullingbrooke made head Against my Power thrice from the Banks of Wye, And handy-bottom'd Scoure, hau e I hent him Bootlesse home, and Weather-beaten backe, Hotspur. Home without Bootees, And in foule Weather too, How stopes he Agnes in the Deuils name? Glendover. Come, heere's the Mappe: Shall we divide our Right, According to our three-fold order ta'ne? Mort. The Arch-Deacon hath diuided it Into three Limits, very equallly: England, from Trent, and Severne, hitherto, By South, and East is to my part affigu'd: All Wettord, Wales, beyond the Severne shore, And all the fertile Land within that bound, To Owen Glendower: And deare Conze, to you The remnant Northward, lying off from Trent. And our Incidents Triparti are drawne: Which being fealed enterchangeably, (A Bufneffe that this Night may execute) To morrow, Cousin Percy, you and I, And my good Lord of Worcester, will set forth, To meete your Father, and the Scottish Power, As is appointed vs at Shrewbury. My Father Glendower is not readie yet, Nor shall we neede his helpe these foureteen dayes: Within that space, you may have drawne together Your Tenants, Friends, and neigbouring Gentlemen. Glendover. A shorter time shall fend me to you, Lords: And in my Conduit shall your Ladies come, From whom you now must Allote, and take no leave, For there will be a World of Water flied.

Vpon
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Vpon the parting of your Wives and you.

Hetr. Me thinkes my Maty, North from Burton here,
In quantitie equalles not one of yours :
See, how this Riuere comes me crackling in,
And cuts me from the belt of all my Land,
A huge halfe Moone, a monthfull Cante out.
Hee have the Current in this place dam'd vp,
And here the smug and Silver Trent shall runne,
In a new Channell, faire and evenely:
It shall not winde with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a Bottome here.

Glend. Not winde? it shall, it must, you see it doth.

Mort. Yea, but markte how he bears his courfe,
And runnes me vp, with like advantage on the other side,
Gelding the oppofed Continent as much,
As on the other side it takes from you.

Wor. Yea, but a little Charge will trench him here,
And on this North side winne this Cape of Land,
And then he runnes straight and even.

Hetr. Ile have it fo, a little Charge will doe it.

Glend. Ile not have it alter'd.

Hetr. Will not you?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hetr. Who shall pay me nay?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hetr. Let me not vnderstand you then, speake it in Welsh.

Glend. I can speake English, Lord, as well as you :
For I was tray'd vp in the English Court;
Where, being but young, I framed to the Harpe
Many an English Ditty, louely well,
And gave the Tongue a helpfull Ornament;
A Vertue that was never feene in you.

Hetr. Marry, and I am glad of it with all my heart,
I had rather be a Kitten, and cry mew,
Then one of these fame Master Ballad-mongers:
I had rather have a Brazen Candle fick turn'd,
Or a dry Whelle grate on the Axile-tree,
And that would set my teeth nothing an edge,
Nothing so much, as mincing Poetrie;
'Tis like the for'cet gate of a thuffling Nagge.

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

Hetr. I doe not care; Ile glue thrice so much Land
To any well-deferving friend;
But in the way of Bargaine, marke ye me,
Ile cauall on the ninth part of a hayre.

Are the Indentures drawn? all shall be gone?

Glend. The Moone shines faire,
You may a way by Night:
Ile haue the Writer, and wishall,
Breach with your Wives, of your departure hence:
I am afraid my Daughter will runne madde,
So much the dotter on her Mortimer.

Exit. Mort. Fie, Cousin Percy, how you crosse my Father.

Hetr. I cannot chuse: sometime he angers me,
With telling me of the Moldwarpe and the Ant,
Of the Dreamer Merlin, and his Prophecies;
And of a Dragon, and a finne-liffe Filh,
A clip-wing'd Griffin, and a mouther Rauen,
A couching Lyon, and a ramping Cat,
And such a deale of skimble-skramble Stuffe,
As puts me from my Faith. I tell you what,
Hee let me leaft Night, at leaft, nine howres,
In reckoning vp the fetherfull Deuils Names,
That were his Lauceyves :

I cry'd hum, and well, goe too,
But mark'd him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tyred Horfe, a raving Wife,
Worfe then a fmockle Houfe. I had rather liue
With Cheefe and Garlick in a Windmille farre,
Then feede on Cates, and have him talke to me,
In any Summer-Houfe in Chriftendome.

Mort. In faith he was a worthy Gentleman,
Exceeding well read, and profited,
In strange Concealements:
Valiant as a Lyon, and wondrous affable,
And as bountifull, as Myres of India.
Shall I tell you, Cousin,
He holds your temper in a high refpeft,
And curbeth himselfe, euens of his natural scope,
When you doe croffe his humors: faith he does,
I warrant you, that man is not alive,
Might fo have temptt him, as you haue done,
Without the taste of danger, and reproofs :
But doe not vie it off, let me entertain you.

Wor. In faith, my Lord, you are too wilfull blame,
And fince your comming hither, have done enough,
To put him quite besides his patience,
You must needs learne, Lord, to amend this fault:
Though sometimes it shew Grestnesses, Courage, Blood,
And that's the deareft grace it renders you;
Yet ofteentimes it doth prefent harth Rage,
Defeat of Manners, want of Government,
Pride, Haughtineffe, Opinion, and Difdain :
The leaff of which, haunting a Nobleman,
Lofeth mens hearts, and leaues behind a fayne
Vpon the beauitie of all parts befides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Hetr. Well, I am school'd:
Good-manners be your fpreds;
Here come your Wives, and let vs take our leave.

Enter Glendower with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly fpight, that angers me,
My Wife can speake no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My Daughter weeps, the'le not part with you,
She'll be a Souther too, the'le to the Warres.

Mort. Good Father tell her, that she and my Aunt Percy Shall follow in your Conduct speedily.

Glendower speaks to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. Shee is desparate here:
A peurish self-will'd Harlotry,
One that no perfwasion can doe good vpon.

The Lady speaks in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy Lookes: that pretty Welsh
Which thou pow'r't down from thefe swelling Heaunens,
I am too perfect in: and but for shame,
In fuch a parley should I anfwere thee.

The Lady againe in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy Kiffes, and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disputation:
But I will never be a Truant, Loue,
Till I have learn'd thy Language: for thy tongue

Makes
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Makes Welsh as sweet as Ditties highly pen'd,
Sung by a faire Queene in a Summer Bower,
With rasishing Diuision to her Lute.

Gled. Nay, if thou melt, then will the runne mainde.

The Lady speaks againe in Welsh.

Mort. O I am Ignorance it selfe in this.

Gled. She bids you,
On the wanton Ruthes lay you downe,
And rest your gentle Head upon her Lappe,
And she will sing the Song that pleaseth you,
And on your Eye-lids Crowne the God of Sleepe,
Charming your blood with pleasing heauineffe;
Making such difference between Wake and Sleepe,
As is the difference between Day and Night,
The houre before the Heavenly Harneis'd Teeme
But his is done, and yours it is in the East.

Mort. With all my heart Ie sit, and hearre her sing:
By that time will our Booke, I thinke, be drawnne.

Gled. Doe fo:
And those Musitians that shall play to you,
Hang in the Ayre a thousand Leaguers from thence:
And straightly shall they be here: fit, and attend.

Hsff. Come Kate, thou art perfeict in lying downe:
Come, quicke, quicke, that I may lay my Head in thy Lappe.
Lady. Goe, ye giddy-Goole.

The Musick plays.

Hsff. Now I perceiue the Deuill vnderstands Welsh,
And tis no maruell he is so humorous:
By lady hee's a good Musitian.
Lady. Then would you be nothing but Musicall,
For you are altogether governed by humors:
Lye still ye Theefe, and heare the Lady singing in Welsh.

Hsff. I had rather heare (Lady) my Brach howle in Irish.

Lady. Would haue thy Head broken?

Hsff. No.

Lady. Then be still.

Hsff. Neyther, tis a Woman fault.
Lady. Now God helpe thee.

Hsff. To the Welsh Ladde Bed.
Lady. What's that?

Hsff. Peace, fierce fings.

Hears the Lady sings a Welsh Song.

Hsff. Come, Ile have your Song too.
Lady. Not mine, in good ftooth.

Hsff. Not yours, in good ftooth?
You swear like a Comfit-makers Wife:
Not you, in good ftooth; and, as true as I live;
And God shall mend me; and, as sure as day:
And giefe such Saracen freture for thy Ostiches,
As if thou neuer walk't farther then Finchbury.
Swear me Kate, like a Lady, as thou art,
A good mouth-filling Oath: and leave in ftooth,
And such protest of Pepper Ginger-breath,
To Velliet-Guards, and Sunday-Citizens.
Come, finge.

Lady. I will not finge.

Hsff. 'Tis the next way to turne Taylor, or be Redbreed teacher: and the Indentures be drawne, Ile away within these two howres: and so come in, when ye will.

Exit.

Gled. Come, come, Lord Mortimer, you are as slow,
As hot Lord Percy is on fire to goe.
By this our Booke is drawne: wee're but feale,
And then to Horfe immediately.

Mort. With all my heart.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, and others.

King. Lords, give vs leaue:
The Prince of Wales, and I,
Must have a more private conference:
But be neere at hand,
For wee shall prefently have neede of you.

Exit Lords.

I know not whether Heauen will have it fo,
For you the Aylefying service I have done;
That in his secret Doome, out of my Blood,
He'll breed Reuengement, and a Scourge for me:
But thou do'lt in thy piffages of Life,
Make me beleue, that thou art onely mark'd
For the hot vengeance, and the Rod of Heauen
To punifh my Miftreadings. Tell me elfe,
Could fuch inordinate and low defires,
Such poore, fuch bare, fuch lewd, fuch meane attempts,
Such barren pleasaures, rude societe,
As thou art matcht withall, and grafted too,
Accompanie the greatneffe of thy blood,
And hold their leuell with thy Princes heart?

Prince. So pleafe your Maiestie, I would I could Quitt all offences with as cleare excuse,
As well as I am doubtleffe I can purge
My fiele of many I am charg'd withall:
Yet fuch extermation let me begge,
As in reprooef of many Tales deuils'd,
Which oft the Earre of Greatneffe needses must heare,
By fmalles Pick-thankes, and bafe News-mongers;
I may for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath foile twaundred, and irregular,
Fifie pardon on my true submission.

King. Heauen pardon thee:
Yet let me wonder, Harry,
At thy affectiions, which doe hold a Wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancetors.

Thy place in Counsell thou haft rudefly loft,
Which by thy younger Brother is supply'd;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the Court and Princes of my blood.
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd, and fome of every man
Prophecally do fore-thinke thy fall.
Had I to lauifh of my prefence beene,
So common hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So fute and cheape to vulgar Company;
Opinion, that did helpe me to the Crowne,
Had fitt kept loyalty to poftification,
And left me in reputelesse banishment,
A fellow of no marke, nor likelyhood.
By being feldom fene, I could not fitte,
But like a Comet, I was wondred at,
That men would tell their Children, This is he:
Others would say, Where, Which is Railingbrooke.
And then I flode all Courtfeet from Heaven,
And drest my felfe in fuch Humilitie,
That I did plucke Allegiance from mens hearts,
Lowed Shows and Salvationes from their mouthes,
Even in the presence of the Crowned King.
Thus did I keepe my Perfon freh and new,
My Prefence like a Robe Pontifically,
Ne're feeue, but wondere at: and to my State,
Seldome but fumptuous, fhewed like a Feoff,
And wonne by rerenelle fuch Solemnitie.
The skipping King hee ambled vp and downe,
With shallow letter, and raue Bain Wits,
Soone kindled, and foone burnt, caried his State,
Mingled his Royaltie with Carping Fools,
Hath his fame prophaned with their Scornes,
And gave his Countenance, against his Name,
To laugh at gying Boyes, and fland the pufh
Of every Beardless vaine Comparatione;
Grew a Companion to the common STREETE,
Endeath'd himselfe to Popularitie:
That being dayly swallowed by mens Eyes,
They furfeted with Honey, and began to lose
The taste of Sweetnesse, whereof a little
More then a little, is by much too much.
So when he had occasion to be fhee,
He was but as the Cuckow in June,
Heard, not regarded: feeue but with fhee Eyes,
As fickle and blunted with Communite.
Affoord no extraordinarie Gaze,
Such as is bent on Sonne-like Maietie,
When it fhines feldome in admiring Eyes:
But rather drowne'd, and hang their eye downe,
Slept in his Face, and rendred fuch affept
As Cloudie men vfe to doe to their adulteries,
Being with his preface glutted, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very Line, Harry, Randell thou:
For thou haft loft thy Privy Princely Prudelie,
With vile participacion. Not an Eye
But is awearie of thy common fight,
Save mine, which hath defir'd to fee thee more:
Which now doth that I would not haue it doe,
Make blinde it felle with foolish tendernesse.
Prince. I shall hereafter, my thrie gracius Lord,
Be more my felle.
King. For all the World,
As thou art to this house, was Richard then:
When I from France fet foot at Rauenfphurgh
And then as I was then, is Percy now:
Now by my Scepter, and my Soule to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the State
Then thou, the shadow of Succession;
For of no Right, nor colour like to Right.
He doth fill felds with Harneis in the Realme,
Turnes head against the Lyons armed Ieues:
And being no more in debt to yeeres, then thou,
Leades ancient Lords, and reverent Bishops on
To bloody Battalls, and to bruising Armes:
What never-dying Honor hath he got,
Against renowned Douglas', whose high Deedes,
Whose hot Infurcions, and great Name in Amres,
Holds from all Saulidds fchiefe Maioritie,
And Militarie Title Captall.
Through all the Kingdomes that acknowledge Chrift,
Thrice hath the Hælfar Chans, in swathinge Clothes,
This Infant: Warrior, in his Enterprizes,
Dismisfet great Douglas', tane him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deepc Defiance vp,
And shake the peace and fafetie of our Throne.
And what fay you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The Arch-bishops Grace of Yorks, Douglas, Mortimer, Capitulate againft vp, and are vp.
But wherefore doe I tell thefe News to thee?
Why, Harry, doe I tell thee of my Foes,
Which art my nearl' and deareft Enemye?
Thou, that art like enough, through vaffal Feere,
Safe Inclination, and the start of Spleene,
To fight againft me vnder Percies pay,
To dogge his heele, and curtle at his frownes,
To shew how much thou art degenerate.
Prince. Doe not think thou, that to much hae fwy'd
Your Maietits good thoughts away from me:
I will redeeme all this on Percies head,
And in the closing of fome glorious day,
Be bold to tell you, that I am your Sonne,
When I will weare a Garment all of Blood,
And flaine my favours in a bloody Maske:
Which waftt away, shall fcowre me fthane,
And that fhall be the day, when er it lights,
That this fame Child of Honor and Renowne,
This gallant Hælfar, this all-prayed Knight,
And your vnthought-of Harry chance to meet:
For every Honor fittting on his Helme,
Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My flames redoubled. For the time will come,
That I fhall make this Northerne Youth exchange
His glorious Deedes for my Indiginite:
Percy is but my Factor, good my Lord,
To engroffe vp glorious Deedes on my behalfe:
And I will call him to fo firit account,
That he fhall render every Glory vp,
Yea, even the fleightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the Reckoning from his Heart,
This, in the Name of Heauen, I promife here:
The which, if I performe, and doe furely,
I doe befeech your Maietie, may falue
The long-grownes Wounds of my Intemperature:
If not, the end of Life containes all Bands,
And I will dye a hundred thousand Deaths,
Ere breake the smalllef parcel of this Vow:
King. A hundred thousand Rebels dye in this:
Thou fhalt haue Charge, and fouveraigne truth herein.

Enter Blunt.
How now good Blunt? thy Lookes are full of speed.
Blunt. So hath the Buifeffe that I come to fpeak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland, byth shalt woes mee,
That Douglas, and the English Rebels met
The eleventh of this moneth, at Shrewsbury:
A mightie and a fearefull Head they are,
(If Promifie be kept on every hand)
As ever offered foute playe in a State.
King. The Earle of Wemerdland fet forth to day:
With him my fonne, Lord John of Lancaster,
For this adueritement is five dayes old.
On Wednesday next, Harry thou shalt fet forward:
On Thursfday, wee our felves will march.
Our meeting is Bridgenorth and Harry,you fhall march Through
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Falstaff. Bardolph, am I not fainely away vilye, since this last edition? doe I not bare? doe I not dwinde? Why my skinne hangs about me like an olde Ladies loose Gowne: I am witherished like an olde Apple John. Well, Ile repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking: I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. And I have not forgotten what the infield of a Church is made of. I am a Pepper-Corne, a Brewen Horfe, the infield of a Church. Company, villanous Company hath beene the spyle of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are fo frettful, you cannot live long.

Falstaff. Why there is it? Come, sing me a bawdy Song, make me merry: I was as vertuously gien, as a Gentleman need to be; vertuous enough, &r; wrote little, dis'ed not above feuen times a wecke, went to a Bawdy-house not above once in a quarter of an houre, payd Money that I borrowed, three or foure times; liued well, and in Good compasse; and now I liue out of all order, out of compasse.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs bee out of all compasse; out of all reaflonable compasse, Sir John.

Falstaff. Doe thou amend thy Face, and Ile amend thy Life: Thou art our Admiral, thou bearest the Lantern in the Poope, but 'tis in the Nose of thee; thou art the Knight of the burning Lampe.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my Face does you no harme.

Falstaff. No, ile be swaine; I make as good vie of it, as many a man doth of a Deaths-Head, or a Memont d'Or. I neuer see thy Face, but I think upon Hell fire, and Dives that lived in Purple; for there he is in his Robes burning, burning. If thou wert any way gien to vertue, I would fware by thy Face; my Orth shoud bee, By the Fire. But thou art altogether gien ouer; and wert indeede, but for the Light in thy Face, the Sunne of vitr Darke-ness. When thou ran't vp Gads-Hill in the Night, to catch my Horfe, if I did not think that thou hadst beene an Athenasius; or a Ball of Wild-fire, there's no Purchase in Money. O, thou art a perpetuall Triumph, an everlastinge Bene-fire-Light: thou hast faid me a thousand Markes in Linke and Torches, walking with thee in the Night betwixt Tauerne and Tauerne: But the Sack that thou haft drunked me, would have bought me Lights as good cheape, as the dearest Chandlers in Europe. I have mainainted that Salamander of yours with fire, any time this two and thirtie yeares, Heauen reward me for it.

Bard. I would my Face were in your Belly.

Falstaff. So should I be fure to be heart-burn'd.

Enter Hoftesse.

Hoftesse. Why Sir John, what do you thinke, Sir John? doe you thinke I keepe Theeues in my Houfe? I have searce'd, I have enquired, fo haue my Husband, Man by Man, Boy by Boy, Servant by Servant: the tight of a harye was neuer loft in my houfe before.

Falstaff. Ye lye Hoftesse: Bardolph was shau'd, and loft many a harye; and Ile be fware my Pocket was pick'd: goe to, you are a Woman, goe.

Hoftesse. Who I? I defie thee: I was neuer call'd fo in mine owne houfe before.

Falstaff. Go to, I know you well enough.

Hoftesse. No, Sir John, you do not know me, Sir John: I know you, Sir John: you owe me Money, Sir John, and now you picke a quarrell, to beguile of me it: I bought you a dozen of Shirts to your Backe.

Falstaff. Doulas, filthy Doulas: I haue gien them away to Bakers Wises, and they have made Boulters of them.

Hoftesse. Now as I am a true Woman, Holland of eight shillings an Ell: You owe Money here besides, Sir John, for your Dyet, and by-Drinkings, and Money lent you, foure and twentie pounds.

Falstaff. Hee had his part of it, let him pay.

Hoftesse. Hee? alas hee is poore, hee hath no thing.

Hoftesse. I haue heard the Prince tell him, I know not where, that that Ring was Copper.

Falstaff. How? the Prince is a fake, a Sneakes-Cupepe: and if hee were heere, I would cudgell him like a Dogge, if hee would fay fo.

Enter the Prince marching and Falstaff meets him, playing on his Truncheon like a Fife.

Falstaff. How now Ladi is the Winde in that Doore? What we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

Hoftesse. My Lord, I pray you heare me.

Prince. What say'ft thou, Miftresse Quickly? How does thy Husband? I love him well, he is an honest man.

Hoftesse. Good, my Lord, heare mee.

Prince. Prethee let her alone, and lift to mee.

Prince. What say'ft thou, Lacke?

Falstaff. The other Night I fell aleepe heere behind the Arres, and had my Pocket pick'd: this Houfe is turn'd Bawdy-hous, they picke Pockets.

Prince. What didst thou loo, lacke?

Falstaff. Wilt thou beleue mee, Lad? Three or foure Bonds of fortie pound apeece, and a Scale-Ring of my Grand-fathers.

Prince. A Trifte, some eight-penny matter.

Hoftesse. So I told him, my Lord; and I said, I heard your Grace say fo: and (my Lord) hee speakes most vilye of you, like a foule-mouth'd man as hee is, and said, hee would cudgell you.

Prince. What hee did not?

Hoftesse. There's neyther Faith, Truth, nor Woman-hood in me els.

Falstaff. There's
A trebly folding view of London before the fire. In the foreground in South Warke (no. 37) a view of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre.

From No. 93. Werdenhagen. Frankfurt (1641). (Much reduced.)

The verses below are attributed to Shakespeare.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Faul. There's no more faith in thee then a stude Prunce; nor no more truthe in thee, then in a drawne Fox: and for Woosman-hood, Medlar-maran may be the Deputies of the Ward to thee. Go, you nothing do.

Hofit. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? why a thing to thanke heauen on.

Hofit. I am no thing to thanke heauen on, I wold thou shouldst know it: I am an honest mans wife; and getting thy Knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Faul. Setting thy woman-hood aside, thou art a baste to say otherwife.

Hofit. Say, what baste, thou knave thou?

Prin. An Otter, for Ida? Why an Otter?

Fal. Why? She's neither fift nor fift; a man knowes not where to have her.

Hofit. Thou art vinilus man in saying so; thou, or anie man knowes where to have him, thou knave thou.

Prince. Thou say'st true Hofteffe, and he flanders thee most grievely.

Hofit. So he doth you, my Lord, and fayde this other day, You ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

Faul. A thousand pound Hall! A Million. Thy love is worth a Million; thou ow'lt me thy love.

Hofit. Nay my Lord; he call'd you Jacke, and fayed hee would endegull you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bar. Indeed Sir Ida, you faid fo.

Fal. Yes, if he faid my Ring was Copper.

Prince. I lay this Copper. Dar'st thou bee as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why Hall thou know'lt, as thou art but a man, I dare: but, as thou art a Prince, I fear thee, at I fear the roaring of the Lyons Whelp.

Prince. And why not as the Lyon?

Fal. The King himfelfe is to bee feared as the Lyon: Do't thou thinke Ile fcare thee, as I fcare thy Father?may I do, let my Girdle breake.

Prince. O, if thou should, how would thy gutes fall about thy knes. But firm: There's no room for Faith, Truth, nor Honesty, in this bottome of thinke: it is all fill'd uppe with Gutes and Midriff. Charge an honest Woman with picking thy pocket? Why thou horon impudent imboft Rafeall, if there were any thing in thy Pocket but Tauerne Recknations, Memorandum of Bawde-houses, and one pound penny-worth of Sugar-candle to make thee long-winded: if thy pocket were enrich'd with anie other Inuries but therc, I am a Villaine: And yet you will fland to it, you will not Pocket vp wrong. Art thou not aftart'd?

Fal. Do't thou have Hall? Thou know'lt in the state of Innocency, Adam fell: and what should poore Jacke Falstaffe do, in the days of Villaney? Thou feest, I have more fift then another man, and therefore more frailty. You confette then you pickt my Pocket?

Prince. It appears fo by the Story.

Fal. Hoftiffe, I forgive thee: Go make ready Brakfast, loue thy Husband, Louke to thy Servants, and cherifh thy Guefts: Thou shalt find me trable to any honest reafon: Thou feest, I am pacified still.

Nay, I prethee be gone.

Exit Hofteffe.

Now Hall, to the newes at Court for the Robbery, Lad? How is that anwered?

Prin. O my sweet Beefe: I must stull be good Angell to thee. The Monie is paid backe againe.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying backe, 'tis a double Labour.

Prin. I am good Friends with my Father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the Exchequer the first thing thou do'lt, and do it with yuwer'd hands too.

Bard. Do my Lord.

Prin. I have procur'd thee Jacke, a Charge of Foot.

Fal. I would it had beene of Horfe. Where shal I finde one that can flate well? O, for a fine thefe of two and twenty, or thereabout: I am hoyndly vnprovred. Wel God be thanked for these Rebels, they offend none but the Verrous. I laud them, I praisfe them.

Prin. Bardolph.

Bar. My Lord.

Prin. Go beare this Letter to Lord Ida of Lancaster To my Brother Ida. This to my Lord of Welfmerland, Go Peto, to horfe for thou, and I Haue thirte the miles to ride yet ere dinner time.

Jacke, meet me to morrow in the Temple Hall. At two a clocke in the afternoone, There fhalt thou know thy Charge, and there receiue Money and Order for their Furniture. The Land is burning, Pericfl flands on yhe, And either they, or we must lower lye.

Fal. Rare words! brave world.

Hofteffe, my breakfatt, come:

Oh, I could with this Tauerne were my drumme.

Exeunt cannes.

Actus Quartus, Scena Prima.

Enter Harrie Halfberr, Worcefter, and Douglass.

Hot. Well fald, my Noble Scot, if speaking truth In this fine Age, were not thought flatterie, Such attribution should the Douglass haue, As not a Soulour of this fensons flampe, Should go fo generall currant through the world. By heauen I cannot flatterie: I defte.

The Tongues of Soothers. But a Braier place In my hearts loxe, hath no man then your Selsie. Nay, take me to your word: approve me Lord.

Dou. Thou art the King of Honor: No man fo potent breathes uppon the ground, But I will Beard him.

Enter a Meflenger.

Hot. Do fo, and 'tis well. What Letters haft there? I can but thank the.

Meff. Thes Letters come from your Father.

Hot. Letters from him? Why comes he not himfelfe?

Meff. He cannot come, my Lord, He is greuous fickke.

Hot. How? haz he the lefyrare to be fickle now In fuch a fuffling time? Who leads his power? Vnder whose Government come they along?

Dong. As heart can think: |
There is not such a word spoke of in Scotland, |
At this Dreame of Peare.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Helf. My Cousin Vernon, welcome by my Soule. |
Vern. Pray God my newes be worth a welcome, Lord. |
The Earle of Weftmerland, seuen thousand strong, |
Is marching hither-wards, with Prince Liz. |
Helf. No harme: what more? |
Vern. And further, I haue learnt'd, |
The King himselfe in perfon hath set forth, |
Or hither-wards intended speedily, |
With strong and mightie preparation. |
Helf. He shall be welcome too. |
Where is his Sonne, |
The nimble-footed Mad Cap, Prince of Wales, |
And his Cumnaed, that daft the World aside, |
And bid it pace? |
Vern. All furnisht, all in Armes, |
All plumb'd like Edrifies, that with the Winde |
Bayted like Eagles, having lately bath'd, |
Glittering in Golden Coates, like Images, |
As full of spirit as the Moneth of May, |
And gorgeous as the Sunne at Mid-Summer, |
Wanton as youthfull Goates, wilde as young Bulls. |
I saw young Harry with his Beuer on, |
His Cusses on his thighes, gallantely arm'd, |
Rife from the ground like feathered Mercury, |
And vaulted with such ease into his Stat, |
As if an Angell drop downe from the Clouds, |
To turne and winde a fierie Pegasus, |
And witch the World with Noble Horfemanship. |
Helf. No more, no more, |
War. then the Sunne in March: |
This prayse doth nourish Agnes let them come. |
They come like Sacrifices in their trimme, |
And to the fire-e'y Maid of smooke Warre, |
All hot, and bleeding, will wee offer them: |
The mayled Mars shall on his Altar fit |
Vp to the eares in blood. I am on fire, |
To heare this rich repirall is so night, |
And yet not ours. Come, let me take my Horfe, |
Who is to beare me like a Thunder-bolt, |
Against the bosome of the Prince of Wales. |
Harry to Harry, shall not Horfe to Horfe |
Meet, and soe part, till one drop downe a Coarse? |
Oh, that Glendower were come. |
Vern. There is more newes: |
I learned in Worcelfeter, as I rode along, |
He cannot draw his Power this fourteene dayes. |
Dong. That's the worst tidings that I heare of yet. |
War. By my faith, that bears a frouty found. |
Helf. What may the Kings whole Battale reach unto? |
Vern. To thirty thousand. |
Hef. Forty let it be, |
My Father and Glendower being both away, |
The powres of vs, may feue so great a day. |
Come, let vs take a mutter speedily; |
Doomefray is near: dye all, dye merrily. |
Dong. Take not the dying, I am out of feare |
Of death, or deaths hand, for this one halfe yeare. |

Exeunt Omnnes.

Scena
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Falstaff. Bardolph, get thee before to Countrhy, fill me a Bottle of Sack, our Soulilders shall march through woeill to Sutton-coop-hill to Night.

Bardolph. Will you give me Money, Captain?

Falstaff. Lay out, lay out.

Bardolph. This Bottle makes an Angel.

Falstaff. And if it do, take it for thy labour: and if it make twentie, take them all, Ie answere the Coynage.

Bid my Lieutenant Peto meets me at the Townes end.

Bard. I will Captaine: farewell. Exit.

Falstaff. If I be not alham'd of my Soulilders, I am a Sower's-Gurnet: I have mi-cy'd the Kings Prefe damnably. I haue got, in exchange of a hundre and fiftie Soulilders, three hundre and oddie Pounds. I preffe me none but good Houfe-holders, Yeomens Sonnes enquire me of a contratd Batchelders, fuch as had beene ask'd twice on the Banes: fuch a Commoditie of warme flues, as had as loeve heare the Dullum, as a Drumme: fuch as feare the report of a Caliuer, worfe then a fruck-foole, or a hurt wilde-Ducke. I preffe me none but fuch Toftes and Butter, with Hearts in their Bellyes no bigger then Pinnes heads, and they haue bought out their fervices: and now, my whole Charge consists of Ancients, Corporals, Lieutenants, Gentleman of Companies, Slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted Cloth, where the Glutton Dogges licked his Sores: and fuch, as indeed were neuer Soulilders, but dif-carded vnuitc Seruingmen, younger Sonnes to younger Brothers, relouted Taplers and Officers, Trade-falne, the Cankers of a calme World, and long Peace, tenne times more di-honorable ragged, then an old-fac'd Ancient; and fuch haue I to fill vp the roome of them that haue bought out their fervices: that you would thinke, that I had a hundre and fiftie tother'd Prodigalls, lately come from Swine-keeping, from eating Draifie and Huske. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had vnloadd all the Gibbets, and preft the dead bodies. No eye hath feene fuch skar-Crowes: Ie not march through Countrhy with them, that's flat. Nay, and the Villaines march wide betwixt the Legges, as if they had Gyues on: for indeede, I had the moft of them out of Prifon. There's not a Shirt and a halfe in all my Company: and the halfe Shirt is two Naplins tac't togethre, and throwne ove the fouldiers like a Herald's Coate, without flesues: and the Shirt, to faie the truth, flute from my Hoft of S. Albones, or the Red-Neo Inne-keeper of Dauntry. But that's all one, they're finde Linnen enough on every Hedge.

Enter the Prince, and the Lord of Wemnerland.

Prince. How now blowne Jack? how now Quilt?

Falstaff. What hai! How now mad Wag, what a Deuell do'th thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Wemnerland, I cry you mercy, I thought your Honour had alreadie beene at Shrewbury.

Wemnerland. 'Faith, Sir John, it's more then time that I were there, and you too: but my Powers are there already. The King, I can tell you, looks for vs all: we muft away all to Night.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Were. The number of the King exceedeth ours:
For God's sake, Cousin, stay till all come in.

The Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King,
If you vouchsafe me hearing, and respect.

Exeunt. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt:
And would to God you were of our determination.
Some of us love you well: and even those some Endue your great dearings, and good name,
Because you are not of our quality,
But stand against vs like an Enemy.

Blunt. And Heaven defend, but fill I should stand so,
So long as out of Limit, and true Rule,
You stand against anyonted Malefie.

But to my Charge.
The King hath sent to know
The nature of your Griefes, and whereupon
You confine from the Breaft of Cuill Peace,
Such bold Hotlittie, teaching his dutous Land
Austeious Crueltie. If that the King
Have any way your good Defeats forgot,
Which he confesseth to be manifold,
He bids you name your griefes, and with all speed
You shall have your defires, with interest;
And Pardon absolute for your felfe, and these,
Herein mis-led, by youruggiflion.

Hotspur. The King is kinde:
And well we know, the King
Knowes at what time to promife, when to pay.
My Father, my Vnkle, and my felfe,
Did give him that fame Royaltie he weares:
And when he was not fife and twentie strong,
Sicke in the Worlds regard, wretched, and low,
A poore vnmined Out-law, fieaking home,
My Father gave him welcome to the shore:
And when he heard him fwear, and vow to God,
He came but to be Duke of Lancader,
To fie his Lauerie, and begge his Peace,
With tears of Innocencie, and tearmes of Zeale;
My Father, in kinde heart and pity mou'd,
Sware him affifiance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the Lords and Barons of the Realme
Perceiv'd Northumberland did leanse to him,
The more and leffe came in with Cap and Knee,
Met him in Boroughs, Cities, Villages,
Attended him on Bridges, flood in Lanes,
Layd Gifts before him, proffer'd them their Oathes,
Gave him their Heires,as Pages followed him,
Even at the heelees, in golden mailiditudes.
He presently, at Greatnesh knows it felfe,
Steps me a little higher then his Vow
Made to my Father, while his blood was poore,
Vpon the naked fware at Rauenfburgh:
And now (forsooth) takes on him to reforme
Some certaine Edicts, and some ftrait Decrees,
That lay too heauie on the Common-wealth;
Cries out vpon abufes, feemes to weep
Ouer his Countries Wrongs and by this Face,
This feeming Brow of Justice, did he winne
The hearts of all that hee did ange for.
Proceeded further, cut me off the Heads
Of all the Favories, that the abfent King
In deputation left behinde him heere,

When hee was perfonall in the Irish Warre:
Blunt. Tut, I came not to heare this.

Hotspur. Then to the point.
In short time after, hee depos'd the King,
Soone after that, depriv'd him of his Life:
And in the neck of that, task't the whole State.
To make that words, suffer'd his Kineman March,
Who is, if every Owner were plaide,
Indeeed his King, to be engag'd in Wales,
There, without Ranfome, to ye forfeited:
Difgrace'd me in my happy Victories,
Sought to intrap me by intelligences.
Rated my Vnkle from the Counsell-Boord,
In rage diuid'd my Father from the Court,
Broke Oath on Oath, committed Wrong on Wrong,
And in conclufion, drove vs to feek out
This Head of fafetie; and withall, to prie
Into his Title: the which wee fane
Too indirect, for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I returne this anfwer to the King?

Wee'll with-draw a while:
Goe to the King, and let there be impawnd
Some furetie for a fafe returne againe,
And in the Morning early shall my Vnkle
Bring him our purpose: and fo farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of Grace and Loue.

Hotspur. And may't be, so weehall.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Arch-bishop of York, and Sir Michell.

Archbishop, good Sir Michell, heare this sealed Briefe
With winged haffe to the Lord Marshall,
This to my Cousin Scroope, and all the rest
To whom they are directed.
If you know how much they doe import,
You would make haste.
Arch. Like enough you doe.
To morrow, good Sir Michell, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Muft bide the touch. For Sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly guene to understand,
The King, with mightie and quick-rayed Power,
Metes with Lord Harry: and I feare, Sir Michell,
What with the ficknefe of Northumberland,
Whose Power was in the firft proportion;
And what with Owen Glendcwers abfence thence,
Who with them was rated firme too,
And comes not in, ouer-rul'd by Prophecies,
I feare the Power of Percy is too weake,
To wage an infant trayll with the King.
Sir Mich. Why, my good Lord, you need not feare,
There is Douglas, and Lord Mortimer.
Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.
Sir Mich. But there is Mardake, Vernon, Lord Harry Percy,
And there is my Lord of Worcefter,
And a Head of gallant Warriors,
Noble Gentlemen.
Art. And so there is, but yet the King hath drawne
The speciall head of all the Land together:
The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
The Noble Wetherland, and warlike Blunt;
And many more Corneualls, and dare men
Of eminence, and command in Armes.
Sir M. Doubt not my Lord, he shall be well oppo'd
Art. I hope no leeffe? Yet needfull'tis to fear,
And to prevent the word, Sir Michael Speed;
For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the King
Dismisses his power, he meanes to visit vs:
For he had heard of our Confederacy,
And, 'tis but Wifedome to make strong against him:
Therefore make haff, I mufl go write against
To other Friends and to farewell, Sir Michael. Excut.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
Earle of Wetherland, Sir Walter Blunt,
And Faulſaffe.

King. How bloody ly the Sunne begins to peer Aboue your busky hill: the day lookes pale
At his diſtemper.

Prim. The Southerne winde
Doth play the Trumpet to his purpose,
And by his hollow whiffing in the Leanes,
Forces a Tempest, and a blaff'ring day.

King. Then with the lofes let it sympathize,
For nothing can feme foule to thofe that win.

Enter Woreser.

The Trumpet founds.

King. How now my Lord of Worſer? 'Tis not well
That you and I should meet upon fuch terms:
As now we meet. You have deeceu'd our truft,
And made vs doffe our exult Robes of Peace,
To cruſh our old limbs in vagnete Steele:
This is not well, my Lord, this is not well.
What fay you to it? Will you agaie vnknit
This churſhſh knot of all-abhorred Warre?
And moe in that obedience Orbe againe,
Where you did giue a faine and natural light,
And be no more an exhall'd Meteor,
A prodigie of Fear, and a Portent
Of broached Milcheefe, to the vnborne Times?

Wor. Heare me, my Liege:
For mine owne part, I could be well content
To entertaine the Lagge-end of my life
With quiet hours: For I do protest,
I have not fought the day of this diflike.

King. You have not fought it: how comes it then?
Pal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

Prim. Peace, Cheweſt, peace.

Wor. It pleads your Malefity, to tune your lookes
Of Favours, from my Selfe, and all our Houfe;
And yet I muſt remember you my Lord,
We were the firſt, and deareſt of your Friends:
For you, my faffe of Officer did I brake
In Richards time, and posſed day and night
To meete you on the way, and kiffe your hand,
When yet you were in place, and in account
Nothing fo strong and fortunate, as I;
It was my Selfe, my Brother, and his Sonne,
That brought you home, and boldly did out-dare
The danger of the time. You frowe to vs,
And you did fwear that Oath at Doncaffer,
That you did nothing of purpoſe gainſt the State,
Nor claime no further, then your new-falne right,
The feate of Grant, Dukeſdom of Lancaster,
To this, we fware our side: But in short space,
It rain'd doone Fortune showeing on your head,
And fuch a flood of Greatneffe fell on you,
What with our helpe, what with the abſent King,
What with the injuries of wantone time,
The feeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contraryſh Windes that held the King
So long in the vnluck'y Iriſh Warres,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And from this fwareſe of faire ad vantages,
You tooke occaſion to be quickly woo'd,
To gripe the general foamy into your hand,
Forgot your Oath to vs at Doncaffer,
And being fed by vs, you vs'd vs fo,
As that vngentle gull the Cuckowes Bird,
Witch the Sparrow, did oppreffe our Neaſt,
Grew by our Feeding, to fo great a bulke,
That even our Loue durft not come neere your fight
For fear of swallowing: But with nimble wing
We were inforc'd for safety fake, to flye
Out of your fight, and raife this prefent Head,
Whereby we fand oppoſed by fuch meanes
As you your felſe, haue forgd'gainſt your felſe,
By vnkinde rage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworne to vs in yonger enterprise.

Kin. Thefe things indeede you have articulated,
Proclaim'd at Market Crootfe, read in Churches,
To face the Garment of Rebellion
With some fine colour, that may pleafe the eye
Of fickle Changelings, and poore Discontents,
Which gape, and rub the Elbow at the newes
Of furnely furnely Innovation:
And neuer yet did Infuroration want
Such water-colours, to impainte his caufe:
Nor moody Beggars, fluring for a time
Of fell-mell hauocke, and confusion.

Prim. In both our Armies, there is many a foule
Shall pay full deare for this entrenchment,
If once they loyne in triall. Tell your Nephew,
The Prince of Wales doth ioyne with all the world
In praife of Henry Perce: By my Hopecs,
This prefent enterprize fet off his head,
I do not thinke a braver Gentleman,
More abfolute, valiant, or more valiant yong,
More daring, or more bold, is now alioe,
To grace this latter Age with Noble deeds.
For my part, I may speake it to my shame,
I have a Truant bene to Chuality,
And fo I heare, he doth account me too:
Yet this before my Fathers Malefity,
I am content that he shall take the oddes
Of his great name and eminence,
And will, to fue the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him, in a Single Fight.

King. And Prince of Wales, do dare we venter thee,
Albeit, confiderations infinite...
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Do make against it: No good Worther, no,
We love our people well: even tho' we love
That are mil’d upon your Cousin’s part:
And will they take the offer of our Grace?
Both he, and they, and you, yes, every man
Shall be my Friend again, an Ile be his.
So tell your Cousin, and bring me word,
What he will do. But if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dare correction wite on vs,
And they shall do their Office. So be gone,
We will not now be troubled with reply,
We offer faire, take it artfully.

Exit Worcester.

Prin. It will not be accepted, on my life,
The Douglas and the Hotspur both together,
Are confident against the world in Armes.
King. Hence therefore, ever Leader to his charge.
For on their anwer will we set on them;
And God befriended vs, as our cause be just.
Exeunt.

Manet Prince and Falstaff.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battell,
And befriend me, it is a point of friendship.
Prin. Nothing but a Colosus can do thee that friendship
Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed time Hal, and all well.
Prin. Why, thou ow’st heauen a death.
Fal. ‘Tis not due yet: I would bee loath to pay him before his day. What neede I bee so forward with him, that call’s not on me? Well, ’tis no matter, Honor pricks me on. But how if Honour pricks me off when I come on? How then? Can Honour fet too a legge? No: or an arme? No: Or take away the greffe of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in Surgerie, then? No. What is Honour? A word. What is that word Honour? Ayre: A trim reckoning. Who hath it? He that dy’d a Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it ineffable then? yes, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it, therefore Ile none of it. Honour is a meece Scutchon, and so ends my Catechisme.

Scena Secunda.

Wer. O no, my Nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The libelal kinde offer of the King.
Ver. ’Twere bett he did.
Wer. Then we are all vndone.
It is not possible, it cannot be,
The King would keep his word in lowing vs,
He will fcape vs still, and finde a time
To punish this offence in others faults:
Supposition, all our lies, shall be flinke full of eyes;
For Trelion is but trusted like the Fowre,
Who ne’re fo tame, fo cherifh, and lock’d vp,
Will have a wilde trickle of his Ancelors:
Looke how he can, or fad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our lookes,
And we shall feede like Oxen at a flail,
The better cherifh, fill the nearer death.
My Nephews tric太平e may be well forgot,
It hath the execue of youth, and heatr of blood,
And an adopted name of Pituledge,
A hare-brain’d Hotspur, govern’d by a Spleenie:
All his offences lie upon my head,
And on his Fathers. We did traine him on,
And his corruption being tame from vs,
We as the Spring of all, shall pay for all:
Therefore good Cousin, let not Harry know
In any cafe, the offer of the King.
Ver. Deliver what you will, Ile say ’dis fo.
Here comes your Cousin.

Enter Hotspur.

Hot. My Vnkle is return’d,
Deliever vp my Lord of Wesmerland.
Vnkle. What news?
Wer. The King will bid you battell preffently.
Dou. Defie him by the Lord of Wesmerland.
Hot. Lord Douglas: Go you and tell him fo.
Dou. Marry and shall, and verie willingly.

Wer. There is no seeming mercy in the King.
Hot. Did you begge any? God forbid.
Wer. I told him gently of our greuences,
Of his Oath-breaking: which he mended thus,
By now forswearing that he is forisborne,
He calls vs Rebels, Traitors, and will scourge
With haughty armes, this hatefull name in vs.

Enter Douglas.

Dou. Arme Gentlemen, to Armes, for I hate thrown
A braue defiance in King Henry’s teeth:
And Wesmerland that was ingag’d did beare it,
Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.
Wer. The Prince of Wales stept forth before the King,
And Nephew, challeng’d you to single fight.
Hot. O, would the querrell lay upon our heads,
And that no man might draw short breath to day,
But I and Harry Mowndi. Tell me, tell me,
How shew’d his Talking? Seem’d it in contempt?
Ver. No, by my Soule: I never in my life
Did heare a Challenge vrg’d more modestly,
Vnkle a Brother should a Brother dare
To gentle exercif, and prove of Armes.
He gueue you all the Duties of a Man,
Trimm’d vp your praires with a Princely tonge,
Spoke your deferuings like a Chronicle,
Making you euer better then his praiue,
By full deprizing praiue, valeu’d with you:
And which became him like a Prince indeed,
He made a blushing citall of himselfe,
And chid his Trewant praiue with fuch a Grace,
As if he maftred there a double Spirit
Of teaching, and of learning Ignatly:
There did he paffe. But let me tell the World,
If he out-lie the emote of this day,
England did neuer owe fo sweet a hope,
So much mifconstrued in his Wantonnesse.
Hot. Cousin, I thinke thou art enamored
On his Foilles: neuer did I heare
Of any Prince fo wilde at Liberty.
But be he as he will, yet once ere night,
I will embod him with a Souldiers arme,
That he shall shrinke vnder my curtseye.
Arme, arme with speed. And Fellow’s, Soldiers, Friends,
Better confider what you have to do,
That I that have not well the gift of Tongue,

Can
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Can lift your blood vp with perfwacion. Enter a Messenger.

Mef. My Lord, here are Letters for you.

Hot. I can not reade them now.

O Gentlemen, the time of life is short;
To spend that shortnesse safely, were too long.
If life did ride upon a Dial point,
Still ending at the arruall of an hour;
And if we live, we live to tred on Kings:
If dyes bruit death, when Princes dye with vs.
Now for our Consciences, the Armes is faire,
When the intent for bearing them is luft.
Enter another Messenger.

Mef. My Lord prepare, the King comes on sace.

Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale:
For I professe not talking Onely this,
Let each man do his part. And here I draw a Sword,
Whole worthy temper I intend to staine
With the best blood that I can meete withall,
In the Adorature of this penfulous day.
Now Eperance Percy, and fet on:
Sound all the lofty Instrument of Warre,
And by that Musick, let vs all intromecte:
For heauen to earth, some of vs neuer shall,
A second time do such a curteine.

They embrace, the Trumpets sound, the King entereth with his power, alarum unto the battell. Then enter Douglas, and Sir Walter Blunt.

Blu. What is thy name, that in battel thus crost me? What honor doist thou seeke upon my head?

Dou. Know then my name is Douglas, and I haunt thee in the battell thus,
Because some tell me, that thou art a King.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Dou. The Lord of Stafford deere to day hath bought Thy likenesse; for instead of thee King Harry,
This Sword hath ended him, to shal it thee,
Vnlesto thou yield thee as a Prisoner.

Blu. I was not borne to yeeld, thou haughty Scot,
And thou shalt finde a King that will revenge
Lords Stafford's death.

Figt. Blunt & Blane, then enters Hotspur.

Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou sought at Holmedon thus
I never had triumphed o're a Scot.

Dou. All's done, all's won, here breathes lies the king
Hot. Where?

Dou. Here.

Hot. This Douglas? No, I know this face full well:
A gallant Knight he was, his name was Blunt,
Semblably furnish'd like the King himselfe.

Dou. Ah fool; go with thy foule whether it goes,
A borrowed Title haft thou bought too deere.
Why didst thou tell me, that thou wert a King?

Hot. The King hath many marching in his Coats.

Dou. Now by my Sword, I will kill all his Coates,
Ile murder all his Wardrobe piece by piece,
Vntill I meet the King.

Hot. Vp, away.

Our Soldiars stand full fairley for the day. Exeunt Alarum, and enter Falstaff

Fal. Though I could scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here: here's no fororing, but vp the pate. Soft who are you? Sir Walter Blunt, there's Honour for you: here's no vanly, I am as hot as molten Lead, and as heavy too; heauen keepe Lead out of mee, I neede no more weight then mine owne Bowelles, I have led my rag of Muffins where they are pepper'd: there's not three of my 350. left alive, and they for the Townes end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Pri. What standst thouidle here? Lend me thy sword,
Many a Nobleman likes tarke and fitte
Vnder the houses of vaunting enemies,
Whole deaths are vnreueing'd. Prethly lend me thy sword
Fal. O Hal, I prethee use me loose to breath awhile:
Turke Gregory neuer did such deeds in Armes, as I have done this day. I haue paid Percy, I haue made him sure.

Pri. He is indeed, and liuing to kill thee: I prethee lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay Hal, if Percy bee allue, thou gettest not my sword; but take my Puffoll if thou wilt.

Pri. Glue it me: What, is it in the Caf?
Fal. I Hal, 'tis hot: There's that will Sacke a City.

The Prince draws out a Battle of Sacke.

Pri. What, is it a time to left and daily now. Exit.

Fal. If Percy be alive, Ile pierce him: if he do come in my way, lo: if he do not, if I come in his (willingly) let him make a Carbonado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: Glue mee life, which if I can live, so: if not, honour comes vnbook'd for, and ther's an end. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Alerum, excursed, enter the King, the Prince, Lord John of Lancaster, and Earle of Weftmerland.

King. I prethee Harry withdraw thy selfe, thou bleeder too much: Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

Pri. Not I, my Lord, vnlefe I did bleed too.

Pri. I befeech your Maiestye make vp,
Leaff you retirement do amaze your friends.

King. I will do so:
My Lord of Weftmerland leade him to his Tent.

Weft. Come my Lord, Ile leade you to your Tent.

Pri. Lead me my Lord? I do not need your helpe: And heauen forbid a Shallow scratch should drive
The Prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where astin's Nobility lies troden on,
And Rebels Armes triumph in masstakers.

Weft. We breathe too long: Come cofin Weftmerland,
Our duty this way lies, for heauens fake come.

Pri. By heauen thou hast deceiv'd me Lancaster, I did not thinke thee Lord of such a spiritt: Before, I lou'd thee as a Brother, John;
But now, I do repect thee as my Soule.

King. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point,
With luster maintenance then I did looke for
Of such an ungrowne Warriour.

Pri. O this Boy, lends mettall to vs all. Exit.

Enter Douglas.

Dou. Another King? They grow like Hydra's heads:
I am the Douglas, fatal to all tho:
That weare thisd colours on them. What art thou
That counterfeit the person of a King?

King. The King himselfe: who Douglas grieues at hart

So
So many of his shadowes thou haft met,
And not the very King, I have two Boyes
Seake Percy and thy selfe about the Field:
But feeing thou fall'ft on me so luckily,
I will affay thee so defend thy felde.
   Doow. I fear thou art another counterfeit:
And yet infaith thou bear'st thee like a King:
But mine I am sure thou art, whoere thou be,
And thus I win thee.
   They fight, Douglas flyeth.

Prin. Hold vp they head vile Scot, or thou art like Neuer to hold it vp againe : the Spirits
Of valiant Sherly, Stafford, Blunt, are in my Armes;
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who neuer promiseth, but he meanes to pay.
   They fight, Douglas flyeth.

Chereely My Lord: how fare's your Grace?
Sir Nicholas Gaway hath for succour fent,
And so hath Clifford: Ile to Clifford fraught.
   King. Stay, and breath awhile.
Thou haft receiv'd thy lofty suit,
And shew'd thou mak'ft it some tender of my life
In this faire rescue thou haft brought to mee.

Prin. O heauen, they did me too much injury,
That euer said I hearkned to your death.
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you,
Which would have bene as speedy in your end,
As all the poynsonous Potions in the world,
And sauid the Treacherous labour of your Sonne.

K. Make vp to Clifford, Ile to Sir Nicholas Gaway. Exit
   Enter Hotspur.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Marmouth.
Prin. Thou speake'st as if I would deny my name.
Hot. My name is Harrie Percy.
Prin. Why then I see a very valiant rebel of that name.
I am the Prince of Wales, and thinke not Percy,
To flare with me in glory any more:
Two Starres keepe not their motion in one Sphere,
Nor can one England brooke a double reigne,
Of Harry Percy, and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it Harry, for the houre is come
To end the one of vs; and would to heauen,
Thy name in Armes, were now as great as mine.

Prin. Ile make it greater,ere I part from thee,
And all the budding Honors on thy Creft,
Ile crop, to make a Garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brooke thy Vanities.
   Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Well said Hal, to it Hal. Nay you shall finde no
Boyies play heere, I can tell you.

   Enter Douglas be fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if be were dead. The Prince Killeth Percy.

Hot. Oh Harry, thou haft robb'd me of my youth:
I better brooke the loffe of brittle life,
Then thoofe proud Titles thou haft wonne of me,
They wound my thoughts worse, then the fword my fphot;
But though's the flauce of Life, and Life, Times foole;
And Time, that takes furrey of all the world,
Must have a fhop. O, I could Prophete,
But that the Earth, and the cold hand of death,
Lyes on my Tongue: No Percy, thou art dutt
And food for

Prin. For Wormes, brane Percy. Farewell great heart:
I knew'd ambition, how much art thou shrunke?
When that this bodie did containe a spirit,

A Kingdome for it was too small a bound:
But now two paces of the vileft Earth
Is roome enough. This Earth that beares the dead,
Bears not alioe fhou a Gentleman.
If thou wert not capable of curende,
I shou'd not make fo great a chew of Zeale.
But let my favours hide thy manfold face,
And even in thy behalfe, Ile thanke my selfe
For doing thefe fayle Rites of Tenderneffe.
Adieu, and take thy praffe with thee to heaven,
Thy ignomy flicke with thee in the grave,
But not remembered in thy Epitaph.
What? Old Acquaintance? Could not all this fleft
Keep in a little life? Poore Jacke, farewell:
I could have better fpard a better man.
O, I should have a heavie muffe of thee,
If I were much in loue with Vanity.
Death hath not Jurcke fo fae a Deere to day,
Though many dearer in this bloody Fray:
Imbowell'd I will I fee thee by and by,
Till then, in blood, by Noble Prince Iye.

Falstaff rifieth vp.

Falst. Imbowell'd! If thou imbowell mee to day, Ile give you leisure to powder me, and eat me too to morrow.
Twa time to counterfet, or that hott Termagant Scot, had pai'd me fot and lot too.Counterfeit I am no counterfet; to dye, is to be a counterfet, for hee is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man: But to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby lietue, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life In deed. The better part of Valour, is Difcretion; in the which better part, I have fued my life. I am afraine of this Gun-powder Percy though he be dead. How if hee should counterfeit too, and rife? I am afraine hee would prove the better counterfeit:therefoe Ile make him fure:
yea, and Ile fware I kill'd him. Why may not hee rife as well as I: Nothing confutes me but eyes, and no-bodie fears me.Therefore firs, with a new wound in your thigh come you along me.

   Enter Prince and John of Lancaster.

Prin. Come Brother John, full brauely haft thou fheit thy Maiden fword.

John. But Jacke, who haue we here?
Did you not tell me this Fat man was dead?

Prin. I did, I faw him dead,
Breathleffe, and bleeding on the ground: Art thou alue?
Or is it fantasie that playes upon our eye-fight?
I prethee speake, we will not truue our eyes
Without our carea. Thou art not what thou seem't.

Fal. No, that's certaine: I am not a double man: but if I be not Jacke Falstaffe, then am I a Jacke: There is Percy, if your Father will do me any Honor, for: if not, let him kill the next Percy himfelf. I looke to be either Earle or Duke, I can affure you.

Fal. Did'th thou Lord, Lord, how the world is giuen to Lying! I grant you I was done, and out of Breath, and so was he, but we rofe both at an instant, and fought a long houre with Shrewsbure Clockes. If I may bee beleued, so : if not, let them that should reward Valour, beare the finne upon their owne heads. Ife take't on my death
I gave him this wound in the Thigh: if the man were aliue, and would deny it, I would make him eate a piece of my fword.

John. This is the strangest Tale that e're I heard.

Prin. This is the strangest Fellow, Brother John.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

73

Come bring your luggage Nobly on your backe:
For my part, if a lye may do thee grace,
Ile gil'd it with the happiest teares I have.

A Retreat is founded.
The Trumpets found Retreat, the day is ours:
Come Brother, let's to the highest of the field,
To see what Friends are living, who are dead. Exeunt

Fal. Ile follow as they say, for Reward. Hee that rewards me, heauen reward him. If I do grow great again, Ile grow leffe? For Ile purge, and leave Sucke, and live cleanly, as a Nobleman should do. Exit

Scena Quarta.

The Trumpets sound.
Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
Earle of Wrismerland, with Worcester & Vernon Priemen.

King. Thus ever did Rebellion finde Redeake.
Ill-sprited Worcester, did we not send Grace,
Pardon, and tearmes of Loue to all of you?
And would'ft thou turne our offers contrary?
Mifs'th the tenor of thy Kinsmans truft?
Three Knights upon our party flame to day,
A Noble Earle, and many a creature eile,
Had beene alius this houre,
If like a Christian thou had'lt truly borne
Betwixt our Armies, true Intelligence.

Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to,
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be away'd, it falls on mee.

King. Beare Worcester to death, and Vernon too:
Other Offenders we will paufe upon.

How goes the Field?

Prin. The Noble Scot Lord Douglass, when hee saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The Noble Percy flame, and all his men,
Vpon the foot of fear, and with the reit;
And falling from a hill, he was so bruiz'd
That the pursuers tooke him. At my Tent
The Douglass is, and I beseech your Grace.
I may dispoze of him.

King. With all my heart.

Prin. Then Brother John of Lancastre,
To you this honourable bounty shall belong:
Go to the Douglass, and deliuer him
Vp to his pleature, rais'dome and free:
His Valour shewne vpon our Crefts to day,
Hath taught vs how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the boome of our Adversaries.

King. Then this remaines; that we diuide our Power.
You Sonne John, and my Cousin Wellmerland
Towards Yorke shall bend you, with your deereft speed,
To meet Northumberland, and the Prelate Scroope,
Who(as we heare) are bully in Armes.
My Selve, and you Sonne Harry will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower, and the Earle of March.
Rebellion in this Land shall lose his way,
Meeting the Chekke of such another day:
And since this Butnettle to faire is done,
Let vs not leaue till all our owne be wonne. Exeunt.

FINIS.
The Second Part of Henry the Fourth,
Containing his Death: and the Coronation of King Henry the Fifth.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

INDUCTION.

Enter Rumour.

Pen your Eares: for which of you will stop
The vent of Hearing, when loud Rumour speakes;
I, from the Orient, to the drooping West
[Making the winde my Poit-horse] still unfold
The Acts commenced on this Ball of Earth.
Vpon my Tongue, continuall Slanders ride,
The which, in every Language, I pronounce,
Stuffing the Eares of them with idle Reports:
I speake of Peace, while coert Ennemie
(Vnder the smile of Safety) wounds the World:
And who but Rumour, who but only I
Make fearfull Musters, and prepar’d Defence,
Whil’st the bigge years, wroune with some other griefes,
Is thought with childe, by the fierce Tyrant, Warre,
And no fuch matter! Rumour, is a Pipe
Blowne by Surmifes, Ieoloues, Conjectures;
And of fo eafe, and so plausible a Pop,
That the blunt Moniter, with vacuont heads,
The ffill diffordant, wauering Multitude,
Can play vpon it. But what neede I thus
My well-knowne Body to Anathomize
Among my houphold? Why is Rumour here?
I run before King Harries victory,
Who in a bloody field by Shrewsburie
Hath beaten downe yong Hotspur, and his Troopes,
Quenching the flame of bold Rebellion,
Even with the Rebels blood. But what meane I
To fpeake so true at ftrift? My Office is
To noyfe abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell
Vnder the Wrath of Noble Hotspur’s Sword:
And that the King, before the Douglas Rage
Stoop’d his Annotated head, as low as death,
This haue I rumour’d through the peffant-Townes,
Betwene the Royall Field of Shrewsburie,
And this Warne-exten-Hole of ragged Stone,
Where Hotspur’s Father, old Northumberland,
Lyes crafty ficke. The Poftes come trying on,
And not a man of them brings other newes
Then they have learn’d of Me. From Rumours Tongues,
They bring smooth-Comforts-false, worfe then True-wrongs.

Exit.
Enter Morton.

Nor. Yea, this mans brow, like to a Title-leaf, Fore-tells the Nature of a Tragicke Volume: So lookest the Strong, when the Impertinent Flood Hath left a wintrified Vpurpation.

Say Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury (my Noble Lord) Where hatefull death put on his vgiest Maske To fright our party.

North. How doth my Sonne, and Brother? Thou tremblest: and the whiteeenee in thy Cheekke Is alter then thy Tongue, so tell me more.

Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, So dull, so dead in looke, so woe-be-gone, Drew Priams Curtaine, in the dead of night, And with haue told him, Halfes his Troy was burn'd. But Priam found the Fire, ere he his Tongue: And I, my Percies death, ere thou reportst it. This, thou wouldst say: Your Sonne did thus, and thus: Your Brother, thus. So fought the Noble Douglass, Stopping my greedy ears, with their bold deeds. But in the end (to stop mine Eare indeed) Thou hast a Sigh, to blow away this Praife, Ending with Brother, Sonne, and all are dead. Mor. Douglass is living, and your Brother, yet But for my Lord, your Sonne.

North. Why, he is dead. See what a ready tongue Supicion hath: He that but fears the thing, he would not know, Hath by Infinitel, knowledge from others Eyes, That what he feared, is chanc'd. Yet speake (Morton) Tell thou thy Earle, his Dilation Lies, And I will take it, as a sweet Deligace, And make thee rich, for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great, to be (by me) gainstaid:

Your Spirit is too true, your Feares too certaine.

North. Yet for all this, say not that Percies dead. I see a strange Confession in thine Eye:

Thou shalt thy head, and hold it Feare, or Sinne, To speake a truth. If he be flour, say so:

The Tongue offends not, that reports his death: And he doth finne that doth bylye the dead: Not he, which fayes the dead is not alive: Yet the first bringer of unwelcome Newes Hath but a lousing Office: and his Tongue, Sounds euer after at a gullen Bell

Remembered,knolling a departing Friend.

L:Barr. I cannot thinner (my Lord) your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry, I should force you to beleue That, which I would to heauen, I had not feeen. But thefe mine eyes, saw him in bloody flate, Rend'ring faint quittance (wearied, and out-breath'd) To Henrie Monmouth, whole (wift wrath beate downe The neuer-daunted Percie to the earth, From whence (with life) he neuer more sprung vp. In few, his death (what spirit is in the grave? Even to the deulest Peazant in his Campes) Being bruited once, tooke fire and heste away From the belt temper'd Courage in his Troopers. For from his Mettle, was his Party feeld; Which once, in him stated, all the reft Turn'd on themselfes, like dull and heauy Lead: And as the Thing, that's heauy in it felfe, Upon enforcement, flies with greatest speede, So did our Men, heauy in Harperrar looke, Lend to this weight, such lightneffe with their Feare, That Arrows fled not whiter toward their ayme, Then did our Soldiers (saying at their safety) Fly from the field. Then was that Noble Worcestere Too soone ta'ne prisioner: and that furious Scot, The bloody Douglas) whole well-labouring fword Had three times flaine th'appearance of the King, Gan valle his Homaceke, and did grace the flame Of those that turn'd their backes: and in his flight, Stumbling in Feare, was tooke. The fumme of all, Is, that the King hath wonne: and hath fent out A feezy power, to encounter you my Lord, Vnder the Conduct of yong Lancater And Westmoreland. This is the Newes at full.

North. For this, I shall have time enough to mourne. In Poyfon, there is Physticke: and this newes (Huening beeone well)that would have made me ficke, Being ficke, have in some mesfare, made me well. And as the Wretch, whose Feauer-weakned joys, Like strengtheffe Hingdes, buckle vnder life, Impatien of his Fis, breaks like a fire Out of his keepers armes: Euen so, my Limbes (Weak'ned with greefe) being now inrag'd with greefe, Are thrice themselfes. Hence therefore thou nice trutch, A scalle Gauntlet now, with lyoyns of Steele Must glouse this hand. And hence thou flickly Qoiofe, Thou art a guard too wanton for the head, Which Princes, feth'ld with Conquest, ayme to hit. Now bide my Browes with Iron, and approch The rag'dt houres, that Time and Spight dare bring To crowne vpon then'ag'd Northumberland. Let Heaven kiffe Earth: now let not Natures hand Keepes the wilde Flood confin'd: Let Order dye, And let the world no longer be a flage. To foarde Contemplation long the AEG:

But let one spirit of the First-borns Cain.

Reigne

77
The Second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Reigne in all bodies, that each heart being set
On bloody Courtes, the rude Scene may end,
And darkness be the burier of the dead.
(Honor.)
L.Bar. Sweet Earle, diswore not wifdom from your
Mrs. The lines of all your losing Complexes
Lose on your health, the which if you guesse o're
To formy Paffion, mutt perfecute decay,
You caft th'event of Warre(my Noble Lord)
And fumm'd the accompl of Chance, before you fald
Let vs make head: It was your prefurmize,
That in the deole of blowes,you Sun might drop.
You knew he walk'd o're perilis, on an edge
More likely to fall in, then to get o're:
You were aduis'd his flih was capable
Of Wounds, and Sarres; and that his forward Spirit
Would lift him, where moft trade of danger raged,
Yet men did fay he fomthing in this (Though strongly apprehended) could reftaine
The flife-born Action: What hath then befalne?
Or what hath this bold enterprise bring forth,
More then that Being, which was like to be?
L.Bar. We all that are engaged to this loffe,
Knew that we venter'd on fuch dangerous Seas,
That if we wrought out life, was ten to one:
And yet we venter'd for the gaine propos'd,
Choak'd the refpecc of likely perfal feard,
And fines we were o're-set, venture againe.
Come, we will all put forth; Body, and Goods,
Mrs.'Tis more then time: And (my most Noble Lord)
I heare for certaine, and do fpake the truth:
The gentle Arch-bishop of Yorke is vp
With well appointed Powres he's a man
Who with a double Scury binds his Followers.
My Lord (your Sonne)had onely but the Corps,
But shadowes, and the shewes of men to fight.
For that fame word(Rebellion) did diuide
The action of their bodies, from their foules,
And they did fight with queffeftneffe, contrai'd
As men drinke Potions; that their Weapons only
Seem'd on our fide: but for their Spirits and Soules,
This word (Rebellion)it had froze them vp,
As Fith are in a Pond. But now the Bishop
Turnes Infurrection to Religion,
Suppos'd Sincere, and holy in his Thoughts:
He's fownd both with body,and with Minde:
And doth enlarge his Riſing, with the blood
Of faire King Richard,scrap'd from Pomfret ftones,
Derues from heaven, his Quarrell, and his Caufe:
Tells them, he doth befrade a bleaing Land,
Galping for life, vnder great Bullyingbreath,
And more, and lefle,do flocke to follow him.
North. I knew of this before. But to fpake truth,
This prefent greefe had wip'd it from my minde.
Go in with me, and counsell every man
The aptest way for safety, and nonege
Get Pods, and Letters, and make Friends with speed,
Neuer fo few, nor neuer yet more need.

Excurn.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaff, and Page.

Fal.Sirr, you giant, what fatis the Doctt to my water?
Pag. He faid fr, the water it felle was a good healthy waterbut for the party that ow'd it, he might have more diffenes then he knew for.

Fal. Men of all forts take a pride to giat at mee: the braine of this foolish compounded Clay-man, is not able to inuent any thing that tends to laughter, more then I inuent, or is inuented on me. I am not onely witty in my felle, but the caufe that is in other men. I doe heere walkte before thee, like a Sow, that hath o're-whelm'd all her Litter, but one. If the Prince put thee into my Service for any other reafon, then to fet mee off, why then I have no judgement. Thou horfon Mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap, then to wait at my heclcs.
I was neuer mann'd with an Agot till now: but I will fette you neether in Gold, nor Sluer, but in while apparel,and fend you backe againe to your Master, for a Lewell. The Inuell (the Prince your Master) whose Chine is not yet fledg'd, I will fomer haue a bearde grow in the Palme of my hand, then he fhall get one on his cheeke yet he will not flicke to fay, his Face is a Face-Royall. Heaven may finallize it when he fay go will, it is now to be affinift yet: he may keep it still at a Face-Royall, for a Barber fhall neuer erane fix pence out of it, and yet he will be crowing, as if he had wrat man euer fince his Father was a Batchelour.
He may kepe his owne Grace, but he is almoft out of mine, I can affure him. What faid M.DonblidPor, about the Satten for my short Claske, and Slops?

Pag. He fald fr,you should procure him better Affu-rance,then Bardolf: he wold not take his Bond & yours, he like'd not the Security.

Fal. Let him bee damn'd like the Glutton, may his Tongue be hotter, a horfon Achitophel; a Rafeilly-yesforfooth-kaue, to bear a Gentleman in hand, and then fland vpon Security? The horfon smooth-pates doe now were nothing but high shoes, and bunches of Keyes at their gireles: and if a man is through with them in ho-net Taking-vp, then they muft fland vpon Security: I had as Iffe they would put Rats-bane in my mouth, as off er to flappe it with Security. I look'd hee shoule have fent me two and twenty yards of Satten (as I am true Knight) and he fends me Security. Well, he may fleep in Security, for he hath the horne of Abundance 1 and the lightneffe of his Wife (fines through it,) and yet cannot he fee, though he have his owne Lanchorne to light him.
Where's Bardolf?

Pag. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horfe.

Fal. I bought him in Pauls, and hee'll buy mee a horfe in Smithfield. If I could get mee a wife in the Stewes, I were Mann'd, Hon'd, and Wit'd.

Enter Chiefes Officers, and Servant.

Pag. Sir, heere comes the Nobleman that committed the Prince for ftriking him, about Bardolf.

Fal. Wait clofe, I will not fee him.

Ch.Off. What's he that goes there?

Ser. Falstaff, and it pleafe your Lordship.

Off. He that was in quefition for the Robbery?

Ser. He my Lord, but he hath fince done good fervice at Shrewbury and (as I heare) is now going with some Charge, to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Off. What to Yorker? Call him backe againe.

Ser. Sir John Falstaff.

Fal. Boy, tell him, I am deafe.

Pag. You muft fpake lowder, my Master is deafe.

Off. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good.
Go gluckle him by the Elbow, I must fpake with him.

Ser. Sir John.

Fal. What's a yong knaue and beg? Is there not war'd
Is there not imployment? Doth not the K. lack fublettis? Do not the Rebel war Soldiers? Though if be a chace to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to begge, then to be on the worste side, were it worse then the name of Rebellion can tell how to make it.

Ser. You mistake me Sir.

Fal. Why sir? Did I say you were an honest man? Setting my Knight-hood, and my Souldiership aside, I had lyed in my throat, if I had said so.

Ser. I pray you (Sir) then set your Knighthood and your Souldier-ship aside, and glue mee leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other then an honest man.

Fal. I glie thee leave to tell me so? I lay a side that which groves to me? If thou gett any leave of me, hang me if thou tak'le' leave, thou wert better be hang'd: if you Hunt-counter, hence I auent.

Ser. Sir, my Lord would speake with you.

Fal. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good Lord: give your Lordship good time of the day. I am glad to see your Lordship abroad: I heard sry your Lordship was sick. I hope your Lordship goes abroad. I would it were your Lordship (though not clean path your youth) hath yet some truccck of age in you: some reli- flic of the fatnffe and Time, and I moft humbly befeec your Lordship, to have a reverend care of your health.

Ser. Sir John, I fent you before your Expedition, to Shrewsbury.

Fal. It pleaseth your Lordship, I heare his Maiestie is return'd with some difcomfort from Wales.

Fal. I talke not of his Maiestie: you would not come when I fent for you?

Fal. And I heare moreover, his Highnesse is faine into this fame whorton Apoplexie.(you)

Fal. Well, heauen mend him. I pray let me speake with Fal. This Apoplexie is (as I take it's) kind of Lethar- gie, a fieping of the blood, a horfon Tingling.

Fal. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath it originall from much greffe, from fludly and perturbation of the braine. I haue read the caufe of his effects in Galen. It is a kinde of deaffeene.

Fal. I thinke you are faine into the disease: For you heare not what I fay to you.

Fal. Very well (my Lord) very well: rather an't pleafe you it is the difeafe of not Lifting, the malady of not Marking, that I am troubled with.

Fal. To punish you by the hecles, would amend the attention of your ears, & I care not if I be your Phyffitian Fal. I am as poore as I am, my Lord: but not to Patient: your Lordship may miniftre the Potion of imprisonment to me, in refpeete of Pouerice: but how I could bee your Patient, to follow your prefcriptions, the wife may make some dram of a scruple, or indeede, a scruple it felfe.

Fal. I fent for you (when there were matters agenc for your life) to come speake with me.

Fal. As, I was a beleeved by my learned Council, in the lawes of this Land-feruice, I did not come.

Fal. Wel, the truth is (Sir John) you liue in great infamy Fal. He that buckles him in his belt, canot liue in leffe.

Fal. Your Meanes is very flender, and your waft great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my Meanes were greater, and my waft flender.

Fal. You have mielde the youthfull Prince.

Fal. The yong Prince hath mielde me. I am the Fellow with the great belly, and he my Dogge.

Fal. Well, I am loth to gell a new heatl'd wound your dails esterme at Shrewsbury, hath a little giled over your Nights exploit on Gads-hill. You may thanke the

The quaint time, for your quiet o're-pofting that Action.

Fal. My Lord? (Wolfe).

Fal. But fince all is well, keep it for: wake not a sleeping Fal. To wake a Wolfe, is as bad as to finell a Fox.

Fal. What you are as a candle, the better part burnt out Fal. A Waffell-Candle, my Lord; all Tallow: i fId fay of wax, my growth would approe the truth.

Fal. There is not a white hair on your face, but fholde have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effeect of grav, grauf, grauf.

Fal. You fllow the yong Prince up and done, like his euill Angell.

Fal. Not fo (my Lord) your ill Angell is light: but I hope, he that lookes vpon me, will take mee without, weighe: and yet, in fome refpects I grant, I cannot go: I cannot tell. Vertere is of fo little regard in thefe Cohor- mongers, that true valor is torn'd Beare-heard. Pregnan- cie is made a Tapfer, and hath his quicke wit wafted in gluing Recknings: all the other gifts appertinent to man (as the malice of this Age shapes them) are not woorth a Goofeberry. You that are old, consider not the capaci- ties of va that are yong: you feare the heat of our Li- uers, with the bitternes of your gala: & we that are in the vaward of our youth, must confefte, are waggis too.

Fal. Do you set downe your name in the fanrowle of youth, that are written downe olde, with all the Chrarrac- terns of age? Have you not a moift eye? a dry hand? a yel- low cheekles white beard? an decreafing leg? an increas- ing belly? Is not your voice broken? your winde short? your wit fingle? and every part about you baffe with Anti- quity? and will you call your felle yong? Fy, fy, fy, (Sir John)

Fal. My Lord, I was borne with a white head, & Som- thing a round belly. For my voice, I haue left it with hal- lowing and finging of Anthemes. To apprize my youth farther, I will not the truth is, I am onely olde in judg- ment and understanding: and that will caper with mee for a thoufand Markes, let him lend me the mony, & have at him. For the boxe of th'care that the Prince gaue you, he gaue it like a rude Prince, and you tooke it like a fen- tible Lord. I have checkt him for it, and the yong Lion re- pents: Marry not in athes and facke-clotthy, but in new Silkes, and old Sackes.

Fal. Wel, heauen find the Prince a better companion.

Fal. Heauen fllow the Companion a better Prince: I cannot rid my hands of him.

Fal. Well, the King hath feuer'd you and Prince Har- ry, I heare you are going with Lord John of Lancaster, ag- aint the Archifhop, and the Earle of Northumberland.

Fal. Yes, I thannek your pretty sweet wit for it: but looke you pray, (all you that kiffe my Lady Peace, at home) that our Armies lye in a hot day: for if I take but two thirs out with me, and I meane not to sweat ex- traordinary: if it bee a hot day, if I brandish any thing but my Bottle, would I might never spill white aigne: There is not a dagerous Action can peep out his head, but I am throot vpon it. Wel, I cannot left ever.

Fal. Well, be honeft, be honeft, and heauen bleffe your Expedition.

Fal. Will your Lordship lend mee a thoufand pound, to furnifh me forth?

Fal. Not a peny, nor a peny: you are too impatient to bear croffes. Fare you well. Commend mee to my Colin Wettlerland.

Fal. If I do, fillop me with a three-man-Beeple. A man can no more separate Age and Couztouffois, then he can part yong linmes and letchery: but the Gowt galleth the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the Degrees present my curfes. Boy?

Page. Sir.
Fai. What money is in my purse?
Page. Seven groats, and two pence.
Fai. I can get no remedy against this Confumption of the purse. Borrowing onely lingers, and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster, this to the Prince, this to the Earl of Wellmerland, and this to old Miftris Orfa, whom I have weekly towne to marry, since I perceiued the first white hair on my chin. About it: you know where to find me. A pox of this Gowt, or a Gowt of this Poxe:
for the one or th'other plays the rogue with my great toe: It is no matter, if I do halt, I have the warres for my colour, and my Penfion shall feeme the more reasonable.
A good wit will make vie of any thing: I will turne dis-fases to commodity. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Archbishops, Salisbury, Montmore, and Lord Burdolphs.
Ar. Thus haue you heard our caufes, & know our Means:
And my moft noble Friends, I pray you all
Speake plainly your opinions of our hopes,
And fill(Lord Marshall)what do you to it?
Men. I well allow the occasion of our Armes,
But gladly would be better satisfied,
How (in our Means) we should advance our felues
To looke with foremost bold and big enough.
Upon the Power and puiface of the King.
Haf. Our present Musters grow vpon the File
To sue and twenty thousand men of choice:
And our Supplies, blee largely in the hope
Of great Northumberland, whose boome burns
With an incendi Fire of Injuries.
L. Bar. The question (Lord Hatfield's)andeth thus Whe her our present fue and twenty thousand
May hold vp head, without Northumberland:
Haf. With him, we may.
L. Bar. I marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought to be feele,
My judgment is, we should not step too farre
Till we haue his Assistance by the hand.
For in a Theame so bloody fac'd, as this,
Conicence, Expectation, and Surmise
Of Aydes incertine, should not be admitted.
Ar. 'Tis very true Lord Bardolph, for indeed
It was your Holie Ace of Shrewsbury.
L. Bar. It was (my Lord) who lin'd himself with hope,
Eating the ayre, on promise of Supply,
Plafting himlefe with Proteft of a power,
So much smaller, then the smallest of his Thoughts,
And fo with great Imagination
(Proper to mad men) led his Powers to death,
And (winking) leap'd into destruction.
Haf. But (by your leave) it neuer yet did hurt,
To lay downe likeable-hoods, and formes of hope.
L. Bar. Yes, if this present quality of warre,
Indeed the infant action: a caufe on foot,
Lies fo in hope: As in an early Spring,
We fee th'appearing buds, which to prove fruite,
Hope gues not fo much warrant, as Difpaire
That Fruits will bites them. When we meant to build,
We first furvey the Plot; then draw the Modell,
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the Erection,
Which if we finde out-weighes Ability,
What do we then, but draw a newe the Modell
In fewer offers? Or at leaft, defire
To bullee at all? Much more, in this great worke, (Which is (almost) to plucke a Kingdome downe,
And set another vp) should we furvey
The plot of Situation, and the Modell;
Contect vpon a sure Foundation:
Quelion Surveyors, know our owne estate,
How able such a Worke to vndergo,
To weigh against his Opposite! Or else,
We fortifie in Paper, and in Figures,
Ving the Names of men, instead of men:
Like one, that draws the Modell of a house,
Beyond his power to bulle it; who(halfe through)
Gues o're, and leaves his part-created Coft
A naked subjefc to the Weeping Clouds,
And waife, for curfeh Winters tyranney.
Haf. Granting at our hopes(yet likely of faire byrth)
Should be fill-borne and that we now poiffe,
The myrtell man of expetation:
I thinke we are a Body strong enough
(Euen as we are) to equall with the King.
L. Bar. What is the King but five & twenty thousand?
Haf. To vs no more: nay not so much Lord Burdolphs.
For his duynes (as the Times do brue)
Are in three Heads: one Power against the French,
And one against Glendower: Perforce a third
Muft take vp vs: So is the vnfrme King
In three divided: and his Coiffers found
With hollow Pouer, and Emptielle.
Ar. That he should draw his feueral strengthes together
And come against vs in full puiface
Need not be dreaded.
Haf. If he should do fo,
He leaves his locke warms'd, the French, and Welsh
Baying him at the heel's: neuer feare that.
L. Bar. Who is it like should lead his Forces hither?
Haf. The Duke of Lancaster, and Welfmerland:
Against the Welsh himfelfe, and Harrie Mammouth.
But who is substituted 'gainft the French,
I have no certaine notice.
Arch. Let vs on:
And publith the occasion of our Armes.
The Common-wealth is fecke of their owne Choice,
Their ouer-greedy love hath hertlet:
An habitation giddy, and vafure
Harsh he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond Many, with what loud applaufe
Did't thou beate heauen with bleffing Bailingbrooke,
Before he was, what thou would'ft haue him be?
And being now trimm'd in thine own decrees,
Thou (beauily Peizer)art so full of him,
That thou prouoke'ft thy felle to caft him vp.
So for(thou common Dogge) did't thou disforge
Thy glutton-bosome of the Royall Richard,
And now thou would'ft eate thy dead vomit vp,
And how'lt to finde it. What truth is in these Times?
They,that when Richard liu'd, would have him dye,
Are now become enamour'd on his graue.
Thou that threw'lt duft upon his goodly head
When through proud London he came fighing on,
After th'admired heeles of Bailingbrooke,
Cry's now, O Earth, yield vs that King age

And
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

And take thou this (O thoughts of men accurs'd)
"Peace, and to Come, feemes best; things Present, worst.
Now, shall we go draw our numbers, and fet on?
Haff, we are Times subject, and time bids be gon.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Holaffe, with two Officers, Fang, and Snare. Holaffe, Mr. Fang, haue you entered the Action? Fang, It is enter'd. Holaffe. Where's your Yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? Will he stand to it?
Holaffe, I good M. Snare, I haue enter'd him, and all. Sr. It may chance coft some of vs our loue-will flap Holaffe. Alas the day: take heed of him; he flabbed me in mine owne house, and that most beaftly: he cares not what mish'be doth, if his weapon be out. Hee will foyne like any diuell, he will spare neither man, woman, nor child. Fang. If I can clofe with him, I care not for his threat. Holaffe. No, no, I neither: I be at your elbow. Fang. If I but fill him once-in he come but within my Vice.
Holaffe. I am vndone with his going; I warrant he is an infinuative thing upon my fcor. Good M. Fang hold him foregood M. Snare let him not fcape, he comes continuantly to Py-Corneler(faunting your manhoods) to buy a faddle, and hee is indiected to dinner to the Lubbars head in Lombardstreet, to M. Smoothes the Silkman. I pra'ye, fince my Exion is enter'd, and my Cafe so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his anwer: A too. Marke is a long one, for a poore lone woman to bearer: & I haue borne, and borne, and borne, and haue bin fub'doff, and fub'd off, from this day to that day, that it is a fame to be thought on. There is no honey in fuch dealings, vnder a woman should be made an Affe and a Beast, to bear euer Knaues wrong.
Holaffe. Throw me in the channel? Ie throw thee there. Wilt thou wilt thou batfardly rouge, Murder, murder, O thou Hony-fucke villain, wilt thou kill Gods officers, and the Kings? O thou hony-feed Rogue, thou art a honyfed, a Man-querler, and a woman-querler.
Page. Away you Scullion, you Rampallian, you Fulfillian Ie tucke your Cataphrophe.
Holaffe. Good my Lord be good to mee. I beekech you stand to me.
Ch. Infyft. How now Sir John? What are you brauing here? Doth this become your place, your time, and businesse? You should bee bene well on your way to Yorke. Stand from him Fellow; wherefore hang' th' upon him?
Holaffe. Oh my most worshipful Lord, and, delightful your Grace, I am a poore widow of Esitchep, and he is arrested at my fuit. Ch. Infyft. For what fumme?
Holaffe. It is more then for some (my Lord)is it for all: all I haue, he hath eaten me out of houfe and home; hee hath put all my findeance into that fat belly of his, & I will have some of it out againe, or I will ride thee o'Nights, like the Mare.
Falffe. I thinke I am as like to ride the Mare, if I haue any vantage of ground, to get vp.
Ch. Infyft. How comes this, Sir John? I fy, what a man of good temper would endure this tempell of exclamation? Are you not afham'd to inform a poore Widdowe to fo rough a courfe, to come by her owne?
Falffe. What is the csorge fumme that I owe thee?
Holaffe. Marry (if thou wert an honest man) thy felfe, & the mony too. Thou didit fware to mee upon a parcelf gilt Gollet, fittin in my Dolphin-chamber at the round table, by a fea-cole fire, on Wednesday in Whifton week, when the Prince broke thy head for faking him to a finning man of Windsor. Thou didit fware to mee then: as I was waIling thy wound, to marry mee, and make mee my Lady thy wife. Can't y deny it? Did not goodwife Kerch the Burchers wife come in, and cal me goffe; Quick-ly comming in to borrow a maffe of Vinegar: telling vs, the had a good fli of Prawnes: whereby y' did defire to eat fome: whereby I told thee they were ill for a greene wound? And didt not thou (when the was gone downe flare) defire me to be more familiar with fuch poore people, faying, that ere long they should call me Madam? And did't y not kiffe mee, and bid mee fetch thee 30s. I put thee now to thy Book-oath, deny it if thou canst!
Falffe. My Lord, this is a poore mad founce and the fayes yp & dome the towne, that her eldest fon is like you. She hath bin in good cafe, & the truth is, poorewy hath deftruf- ted her: but for these foolish Officers, I beeche you, I may have redreffe against them.
Ch. Infyft. Sir John, Sir John. I am well acquainted with your maner of wrenching the true caufe, the fafe way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of worde, that come with fich (more then impudent) fawcines from you, can thruit me from a leeuell confideration, I know you ha pra- cted upon the eafe-yielding spirte of this woman.
Holaffe. Yes in troth my Lord.
Falffe. Prechee peace-pay her the debt you owe her, and vnpay the villain you have done her: the one you may do with ficher (more then impudent) fawcin from you, can thruit me from a leeuell confideration, I know you ha pra- cted upon the eafe-yielding spirit of this woman.
Gow. The King (my Lord) and Henrie Prince of Wales.
Ch. Infyft. Are neere at hand: The red the Paper tellles.
Fafll. As I am a Gentleman.
Ch. Infyft. Nay, you faid fo before.
Falffe. As I am a Gentleman, come, no more words of it.
Holaffe. By this Heauenly ground I tread on, I must be faine to pawn both my Place, and the Tapfrty of my dy- ning Chambers.

The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy thighs a pretty flight Drollery, or the Storie of the Prodigall, or the Germane hunting in Wateres, is worth a thousand of these Besi-hangings, and these Fly-bitten Tastries. Let it be temperite (if thou canst). Come, if it were not for thy humors, there is not a better Wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy Action: Come, thou must not bee in this humour with me, come, I know thou was't set on this.

Hst. Preach (Sir Isbe) let it be but twenty Nobles, I loath to pawne my Plate, in good earnest la.

Fal. Let it alone, Ie make other shift; you'll be a fool still.

Hst. Well, you shall have it although I pawne my Gowne. I hope you'll come to Supper? You'll pay me altogether?

Hst. Will you have Doll Tearce-sheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words. Let's have her.

Ch. In. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the newes (my good Lord?)

Ch. In. Where lay the King last night?

Msf. At Basing-foke my Lord.

Fal. I hope (my Lord) all's well. What is the newes my Lord?

Ch. In. Come all his Forces backe?

Msf. No: Fifteen hundred Foot, five hundred Horse Are march'd vp to my Lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland, and the Archibishop.

Fal. Comes the King backe from Wales, my noble Lord?

Ch. In. You shall have Letters of me presently. Come, go along with me, good M. Gowre.

Fal. My Lord.

Ch. In. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gowre, shall I entreat you with mee to dinner?

Gen. I must waite upon your good Lord hear.

I thank you, good Sir Isbe.

Ch. In. Sir Isbe, you loyster hearre too long, being you are to take Soulsiers vp, in Countries as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with mee, Master Gowre?

Ch. In. What foolish Master taught you these manners, Sir Isbe?

Fal. Master Gowre, if they become mee not, bee was a Foole that taught thee mee. This is the right Fencing grace (my Lord) tap for tap, and so part faire.

Ch. In. Now the Lord lighten thee, thou art a great Foole.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince Henry, Poins, Bardolf, and Page.

Prin. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attach'd one of so high blood.

Prin. It doth me: though it discolours the complexion of my Grestneffe to acknowledge it. Doth it not shew wildly in me, to defire Imall Beere?

Poins. Why, a Prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weakly a Composition.

Prin. Belike then, my Appetite was not Princely got: for (in troth) I do now remember the poore Creature, Small Beere. But indeed these humble considerations make me out of love with my Greatneffe. What a difference is it to me, to remember thy name? Or to know thy face to morrow? Or to take note how many pare of Silk stockings y'has? (Vis. theses, and those that were that peach-colour'd ones?) Or to heare the Inuentorie of thy thirths, as one for superfulty, and one other, for vfe. But that the Tennis-Court-keeper knowes better then I, for it is a low ebe of Linnen with thee, when thou kept it not Racket there, as thou haft not done a great while, because the reft of thy Low Countries, haue made a shirt to eate vp thy Holland.

Poins. How ill it followes, after you have labird's so hard, you should talk so idely? Tell me how many good young Princes would do so, their Fathers lying so fikke, as yours is?

Prin. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes: and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prin. It shall ferue among wittes of no higher breeding then thine.

Poins. Go to: I stand the pufh of your one thing, that you'll tell.

Prin. Why, I tell thee, it is not meet, that I should be sad now my Father is fikke: albeit I could tell to thee (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly, upon such a subiect.

Prin. Thou think'st it as farre in the Diuells Booke, as thou, and Falfaffees, for obduracie and perfistency. Let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my hart bleedes inwardly, that my Father is so fikke: and keeping such wild company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me, all oltentation of forrow.

Poins. The reafon?

Prin. What wouldst thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poins. I would thinke thee a most Princely hypocrite.

Prin. It would be every mans thought: and thou art a bleffed Fellow, to thinke as every man thinke: neuer a mans thought in the world, keepes the Rode-way better then thine: every man would thinke me an Hypocrite in-deede. And what accent your most worshipful thought to thinke so?

Prin. Why, because you have beene so loewe, and so much ingrased to Fafaffees.

Prin. And to thee.

Poins. Nay, I am well spoken of, I can heare it with mine owne earre the word that they can say of me is, that I am a second Brother, and that I am a proper Fellow of my hands: and those two things I confesse I cannot helpe. Lookke,lookke, here comes Bardolf.

Prince. And the Boy that I gaue Falsaffees, he had him from me Chriftian, and fee if the fat villain have not trans form'd him Ape.

Enter Bardolf.

Bar. Save your Grace.

Prin. And yours, most Noble Bardolf.

Poins. Come you pertinacious Anfe; you bathfull Foole, maft you be blushing? Wherefore blush you now? what a Maidenly man at Armes are you become? Is it such a matter to get a Potte-pots Maiden-head?

Page. He cauld me even now (my Lord) through a red Lattice, and I could diconne no part of his face from the window.
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Page. None my Lord, but old Mistris Quickly, and M. Doll Years-free.

Prin. What Pagan may that be?

Page. A proper Gentlewoman, Sir, and a Kinswoman of my Masters.

Prin. Even such King, as the Parli Heyfons are to the Towne-Bull?

Shall we feale vpon them ( Ned) at Supper?

Prin. I am your shadow, my Lord, tie follow you.

Prin. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph, no word to your Master that I am yet in Towne.

There’s for your silence.

Bar. I have no tongue, fir.

Page. And for mine Sir, I will governe it.

Prin. Fare ye well, go.

This Doll Years-free should be sorne Rode.

Prin. I warrant you, as common as the way betweene S. Albans, and London.

Prin. How might we see Falstaffe belowl himselfe to night, in his true colours, and not our felues be feene?

Prin. Put on two Leather Jerkinis, and Aprons, and waie vpon him at his Table, like Drawers.

Prin. From a God, to a Bull! A heavie declension: It was loues cafe. From a Prince, to a Prenciss, a low transformation, that shall be mine: for in every thing, the pur- pole must weigh with the folly. Follow me Ned. Exeunt

North. I prethee loving Wife, and gentle Daughter, Give an euyn way unto my rough Affairs:

Put not you on the vifique of the Times,
And be like them to Percie, troubleome.

Wife. I have gluin ouer, I will speak no more,
Do what you will; your Wifesome, be your guide.

North. Als (sweet Wife) my Honor is at pawn,
And but my going, nothing can redeeme it.

La. Oh yet, for heauenas fake, go not to these Wars;
The Time was (Father) when you broke your word,
When you were more endeerd to it, then now,
When your owne Percy, when my heart-deere-Harry,
Threw many a Northward looke, to fee his Father
Bring vp his Powres: but he did long in vaine.
Who then perfuaded you to stay at home?
There were two Honors loft; Yours, and your Sonnes.
For Yours, may heauenly glory brighten it;
For His, it bucke vpon him, as the Sonne
In the gray vault of Heauen: and by his Light
Did all the Cheualrie of England moue
To do braue Acts. He was (indeed) the Glass
Wherein the Noble-Youth did dreffe themselues.
He had no Legges, that prudic’d not his Gate:
And speaking thickce (which Nature made his blemish)
Became the Accents of the Valiant.
For tho’ that could speake low, and tardily,
Would turne their owne Perfection, to Abufe,
To feeme like him. So that in Speech, in Gate,
In Diet, in Affedtions of delight,
In Militarie Rules, Humors of Blood,

Prin. Sup any women with him?

Had my sweet Harry had but halfe their Numbers, To day might I (hanging on Hotfhurs Necke) Have talk'd of Momfmoth's Graue.

North. Behew your heart, (Faire Daughter) you doe draw my Spirits from me, With new lamenting ancient Ouer-fights. But I muft goo, and meet with Danger there, Or it will feeke me in another place, And finde me worfe proued.

Wife. Of flye to Scotland, Till that the Noble, and the armed Commons, Have of their Puifance made a little taffe.

Lady. If they get ground, and vantage of the King, Then voyne you with them, like a Ribbe of Steele, To make Strength stronger. But, for all our loues, Firft let them trye themfelues. So did your Sonne, He was fo fuffer'd ; fo came I a Widow : And neuer shall have length of Life enouf,
To raine upon Remembrance with mine Eyes, That it may grow, and grow, as high as Heauen, For Recordeation to my Noble Husband.
Norh. Come, come, go in with mer'tis with my Minde, As with the Tyde,we'll go vponto his height, That makes a fill-flatt,running neyther way. Faine would I goo to meet the Arch-bifhop, But many thound Redons hold me backe, I will refolue for Scotland: there am I, Till Time and Vantage craue my company.

2. Draw. Thou fay'st true: the Prince once set a Difh of Apple-Johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Iohns: and, putting off his Hat, faid, I will now take my leave of thee for a drie, round, old-wither'd Knights. It anger'd him to the heart: but hee hath forgot that.

1. Draw. Why then courer, and let them downe: and see if thou canst finde out Swafer Noyfe; Miftris Traverse would faine have fome Mufique.

2. Draw. Sirrha, heere will be the Prince, and Mafter Printed,anon: and they will put on two of our Ierkins, and Aprons, and Sir Iohn must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

Dr. Thei here will be old Friis: it will be an excellent fratagem.

2. Draw. Ile fee if I can finde out Swafer. Exit.

Enter Hotfaff, and Dol.

Hotf. Sweet-heart, me thinkes now you are in an excellent good temperatice: your Pulfidge beates as extraordinaire, as heart would defire; and your Colour (I warrant you) is as red as any Rohe: But you have drunke too much Canaries, and that's a maruellous fearching Wine; and it perfumes the blood, ere wee can lay what's this. How doe you now?

Dol. Better then I was: Heem.

Hotf. Why that was well fald: A good heart's worth Gold. Look, here comes Sir Iohn.

Enter Falfaff.

Falf. When Arthur fteft in Court.—(emptie the Iordan) and was a worthy King: How now Miftris Dol? Hotf. Sick of a Calme; yes, good-footh.

Falf. So is all her Selft: if they be once in a Calme, they are fick.

Dol. You muddie Raffall, is all that the comfort you give me?

Falf. You make fat Raffall, Miftris Dol.

Dol. I make them? Gluttony and Difeafe makes them, I make them not.

Falf. If the Cooke make the Gluttony, you helpe to make the Difeafe (Dol) we watch of you (Dol) we watch of you: Grant that, my poore Verue,grant that.

Dol. I marry, our Chanyes, and our Jewels.

Falf. Your Brooches, Pearles, and Ovalles: For to ferue braverly, is to come halting off: you know, to come off the Breach, with his Pike bent braverly, and to Surge-rie braverly; to venture upon the charg'd-Chambres braverly.

Hotf. Why this is the old fashion: you two never meetes, but you fall to some difcord: you are both (in good troth) as Rheumatike as two drie Toftes, you cannot one bear with anothers Conformities. What the good-vere? One must beare, and that muft bee you: you are the weaker Veffell: as they say, the emptier Veffell.

Dol. Can a weake emptie Veffell bare such a huge full Hogs-head? There's a whole Marchants Venture of Burdeux-Stuffe in him: you have not feene a Hulke better flufft in the Hold. Come, Ile be friends with thee Jack: Thou art going to the Warres, and whether I shall ever fee thee againe, or no, there is no body cares.

Enter Drawer.

Drawer. Sir, Ancient Pilfoll is below, and would speake with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering Raffall, let him not come hither: It is the foule-mouth'd Rogue in England.

Hotf. If hee swagger, let him not come here: I muft live amongst my Neighbors, Ile no Swaggerers: I am in good name, and fame, with the very bett: but the doore, there comes no Swaggerers here: I haue not liu'd all this while, to haue swaggering now: but the doore, I pray you.

Falf. Do't thou heare, Hotfaff? Hotf. Pray you pacifie your Selfe(Sir Iohn) ther comes no Swaggerers here.

Falf. Do't.
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Falst. Do'th thou hear? it is mine Ancient.

Hoft. Tilly-fally (Sir John) ne'er tell me, thy ancient Swaggeryne comes not in my doores, I was before Master Tuke, the Deputy, the other day: and as hee faid to me, it was no longer agoe then Wednesday last; Neighbour Quickly (fayes hee) Master Domes, our Minifters, was by then: Neighbour Quickly (fayes hee) receiv'd those that are Cuilts; for (fayes hee) you are in an ill Name: now hee fai'd fo, I can tell whereupon: for (fayes hee) you are an honest Woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what Queues you receive: Receiue (fayes hee) no swaggering Companions. There comes none heere. You would bleffe you to hear what hee faid. No, Ile no Swaggerers.

Falst. Hee's no Swaggeryne (Hoft.) a time Cheater, hee: you may stroake him as gently, as a Pupple Greyhound; hee will not swagger with a Barbarie Henne, if her feathers turne backe in any fiew of reftistance. Call him vp (Drawer.)

Hoft. Cheater, call you him? I will barne no honest men my name, no, the Cheater: but I doe not hate swaggering; I am the worfe when one fayes, swagger: Feele Matters, how I fakker looke you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you doe, Hoftffe.

Hoft. Doe I? yea, in very truth doe I, if it were an Apen Leafe: I cannot abide Swaggerers.

Enter Piffl, and Bardolph and his Boy.

Falst. Welcome Ancient Piffl. Here (Piffl.) I charge you with a Cup of Sacke: doe you difcharge vpon mine Hoftffe.

Piffl. I will difcharge vpon her (Sir Iohn) with two Bullets.

Falst. She is Pifflle-proofes (Sir) you shall hardly off-end her.

Hoft. Come, Ile drinke no Proofs, nor no Bullets: I will drinke no more then will doe me good, for no mans plesure, I.

Piffl. Then to you (Miftris Dorchie) I will charge you.

Dol. Charge me? I fcerne you (fcurvye Companion) what you poore, bafe, raflacly, cheating, lacke-Linnen-Mate: away you mouldie Roge, away; I am meast for your Master.

Piffl. I know you, Miftris Dorchie.

Dol. Away you Cut-purse Raffell, you filthy Bong, away: By this Wne, Ile thruft my Kniffe in your mouldie Chappes, if you play the fawye Cittle with me. Away you Bottle-Ale Raffell, you Basket-hilt ftaile Iugler, you. When I fince, when I prye you, Sir? what, with two Points on your shoulde I much.

Piffl. I will murther your Ruffe, for this.

Hoft. No, good Captaine Piffl: not heere, sweene Captaine.

Dol. Captaine? thou abominable dam'd Cheater, art thou not afhame to be call'd Captaine? If Captaines were of my minde, they would trunchon you out, for tak- ing their Names vpon you, before you earend them. You a Captaine? you flaeue, for what? for tarring a poore Whores Ruffe in a Bawdy-house? Hee a Captaine! hang him Roge, hee lues vpon mouldie flrew’d-Prulnes, and dry’d Cakes. A Captaine? Thefe Villaines will make the word Captaine odious: Therefore Captaines had necie looke to it.

Bard. *Pray thee goe downe, good Ancient.

Falst. Hearke thee hither, Miftris Dol.

Piffl. Not I: I tell thee what, Corporall Bardolph, I could tearre her: Ile be rencudg'd on her.

Dol. *Pray thee goe downe.

Piffl. Ile see her dam'd firit to: Plat's dam'd Lake, to the Infernal Deepe, where Erebus and Tortures vilde alfo. Hold Hooke and Line, fay I: Downe: downe Dogges, downe Fates: haue wee not Hiren here?

Hoft. Good Captaine Piffl be quiet, it is very late: I beleefe you now, aggravate your Choler.

Piffl. Thafe be good Humors indeede. Shall Pack-Hories, and hollow-pamper'd Iades of Afia, which cannot goe but thirtie miles a day, compare with Cafar, and with Canibulls, and Trolian Greekes? nay, rather damne them with King Cerberus, and let the Kelkin roare: shall we fall foule for Toyes?

Hoft. By my troth Captaine, thefe are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good Ancient: this will grow to a Brawle anon.

Piffl. Die men, like Dogges; guie Crownes like Pinnes: Haue we not Hiren here?

Hoft. On my word (Captaine) there's none fuch here. What the good-ye, doe you thinke I would deny her? I pray be quiet.

Piffl. Then feed, and be fat (my faire Calipoi.) Come, guie me fome Sack, Si fortune me tormentes, fervices me contente. Fear wee broad-ides? No, let the Fiend glie fucr: Guie me fome Sack: and Sweet-heart lye thou there: Come wee to full Points here, and are et cetera's nothing?

Fal. Piffl. I would be quiet.

Piffl. Sweet Knight, I kniue thy Neafe: what wee haue fene the feuen Starres.

Dol. Thruft him downe flayres, I cannot endure such a Fuffian Raffell.

Piffl. Thruft him downe flayres? know we not Gallo- way Naggas?

Fal. Quoit him downe (Bardolph) like a fhoue-groat flilling: nay, if hee doe nothing but speake nothing, hee shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you downe flayres.

Piffl. What? shall we haue Incifion? shall we embrow? then Death rocke me allepe, abridge my doefull dayes: why then let grievous, gafly, gaping Wounds, vnwin'd the Siflers three: Come Aetropas, I fay.

Hoft. Here's good stafe toward.

Fal. Guewe my Raphael Boy.

Dol. I prethee lack, I prethee doe not draw.

Fal. Get you downe flayres.

Hoft. Here's a goody tumult: Ile forwarre keeping houfe, before Ile be in thefe thirths, and frights. So Morther I warrant now. Alas, alas, put vp your naked Weapons, put vp your naked Weapons.

Dol. I prethee lack be quiet, the Raffell is gone: ah, you whorion little valiant Villaine, you.

Hoft. Are you not hurt i' th' Groyne? I thought hee made a thresher Thruft at your Belly.

Fal. Have you turn'd him out of doores?

Bard. Yes Sir: the Raffell's drunk: you have hurt him (Sir) in the shouder.

Fal. A Raffell to brace me.

Dol. Ah, you sweet little Rogue, you: alas, poore Ap, how thou sweat'st? Come, let me wipe thy Face: Come on, you whorion Chops: Ah Rogue, I love thee: Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and tenne times better then the nine Worthies: ah Villaine.

Fal. A rascally Slaue, I will toffe the Rogue in a Blanket.

Del. Doe, if thou darst for thy heart: if thou doo't, I canus thee betweenne a pair of Sheetes.

Enter Musique.

Page. The Musique is come, Sir.

Fal. Let them play: play Sirs. Sit on my Knee, Del.

A Rafeally, bragging Slaue: the Rogue fled from me like Quick-fliser.

Del. As thou followedst him like a Church: thou whorfon little tytle Bartholomew Bore-pigge, when wilt thou leave fighting on days, and foyning on nights, and begin to patch vp thine old Body for Heauen?

Enter the Prince and Poines digni'd.

Fal. Peace (good Del) doe not speake like a Deathseed: doe not bid me remember mine end.

Del. Sirrh, what humor is the Prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: hee would haue made a good Pantler, hee would haue chipp'd Bread well.

Del. They say Poines hath a good Wit.

Fal. Hee a good Wit? hang him Baboono, his Wit is as thicke as Twewshurie Muffard: there is no more conceit in him, then is in a Mallet.

Prince. Why doth the Prince lose him so then?

Del. Because their Legges are both of a bignesson and hee plays at Quoits well, and estes Conger and Fennell, and drinks off Candles ends for Flapdragons, and rides the wilde-Mare with the Boyes, and jumps upon loyn'd Floules, and sweares with a good grace, and weares his Boote very smooth, like water the Signes of the Legge; and breedes no bate with telling of discreete stories: and such other Gamblall Faculties hee hath, that shew a weake Minde, and an able Body, for the which the Prince admitts him; for the Prince himselfe is fuch another: the weight of an hayre will turne the Scales betweene their Hater-de-pairs.

Prince. Would not this Naue of a Wheele have his Eares cut off?

Poin. Let vs beat him before his Whore.

Prince. Looke, if the witherd Elder hath not his Poll claw'd like a Parrot.

Poin. Is it not strange, that Defence should so many yeares out-lie performance?

Fal. Kiffe me Del.

Prince. Saturne and Vener this yeare in Conjunction? What sayes the Almanack to that?

Poin. And looke whether the fierie Trippen, his Man, be not lifting to his Master old Tables, his Note-Booke, his Counsell-keeper?

Fal. Thou dostt glue me flatt'ring Buffes.

Del. Nay truly, I kiffe thee with a most confant heart.

Fal. I am olde, I am olde.

Del. I love thee better, then I love ere a frowrie young Boy of them all.

Fal. What Stuffe wilt thou have a Kistle of? I shall receive Money on Thursday: thou shalt have a Cuppe to morrow. A merrie Song, come: it growes late, wee will to Bed. Thou wilt forget me, when I am gone.

Del. Thou wilt set me a weeping, if thou say'tt so: proue that ever I dreffe my falle handsome, till thine returnes: well, heare the end.

Fal. Some Sack, Francis.

Prince. Poines, Anon, anon, Sir.

Fal. Ha? a Bafard Sonne of the Kings? And art not thou Poines, his Brother?

Prince. Why thou Globe of sinfull Continents, what a Life doth thou lead?

Fal. A better then thou: I am a Gentleman, thou art a Draver.

Prince. Very true, Sir: and I come to draw you out by the Ears.

Haft. Ob, the Lord preserve thy good Grace: Welcome to London. Now Heauen blesse that sweete Face of thine: what, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whorfon mad Compound of Malefite: by this light Fleeth, and corrupt Blood, thou art welcome.

Poin. My Lord, hee will drive you out of your reuenge, and turne all to a merryment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whorfon Candle-myne you, how wildly did you speake of me even now, before this honest, vertuous, chulli Gentlewoman?

Haft. Blesting on your good heart, and fo thee is by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou heare me?

Prince. Yes: and you knew me, as you did when you ranne away by Gads-hill: you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose, to trie my patience.

Poin. No, no, no: not so: I did not thinke, thou waft within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confesse the wiffull abuse, and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse (Hall) on mine Honor, no abuse.

Prince. Not to difpryle me? and call me Pantler, and Bread-chopper, and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse (Hall).

Poin. No abuse?

Fal. No abuse (Nd) in the World: honest Nd none.

I dispryal'd him before the Wicked, that the Wicked might not fall in love with him: in which doing, I haue done the part of a carefull Friend, and a true Subiecit, and thy Father is to glue me thankes for it. No abuse (Hall) none (Nd) none: No Boyes, none.

Prince. See now whether pure Fears, and entire Cowardlie, doth not make thee this vertuous Gentlewoman, to clofe with vs? Is shee of the Wicked? Is thine Holliffe heere, of the Wicked? Or is the Boy of the Wicked? Or honest Bardulph (whole Zeale burns in his Nose) of the Wicked?

Poin. Answere thou dead Elme, answere.

Fal. The Fiend hath prickt downe Bardulph irreconceivable, and his Face is Lucifers Priuy-Kitchin, where hee doth nothing but rot Mault- Wormes: for the Boy, there is a good Angell about him, but the Deuill outbids him too.

Prince. For the Women?

Fal. For one of them, thee is in Hell already, and burns poore Soules: for the other, I owe her Moeny; and whether thee bee damn'd for that, I know not.

Haft. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, No.
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth. 85

Fal. No, I think thou art not: I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another Indignation upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the Law, for which I thinks thou wilt howle.

Holl. All Vagabonders doe so: What is a Joynt of Mutton, or two, in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, Gentiewoman.

Del. What fayes your Grace?

Fal. His Grace fayes that, which his flesh rebell again.

Holl. Who knocks so loud at doore? Look to the doore there, Francis.

Enter Petr.

Prince. Petr, how now? what newes?

Petr. The King, your Father, is at Westminster, and there are twenty weake and feared Poates, Come from the North: and as I came along, I met, and over-tooke a dozen Captaines, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the Tavernes, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By Heaven (Paines) I feele me must to blame, So idly to profane the precious time, When Tempelt of Commination, like the South, Borne with black Vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop vp our bare vnarmed heads. Give me my Sword, and Cloake:

Falstaff, good night.

Exit.

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest Morrell of the night, and wee must hence, and issue it vpknickt. More knocking at the doore? How now? what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to Court, sir, presently, A dozen Captaines stay at doore for you.

Fal. Pay the Mulition, Sirrah: farewell Yoffeffe, farewell Del. You see (my good Wenchses) how men of Merit are sought after: the vndefeuer may sleep, when the man of Action is call'd on. Farewell good Wenchses: if I be not fent away potte, I will fee you againe, ere I go.

Del. I cannot speake: if my heart bee not readie to burn-- Well (sweete Lady) have a care of thy selfe.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

Exit.

Holl. Well, fare thee well: I have knoune thee these twentie nine yeares, come Pefcold-time; but an houer, and truer-hearted man---- Well, fare thee well.

Bard. Mifrius Taret-sheet.

Holl. What's the matter?

Bard. Bid Mifrius Taret-sheet come to my Master.

Holl. Oh runne Del, runne: runne, good Del.

Exit.

How many thousand of my poorest Subiects Are at this howre asleep? O Sleepe, O gentle Sleepe, Natures soft Nurfe, how haue I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh my eye-lids downe, And sleepe my Sences in Forgetfulness?

Why rather (Sleepe) lyest thou in smockie Cribes, Upon vneastie Pallads stretching thee, And huift with buffing Night, eyes to thy fumerber, Then in the perfum'd Chambers of the Great?

Under the Canopys of coftly State, And lull'd with sounds of sweetest Melodie?

O thou dull God, why lyest thou with the vilde, In loathfome Beds, and leaft the Kingly Couch, A Watch-keafe, or a common Larum-Bell?

Canft thou (O partiall Sleepe) give thy Repofe To the wet Sea-Boy, in an hourre fo rude:

King. Is it good-morrow, Lords?

War. 'Tis One a Clocke, and paft.

King. Why then good-morrow to you all (my Lords): Have you read o're the Letters that I lent you?

War. We have (my Liege.).

King. Then you perceive the Body of our Kingdome, How foule it is: what ranke Diftaneies grow, And with what danger, neere the Heart of it?

War. It is but as a Body, yet distemper'd, Which to his former strength may be refer'd, With good advice, and little Medicine:

My Lord Northumberland will soone be cool'd.

King. Oh Hauen, that one might read the Book of Fate, And fee the resolution of the Times

Make Mountains leuell, and the Continent (Wearie of solde firmpne) melt it felde Into the Sea: and other Times, to fee

The beache Girdle of the Ocean Too wide for Neptune hipes; how Chances mocks

Shal. Come-on, come-on, come-on: giue mee your Hand, Sir; giue mee your Hand, Sir: an early firrer, by the Rood. And how doth my good Cousin Silence?

Sil. Good-morrow, good Cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my Cousin, your Bed-fellow? and your fairest Daughtere, and mine, my God-Daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alias, a blacke Ourell (Cousin Shallow.)

Shal. By yea and nay, Sir, I dare say my Cousin William is become a good Scholler? hee is at Oxforde still, is hee not?

Sil. Indeeed Sir, to my cost.

Shal. Hee must then to the Innes of Court shortly: I was once of Clements Inne; where (I thinke) they will take of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were call'd Juffie Shalow then (Cousin.)

Shal. I was call'd any thing: and I would have done any thing indeede too, and roundely too. There was I, and little John Dalt of Staffordhire, and blake George Bards, and Francis Pink-bone, and Will Squele a Coast-yll-man, you had not foure such Swindge-bucklers in all the Innes of Court against: And I may say to you, wee knew where the Bone-Rede's were, and had the best of them all at commandement. Then was Jacke Falstaffe (now Sir John) a Boy, and Page to Thomas Montemrey, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John (Cousin) that comes hither anon an about Soulers? or Shal. The fame Sir John, the very fame: I saw him brake Scoggan's Head at the Court-Gate, when hee was a Crack, not thus high: and the very fame day did I fight with one Sampson Stock-fish, a Fruiterer, behind Greyes-Inne. Oh the mad dasyes that I have spent: and to see how many of mine olde Acquaintance are dead?

Sil. Wee shall all follow (Cousin.)

Shal. Certaine: tis certain: very sure, very sure: Death is certaine to all, all shall dye. How a good Yoke of Bullocks at Stamford Fayre?

Sil. Truly Cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certaine. Is old Double of your Towne liuing yet?

Sil. Dead, Sir.

Shal. Dead? See, fee: hee drew a good Bow: and dead? hee shot a fine boote. John of Gaunt looke him well, and betted much Money on his head. Dead? hee would have clapt in the Clove at Tweleve-focre, and carryed you a fore-hand Shaft at foureteene, and foureteene and a halfe, that it would have done a mans heart good to see. How a score of Ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good Ewes may be worth tenne pounds.

Sil. And is olde Double dead?

Enter Bardolph and his Boy.

Bard. My Captaine (Sir) commends him to you: my Captaine, Sir John Falstaffe: a tall Gentleman, and a moft gallant Leader.

Sil. Hee greetes me well? (Sir) I knew him a good Back-Sword-man. How doth the good Knight? may I ask, how my Lady his Wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon: a Souldier is better accommodated, then with a Wife.

Sil. It is well Sir; and it is well saide, indeede; too: Better accommodated? it is good, yes indeede is: it good phrares are surely, and every where very commendable. Accommodated? it comes of accommod: very good, a good Phrafe.

Bard. Pardon, Sir, I have heard the word. Phrafe howe you it? by this Day, I know not the Phrafe: but I will maintaine the Word with my Sword, to bee a Souldier-like Word, and a Word of exceeding good Command. Fal. I marry, let me hauw him to fit vnder: he's like to be a cold fouldier.

Shal. Where's Shad? Shad. Heere fir. Shal. Shadrow, whole fonne art thou? Shad. My Mothers fonne, Sir. Fal. Thy Mothers fonne: like enough, and thy Fathers shadow: fo the fonne of the Female, is the shadow of the Male: it is often so indeede, but not of the Fathers fubfance.

Shal. Do you like him, sir John?

Fal. Shadrow will ferve for Summer: pricke him: For we haue a number of Shadowes to fill uppe the Mufflers Booke.

Shal. Shall I pricke him downe, Sir John?

Fal. It were fuperfluous: for his apparel is built vp- on his backe, and the whole frame stands upon pinsprick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, you can do it fir: you can doe it: I commend you well.

Francis Feble.

Feble. Heere fir.

Shal. What Trade art thou Feble?

Feble. A Womans Taylor fir.

Shal. Shall I pricke him, fir?

Fal. You may:

But if he had beene a mans Taylor, he would haue pricke'd you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemies Battle, as thou haft done in a Womans petticote?

Feble. I will doe my good will fir, you can haue no more.

Fal. Well foid, good Womans Tailour: Well fyde Courageous Feble: thou wilt bee as valiant as the wrathfull Doge, or most magnanimous Moufe. Pricke the womans Tailour well Master Shallow, deepe Master Shalow.

Feble. I would Wart might have gone fir.

Fal. I would thou wert a mans Tailour, that you might mend him, and make him fit to goo. I cannot put him to a priuate fouldier, that is the Leader of so many thou-hands. Let that fuffine, moft Forcible Feble.

Feble. It shall fuffine.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reuerend Feble. Who is the next?

Shal. Peter Bulcafe of the Greene.

Fal. Yea marry, let vs fee Bulcafe.

Bul. Heere fir.

Fal. Trufl me, a likely Fellow. Come, pricke me Bul- cafe till he roare againe.

Bul. Oh, good my Lord Captaine.

Fal. What do'th thou roare before thart prickt.

Bul. Oh fir, I am a defiead man.

Fal. What defiea haft thou?

Bul. A whofon cold fir, a cough fir, which I caught with Ringing in the Kings affeayres, upon his Coronation day, fir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the Warres in a Gowne: we will have away thy Cold, and I will take fuch order, that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all?

Shal. There is two more called then your number: you must haue but foure heere fir, and so I pray you go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will goo drinke with you, but I cannot carry dinner. I am glad to fee you in good truth, Master Shalow.

Shal. O sir John, doe you remember once wee lay all night in the WInds-mill, in S Georges Field.

Faufaife. No more of that good Master Shallow: No more of that.

Shal. Ha? it was a merry night. And is Lame Night- workes aliue?

Fal. She lyes, M. Shalow.

Shal. She never could awey with me.

Fal. Neuer, neuer: he would always lay thee could not abide M. Shalow.

Shal. I could anger her to the heart: the was then a Bon-Robo. Doo the hold her owne will.

Fal. Old, old, M. Shalow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old, she cannot choose but be old: certaine thee's old: and had Robin Night-workes, by old Night-worke, before I came to Clements Inne.

SIR. That's little five yeeres agoe.

Shal. Hasty Cousin Silence, that thou hast seene that, that this Knight and I have seene: hah, Sir Iohn, said I well?

Falst. Wee have heard the Chymes at mid-night, Master Shallow.

Shal. That wee have, too wee have: in faith, Sir Iohn, wee have: our watch-word was, Hem-Boyes. Come, let's to Dinner; come, let's to Dinner: Oh the days that we have seene. Come, come.

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and hearke is foure Harry tenn eallings in French Crownes for you: in very truth, sir, I had as lief be hang'd sir, as goe: and yet, for mine owne part, sir, I do not care: but rather, because I am vnwillinge, and for mine owne part, haue a dere to thy with my friends: elfe, sir, I did not care, for mine owne part, so much.

Bard. Go-on; stand aside.

Mould. And good Master Corporall Captaine, for my old Dames fake, stand my friend: thee hath no body to doe any thing about her, when I am gone: and she is old, and cannot helpe her selfe: you shall have forte, sir.

Bard. Go-too; stand aside.

Feeble. Nay, I will beare no base minde.

Falst. Come sir, which men shall I haue?

Shal. Foure of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you: I haue three pound, to free Mouldie and Bull-calf.

Falst. Go-too: well.

Shal. Come, sir John, which foure will you haue?

Falst. Doe you chuse for me.

Shal. Marrily then, Mouldie, Bull-calf, Feeble, and Shalene.

Mould, and Bull-calf: for you Mouldie, stay at home, till you are past seruice: and for your part, Bull-calf, grow till you come vnto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir Iohn, sir Iohn, doe not your felde wrong, they are your likeelyest men, and I would have you serue'd with the best.

Falst. Will you tell me (Master Shallow) how to chuse a man? Care I for the Limbe, the Theues, the flature, bulke, and bigge assimblance of a man? glue mee the spiritt (Master Shalow.) Where's warthe? You fee what a ragged appearance it is: hee shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a Pewterers Hammer: come off, and on, twister then hee that gibbets on the Brewers Bucket. And this same halfe-fac'd fellow, Shalene, glue me this man: hee pretents no markes to the Enemy, the fos-man may with as great aymne jubell at the edge of a Pen-knife: and for a Retreat, how swiftly will this Feeble, the Womans Taylor, runne off. O, glue me the faire men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a Calyuer into Wards hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold Wards, Trauerfe: thus, thus, thus.

Falst. Come, manage me your Calyuer: so: very well, go-too, very good, exceeding good. O, glue me always a little, leane, old, chopp'd, bold Shot. Well said Wards, thou art a good Scab: hold, there is a Tetter for thee.

Shal. Hee is not his Crafts-matter, hee doth not doe it right. I remember at Mile-end-Greene, when I lay at Clements Inne, I was then Sir Daynse in Archers Showe: there was a little quiner fellow, and hee would manage you his Peece thus: and hee would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in: Rah, tah, tah, would hee fay, Bownce would hee fay, and away againe would hee goe, and againe would he com: I shall never talk with a fellow.

Falst. These fellows will doe well, Master Shallow. Farewell Master Silence, I will not vfe many words with you: fare you well, Gentlemen both: I thanke you: I muft a dozen mile to night. Bardolph, glue the Souldiers Coates.

Shal. Sir Iohn, Heauen bleffe thee, and prosper thy Affaires, and fend vs Peace. As you returne, visit my house. Let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with you to the Court. Falst. I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shal. Go-too: I have spake at a word. Fare you well.

Falst. Fare you well, gentle Gentlemen. On Bardolph, leade the men away. As I returne, I will fetch off these Iustices: I doe fee the bottome of Iustice Shallow. How faibely wee old men are to this vice of Lying? This fame farru Iustice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildenesse of his Youth, and the Feates hee hath done about Turnball-street, and every third word a Lye, duer pay'd to the hearer, then the Turkes Tribute. I doe remember him at Clements Inne, like a man made after Supper, of a Cheefe-paring. When hee was naked, hee was, for all the world, like a forked Raddifh, with a Head fantastically car'd upon it with a Knife. Hee was so fortlorne, that his Dimensions (to any thickeght ) were inincible. Hee was the very Genus of Famine; hee came euere in the rare-ward of the Fashon: And now is this Vices Dagger become a Squire, and talkes as familiarly of Iohn of Gaunt, as if hee had beene sworne Brother to him: and Ile be sworne hee neuer faw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then hee burnt his Head, for crowding among the Marthals men. I saw it, and told Iohn of Gaunt, hee beat his owne Name, for you might haue truft'd him and all his Apparrell into an Eede-skinne: the Cafe of a Trebble Hoe-boy was a Manshon for him: a Court: and now hath hee Land, and Beeces. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I returne: and it shall goe hard, but I will make him a Philosopher: and Stones to me. If the young Dace be a Bayt for the old Pike, I fee no reason, in the Law of Nature, but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Arch-bishop, Membrey, Hailling, W.Burnelands, Colwode.

Bishop. What is this Forrest call'd?

Hailli. Tis Guiltree Forrest, and shall please your Grace.

Bish. Here stand (my Lords) and send dicioureforth, To know the numbers of our Enemies.

Haille. Wee
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

The Troope in the Thronges of Militarie men:
But rather shew a while like ferefull Warre,
To dyet ranke Minde, fickle of happinesse,
And purge th'obftrusions, which begin to fop
Our very Veines of Life: heare me more plaine:
I haue in equal balance evenly weigh'd,
What wrongs our Arms may do, what wrongs we fuffer,
And finde our Griefes heauer then our Offences.
Wee fee which way the freame of Time doth runne,
And are enfor'd from our moft quiet there,
By the rough Torrent of Occafion,
And haue the summamite of all our Griefes
(When time fhall fore) to fhew in Articles;
Which long ere this,wee offer'd to the King,
And might,by no Suit, gyue our Audience:
When we are wrong'd, and would unfold our Griefes,
Wee are deny'd access into his Perfons:
Even by those men, that moft haue done vs wrong.
The dangers of the dayes but newly gone,
Whose memorie is written on the Earth
With yet appearing blood; and the examples
Of every Minutes infall (prevent now)
Hath put vs in the ill-becoming Armes:
Not to breake Peace, or any Branch of it,
But to establih here a Peace indeede,
Concurring both in Name and Qualtie.

When ever yet was your Appeale deny'd?
Wherin haue you beene galled by the King?
What Peere hath beene fuborn'd, to grate on you,
That you shoule feale this lawlesse bloody Book
Of vng'd Rebellion, with a Seale diuine?
My Brother generall, the Common-wealth,
I make my Querrill, in particular.
There is no neede of any fuch redrefse:
Or if there were, it not belonged to you.
Why not to him in part, and to vs all,
That feele the bruises of the dayes before,
And suffre the Condition of these Times
To lay a heauie and vnuell Hand upon our Honors?
O my good Lord Monbray,
Contrue the Times to their Necelities,
And you fhal fay (indeede) it is the Time,
And not the King, that doth you injuries.
Yet for your part, it not appeares to me,
Either from the King, or in the prefent Time,
That you should haue an ynych of any ground
To build a Griece on: were you not refcor'd
To all the Duke of Norfolkes Seignories,
Your Noble, and right well remembered Fathers?
What thing, in Honor, had my Father lod,
That need to be resu'd, and breath'd in me?
The King that lou'd him, as the State ffood then,
Was for'd, perforce compell'd to banifi him:
And then, that Henry Bullingbreke and hee
Being mounted, and both rowded in their Sestes,
Their neighing Courfiers daring of the Spurre,
Their armed Staves in charge, their Beavers downe,
Their eyes of fire, sparkeling through fights of Steele,
And the lowd Trumpet blowing them together:
Then, then, when there was nothing could have fay'd
My Father from the Breath of Bullingbreke;
O, when the King did throw his Warder downe,
(His owne Life hang upon the Staffe hee threw)
Then threw hee downe himfelf, and all their Lues,
That by Indiftment, and by dint of Sword,
Hauie since mil-carried winder Bullingbreke.

Hift. Wee haue fent forth alreadie.
"Byh. 'Tis well done.
My Friends, and Brethren (in thefe great Affairs)
I muft acquaint you, that I haue receiv'd
New-dated Letters from Northambeiland:
Their cold Intent, tenure, and fubittance thus:
Here doth hee with his Perfons, with fuch Powers
As might hold fortance with his Qualtie,
The which hee could not leue; whereupon
Hee is retyr'd, to rife his growing Fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers,
That your Attempts may over-lie the hazard,
And fearrefull meeting of their Oppo'tue.

Thus do the hopes we haue in him, touch ground,
And daff themfelves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hift. Now what newes?
"Mff. Weft of this Forrest, farceely off a mile,
In goodly forne, comes on the Enemy:
And by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon, or neere, the rate of thirty thousand.

The juft proportion that we gave them out.
Let vs sway-on, and face them in the field.

Enter Walfmerland.

"Byh. What well-appointed Leader fronts vs here?
"Mff. I think it is my Lord of Welfmerland.
Walf. Health, and faire greeting from our Generall,
The Prince, Lord Iden, and Duke of Lancaster.
"Byh. Say on, (my Lord of Welfmerland) in peace:
What doth concern ye comming?
Walf. Then (my Lord)
Vnto your Grace doe I in chiefe addrefe
The fubdance of my Speech. If that Rebellion
Came like it felfe, in hate and abifh'd Routs,
Lent on by bloodie Youth, guarded with Rage,
And conntenanc'd by Boyses, and Beggerie:
I say, if damn'd Commotion to appeare,
In his true, natu're, and moff proper shape,
You (Reuerend Father, and thofe Noble Lords)
Had not beene here, to drefe the ougly fforme
Of hate, and bloodie Infurrection,
With your faire Honors. You, Lord Arch-bishop,
Whole Sea is by a Guilll Peace maintaine'd,
Whole Beard, the Siluer Hand of Peace hath touch'd,
Whole Learning, and good Letters, Peace hath tutor'd,
Whole white Infeftments figure Innocence,
The Dole, and very bleffed Spirit of Peace;
Wherefore doe you ftead tranlate your felfe,
Out of the Speech of Peace, that beares fuch grace
Into the harh and boyffous Tongue of Warre?
Turning your Booke to Graues, your Inke to Blood,
Your Pennes to Launces, and your Tongue diuine
To a lowd Trumpet, and a Point of Warre.
"Byh. Wherefore doe I this? to the Quetion hands
Briefely to this end: Wee are all difear'd,
And with our furretchup, and wanton bowres,
Haue brought our felues into a burning Feuer,
And wee muft bleed for it: of which Dilige,
Our late King Richard (being infet'd) dy'd.
But (my moft Noble Lord of Welfmerland)
I take not on me here as a Phyfician,
Nor doe I, as an Enemy to Peace,
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

If you speak as (Lord Membry) now you know not what.
The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant Gentleman.
Who knew of whom Fortune would then have still'd?
But if your Father had beene Victor there,
Hee n'er had borne it out of Coventry.
For all the Countrie, in a generall voyce,
Cry'd hate upon him: and all their prayers, and loue,
Were set on Herford, whom they doted on,
And blest, and gra'd, and did more then the King.
But this is mere digression from my purpose.

Here come I from our Princely General,
To know your Grievc: to tell you, from his Grace,
That hee will give you Audience: and wherein
It shall appear, that your demands are luft,
You shall enjoy them, every thing set off,
That might so much as thinke you Enemies.
With this Offer, and this, our Reasons,
And it procedes from Policy, not Laws.

Weft. Membry, you ouer-weene to take it so:
This Offer comes from Mercy, not from Feare.
For loe, within a Ken our Army yses,
Vpon mine Honor, all too confident
To graze admittance to a thought of feare,
Our Battale is more full of Names then yours,
Our Men more perfect in the vfe of Armes,
Our Armor all as strong, our Caufe the best:
Then Reafon will, our hearts should be as good.
Say you not then, our Offer is compell'd?

Membry. Well, by my will, wee shall admit no Parley.
Well. That argues but the shame of your offence:
A rotten Cafe abides no handling.

Haut. Hath the Prince John a full Commission,
In very ample vertue of his Father,
To heare, and abolutely to determine
Of what Conditions we shall stand upon?

Well. That is intended in the Generals Name:
I must you make fo flight a Question.

Bibb. Then take (my Lord of Westmerland) this Scheme,
For this contains our generall Grievances:
Each feuerall Article herein descri'd,
All members of our Caufe, both here, and hence,
That are innewed to this Action,
Acquainted by a true substantall forme,
And present execution of our wills,
To vs, and to our purposes commend'd,
Wee come within our awfull Banks againe,
And knit our Powers to the Arme of Peace.

Well. This will I shew the Generall. Please you Lords,
In sight of both our Battales, we may meete
At either end in peace: which Henen fea frame,
Or to the place of difference call the Swords,
Which must decide it.

Bibb. My Lord, wee will doe fo.

Membry. There is a thing within my Boſome tells me,
That no Conditions of our Peace can Hall. Fear ye not, that if we can make our Peace
Vpon such large terms, and fo absolute,
As our Conditions shall confess vpon,
Our Peace shall stand as firme as Rocke Mountains.

Membry. I, but our valuation shall be fuch,
That every flight, and false-derided Caufe,
Ye, every idle, nice, and wanton Reafon,
Shall, to the King, taste of this Action:
That were our Royal faiths, Martyrs in Loue,
Wee shall be winnowed with fo rough a winde,
That even our Corne shall (come as light as Chaffe,
And good from bad finde no partition.

Bibb. No, no (my Lord) note this: the King is warie
Of daintie, and such picking Grievances:
For hee hath found, to end one doubt by Death,
Reculues two greater in the Heltes of Life.
And therefore will hee wipe his Tables cleane,
And keepe no Tell-tale to his Memorie,
That may repeat, and Historie his loffe,
To new remembrance. For full well hee knowes,
Hee cannot so precifely weede this Land,
As his middoubts present occasion:
His foes are fo en-rooted with his friends,
That plucking to vnfee an Enemy,
Hee doth vnfaftten fo, and maketh a friend.
So that this Land, like an offentive wife,
That hath enrag'd him on, to offer strokes,
As he is drining, holds his Infirm un
And hanga f Elon fooleron the Arme,
That was vprea'd to execution.

Haut. Besides, the King hath wafted all his Rods,
On late Offenders, that he now doth lacke
The very Infrumens of Chalcifement:
So that his power, like to a Fanglefe Lion
May offer, but not hold.

Bibb. 'Tis very true:
And therefore be affur'd (my good Lord Marshal)
If we do now make our attonement well,
Our Peace, will (like a broken Limbe united)
Grow stronger, for the breaking.

Membry. Be it fo:
Here he is renoun'd my Lord of Westmerland.

Enter Westmerland.

Bibb. The Prince is here at hand; pleaseth your Lordship
To meet his Grace, luff diffance twenee our Armies?

Membry. Your Grace of Yorke, in heauen's name then forward.

Bibb. Before, and greet his Grace (my Lord) we come.

Enter Prince John.

John. You are wel encountered here (my cofin Membry)
Good day to you, gentle Lord Archbifhop,
And fo to you Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of Yorke, it better shew'd with you,
When that your Flocke (assemble by the Bell)
Encircled you, to heare with reverence
Your exposition on the holy Text,
Then now to fee you heere an iron man
Chearing a rowte of Rebels with your Drumme,
Turning the Word, to Sword; and Life to death:
That man that fits within a Monarches heart,
And ripens in the Sunne-shine of his fave,
Would hee abuse the Countenance of the King,
Alack, what Milchiles might hee set abroach,
In shadow of such Greatnesse? With you, Lord Bifhop,
It is even so. Who of our Peace spake it spoken,
How deapes you were within the Booke of Heauen?
To vs, the Speake in his Parliament;
To vs, the imagine Voyce of Heauen it selfe:
The very OpeNER, and Inelligence,
Betweene the Grace, the Sacrbides of Heauen,
And ouer dull workings. O, who shall beleeue,
But you miſvfc the reuerence of your Place,
Employ the Countenance, and Grace of Heauen,
As a fafe Favorite both his Princes Name,
In deedes dif-honorable? You have taken vp,
Vnder the counterfeited Zeale of Heauen,
The Subects of Heauens Subditute, my Father,
And both against the Peace of Heauen, and him,
Have here vp: Iwarne them.
Bijh. Good my Lord of Lancalfer,
I am not here against your Fathers Peace:
But (as I told my Lord of Westmerland)
The Time (misorder'd) doth in common fence
Crowd vs, and crush vs, to this monstrous Forme,
To hold our fatety vp, I pent your Grace.
The parcels, and particulars of our Griefe,
The which hath been with forse shou'd from the Court:
Whereon this Hydra-Sonne of Warre is borne,
Whole dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep,
With gaunt of our mott lust and right desires;
And true Obedience, of this Madneffe cur'd,
Stoope tamely to the foot of Maiestie.
Mow. If not, wee readie are to trye our fortunes,
To the last man.
Haft. And though wee here full downe,
We have Supplies, to fecond our Attempt:
If they mis-carry, theirs shall fecond them.
And lo, successe of Mitchiffe shall be borne,
And Heire from Heire shall hold this Quarrrel vp,
Whiles England shall have generation.

Iohn. You are too shallow (Hafings)
Much too shallow,
To found the bottome of the after-Times.
Wijf. Pleafeth your Grace, to anfwere them directly,
How farre-forth you doe like their Articles.
Iohn. I like them all, and doe allow them well:
And sware here, by the honor of my blood,
My Fathers purpofes have beene mitooke,
And some, about him, haue too laufilyly
Wreded his meaning, and Authoritie.
My Lord, thefe Griefes shall be with speed redreft:
Upon my Life, they shall. If this may please you,
Difcharge your Powers vnto their feverall Countries,
As wee will ours: and here, betweene the Armies,
Let's drinke together friendly, and embraced,
That all their eyes may beare thofe Tokens home,
Of our reftored Love, and Amicie.
Bijh. I take your Princely word, for thefe redreffe.
Iohn. I gerne it you, and will maintaine my word:
And thereupon I drinke vnto your Grace.
Haft. Goe Captaine, and deliuer to the Armie
This newes of Peace I let them haue paye,and part:
I will to that place pleafe them.
High thee Captaine.
Bijh. To you, my Noble Lord of Westmerland.
Welf. I pledge your Grace:
And if you knew what paines I haue bestowed,
To breede this prefent Peace,
You would drinke freely: but my loue to ye,
Shall shew it felle more openly hereafter.
Bijh. I doe not doubt you.
Wijf. I am glad of it.
Health to my Lord, and gentle Couin [Monbray].
Iohn. It will it well pleafe them.

d. High thee Captaine.
Bijh. To you, my Noble Lord of Westmerland.
Welf. I pledge your Grace:
And if you knew what paines I haue bestowed,
To breede this prefent Peace,
You would drinke freely: but my loue to ye,
Shall shew it felle more openly hereafter.
Bijh. I doe not doubt you.
Wijf. I am glad of it.
Health to my Lord, and gentle Couin [Monbray].
Iohn. It will it well pleafe them.

Bijh. Against ill Chances, men are ever merry,
But heavenlefe fore-runnnes the good event.
Wijf. Therefore be merry (Coze) since fodaine forrow
Serves to lay thus, some good thing comes to Morrow.
Bijh. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.
Mow. So much the worfe, if your owne Rule be true.

Iohn. The word of Peace is render'd: hearkne how they shou't.
Mow. This had been chearfull,after Victorie.
Bijh. A Peace is of the nature of a Conquest:
For then both parties nobly are subjou'd,
And neither partie loother.
Iohn. Goe (my Lord)
And let our Army be discharged too:
And good my Lord (to please you) let our Traines
March by vs, that wee may perude the men
Exit.
Wee should have coap'sd withall.
Bijh. Goe,good Lord Hafings:
And ere they be diffimul'd, let them march by.
Exit.
Iohn. I truft (Lords) wee shal ye to night together.
Enter Westmerland.

Now Couin, wherfore fands our Army fill?
Welf. The Leaders hauing charge from you to fland,
Will not goe ou't, vntill they heare you speake.
Iohn. They know their duties.
Enter Hafings.

Bijh. Our Army is difper'd:
Like youfhfull Stevens, wayoukh'd, they tooke thofe courte Exeunt. West, North, South, or like a Schoole, broke vp,
Each hurries towards his home, and sporting place.
Welf. Good tidings (my Lord Hafings) for the which,
I doe arre thee (Tryator) of high Treasion:
And you Lord Arch-bishop, and you Lord Monbray,
Of Captain Treffon, I attach you both.
Mow. Is this proceeding inf, and honorable?
Wijf. Is your Assembly fo?
Bijh. Will you thus breake your faith?
Iohn. I pawn'd thee none:
I promise you redreffe of these fame Grievances
Whereof you did complain: which, by mine Honor,
I will performe, with a moft Christian care.
But for you (Rebels) looke to taste the due
Meet for Rebellion, and such Acts as yours.
Moft shallowly did you these Armes commence,
Fondly brought here, and foolishly entent.
Strike vp our Drummes, pursue the scatter'd fryr,
Heauen, and not wee, haue safely fought to day.
Some guard these Tractors to the Block of Death,
Treasons true Bed, and yeesler vp of breath.

Wijf. What's your Name, Sir? of what Condition are you?
and of what place, I pray?
Col. I am a Knight, Sir:
And my Name is Colleuile of the Dale.
Bijh. What's your Name? Colleuile is your Name, a Knight is your Degree, and your Place, the Dale.
Colleuile shall ill be your Name, a Tryator your Degree, and the Dum-curgence your Place, a place deepe enough: so shall you be ill Colleuile of the Dale.

Col. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?
Bijh. As good a man as he fir, who ere I am: doe yee yeeld to, or ill I sweate for you? if I doe sweate, they are the drops of thy Louers, and they weep for thy death, therefore rowse vp Fear and Trembling, and do obfervance to my mercy.

Col. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, &c in that thought yield me.
Fal. I have a whole Schoole of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a Tongue of them all, speakes anie other word but my name: and I had but a belly of any indiffe-vene, I were fam'd in the most sduke Fellow in Europe:

you would, you would, you would see mee. Heere comes our Generall.
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Enter Prince John, and Walsingham.

John. The best is past, follow no farther now; Call in the Powers, good Counsellor Walsingham, Now Falstaff, where haue you beene all this while? When every thing is ended, then you come. Thefe tardie Tricks of yours will (on my life) One time, or other, breake some Gallowes back.

Falst. I would bee forry (my Lord) but it should bee thus: I never knew yet, but rebuke and check was the reward of Valour. Doe you thinke me a Swallown, an Arrow, or a Bullet? Haue I, in my poore and old Motion, the expedition of Thought? I haue speeded hither with the very extremest ynce of possibility. I have fowndred nine score and oddie Pates: and hereby (truell-tainted as I am) haue, in my pure and immaculate Valour, taken Sir John Colleulle of the Dale, a most furious Knight, and valorous Enemy: But what of that? hee saw mee, and yeedeed: that I may outhy fay with the hooke-noad's fel' feet of Rome, I came, and, and over-came.

John. It was more of his Courtier, then your deferuing.

Falst. I know not: heere hee is, and heere I yeeld him: and I beleech your Grace, let it be book'd, with the reft of this dayes deede; or I favore, I will haue it in a particular Ballid, with mine owne Picture on the top of it (Colleulle killing my foot:) To the which courfe, if I be enforce'd, if you do not all fwear like gill two-pences to me; and I, in the cleere Skie of Fame, o're-shine you as much as the Full Moore doth the Cynders of the Element (which fheu like Pinnes-heads to her) beleceu the Word of the Noble: therefore let mee hae right, and let defert mount.

John. Thine's too heaus to mount.

Falst. Let it shone then.

John. Thine's too thick to shine.

Falst. Let it doe something (my good Lord) that may doe me good, and call it what you will.

John. Is thy Name Colleulle?

Col. It is (my Lord.)

Falst. And a famous true Subiect tooke him.

Col. I am (my Lord) but as my Beters are,

That led me hither: had they bene rul'd by me,
You shoude have wonne them dearer then you hauue.

Falst. I know not how they fold themselues, but thou like a kinde fellow, gaunt thy felle away; and I thank thee, for thee.

Enter Walsingham.

John. Have you left purfuit?

Wals. Retreat is made, and Execution fty'd.

John. Send Colleulle, with his Confederates,
To York, to make Execution.

Blunt, leade him hence, and fee you guard him sure.

Exit with Colleulle.

And now dispatch we toward the Court (my Lords) I hear the King, my Father, is fore bere. Our Nauicall shall goe before vs, to his Maffeie,

Which (Confine) you shall see, to comfort him:

And wee with fober Speede will follow you.

Falst. My Lord, I beleech you, give me leauue to goe through Gloucestershire: and when you come to Court, fand my good Lord, pray, in your good report.

Falst. Sir, I am in my condition, Shall better speake of you, then you deferue. Exit.

Falst. I would you had but the wit: twere better then your Dukedome. Good faith, this fame young fober-blooded Boy doth not love me, nor a man cannot make him laugh: but that's no manuall, bee drinks no Wine. There's never any of thefe demure Boyes come to any profe: for thinne Drinke doth fo over-coole their blood, and making many Fih-Meales, that they fall into a kinde of Maie Greene-fickneffe: and then, when they marry, they get Wenches. They are generally Fools, and Cowards; which some of vs should be too, but for infamiation. A good Sherris-Sack hath a two-fold operation in it: it ascends me into the Brainey, dryes me there all the foolifh, and dull, and crudifie Vapours, which enuiron it: makes it apprehenfie, quicke, forgetfull, full of nimble, fierce, and delectable fshapes; which deliuerr'd o're to the Voyce, the Tongue, which is the Birth, becomes excellent Wit. The fcond property of your excellent Sherris, is, the warming of the Blood: which before (cold, and fetled) left the Luer white, and pale; which is the Badge of Puillanimity, and Cowardize: but the Sherris warms it, and makes it courfe from the inwards, to the parts extremes: it illuminateth the Face, which (as a Beacon) gives warning to all the reft of this little Kingdome (Man) to Arme; and then the Vital Communers, and in-land pettel Spirits, muffer me all to their Captaine, the Heart; who great, and puff vp with his Retinue, doth any Deed of Courage: and this Valour comes of Sherris. So, that skill in the Weapon is nothing, without Sack (for that fets it a-worke:) and Learning, a mee Hoord of Gold, kept by a Deuill, till Sack commences it, and fets it in afe, and vife. Hereof comes it, that Prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood hee did naturally inherit of his Father, hee hath, like leanes, firlill, and bare Land, manured, husbanded, and tyll'd, with excellent ensemble of drinking good, and good flore of fertile Sherris, that hee is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thousand Sonnes, the first Prince I would teach them, should be to farreware thinne Pota-ions, and to addift themselues to Sack. Enter Bardolph.

How now Bardolph?

Bard. The Armie is discharged all, and gone.

Falst. Let them goe: Ie through Glouceftershire, and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, Esquire: I have him alreadie tempering betweene my finger and my thombe, and shortly will I feale with him. Come away.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Warwick, Clarence, Gloucester.

King. Now Lords, if Heauen doth give succefsfull end To this Debate, that bleedeth at our doores, Wee will our Youth lead on to higher Fields, And draw no Swords, but what are fanteiy'd. Our Naue is addressed, our Power collected, Our Subsittuates, in abfence, well inueded, And every thing yeues leuell to our will; Onesely we want a little perfonall Strength: And pawfe vs, till these Rebels, now a-foot, Come Underneath the yoke of Government.

Bard. Both which we doubt not, but your Maffeie Shall soon enjoy,

King. Hum.
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

King. Humphrey (my Sonne of Gloucester) where is the Prince,your Brother?
Glo. I think he's gone to hunt (my Lord) at Windsor.
King. And how accompanied?
Glo. I do not know (my Lord.)
King. Is not his Brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?
Glo. No (my good Lord) hee is in presence here.
Clar. What would my Lord, and Father?
King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.
How chance thou art not with the Prince, thy Brother?
Hee loves thee, and thou dost neglect him (Thomas.)
Thou hast a better place in his Affection,
Then all thy Brothers: cherish it (my Boy)
And Noble Offices thou mayst effect
Of Mediation (after I am dead)
Betwenee his Greatneffe, and thy other Brethren.
Therefore omit him not: blunt not his Loue,
Nor looke the good advantage of his Grace,
By trening cold, or carell of his will.
For hee is gracious, if hee be obferu'd:
Hee hath a Teare for Nity, and a Hand
Open (as Day) for melting Charlie:
Yet notwithstanding, being incend'd, hee's Flint,
As humorous as Winter, and as fadden,
As Flawes congealed in the Spring of day,
His temper therefore must be well obseru'd:
Chide him for faults, and doe it reverently,
When you perceive his blood enclin'd to mirth:
But being moody, give him Line, and scope,
Till that his passions (like a Whale on ground)
Confound themselues with working. Learne this Thomas,
And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,
A Hoope of Gold, to binde thy Brothers in:
That the united Veffell of their Blood
(Minged with Venom of Suggestion,
As force, perforce, the Age will powre it in)
Shall never leake, though it doe workes as strong
As Acitum, or rash Gun-powder.
Clar. I shall obferue him with all care, and loue.
King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him (Thomas.)
Clar. Hee is not there to day: hee dines in London.
King. And how accompanied? Canst thou tell that?
Clar. With Paitess, and other his continuall followers.
King. Moit subiect is the fattest Soyle to Weedes:
And hee (the Noble Image of my Youth)
Is over-spread with them: therefore my grieue
Stretches it felle beyond the howre of death.
The blood weeps from my heart, when I doe shape
(In formes imaginare) th'vnguided Days,
And rotten Times, that you shall looke vpon,
When I am sleeping with my Ancillors.
For when his head-strong Riot hath no Curbe,
When Rage and hot-Blood are his Counsellors,
When Meanes and lauith Manners meete together;
Oh, with what Wings fall th'Affections fye
Towards fronting Perill, and oppos'd Decay?
War. My gracious Lord, you looke beyond him quite:
The Prince but studieth his Companions,
Like a strange Tongue: wherein, to gaine the Language,
'Tis needfull, that the most immodeft word
Be look'd vpon, and learn'd: which once attaynd'd,
Your Highnesse knowes, comes to no farther vfe,
But to be knowne, and hated. So, like groffe terms,
The Prince will, in the perfeccneffe of time,
Cast off his followers: and their memorie
Shall as a Pattern, or a Measure, blue,
By which his Grace must mete the liues of others,
Turning past-euils to advantageous.
King. To feldowme, when the Bee doth leave her Combe
In the dead Carrion.
Enter Wymferland.
Who's here? ? Wymferland?
Wef. Health to my Soueraigne, and new happineffe
Added to that, that I am to defluer.
Prince John, your Sonne, both kiffe your Grace Hand:
Acton, the Bishop, Scribes, Mapings, and all,
Are brought to the Correction of your Law.
There is not now a Rebels Sword vnheath'd,
But Peace puts forth her Olue every where:
The manner how this Action hath bene borne,
Here (at more leyfure) may your Highnesse reade,
With every courte, in his particular.
King. O Wymferland, thou art a Summer Bird,
Which euer in the haunch of Winter sings
The lifting vp of day.
Enter Harcourt.
Looke, heere's more newes.
Harc. From Enemies, Husuen keepes your Malefice:
And when they stand against you, may they fall,
As tho' that I am come to tell you of.
The Earle Nerbumberland, and the Lord Bardolf,
With a great Power of English, and of Scots,
Are by the Sherife of Yorkshire overthowne:
The manner, and true order of the fight,
This Packet (pleaseth it you) contains at large.
King. And wherefore should these good newes
Make me sike?
Will Fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her faire words full in fouleft Letters?
Shew eyther gives a Stomack, and no Foode,
(Such are the poore, in health) or else a Peaft,
And takes away the Stomack (such are the Rich,
That have abundance, and enjoy it not.)
I should rejoice now, at this happy newes,
And now my Sight fayles, and my Braine is giddie.
O me, come neere me, now I am much ill.
Glo. Comfort your Malefice.
Clar. Oh, my Royall Father.
Wef. My Soueraigne Lord, cheare vp your selfe, looke vp.
War. Be patient (Princes) you do knowe, these Fitts
Are with his Highnesse very ordinarie.
Stand from him, gue him ayre:
Hee's straighte be well.
Clar. No, no, hee cannot long hold out: these pangs,
Th'inceffant care, and labour of his Minde,
Hath wrought the Murch, that should confine it in,
So thynne, that Life lookes through, and will break out.
Glo. The people feare me for they doe obferue
Vnfather'd Heires, and lathly Births of Nature:
The Seafons change their manneres, as the Yeere
Had found some Moneths aleepe, and leap'd them ouer.
Clar. The River hath thriue flow'd, no eibe betweene:
And the old folke (Times doing Chronicles)
Say it did fo, a little time before
That our great Grand-fire Edward fiek'd, and dy'de.
§ § 4 War. Speake
Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Clar. I am here (Brother) full of heauineffe.

P. Hen. How now? Raine within doores, and none abroad? How doth the King?

Glo. Exceeding ill.

P. Hen. Heard hee the newes yet?

Tell it him.

Glo. Hee alter'd much, upon the hearing it.

P. Hen. If hee be sicke with Loyal, Hee'll recover without Physickes.

War. Not so much noyse (my Lords)

Sweet Prince speake I owe,

The King,your Father, is dispos'd to sleepe.

Clar. Let vs with-draw into the other Roome.

War. Will pleasue your Grace to goe along with vs?

P. Hen. Not I will fit, and watch here, by the King.

Why doth the Crowne lye there, vpon his Pillow, Being fo troublesome a Bed-fellow?

O pollish'd Perturbation! Golden Care!

That keep't the Ports of Slumber open wide,

To many a watchfull Night: sleepe with it now,

Yet not so found, and halfe so deepely sweete,

As hee whole Brow (with homely Biggen bound)

Snores out the Watch of Night. O Maiestie!

When thou do'ft pinch thy Bearer, thou dost fit

Like a rich Armor, wore in heat of day,

That scal'd it with fatie: by his Gates of breath,

There lies a downley feather, which stirres not:

Did hee fugiere, that light and weightliff downe

Perforce must moue. My gracious Lord, my Father,

This sleepe is found indeed: this is a sleepe,

That from this Golden Rigoll hath diuor'd so

Many English Kings. Thy sleepe, from me,

Is Teares, and bountie Sorrowes of the Blood,

Which Nature, Loe, and fallall tenderneffe,

Shall (O deare Father) pay thee plentifully.

My sleepe, from thee, is this Imperiall Crowne,

Which (as immediate from thy Place and Blood)

Dermes it felie to me. Loe, heere it fits,

Which Heauen shall guard:

And put the worlds whole streightt into one giant Arme,

It shall not force this Lineall Honor from me.

This, from thee, will I to mine leve, as 'tis left to me.

Enter Warwick,"Gloucester, Clarence.

King. Warwick, Gloucester, Clarence.

Clar. Doth the King call?

War. What would your Maiestie? how fars your Grace?

King. Why did you leave me here alone (my Lords?)

Glo. We left the Prince (my Brother) here (my Liege)

Who undertook to fit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales? where is hee? let mee see him.

War. This door is open, hee is gone this way.

Glo. Hee came not through the Chamber where wee staid.

King. Where is the Crowne? who took it from my Pillow?

War. When wee with-drew (my Liege) wee left it here.

King. The Prince hath ta'ne it hence:

Goe feeke him out.

Is hee so hafte, that hee doth suppole

My sleepe, my death? finde him (my Lord of Warwick)

Chide him hither: this part of his conioynes

With my disease, and helpes to end me.

See Sonnes, what things you are:

How quickly Nature falls into resolt,

When Gold becomes her Oxies?

For this, the foolish out-carefull Fathers

Have broke their sleepe with thoughts,

Their brains with care, their bones with industry.

For this, they have ingroffled and pfl'd vp

The tankerd heapes of strange-achieved Gold:

For this, they have beene thoughtfull, to inset

Their Sonnes with Arts, and Martaill Exercise:

When, like the Bee, callling from euery flower

The vertuous Sweets, our Thighes packt with Wax,

Our Mouthes with Honey, wee bring it to the Hieue;

And like the Bees, are murthered for our paines.

This bitter tale yeildes his engravements,

To the ending Father.

Enter Warwick.

Now, where is hee, that will not stay so long,

Till his Friend Sickneffe hath determin'd me?

War. My Lord, I found the Prince in the next Roome,

Washing with kindly Teares his gentle Cheekees,

With such a deeppe demesnure, in great sorrow,

That Tyranny, which never quaff but blood,

Would (by beholding him) haue washed his Knife

With gentle eye-drops. Hee is comming hither.

King. But wherefore did hee take away the Crowne? I

Enter Prince Henry.

Loe, where hee comes. Come hither to mee.

(to Henry.) Depart the Chamber, leave vs here alone.

Exit. P. Hen. I neuer thought to heare you speake againe.

King. Thy wifh was Father (Harry) to that thought:

I stay too long by thee, I ware thee.

Do't thou so hunger for my empie Chayre,

That thou wilt needs inset thee with mine Honor,

Before thy howre be ripe? O foolish Youth!

Thou feek'th the Greatnesse, that will over-whelme thee.

Stay but a little: for my Cloud of Digniuite

Is hold from falling, with so weake a winde,

That it will quickly drop: my Day is dimme.

 Thou haft done that, which after some few howres

Were thine, without offence: and at my death

Thou haft feald vp my expectation.

Thy Life did manifest, thou lou'dst me not,

And thou wilt have me dye affur'd of it.

Thou hid'st a thousand Daggers in thy thoughts,

Which thou haft whetted on thy fonie heart,

To stab at halfe an howre of my Life.

What's canst thou not forbeare me halfe an howre?
Then get thee gone, and digge my grate thy selfe,
And bid the merry Bels ring to thy eare.
That thou art Crownd, not that I am dead.
Let all the Terrors, that should beseew my Heart
Be drops of Balme, to falifie thy head:
Onely compound me with forgotten duft.
Glue that, which gauze thee life, into the Wormes:
Plucke downe my Officers, breake my Decreas;
For now a time is come, to muckle at Forme.
Henry the fift is Crownd: 'V P Vanity,
Downe Royall State: All you fage Counsellors, hence:
And to the English Court,assemble now
From eu're Region, Ape of Idiencie.
Now neighbor-Confines, purge you of your Scum:
Have you a Russian that swarest drunk? drinke? dance?
Reuell the night? Rob! Murder? and commit
The oldift finnes, the newest kinde of wayer?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
England, shall double gild'd, his treble guilt.
England, shall give him Office, Honour, Might:
For the Fift Harry, from curb'd License pluckes
The muzzle of Restraint; and the wilde Dogge
Shall fleth his tooth in euery Innocent.
O my poor Kingsome (fackle, with cruel blowes)
When that my Care could not withold thy Ryots,
What wilt thou do, when Ryot is thy Care?
O, thou wilt be a Wildernessse againe,
Peopleed with Wholes (thy old Inhabitants).
Prince. O pardon me (my Liege)
But for my Terrors,
The moft Impediments vnto my Speech,
I had fore-fal'd this deere, and deepe Rebuke,
Ere you (with greefe) had spake, and I had heard
The courfe of it fo farre. There is your Crowne,
And he that weares the Crowne immortall,
Long guard it yours. If I affeé it more,
Then as your Honour, and as your Renowne,
Let me no more from this Obedience rife,
Which my moft true, and inward duteous Spirit
Teacheth this profirate, and exterior biding, Heauen witnisse with me, when I heere came in,
And found no courfe of breath within your Maiestie,
How cold it froooke my heart. If I do faine,
O let me, in my prefent wildenesse, dye,
And never bleue, to shew th'incredulous World,
The Noble change that I have purpofed.
Comming to looke on you, thine dead you dead,
(And dead almoft (my Liege) to thinke you were)
I fpoke vnto the Crowne (as hauing fence)
And thus vpbraided it. The Care on thee depending,
Hath fed upon the body of my Father,
Therefore, thou left of Gold, art worst of Gold.
Other, leffe fine in Charack, is more precious, preferuing life, in Med'cine potable:
But thou, moft Fine, moft Honour'd, moft Renown'd,
Haft eate the Bearer vp.
Thus (my Royall Liege)
Accusing it, I put it on my Head,
To try with it (as with an Enemie,
That had before my face murdred my Father)
The Quarrell of a true Inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with Joy,
Or swell my Thoughts, to any straine of Pride,
If any Rebell, or vaine spirit of mine,
Did, with the leaf Affection of a Welcome,
Gue entertainment to the might of it,
Let heauen, for euer, keepe it from my head,
And make me, as the pooreft Vafalle is,
That doth with awe, and terror kneele to it.
King. O my Sonne!
Heauen put it in thy minde to take it hence,
That thou might't ionye the more, thy Fathers louse,
Pleading fo wisely, in excufe of it.
Come hither Harry, fit thou by my bedde,
And heare (I thinke,) the very latest Counfell
That euer I shall breathe: Heauen knowes, my Sonne)
By what by-pathes, and indirec crook'd-ways
I met this Crowne: and I my felie know well
How troublesome it fate vpon my head.
To thee, it shall defend with better Quiet,
Better Opinion, better Confirmation:
For all the foyle of the Atchieuement goes
With me, into the Earth. It seem'd in mee,
But as an Honour frath'd with boyftrous hand,
And I had many living, to vpraise
My gaines of it, by their Affinances,
Which dayly grew to Quarrell, and to Blood-shed,
Wounding suppos'd Peace.
All thofe bold Feares,
Thou feele (with perill) I haue anfwered:
For all my Reigne, hath bene but as a scene
Acting that argument. And now my death
Changes the Mooode: For what in me, was purchas'd, Falles vpon thee, in a more Payrer fort.
So thou, the Garland wear't sufficiently.
Yet, though thou hand'd more fue, then I could do,
Thou art not firme enough, since greeves are groene:
And all thy Friends, which thou must make thy Friends
Haue but their rings, and teeth, newly tak'n out,
By whose fell working, I was fritt adoac'd,
And by whose power, I well might lodge a Fear
To be againe displac'd. Which to auoyd,
I cut them off: and had a purpoce now
To leade out many to the Holy Land;
Leaft reft, and lying full, might make them looke
Too neere vnto my State.
Therefore (my Harry)
Be it thy courfe to bufie giddy Mindes
With Forraigne Quarrels: that Afection borne boute,
May wafe the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my Lungs are wafted fo,
That Strength of Speech is vterly den'd to mee.
How I came by the Crowne, O heauen forgiue:
And grant it may, with thee, in true peace lye.
Prince. My gracious Liege:
You wonne it, wore it: kept it, gauze it me,
Then plaine and right muff my poteffion be;
Which I, with more, then with a Common paine,
'Gainst all the World, will rightfully maintaine.

Enter Lord John of Lancather, and Warwick.

King. Looke, looke,
Here comes my John of Lancather:
John. Health, Peace, and Happineffe,
To my Royall Father.
King. Thou bring'st me happinffe and Peace
(Sonne Esle):
But health (alacke) with youthfull wings is floane
From this bare, wither'd Trunk. Vpon thy fight
My worldely busynffe makes a period.

Where
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Where is my Lord of Warwicke? Where is my Lord of Warwicke?

War. Doth any name particular, belong

Vnto the Lodging, where I first did swoon'd? War. This call’d Jerusalem, my Noble Lord.

King. Laud be to heauen: Euen there my life miſt end.

It hath beene prophesi’d to me many yeares, I should not dye, but in Jerusalem:

Which (vainly) I suppos’d the Holy-Land.

But bear me to that Chamber, there I lie:

In that Jerusalem, shall Harry dye. Exeunt.

Aeitus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Shallow, Silence, Falstaffe, Bardolph, Pages, and Daniel.

Shal. By Cocke and Pye, you shall not away to night.

What Dauy, I say.

Pa. You must excuse me, M. Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused. Excuses shall not be admitted: there is no excuse shall ferue; you shall not be excus’d.

Why Daniel, you hearre fr.

Daniel. Sir, you shall not be excus’d.

Dauy, Marry fr, thus: those Precepts cannot bee feru’d: and againe fr, shall we fowe the head-land with Wheate?

Shal. With red Wheate Dauy. But for William Cooke: are there any yong Pigeons?

Dauy. Yes Sir.

Here is now the Smithes note, for Shoouing,

And Plough-hrons.

Shal. Let it be caft, and payde: Sir Iohn, you shall not be excus’d.

Dauy. Sir, a new linke to the Bucket muſt needs bee had: And Sir, doe you mean to floppe any of Williams Wages, about the Sacke he loft the other day, at Hinchley Fayre?

Shal. He shall answer it:

Some Pigeons Dauy, a couple of short-leg’d Hennes: a loync of Mupton, and any pretty little tine Kicks-armed, tell William Cooke.

Dauy. Doth the man of Warre, lay all night fir?

Shal. Yes Dauy:

I will vie him well. A Friend i’th Court, is better then a penny in parle. Vfe his men well Dauy, for they are arrant Knaues, and will backe-bite.

Dauy. No worfe then they are bitten, fir: For they have marvellous foule linnen.

Shal. Well conce’d Dauy: about thy Buschel, Dauy.

Dauy. I befeech you fir,

To countenance William Ufier of Woncote, against Clement Perke of the hill.

Shal. There are many Complaints Dauy, against that Ufier; that Ufier is an arrant Knaue, on my knowledge.

Dauy. I grant you your Worship, that he is a knaue Sir: But yet heauen forbid Sir, but a Knaue shoulde have some Countenance, at his Friends requete. An honest man fir, is able to speake for himselfe, when a Knaue is not. I have seen Sir, your Worlhippe truly fir, these eight yeares: and if I cannot once or twice in a Quarter beare out a knaue, against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your Worlhippe. The Knaue is mine honest Friend Sir, therefore I beleech your Worship, let him bee Countenee’d.

Shal. Go too,

I fay he shalle haue no wrong: Looke about Dauy. Where are you Sir Iohn? Come, off with your Boots.

Glue me your hand M. Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to fee your Worship.

Shal. I thank thee, with all my heart, kinde Master Bardolph: and welcome my tall Fellow:

Come Sir Iohn.

Falstaffe. Ile follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. Bardolph, looke to our Horfes. If I were fawe’d into Quantities, I should make foure dozen of such bearded Hermes faues, as Master Shallow. It is a wonderfull thing to fee the femailble Coherence of his mens fpirits, and his: They, by offering of them, do beare themselves like foolifh Iufuces: Flee, by converting with them, is turn’d into a Iufice-like Seruingham. Their fpirits are fo married in Coniuncion, with the participation of Society, that they flocke together in conceit, like fo many Wilde-Geefe. If I had a fute to Mayfer Shallow, I would honour his men, with the imputation of being neere their Mayfer. If to his Men, I would currie with Master Shallow, that no man could better command his Servants. It is certaine, that either wife bearing, or ignorant Carriage is caught, as men take difeases, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their Compafie. ‘I will deuie matter enough out of this Shallow, to keepe Prince Harry in continuall Laughter, the wearing out of fome Fashions (which is foure Tearmes) or two Actions, and he shall laugh with Internallums. O it is much that a Lye (with a flight Oath) and a left (with a fadde brow) will doe, with a Fellow, that neuer had the Ache in his shoulders. O you shall fee him laugh, till his Face be like a wea Cloake, ill laid vp.

Shal. Sir Iohn.

Falstaff. I come Master Shallow, I come Master Shallow. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Earle of Warwicke, and the Lord Chief Juflice.

Warwicke. How now, my Lord Chief Juflice, whether away?

Chief Juflice. How doth the King?

War. Exceeding well: his Cares

Are now, all ended.

Chief Juflice. I hope, not dead.

War. Hee’s walk’d the way of Nature,

And to our purposes, he lyes no more.

Chief Juflice. I would his Majestie had call’d me with him, The fterne, that I truly did his life,

Hath left me open to all injuries.
War. Indeed I think the young King loves you not.

Ch. II. I know he doth not, and do arm my selfe
To welcome the condition of the Time,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me,
Then I have drawn it in my fantasies.

Enter John of Lancaster, Gloucester, and Clarence.

War. Here come the heavy life of dead Harry:
O, that the illusing Harrie had the temper
Of him, the worst of the three Gentlemen:
How many Nobles then, should hold their places,
That must strike false, to Spirits of vilde fort?
Ch. II. Alas, I fear, all will be over-turn'd.
John. Good morrow Cofin Warwick, good morrow.
John. We meet, like men, that had forgot to speake.
War. We do remember: but our Argument
Is all the beauty, to admit much talkes.

Ib. Well; Peace be with you; the hand hath made vs heavy.
Ch. II. Peace be with vs, let us be heavier.
Glou. O, good my Lord, you have left a friend indeed:
And I dare weare, you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow, it is pure your owne.

John. Though no man be affur'd what grace to finde,
You stand in coldest expetation.

I am the forter, would 'were other-wise.

Cofin. Well, you must now speake Sir John Falstaff faire,
Which swimmes agst your fireame of Quality.

Ch. II. Sweet Princess what I did, I did in Honor,
Led by th'Imperiall Conduct of my Soule,
And neuer shall you see, that I will begge
A ragged, and fore-fall'd Remission.
If Troth, and vright Innocency fayle me,
Ie to the King (my Mather) that is dead,
And tell him, who hath finst me after him.

War. Here comes the Prince.

Enter Prince Harrie.

Ch. II. Good morrow: and heaven fave your Maiesty Prince.
This new, and gorgeous Garment, Malefys
Sits not so easie on me, as you thinke.

Brothers, mix your Sadnesse with some Feare:
This is the English, not the Turkis Court:
Not Amurah, an Amurah succedest,
But Harry, Harry: Yet be fad (good Brothers)
For (to speake truth) it very well becomes you:
Sorrow, fo Royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the Fasion on,
And weare it in my heart. Why then be fad,
But entertaine no more of it (good Brothers)
Then a loynt birtben, laie on vs all.

For me, by Heauen (I bid you affur'd)
Ile be your Father, and your Brother too:
Let me but beare your Love, Ile beare your Cares;
But wepe that Harrie's dead, and so will I.
But Harry lives, that shall contuse these Teares
By number, into houres of Happinesse.

John, &c. We hope no other from your Maiesty.

Prin. You all looke strangete on me: and you moft,
You are (I thinke) affur'd, I love you not.
Ch. II. I am affur'd (if I be meur'd rightly)
Your Maiesty hath no lus caufe to hate me.
Pr. No! How might a Prince of my great hopes forget
So great Indignities you laid vpon me?

What Rate? Rebuke! and roughly send to Prifon Th'Immediate Heire of England? Was this eafe?
May this be waft'd in Letters, and forgotten?
Ch. II. I then did vfe the Perfon of your Father:
The Image of his power, lay then in me,
And in th'administration of his Law,
Whiles I was buie for the Commonwealth,
Your Highnesse pleased to forget my place,
The Maiesty, and power of Law, and Jufeice,
The Image of the King, whom I preferred,
And froke me in my very Seste of Judgement:
Whereon (as an Offender to your Father)
I gave bold way to my Authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the Garland,
To have a Sonne, let your Decrees at naught?
To plucke downe Jufeice from your awefull Bench?
To trip the course of Law, and blunt the Sword
That guards the peace, and safety of your Perfon?
Nay more, to ipume at your moft Royall Image,
And mockke your workes, in a second Body?
Question your Royall Thoughts, make the cafe yours:
Be now the Father, and propone a Sonne:
Hearre your owne dignitie so much prophan'd,
See your most dreadful Lawes, fo loosely lighted;
Behold your feltes, so by a Sonne disdained:
And then imagine me, taking you part,
And in your power, soft silencing your Sonne:
After this cold conuerdance, sentence me;
And, as you are a King, speake in your State,
What I have done, that misbecame my place,
My perfon, or my Liege Soueraigne.

Prin. You are right Jufeice, and you weigh this well:
Therefore fill bear the Balance, and the Sword:
And I do with your Honors may encreas,
Till you do live, to see a Sonne of mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I live, to speake my Fathers words:
Happy am I, that have a man so bold,
That dares do Jufeice, on my proper Sonne;
And no leffe happy, having such a Sonne,
That would deliver up his Greaterneffe, fo,
Into the hands of Jufeice. You did commit me:
For which, I do commit into your hand,
Th'nflained Sword that you have vs'd to beare:
With this Rememberance; That you vfe the fame
With the like bold, tuft, and Impearlall spirit
As you have done to me. Touch me,
You shall be as a Father, to my Youth:
My voice shall found, as you do prompt mine ear,
And I will foote, and humble my Intents,
To your well-practis'd, wife Directions.
And Princes all, beleue me, I beleech you:
My Father is gone wilde into his Graue,
(For in his Tombe, lynge my Affections)
And with his Spirits, sadly I furuive,
To mocke the expetation of the World;
To frustrate Predictors, and to race out
Rotten Opinion, who hath writ me downe
After my feeming. The Tide of Blood in me,
Hath proudly flow'd in Vanitie, till now.
Now doth it turne, and ebe backe to the Sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of Floods,
And flow henceforth in formall Maiesty,
Now call we our High Court of Parliament,
And let vs choose such Limbs of Noble Consulfe,
That
Scena Tertia.

Sil. If we shall be merry, now comes in the sweete of the night.

Sil. Fill the Cuppe, and let it come. Ie pledge you a mile to the bottome.

Dau. I hope to see London, once ere I die.

Bar. If I might see you there, Danie.

Sil. You'll cracke a quart together? Ha, will you not M.Bardolph?

Bar. Yes Sir, in a polette pot.

Sil. I thanke thee: the knaue will flicke by thee, I can affure thee that. He will not out, he is true bred.

Bar. And Ile flicke by him, sir.

Sil. Why there spoke a King: lack nothing, be merry. Lookes, who's at doore there, ho: who knockes?

Sil. Do me right, and dub me Knight, Samings. Isn't not so?

Enter Puffel.

Piff. Sir John, Iause you fir.

Piff. Not the ill winde which blowes none to good, sweet Knight: Thou art now one of the greatest men in the Realme.

Sil. Indeed, I think he be, but Goodman Puffe of Barfon.

Piff. Puffe? puffe in thy teeth, most recreant Coward base. Sir Iohn, I am thy Puffel, and thy Friend: helter skelter have I rode to thee, and tydings do I bring, and luckie loyes, and golden Times, and happie Newes of price.

Fal. I prethee now deliver them, like a man of this World.

Fal. O base Affyrian Knight, what is thy newes?

Let King Caiulaka know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin-hood, Scarlet, and John.

Piff. Shall dunghill Curres confront the Hellicons? And shall good newes be baffe'd?

Then Puffel lay thy head in Furdes lappe.

Shal. Honest Gentleman,

I know not your breeding.

Piff. Why then Lament therefore.

Shal. Glue me pardon, Sir.

If sir, you come with newes from the Court, I take it, there is but two ways, either to vter them, or to conceale them. I am Sir, vnder the King, in some Authority.

Piff. Vnder which King?

Browsers, speake, or dye.

Shal. Vnder King Harry.

Piff. Harry the Fourth? or Piff?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Piff. A fostra for thine Office.

Sir Iohn, thy tender Lamb-kinne, now is King,

Harry the Fift's the man, I speake the truth. When Puffel byes, do this, and figges-me, like

The bragging Spaniard.

The things I speake, are luft.

Let vs take any mans Horfes: The Lawes of Eng-lande at my commaund'ment. Happie are they, which have bene my Friends: and woe vnto my Lord Chiefe Juftice.
Pitf. Let Vultures vilde feize on his Lungs also: Where is the life that late I led, fay they? Why here it is, welcome thofe pleafant days. Exeunt Pif toll. Blefe thy Lungs, good Knight.

Pif toll. Come here Pif toll, stand behind me: O if I had had time to have made new Luries, I would have be- lower'd the thoundond pound I borrowed of you. But it is no matter, this poor thow doth better: this doth inferre the zeale I had to see him.

Shal. It doth fo.
Pif toll. It shewes my earneftneffe in affection.
Pif toll. It doth fo.

Fal. My deauidion.
Pif toll. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night, And not to deliberate, not to remember,

Not to haue patience to shift me.

Shal. It is moft certaine.

Fal. But to fland flained with Trauaile, and sweating with defire to fee him, thinking of nothing else, putting all affayres in oblivion, as if there were nothing els to bee done, but to see him.
Pif toll. 'Tis temper idem: for abique nec nihil eft. 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis fo indeed.
Pif toll. My Knight, I will enflame thy Noble Lier, and make thee rage. Thy Del, and Helen of thy noble thoughts is in bafe Durance, and contagious prifon: Hall'd thither by moft Mechanick and durtie hand. Pif toll. The heauen thee guard, and keepe, moft royall Impe of Fame.
Fal. Saue thee my sweet Boy.

King. My Lord Chiefe Juftice, speake to that vaine man.

Ch. Is thee. Haue you your wiss?

Know you what 'tis you speake?

Falstaff. My King, my love; I speake to thee, my heart. King. I know thee not, old man: Fall to thy Prayers:
How ill white hailes become a Fool, and Ieffer?

I have
I have long dream’d of such a kind of man,
So surfeit’d, well’d, so old, and so profane:
But being awake, I do despise my dreame.
Make leese thy body (hence) and more thy Grace,
Leave gourmandizing; Know the Grave doth gape
For thee, thrice wider then for other men,
Reply not to me, with a Foolish borne left,
Prelume not, that I am the thing I was,
For heauen doth know (to shal the world perceiv)
That I have turn’d away my former Selfe,
So will I those that kept me Company,
Whom thou dost hear I am, as I have bin,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou was’t
The Tutor and the Feeder of my Riots;
Till then, I banish thee, on paine of death,
As I have done the rest of my Milicender,
Not to come neere our Perfor, by ten mile.
For competence of life, I will allow you,
That lacke of meanes enforce you not to eull:
And as we hear you do reforme your felines,
We will according to your strength, and qualities,
Glue you advancement. Be it your charge (my Lord)
To see perform’d the tenure of our words. Set on.

Fal. Master Shallo, I owe you a thousand pound.
Shal. I marry Sir John, which I beeche you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallo, do not you grieve at this? I shall be sent for in private to him; Lookke you, he must see you thus to the world: feare not your advancement:
I will be the man yet, that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot well perceiv how, vnlesse you should give me your Doublet, and stuffe me out with Straw. I beche you, good Sir John, let mee have five hundred of your thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word. This that you heard, was but a colour.

Shall. A colour I feare, that you will dye, in Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours, go with me to dinner:
Come Lieutenant Pillal, come Bardolfe,
I shall be sent for soone at night.

Ch. Inff. Go carry Sir John Falstaffe to the Fleete,
Take all his Company along with him.

Fal. My Lord, my Lord.

Ch. Inff. I cannot now speake, I will heare you soone;
Take them away.

Piff. Si fortuna me tormenta, ferra me contenta.

Exit. Mowt Lancaster and Chiefse Inffice.

John. I like this faire proceeding of the Kings;
He hath intent his wond he Followers
Shall all be very well proffred for:
But all are banish’d, till their concerations
Appear more wise, and modell to the world.

Ch. Inff. And so they are.

John. The King hath call’d his Parliament,
My Lord.

Ch. Inff. He hath.

John. I will lay odds, that ere this yeere expire,
We hearc our Cuill Swords, and Natije fire
As farre as France. I hearc a Bird fo sing,
Whose Muticke (to my thinking) plea’d the King.
Come, will you hence?

Exit.

FINIS.
EPILOGVE.

I REST, my Feare: then, my Curtis: last, my Speech. My Feare, is your Displeasure: My Curtis, my Dutie: And my speech, to Begge your Pardons. If you looke for a good speech now, you undoe me: For what I haue to say, is of mine owne making: and what (indeed) I should say, will (I doubt) prooue mine owne marring. But to the Purpose, and so to the Venture. Be it knowne to you (as it is very well) I was lately heere in the end of a displeasing Play, to pray your Patience for it, and to promise you a Better: I did meane (indeed) to pay you with this, which if (like an ill Venture) it come unluckily home, I breake; and you, my gentle Creditors love. Heere I promise you I would be, and heere I committ my Bodie to your Mercies: Bate me some, and I will pay you some, and (as most Debtors do) promise you infinitely.

If my Tongue cannot entreate you to acquitted: will you command me to use my Legges? And yet that were but light payment, to Dance out of your debt: But a good Conscience, will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the Gentlewomen heere, baue forgiven me, if the Gentlemen will not, then the Gentlemen do not agree with the Gentlewomen, which was never seen before, in such an Assembly.

One word more, I beseech you: if you be not too much clod with Fat Meate, our humble Author will continue the Story (with Sir Iohn in it) and make you merry, with faire Katherine of France: where (for any thing I know) Falstaffe shall dye of a sweat, vnshe Wready he be kill'd with your hard Opinions: For Old-Castle dyed a Martyr, and this is not the man. My Tongue is weary, when my Legs are too, I will bid you good night; and so kneele downe before you: But (indeed) to pray for the Queene.

On your imaginacie Forces worke,
Supplye within the Girdle of thyse Walls
Are now confin'd two mightie Monarchies,
Whose high-top-reared, and abutting Fronts,

Enter the two Bishops of Canterbury and Ely.

Bis. Cant. The King is full of grace, and faire regard.
Bis. Ely. And a true lover of the holy Church.
Bis. Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no sooner left his Father's body,
But that his wildnesse, mortify'd in him,
Seem'd to dye too; yea, at that very moment,
Confederation like an Angell came,
And whipt th'offending Adam out of him;
Leaving his body as a Paradifie,
To inclose and containe Celestiall Spirits.
Neuer was such a sodaine Scholler made;
Neuer came Reformation in a Flood,
With such a heady curance fowring faults:
Nor neuer Hidra-headed Wilfulneffe
So soone did loose his Seat; and all at once;
As in this King.
Bis. Ely. We are blest in the Change.
Bis. Cant. Heare him but reaso'n in Divinitie;
And all-admiring, with an inward with
You would defire the King were made a Prelate:
Heare him debate of Common-wealth Affairs:
You would say, it hath been all in all his study:
Lift his discouer of Warre; and you shall hear
A fairefull Battale rendred you in Musique.
Enter two Bishops.

B.Cant. God and his Angels guard your sacred Throne,
And make you long become it,
King. Sure we thank you.

My learned Lord, we pray you to proceed,
And industriously unfold,
Why the Law Saitie, that they have in France,
Or should or should not barre vs in our Clayme:
And God forbid, my dear and faithful Lord,
That you should faction, wrote, or how your reading,
Or nicely charge your understanding Soul,
With opening Titles miscreate, whose right
Sutes not in nature qualities with the truth:
For God doth know, how many now in health,
Shall drop their blood, in approbation
Of what you observe shall incite vs to.
Therefore take heed how you impawne our Perfon,
How you awake our sleeping Sword of Warre;
We charge you in the Name of God take heed:
For neither two fuch Kingdomes did contend,
Without much ill of blood, where guiltie drops
Are every one, a Woe, a fore Complaint,
'Gainst him, whose wrongs giues edge unto the Swords,
That makes such waife in briefe mortality.
Vnder this Coniuration, speake my Lord:
For we will heare, note, and believe in heart,
That what you speake, is in your Confiquence waft,
As pure as fine with Baptisme.

B.Cant. Then heare me gracious Soueraign, & you Peers,
That owe your false, your lines, and fennent,
To this Imperiall Throne. There is no barre
To make against your Highnesse Clayme to France,
But this which they produce from Pharomond,
In terram Salicam Matriae us sucedeant,
No Woman shall succeed in Saitie Land:
Which Saitie Land, the French violously clause
To be the Realm of France, and Pharomond
The founder of this Law, and Female Barre.
Yet their owne Authors faithfully affirme,
That the Land Saiie is in Germanie,
Betwenee the Flouds of Sals and of Elue:
Where Charles the Great having fuch'd the Saxons,
They left behind and fertiled certaine French:
Who holding in difdain the German Women,
For some dishonest manners of their life.
Establifht then this Law; to wit, No Female
Should be Inheritrix in Saitie Land:
Which Saitie (as I faid) twist: Elue and Sals,
Is at this day in Germanie, call'd Main.
Then doth it well appeare, the Saitie Law
Was not defauld for the Realme of France:
Nor did the French poseffe the Saitie Land,
Vntill four hundred one and twenty yeeres
After defcription of King Pharomond,
Idly fuppof'd the founder of this Law,
Who died within the yeere of our Redemption,
Four hundred twenty fix: and Charles the Great
Subdu'd the Saxons, and did feate the French
Beyond the River Sals, in the yeere
Eight hundred five. Befides, their Writers say,
King Pepin, which depofed Childerik,
Did as Heire Generall, being defended
Of Blatifeld, which was Daughter to King Clothair,
Make Clayme and Title to the Crown of France,
Hugge Capet also, who vflperte the Crowne

The Life of Henry the Fift.
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Of Charles the Duke of Loraine, sole Heire male
Of the true Line and Stock of Charles the Great:
To find his Title with some thewes of truth,
Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught,
Couey'd himselfe as th' Heire to th' Lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charles, who was the Sonne
To Lewes the Emperour, and Lewes the Sonne
Of Charles the Great: all King Lewes the Tenth,
Who was sole Heire to the Vluer Capet,
Could not keepe quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the Crowne of France, 'till satisfied,
That faire Queene Ihe, his Grandmother,
Was Lineall of the Lady Ernengare,
Daughter to Charles the forefaid Duke of Loraine:
By which the Marriage, the Lyne of Charles the Great
Was re-witted to the Crowne of France.
So, that as clear as is the Summers Sunne,
King Tepins Title, and Hugh Capet: Clayme,
King Lewes his satisfaction, all appeare
To hold in Right and Title of the Female:
So the Kings of France vnto this day,
Howbeit, they would hold vp this Salique Law,
To barre your Highnesse claiming from the Female,
And rather chuse to hide them in a Net,
Then amply to imbarre their crooked Titles,
Vnchpt from you and your Progenitures.
King: May I with right and conscience make this claim?
Bibl. Cant. The finne vpon your head, dread Soueraigne:
For in the Booke of Numbers it is writ,
When the man dyes, let the inheritance
Defend vnto the Daughter. Gracious Lord,
Stand for your owne, and wind your bloody Flagg,
Looke back into your mightie Aancestors:
Goe my dread Lord, to your great Grandfres Tombe,
From whom you clayme: inuoke his Warlike Spirit,
And your Great Vackles, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a Tragedie,
Making defaet on the full Power of France:
Whiles his most mightie Father on a Hill
Stood firmly, to behold his Lyons Whelpes
Forrage in blood of French Nobilitie.
O Noble English, that could entertaine
With halfe their Forces, the full pride of France,
And let another halfe stand laughing by,
All out of works, and cold for action.
Bibl. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your pollent Arme renew their Feats
You are their Heire, fit you fit your Throne:
The Blood and Courage that renowned them,
Runs in your Veines: and my thrice-pollent Liege
Is in the very May-Morne of his Youth,
Ripe for Exploits and mightie Enterprizes.
Exe. Your Brother Kings and Monarchs of the Earth
Do eall expell, that you should rowe your felles,
As did the former Lyons of your Blood:
(might?
Welt. They know your Grace hath cause, and means, and
So hath your Highness: neeuer King of England
Had Nobles richer, and more loyal Subiects,
Whose beares have left their bodies here in England,
And Iye pauillon'd in the fields of France.
Bibl. Cant. O let their bodies follow my deare Liege
With Bloods, and Sword and Fire, to win your Right:
In ayde whereof, we of the Spiritualtie
Will raise your Highnesse such a mightie Summe,
As never did the Clergie and State
Bring in to any of your Ancelors.

King. We must not onely arme t'maise the French,
But lay downe our proportions, to defend
Against the Scot, who will make roade vp vs,
With all advantages.
Bibl. Cant. They of th'ost Marches, gracious Soueraigne, Shall be a Wall sufficient to defend
Our in-land from the pilfering Borderers.
King. We do not meane the couring snatchers onely,
But feare the maine Intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been full a giddy neighbour to vs:
For you shall see, that my great Grandfather
Neuer went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot, on his vnfurinftd Kingdome,
Came pouring like the Tyde into a breach,
With ample and brim fulnesse of his force,
Galling the gleaned Land with hot Affayes,
Grieting with grievous siege, Cafles and Townes:
That England being empie of defence,
Hath shooke and trembled at th'ill neighbourhood.
Bibl. Cant. She hath bin th' more feare th' harm'd, my Liege:
For heare her but exampl'd by her selfe,
When all her Chevalerie hath been in France,
And fhee a mourning Widow of her Nobles,
Shee hath her selfe not onely well defended,
But taken and impounded at a Stray,
The King of Scots: whom th'ee did fend to France,
To fill King Edwards fame with prisoner Kings,
And make their Chronicle as rich with prays,
As is the Owle and bottome of the Sea
With funken Wrack, and cum-leffe Treasures.
Bibl. Ely. But there's a faying very old and true,
If that you will France win, then with Scotland first begia.
For once the Eagle (England) being in prey,
To her vnguarded Neft, the Weazell (Scot)
Comes fneaking, and so fucks her Princely Egges,
Playing the Mouth in absence of the Cat,
To tame and haucock more then she can eate.
Exe. It followes thee, the Cat must fly at home,
Yet that is but a crusti' necessity,
Since we have lockes to safeguard necessaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty theuues.
While that the Armed hand doth fight abroad,
The childer head defends it felt at home:
For Government, though high, and loow, and lower,
Put into parts, doth kepe in one confent,
Congreeing in a full and natural clofe,
Like Mufick.
Cant. Therefore doth heaven indulge
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavoure in continual motion:
To which is fixed as an ayme or butt,
Obediences: for so worke the Hony Bees,
Creatures that by a rule in Nature teach
The Aft of Quesit to a peopled Kingdome,
They have a King, and Officers of forts,
Where some like Magistrates correct at home:
Others, like Merchants venter Trade abroad:
Others, like Souldiers armed in their wings,
Make boote upon the Summers Velvet buddes.
Which pillage, they with merry march bring home
To the Tent-royal of their Emperor:
Who busied in his Majesties surveyes
The ftinging Mafons building rooves of Gold,
The civil Citizens kneading vp the hony;
The poor Mechanickes, Poremen, crowding in Their heayy burthenes at his narrow gate:
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

The sad-eyd Jutlice with his furiy humme,
Delivering ore to Executors pale
The lasie yawning Drone : I this inferre,
That many things having full reference
To one content, may worke contrariously,
As many Arrows lookd feueral ways
Come to one marke : as many wayes meet in one towne,
As many fresh streams meet in one falt sea ;
As many Lynes close in the Dials center :
So may a thousand actions once a foot,
And in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my Lige,
Divide your happy England into four,
Whereof, take you one quarter into France,
And you withall make all Gaillia flake.
If we with thrice such powers left at home,
Can then defend out our owne, and this dogge,
Let vs be worried, and our Nation lose
The name of hardnese and policie.

King. Call in the Meffengers sent from the Dolphin.
Now are we well refolud, and by Gods helpe
And yours, the noble little Lige of our paynters,
France being ours, we ll bend it to our Awe,
Or break it all to peeces. Or there we ll fit, (Ruling in large and ample Emperie,
One France, and all her (almost) Kingly Dukedomes)
Or lay these bees in an unworthy Ve, (Tambieft, with no remembrance over them :
Either our History shall with full mouth
Speake freely of our Acts, or else our grace
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,
Not worthit with a waken Epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.
Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our faire Cofin Dolphin : for we hearre,
Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

Amb. May plie your Malefie to glue vs leaue Freyly to render what we have in charge : (Or shal we sparringly shew you faire off
The Dolphins meaning, and our Embasie, (King.
We are no Tyrant, but a Christian King,
Vnto whose grace our paffion is as subieft
As is our wretches fetted in our prisons,
Therefore with franc and with vncurbed plainneffe,
Tell vs the Dolphin mindes.

Amb. Thus than in few
Your Highnesse lately finding into France,
Did claine some certaine Dukedomes, in the right
Of your great Predecesser, King Edward the third.
In anwser of which claimes, the Prince our Mafter
Sayes, that you favour too much of your youth,
And bids you adua'd : There's nought in France,
That can be with a nimble Galliard wonne:
You cannot reuell into Dukedomes there.
He therefore finds you bound for your spirit
This Tun of Treasure; and in lieu of this,
Defires you let the dukedomes that you clame
Heare no more of you. This the Dolphin spakes.

King. What Treasure Vnclse ?

Amb. Enter Teniss balle, my Lige.

Kin, We are glad the Dolphin is so plesant with vs,
His Prefent, and your pains we thanke you for : (When we have matcht our Rackets to theire Balles,
We will in France (by Gods grace) play a fet,
Shall strike his fathers Crowne into the hazard.
Tell him, he hath made a match with such a Wrangler,
That all the Courts of France will be durb'd
With Chaces. And we vnderland him well,
How he comes ore vs with our wilder dayes,
Not measuring what vfe we made of them.
We neuer vake'd this poore feste of England,
And therefore living hence, did glue our felle
To barbarous licenfe : As 'tis ever common,
That men are merrie, when they are from home.
But tell the Dolphin, I will keepe my State,
Be like a King, and shew my fyle of Greatneffe,
When I do rowme me in my Throne of France.
For that I have layd by my Malefite,
And plodded like a man for working dayes :
But I will rife there with so full a glory,
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
Yea strike the Dolphin blinde to looke on vs,
And tell the Prince, that we will take him thus,
For I am a Duke, and will neuer be content.
Therefore we will have the same, or no more.
That thall faye with them: for many a thousand widows
Shall this his Mocke, mocke out of their dear husbands
Mocke mothers from their fones, mock Callies downe:
And some are yet vngotten and unrhome,
That thall haue caufe to curfe the Dolphins fcone.
But this lyes all within the wil of God,
To whom I do appeale, and in whose name
Tell you the Dolphin, I am comming on,
To venge me as I may, and to put forth
My rightfull hand in a wel-hallow'd caufe.
So get you hence in peace : And tell the Dolphin,
His left will fauour but of shallow wil,
When thousandes wepe more then did laugh at it.
Comsey them with life conduch. Fare you well,

Exeunt Ambassadors.

Exeunt. This was a merry Meffige.

King. We hope to make the Sender blash at it :
Therefore, my Lords, omit no happy howre,
That may glue furth rance to our Expedition:
For we have now no thought in vs but France,
Saaue thofe to God, that ranne before our businofse.
Therefore let our proportions for these Warres
Be foone collected, and all things thought upon,
That may with reasonable wilneffe addde
More Feathers to our Wings : for God before,
We'lle chide this Dolphin at his fathers doore.
Therefore let every man now take his thought,
That this faire Action may on foot be brought.

Exeunt.

Fluirfio. Enter Chorus.

Now all the Youth of England are on fire,
And fillen Daillance in the Wardrobe lyes :
Now thrive the Armorers, and Honors thought
Reignes folely in the breadth of every man.
They fell the Painture now, to buy the Horfe ;
Following the order of all Chriftian Kyes,
With winged hecules, as English Merycres.
For now fits Expevetion in the Ayre,
And hides a Sword, from Hils vnto the Point,
With Crownes Impeiall, Crownes and Coronets,
Promed to Harry, and his followers.
The French adu'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadful preparation,
Shake in their fear, and with pale Pollicy
Seeke to diuer the English purpos.
O England: Modell to thy inward Greatneffe,
Like little Body with a mightie Heart:

What
The Life of Henry the Fift.

What mightst thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kind and natural?
But fee, thy fault France hath in thee found out,
A neft of hollow boomes, which he fills
With treacherous Crownes, and three corrupted men:
One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second
Henry Lord Sroope of eMaffam, and the third
Sir Thomas Grey Knight of Northumberland,
Haue for the Gilt of France (O guilt indeed)
Confirm'd Conspicry with fearfull France,
And by their hands, this grace of Kings must dye.
If Hell and Trefion hold their promises,
Ere he take theip for France; and in Southamptoun.
Linger your patience on, and wee'll digest
Th'abufe of diuifices force a play:
The fumme is payde, the Trairors are agreed,
The King is fet from London, and the Scene
Is now transported (Gentles) to Southamptoun,
There is the Play-houfe now, there muft you fit,
And thence to France thall we consue you safe,
And bring you backe: Charming the narrow feas
To guie you gentle Paffe: for if we may,
Wll not offend one thorneck with our Play.
But till the King come forth, and not till then,
Vnto Southamptoun do we shift our Scene.

tell.

Logders.
Hoof. No by my troth, not long: For we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen Gentlewomen that liue honestly by the pricke of their Needles, but it will bee thought we keepe a Bawdy-houfe straignt. O wellday, Lady, if he be not heuenly now, we fhall fee wilful adul-tely and mutther committed.

and in thy throat, and in thy hatefull Lungs, yea in thy Maw perdy; and which is worfe, within thy naffie mouth. I do reor the folus in thy bowels, for I can take, and Pisallcocke is vp, and filling fire will follow.
Nym. I am not Bardofen, you cannot conjure mee: I haue an humor to knocke you indifferently well: If you grow fowlie with me Piffall, I will scourfe you with my Rapier, as I may, in fayre teares. If you would walke off, I will pricke your guts a little in good tearesmes, as I may, and that's the humor of it.
Piff. O Braggard, and domineed furious wight,
The Graue doth gape, and dooing death is nearer,
Therefore exhale.
Bar. Hearre me, hearre me what I fay: Hee that frikes the first throake, Ile run him vp to the hils, as I am a foid-der.
Piff. An oath of mickle might, and fury fhall abate.
Give me thy fift, thy fore-fote to me giue: Thy spirites are moft tall.
Nym. I will cut thy throatone time or other in faire terms, that is the humor of it.
Piffall. Couple a garne, that is the word. I defe thee againe.O hound of Creep, think'th thou my spouse to get?
No, to the fittle goe, and from the Poudring tub of infamy, fetch forth the Lazar Kite of Grefsfs kindes, Doll Tears-fletes, hee by name, and her epoune. I haue, and I band come home prefently.

France together:why the diuel should we keep knifes to cut one anothers throats?
Piff. Let floods ore-wfell, and fielis for food howle

The Life of Henry the Fift.

Nym. I shall have my Noble?
Fift. In cash, most lustily paid.
Nym. Well, then that the humor of't.

Enter Hoft.

Hoft. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to sit John: A poor heart, hee is so th'at of a burning quotidian
Tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold.
Sweet men, come to him.
Nym. The King hath run bad hurnors on the Knight, that's the euen of it.
Fift. Nym, thou haft spoke the right, his heart is fract and corroborate.
Nym. The King is a good King, but it must bee as it may: he paffes some humors, and carrerees.
Fift. Let vs condole the Knight, for (Lambekins) we will live.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, & Welfmerland.

Bed. Fore God his Grace is bold to trust these traitors
Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.
Weft. How smooth and even they do bear themselves,
As if allegiance in their bosoms stale
Crowned with faith, and that, and loyalty.
Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend,
By interception, which they dreame not of.
Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow,
Whom he hath dull'd and clow'd with gracieulous favours;
That he should for a forraigne part, be fell
His Soveraigne life to death and treachery.

Sound Trumpets.

Enter the King. Scroope, Cambridge, and Gray.

King. Now fits the winde faire, and we will aboard.
My Lord of Cambridge, and my kinde Lord of Molybank,
And you my gentle Knight, give me your thoughts;
Think you not that the powres beare with vs
Will cut their paffage through the force of France?
Doing the execution, and the afe,
For which we have in head assembled them.
Sro. No doubt my Liege, if each man do his beft.
King. I doubt not that, since we are well perfwaded
We carry not a heart with vs from hence,
That growes not in a faire concert with ours;
Nor lease not one behinde, that doth not with Successe and Conquit, to attend on vs.
Cam. Neuer was Monarch better fear'd and lou'd,
Then is your Mylefty; there's not I think a subiect
That fits in heart-grееfe and vascineffe
Vnder the sweete shade of your government.
Ksi. True: those that were your Father's enemies,
Have receiv'd their gault in hone, and do ferue you
With hearts crete of duty, and of zeal.
King. We therefore have great cause of thankfullnes,
And shall forget the office of our hand
Sooner then quintess of defect and merit,
According to the weight and worthinelle.
Sro. So seruice shall withGeelee finewes toyle,
And labour shall refresh it selfe with hope
To do your Grace incessant seruices.
King. We judge no lefle. Vnder of Exeter,
Inlarge the man committed yesterday,
That rayld against our perfons: We confered
It was exceffe of Wines that set him on,
And on his more advice, We pardon him,
Sro. That's mercy, but too much security:
Let him be punishe'd Soveraigne, leafe example
Bred by his suffrence) must be such a kind.
King. O let us yet be mercyful.

Cam. So may your Highness, and yet punishe too.
Gray. Sir, you flew great mercy if you give him life,
After the taffe of much correction.
King. Alas, your too much lose and care of me,
Are beyny Orilona'gainst this poore wretch:
If little faults proceeding on diiftermer,
Shall not be wackd at, how shall we stretch our eye
When capittall crimes, chew'd, fwallow'd, and digested,
Appeare before vs? We'll yet inlarge that man,
Though Cambridge, Scroope, and Gray, in their deere care
And tender presuparation of our perfons,
Wold have him punishe'd,And now to our French cauves,
Who are the late Commissioners?
Cam. I owe my Lord,
Your Highnesss beal me aske for to day.
Sro. So did you me my Liege.
Gray. And I my Royall Soveraigne,
King. Then Richard Earle of Cambridge, there is yours:
There yours Lord Scroope of Molyham, and Sir Knight:
Gray of Northumberland, this fame is yours:
Reade them, and know I know your worthinelle.
My Lord of Welfmerland, and Vnkle Exeter,
We will aboard to night. Why how now Gentlemen?
What fee you in thofe papers, that you looke
So much complection? Look ye how they change:
Their cheeke are paper. Why, what reade you there,
That have fo cowarded and chide' your blood
Out of apperance.
Cam. I do confesse my fault,
And do submite me to your Highness mercy.
Gray. Sro. To which we all appeale.
King. The mercy that was quicke in vs but late,
By your own counaffe is uppreite and kill'd:
You muft not dare (for blame) to tale of mercy,
For your owne reasons turne into your bosomes,
As dogs upon their malteries, worrying you:
See you my Princes, and my Noble Peares,
Their English moneters: My Lord of Cambridge here,
You know how apt our loue was, to accord
To furnish with all appertinents
Belonging to his Honour; and this man,
Hath for a few light Crownes, lightly confir'd
And fwworne into the praxibles of France
To kill vs here in Hampton. To the which,
This Knight no leffe for bounty bound to Vs
Then Cambridge is, hath likewile fwworne. But O,
What flll I say to thee Lord Scroope, thou cruelly,
Ingratiefull, faunge, and inhume Creatures?
Thou that didt beare the key of all my counselle,
That knew'ft the very bottome of my foule,
That (almoft) might'ft haue coyn'd me into Goldes,
Would'ft thou haue pra'did on me, for thy vfe?
May it be possible, that forraigne hyers
Could out of thee extract one fparce of euell
That might annoy my finger? 'Tis fo strange,
That though the truth of it stands off as groffe
As blacke and white, my eye will scarcely fee it.
Trefon, and murther, euer kept together,
As two yoke duels fwworne to eythers purpose,
Working fo groffely in an natureal cauall,
That admiration did not hoope at them.
But thou (gainst all proportion) didst bring in Wonder to waite on trefon, and on murther:
And whatsoever cunning fpend it was
That brought upon thee fo proueoufly
Hath got the voyce in hell for excellence:
And other duels that luggeth by treasons,
Do both and bungle ye damnation;
With patches, colours, and with forms being fetched
From glist'ring anomalies of piety:
But he that temper'd thee, bad thee stand vp,
Gave thee no influence why thou shouldst do treason,
Vuliffe to dub thee with the name of Traitor.
If that same Daemon that hath gull'd thee thus,
Should with his Lyon-gate walke the whole world,
He might returne to vallie Tartar backe,
And tell the Legions, I can never win
A foule fo eade as that Englishman.
Oh, how haft thou with lealoufe infected
The sweetneffe of affiance! Shew men dufffull,
Why fo didst thou? seeme they graue and learned?
Why fo didst thou? Come they of Noble Family?
Why fo didst thou? Seeme they religious?
Why fo didst thou? Or are they of Death's die?
Free from froide paffion, or of mirth, or anger,
Confiant in spirit, not fervering with the blood,
Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement,
Not working with the eye, without the eare,
But in purged judgement trullting neither,
Such and so finely boulted didst thou seeme:
And thus thy fall hath left a kinde of blot,
To make thee fall fraught man, and bift indued
With some fuspition, I will wepe for thee.
For this result of thine, we thinkes is like
Another fall of Man. Their faults are open,
Arrest them to the anower of the Law,
And God acquit them of their proffiles.
Exe. I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.
I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas Lord Scroope of Masham.
I arrest thee of High Treason by the name of Thomas Grey, Knight of Northumberland.
Sero. Our purpose, God lusty hath difcouered,
And I repent my fault more then my death,
Which I beleech your Highneffe to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.
Cam. For me, the Gold of France did not seduce,
Although I did admit it as a motiue,
The sooner to effect what I intended:
But God be thanked for prevention,
Which in sufference heartily will reconcillie,
Befeeching God, and you, to pardon mee.
Gray. Neuer did faithfull subiect more reconcillie
At the discovery of most dangerous Treason,
Then I do at this hour joy ore my felie,
Prevented from a damned enterprize);
My fault, but not my body, pardoon Soueraigne.
Kings. God quit thee in his mercie:Hear your sentence
You have confir'd against Our Royall person,
Jove'nd with an enemy proclaim'd,and from his Coffers,
Reccey'd the Golden Earneft of Our desine,
Wherein you would have fold your King to slaughter,
His Princes, and his Peeres to seruitude,
His Subjects to oppression, and contempt,
And his whole Kingdome into defolation:
Touching our person, freke we no reuenge,
But we our Kingdomes safety waft to tender,
Whose ruine you sought, that to her Lawes
We do deliuer you. Get you therefore hence,
(Poor miserable wretches) to your death:
The taffe whereof, God of his mercy glue
You patience to indure, and true Repentance
Of all your desire offences. Bearst them hence.
Now Lords for France: the enterprize whereof
Shall be to you as vs,like glorious.
We doubt not of a faire and luckie Warre,
Since God fo graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous Treacon, lurking in our way,
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now,
But every Rubbe is smoothd on our way.
Then forth, dese Countrymen: Let vs deliuer
Our Puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Chearely to Sea, the figures of Warre aduance,
No King of England, if not King of France.
Flourish.
Enter Puffall, Nym, Bardolphi, Boy, and Haffife.
Haffife. 'Prythee honey Sweet Husband,let me bring thee to Staines.
Puffall. No, for my manly heart doth erne. Bardolphi, be blythe: Nym, rowie thy vaunting Vines: Boy, briefe thy Courage vp: for Falstaffe hee is dead, and we must erne therefore.
"Bar'd. Would I were with him, wherefomere hee is, eyther in Heaven,or in Hell.
Haffife. Nay Sure, he's not in Hell: he's in Arturbs Bofome,if ever man went to Arturbs Bofome: a made a finer end, and went away and it had beene any Chrif tome Child: a parted eu'n luft betweene Twelve and One, eu'n at the turning o' the Tyde for after I faw him fumble with the Sheets, and play with Flowers, and fimle vpon his fingers end, I knew there was but one way:for his Nofe was as sharpe as a Pen, and a Table of greene fields. How now Sir Iobn (quoth I ?) what man? be a good cheere: so a cryed out, God, God, God, three or foure times: now I, to comfort him, bid him a should not thinke of God; I hop'd there was no need to trouble himselfe with any such thoughts yet: fo a bad me lay more Clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the Bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any bone: then I fet to his knees, and fo vp-per'd, and vpward, and all was as cold as any bone.
Nym. They say he cryed out of Sack.
Haffife. I, that a did.
"Bar'd. And of Women.
Haffife. Nay,that a did not.
Boy. Yes that a did, and said they were Deales incarnate.
Woman. A could neuer abide Carnation, 'twas a Co lour he neuer lik'd.
Boy. A said once, the Deale would have him about Women.
Haffife. A did in some sort (indeed)handle Women: but then hee was rumatique, and talk'd of the Well of Babylone.
Boy. Doe you not remember a saw a Flea thicke vpon Bardolphs Nofe, and a said it was a blakce Soule burning in Hell.
Bar'd. Well, the feu is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the Riches I got in his feruice.
Nym. Shall wee thoght? the King will be gone from Southampton.
Puff. Come, let's away. My Loue, give me thy Lippes: Look to me your Chattle, and thy Moucebles: Let Sences rule: The world is Pitch and pay: truit none: for Oosthes are Strawes, mens Faiths are Wafer-Cakes, and hold-sift is the onely Dogge: My Duche, therefore Caueter be thy Counseller. Goe, cleare thy Chrysthalls. Yoke-fellows in Armes, let vs to France, like Horfe-leeches
And he is bred out of that bloody straine,
That haunted us in our familiar Pathes:
Witnifi our too much memorable flame,
When Creffy Batelle fatly was frucke,
And all our Princes captif'd, by the hand
Of that black Name, Edward, black Prince of Wales:
Whilez that his Mountaine Sire, on Mountaine standing
Vp in the Aire, crownd' with the Golden Sunne,
Saw his Herofcall Seed, and fume'd to fee him
Mangle the Worke of Nature, and deface
The Patterns, that by God and by French Fathers
Had twenty yeeres beene made. This is a Stem
Of that Vfiltrous Stock: and let vs feeare
The Nature mightifie and fare of him,

Enter a Mriffenger.

Miff. Embassadors from Harry King of England,
Doe craze admittance to your Maietie,

King. Weele gleam your prefent audience.
Ge, and bring them.
You fee this Chafl is hotly forward, flenid.
Dolphin. Turne head, and flop purplif for fowb Cobads
Moft spend their mouths, whiche they feem to threaten Runs farre before them. Good my Soueraine
Take vp the English shorts, and let them know
Of what a Monarchie you are the Head:
Selfe-loue, my Lene, is not to fole a finne,
As felfe-neglefling.

Enter Exeuter.

King. From our Brother of England:

Exe. From him, and thus he greets your Maietie:
He wills you in the Name of God Almighty,
That you defuet your felfe, and lay apart
The borrowed Glories, that by gift of Heaven,
By Law of Nature, and of Nations, longs
To him and to his Heires, namely, the Crowne,
And all wide-stretched Honors, that perraine
By Cuftome, and the Ordinance of Times,
Vnto the Crowne of France: that you may know
'Tis no finifter, nor no awk-ward Clayme,
Picks from the worne-holes of long-vanifhit days,
Nor from the duft of old Oblifion rafe,
He fends you this moft memorable Lyne,
In every Branch truly demonftrative;
Willing you ouer-lookke this Pedigree:
And when you fee him euen deriu'd
From his moft fam'd, of famous Ancetors,
Edward the third, he bids you then refigne
Your Crowne, which of your Kingdome, indifferently held
From him, the Natyue and true Challenger.

King. Or elfe what follores?

Exe. Bloody confRAINT: for if you hide the Crowne
Even in your hearts, there will he rafe for it.
Therefore in fierce Temper is he comming,
In Thunder and in Earth-quake, like a Inte:
That if requiring fale, he will compelle.
And bids you, in the Bowels of the Lord,
Defier vp the Crowne, and to take mercie
On the poore Soules, for whom this hungry Warre
Opens his vatile Lawes; and on your head
Turning the Wildowes Tears, the Orphans Cryes,
The dead-mens Blood, the pityi Maldens Groanes,
For Husbands, Fathers, and betrothod Ladies.
That shall be fwalowed in this Controverfe.
This is his Clayme, his Threatning, and my Miffage:
Vnfele the Dolphin be in prefence here;
To whom exprifely I bring greeting to,

King. For
The Life of Henry the Fift.

King. For vs, we will consider of this further: To morrow shall you hear our full intent Back to our Brother of England. Delfph. For the Dolfhin, I stand here for him: what to him from England? Exe. Some and defiance, sight regard, contempt, And any thing that may not mil-become The mightie Sender, doth he prize you at. Thus sayes my Kings: and if your Fathers Highness Doe not, in graunt of all demands at large, Sweeten the bitter Mock you lent his Malefice; He'll call you to so hot an Answer of it, That Cauces and Wombie Vaultages of France Shall chide your Trefpas, and returne your Mock In second Accent of his Ordinance. Delfph. Say if my Father render faire returne, It is against my will: for I desire Nothing but Oddes with England. To that end, as matching to his Youth and Vanities, I did present him with the Paris-Balls. Exe. He's make your Paris Louer flake for it, Were it the Miftruse Court of mightie Europe: And he affir'd, you'll find a diff'rent We as his Subjects have in wonder found, Betwene the promise of his greener dayes, And thes he masters now now he weighs Time Euen to the vmost Grnerc that you shall reade In your owne Loffes, if he stay in France. King. To morrow shall you know my mind at full. Flourish. Exe. Dispatch vs with all speed, leaft that our King Come here himfelfe to question our delay; For he is footed in this Land already. King. You shalbe some dispatch, with faire conditions. A Night is but small breathe, and little pawafer, To anfwer matters of this confequence. Exit.

Actus Secundus.

Flourish. Enter Chorus. Thus with imag'nd wing our swift Scene flyes, In motion of no leffe celeritate then that of Thought. Suppose, that you have feene The well-appointed King at Douer Peer, Embark his Royaltie: and his braue Fleet With fliken Streamers, the young Phoebus slaying; Play with your Fancies: and in them behold, Upon the Hempen Tackle, Ship-boys climbing; Hearre the thrill Whiffe, which doth order glue To fouds confus'd: he behold the threaden Sayles, Borne with th'inundible and creeping Wind, Draw the huge Bottons through the furrowed Sea, Brefting the loftie Surfe. O, doe but think The f favourable, to Harflew. Follow, follow: Grapple your minds to tormage of this Nauie, And leave your England as dead Mid-night, fill, Guarded with Grandfirs, Babyes, and old Women, Elyther paft, or not arri'd to pyth and puiffance: For who is he, whose Chim is but enricht With one appearing Hare, that will not follow These cuil'd and choyle-drawne Cauciers to France? Werke, werke your Thoughts, and therein fee a Siege: Behold the Ordinance on their Carriages, With fatall mouthes gaping on girded Harflew. Suppose th'Embassador from the France comes back: Tells Harry, That the King doth offer him Katherine his Daughter, and with her to Dawrie, Some petty and vnprofitable Dukedomes. The offer likes not: and the nimble Gunner With Lynbock now the duellish Cannon touches, Alarum, and Chambers goe off. And downe goes all before them. Still be kind, And ech out our performance with your mind. Exit.

Enter the King, Exeter, Bedford, and Gloucefter. Alarum: Scaling Ladders at Harflew. King. Once more onto the Breach, Deare friends, once more; Or clofe the Wall vp with our English dead: In Peace, there's nothing fo becomes a man, As modest filinente, and humilitie: But when the breaft of Warre blowes in our eares, Then imitate the action of the Tyger: Stiffen the finewes,commune vp the blood, Diffilue faire Nature with hard-favour'd Rage: Then lend the Eye a terrible aspect: Let it pry through the portage of the Head, Like the Brafe Cannon: let the Brow o'rewhelme it, As fearefully, as doth a galled Rocke O're-hang and lutty his confounded Babe, Swift'd with the wild and waftfull Ocean. Now fixt the Teeth, and stretch the Nothrift wide, Hold hard the Breath, and bend vp evrie Spirit To his full height. On, on, you Nobilift English, Whose blood is fit from Fathers of Warre-proofe: Fathers, that like so many Alexander's, Haue in thefe parts from Morne till Euen fought, And th'eth their Swords, for lack of argument. Dishonour not your Mothers: now attell, That thofe whom you call'd Fathers, did beget you. Be Coppy now to me of groffer blood, And teach them how to Warre. And you good Yeomen, Whole Lynes were made in England; they vs here The mettall of your Paffure: let vseware, That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not: For there is none of you fo meane and base, That hath not Noble luster in your eyes. I fee you fland like Grey-hounds in the flips, Straying vp the Swift. The Game's afoot: Follow your Spirit: and upon this Charge, Cry,God for Harry, England, and S.George. Alarum, and Chambers goe off.

Enter Nim, Bardolph, Piftall, and Boy. Bard. On, on, on, on, on, to the breach, to the breach. Nim. Pray thee Corporall fly, the Knocks are too hot: and for mine owne part, I have not a Cafe of Liues: the humor of it is too hot, that is the very plaine-Song of it. Pfift. The plaine-Song is most luft: for humors doe a-bound: Knocks goe and come: Gods Vaffals drop and dye: and Sword and Shield, in bloody Field, doth winne immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an Ale-house in London, I would give all my fame for a Pot of Ais, and fabrefc.
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Piff. And 1: If wishes would preazeyle with me, my purpose should not fayle with me; but thither would I high.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as Bird doth fing on bough.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Up to the breach ; you Dogges ; auaunt you Cullions.

Nim. Thefe be good humors: your Honor wins bad humors.

Boy. As young as I am, I haue oherd thee three Swaithers: I am Boy to them all three, but all they three, though they want Gentleman, could not be Man to me; for indeed three such Antiques doe not amount to a man.

Fluellen, hee is white-liner'd, and red-face'd; by the meanes whereof, a faces it out, but fights not: for Piffull, hee hath a killing Tongue, and a quiet Sword; by the meanes whereof, a breaks Words, and keepes whole Weapons; for Nim, hee hath heard, that men of few Words are the beft men, and therefore hee fomnes to lay his Prayers, left a shoul be thought a Coward: but his few bad Words are matcht with as few good Proceedings; for a neuer broke any mans Head but his owne, and that was against a Paue, when he was drunke. They will steale any thing, and call it Purchafe. Bardolph fole a Lute-cafe, bore it twelue Leagues, and fold it for three Halfe-pence. Nim and Bardolph are sworne Brothers in filching: and in Callicke they fole a Fire-shoulel. I knew by that pece of Service, the men would carry Coales. They would haue me as familiar withmes Pockets, as their Gloues or their Hand-kerchers: which makes much against my Manhood, if I should take from another Pocket, to put into mine; for it is plaine purchase vp of Wrongs. I must leave them, and fomce some better Service; their Villany goes against my weake Thimblets, and therefore I must call it vp.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Captaine Fluellen, you must come prefently to the Mynes; the Duke of Gloucester would fpake with you.

Flu. To the Mynes? Tell you the Duke, it is not fo good to come to the Mynes: for looke you, the Mynes is not according to the disciplines of the Warre the conuincuus of it is not fufficient: for looke you, the thinke of it, when you thinke of him, you may difcuffe vnto the Duke, looke you, it is digt himfelfe foore yard vnder the Countermines: by Chejhu, I thynke a will plooe vp all, if there is not better direc- tions.

Gower. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the Order of the Siege is guen, is altogether directed by an Irish man, a very fad fong; he will confidr your refolues.

Welsh. It is Captain Mackmorris, is it not?

Gower. I thinke it be.

Welsh. By Chejhu he is an Affe, as in the World, I will vverifie as much in his Beard: he ha's no more directions in the true disciplines of the Warre, looke you, of the Roman disciplines, then is a Pupppy-dog.

Enter Mackmorris, and Captain Iamy.

Gower. Here a comes, and the Scots Captain, Captain Iamy, with him.

Welsh. Captain Iamy is a maruellous falorous Gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and know-ledge in th'ancuant Warres, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Chejhu he will mainaine his Argument as well as any Militarie man in the World, in the disciplines of the Prifinie Warres of the Romans.

Scot. I lay gudday, Captaine Fluellen.

Welsh. Godden to your Worship, good Captaine Iamy.

Gower. How now Captain Mackmorris, have you quit the Mynes? have the Pioners gien of?

Iamy. By Chrifh Law tifh ill done: the Worke fth give ouer, the Trumpet found the Retreat. By my Hand I fware, and my fathers Sole, the Worke thil ill done: it fth give ouer: I would have blowed vp the Towne, fo Chejhu fave me law, in an houre. O tifh ill done, tifh ill done: by my Hand tifh ill done.

Welsh. Captain Mackmorris, I befeech you now, will you vountaine mee, will you take off your frwftiptions with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the Warre, the Roman Warres, in the way of Argument, looke you, and friendly communication: partly to fatisfie my Opinion, anda partly for the satisfaction, looke you, of my Mind: as touching the direction of the Militarie discipline, that is the beft Man.

Scot. It fall be very gud, god fheit, god Captains bath, and I fall quit you with gud leue, as I may pick occaion: that fall I may.

Iamy. It is no time to difcourfe, so Chejhu fave me: the day is hot, and the Weather, and the Warres, and the King, and the Dukes: it is no time to difcourfe, the Town is befeech'd: and the Trumpet call vs to the breech, and we talk, and be Chejhu do nothing, tis fhape for vs all: so God fme tis fhape to hand fill; it is fhape by my hand: and there is Throats to be cut, and Workes to be done, and therelf nothing done, so Chejhu fme law.

Scot. By the Mes, ere theife eyes of mine take themselfes to fomble, ayle de gud fervic, or Ile ligge i'th' grund for it; ay, or goe to death: and Ile payt' as valoufely as I may, that I I fueerly do, that is the freft and the long: marry, I was full faine heare some queftion tween you tway.

Welsh. Captain Mackmorris, I thynke, looke you, vnder your correccion, there is not many of your Na- tion.

Welsh. Lookye you, if you take the matter otherwife then is meant, Captain Mackmorris, peraduenture I thall thynke you doe not vie me with that affillibitie, as in difcourfe you ought to vie me, looke you, being as good a man as your felfe, both in the disciplines of Warre, and in the derivacion of my Birth, and in other particular- ities.

Iamy. I doe not know you fo good a man as my felle: so Chejhu fave me, I will cut off your frwftiptions with you.

Gower. Gentlemen both, you will makeke each other.

Gower. The Towne founds a Parly.

Welsh. Captain Mackmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, looke you, I will be fo bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of Warre: and there is an end.

Enter the King and all his Traine before the Gates.

King. How yet refolues the Gouernour of the Towne? This is the latef Parle we will admit:

There-
Therefore to our best mercy give your felues,
Or like to men prov'd of destruction,
Defe vs to our wor't : for as I am a Souldier,
A Name that in my thoughts becomes me me't;
If I begin the batt'lie once again,
I will not leave the halfe-achieved Harflew,
Till in her ashes she lye buried.
The Gates of Mercy shall be all shut vp,
And the field Souldier, rough and hard of heart,
In libertie of bloody hand, shall rainge
With Confidence wide as Hell, moving like Grasse
Your faire faire Virgins, and your flowering Infants.
What is it then to me, if impious Warres,
Arrayed in flames like to the Prince of Fiends,
Doe with his fmyrcht complexion all fell feats,
Enlyncst to waft and defolation?
What is't to me, when you your felues are caufe,
If your pure Maydens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing Violation?
What Reyne can hold licentious Wickedneffe,
When downe the Hill he holds his fierce Carriere?
We may as bootlesf send our vaine Command
Vpon th'enrag'd Souldiers in their fpoyle,
As fend Precepts to the Leuenhurt, to come ahorfe.
Therefore, you men of Harflew,
Take pitty of your Towne and of your People,
Whilez yet my Souldiers are in my Command,
Whilez yet the coole and temperate Wind of Grace
O're-blowes the filthy and contagious Clouds
Of heady Murther, Spoyle, and Villany.
If not: why in a moment looke to see
The blind and bloody Souldier, with foule hand
Defire the Locks of your shrill-shriking Daughters:
Your Fathers taken by the fluer Beards,
And their most reuerend Heads dash't to the Walls:
Your naked Infants spitted upon Pykes,
Whilez the mad Mothers, with their howles confud',
Doe breake the Clouds as did the Wives of sewry,
At Herods bloody-hunting flaughter-men.
What thy you? Will you yeeld, and this ayoud?
Or guilte in defence, be thus deftroyd'.

Coud. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The Daphlin, whom of Succours we entreat,
Returns vs; that his Powers are yet not ready,
To rayse so great a Siege: Therefore great King,
We yeeld our Towne and Lives to thy folt Mercy:
Enter our Gates, dispofe of vs and ours,
For we no longer are defenfible.

King. Open your Gates: Come Vuckte Exeter,
Goe you, and enter Harflew; there remaine,
And forifie it strongly garnish the French:
Vse mercy to them all for vs, steere Vncllle.
The Winter comming on, and Sickenes growing
Vpon our Souldiers, we will retreye to Calis.
To night in Harflew will we be your Gueft,
To morrow for the March we are addresst.
Flourish, and enter the Towne.

Exit.

Enter the King of France, the Daphlin, the Confable de France, and others.
King. 'Tis certaine he hath paft the Rier Somme,
Conf. And if he be not fought withall, my Lord,
Let vs notlie in France: let vs quitt all,
And glue our Vineyards to a barbarous People.
Dolph. O Dieu vivant: Shall a few Sprays of vs,
The emptying of our Fathers Luxuries,
Our Syens, put in wilde and sauvage Stock,
Spire vs so suddenly into the Clouds,
And over-looke their Graftors?
Brit. Normans, but baward Normans, Norman bawards:
Mort du ma vus, if they march along
Vnfought withall, but I will sell my Dukedome,
To buy a floppy and a durtie Farne
In that mookie-fotten Ile of Albion.
Conf. 'Dieu de Battaille, where hauie they this mettell?
Is not their Clymate Boggy, raw, and dull?
On whom, as in desplay, the Sonne lookes pale,
Killing their Fruit with frownes. Can fodder Water,
A Drench for fur-reyn'd Iales,their Barly broth,
Decoif their cold blood to fuch valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spirited with Wine,
Scene frothe & O, for honor of our Land,
Let vs not hang like roping Sfickes
Upon our Houfes Thatch, whiles a more frottie People
Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich fields:
Poore we call them, in their Native Lords.
'Dolphin. By Faith and Honor,
Our Madames mock at vs, and plainly fay,
Our Mettell is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the Luft of English Youth,
To new-store France with Baffard Warriors.
Brit. They bid vs to the English Dancing-Schools,
And teach the Youth's high, and [wit Caractre];
Saying, our Grace is onely in our Heelet,
And that we are moft lofit fide-awayes.
King. Where is Montoy the Herald? speed him hence,
Let him greet England with our sharpe defiance.
Vp Princes, and with spirit of Honor edged,
More sharper then your Swords, high to the field:
Charles Delabroth, High Conftable of France,
You Dukes of Orleans, Barbon, and of Berry,
Aloft, Brabant, Bar, and Burgoiny,
Apuet, Chatillion, Ramoure, Vandemont,
Bemont, Grand Prey, Rouff, and Foulconbridge,
Loy, Lebracle, Bouchyfaff, and Charlaiet,
High Dukes, great Princes, Barons, Lords, and Kings;
For your great Seats, now quit you of your great flames:
Barr Harry England, that sweeps through our Land
With Penons painted in the blood of Harleu;
Rufh on his Horse, as doth the melted Snow
Upon the Valleys, whose low Vaffall Seet,
The Alpes doth fip, and void his rhesume vpon
Goe downe vpon him, you have Power enough,
And in a Captaine Chariot, into Roan
Bring him your Prisoner.
Conf. This becomes the Great.
Sorry am I his numbers are fo few,
His Souldiers fick, and famihl in their March:
For I am fure, when he fhall fee our Army,
He will not let his heart drop into the fines of fear,
And for achituelion, offer vs his Ranfome.
King. Therefore Lord Conftable, haft on Montoy,
And let him fay to England, that we fend,
To know what willing Ranfome he will glue.
Prince Demph, you fhall fay with vs in Roan.
Dolph. Not fo, I doe befeech your Maiefie.
King. Be patient, for you fhall remaine with vs.
Now forth Lord Conftable, and Princes all,
And quickly bring vs word of Englands fall.
Exeunt.

Enter Captaines, English and Welsh, Gower and Fluellen.

Gower. How now Captaine Fluellen, come you from the Bridge?
Flu. I fuffre you, there is very excellent Service committed at the Bridge.
Gower. Is the Duke of Exeter fafe?
Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as manominous as Agy-
King. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Moun. Mounbay.

King. Thou dost thy Office fairly. Turne thee back,
And tell thy King, I doe not feake him now,
But could be willing to march on to Callice,
Without imprisonment: for to say the truth,
Though 'tis no wisdome to confesse so much
Vnto an enimie of Craft and Vantage,
My people are with tickneffe much enfeebled,
My numbers leffed: and those few I have,
Almoft no better then so many French;
Who when they were in health, I tell thee Herald,
I thought, vpon one payre of English Legges
Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgivme me God,
That I doe bragge thus: this your ayre of France
Hath blowne that wisde in me. I must repent:
Goe therefore tell thy Master, heere I am:
My Ranfome, is this frayle and worthlift Trunke;
My Army, but a weake and sickly Guard:
Yet God before, tell him we will come on,
Though France himselfe, and fuch another Neighbor
Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mounbay.
Goe bid thy Master well aduife himfelfe,
If we may paffe, we will: if we be hindered,
We fhall your tavnice ground with your red blood
Difcolour: and fo Mounbay, fare you well.
The fumme of all our Answer is but this:
We would not feake a Battalle as we are,
Nor as we are, we fay we will not fhun it:
So tell your Master.

Moun. I shall deliuer fo: Thanks to your Highneffe.
